The Trials of House-Cleaning.

[By ADA E. TAYLOR.]

"I do declare," said Mrs. Dare, One morning while at cleaning, "My eyes must be deceiving me, Or I'm asleep and dreaming; They're coming here, they are so near, And towards the gate they're walking; One is Miss Jones, I know her tones, She screeches when she's talking.

"And ain't they dressed, all in their best, With satins, silks and laces! But what a sight! they look so white, What have they on their faces? What shall I do?—the house, 'tis true, Is upset in a measure; There's not one place I can, with grace, Say walk in, do, with pleasure.

"Some parlor chairs are by the stairs, Some on the door are leaning; And there is Sam, the very man Who blesses my house cleaning; On scrubbing days he always says He has no place for shelter; The mop and broom, in every room, Makes things go better skelter.

"If I stand still perhaps they will Think I have gone out shopping; But there is Sam, the horrid man, He makes me just so hopping; O dear, O dear, I can't stand here A thinking on forever; I'll watch behind the window blind— Good gracious, well, I never!

"They're bustling o'er things on the floor, They're coming sure and certain; This room is bare, without a chair, The window has no curtain." Down went the skirt with one good jerk, Away went mop and water, And in came Sam, poor foolish man, With Mrs. Jones' fair daughter.

And, what is more, he had in store A lecture mild with passion; Had he but known, he'd left alone These ladies dressed in fashion; He didn't think or care a wink For cleaning days or scrubbing. He thought his wife, his joy and life, Would never dream of scrubbing.

Now Mrs. Dare, we're well aware, Was very calm at present; She brought the chairs in from the stairs, And things passed off quite pleasant. They made their stay, they went away With faces bright and beaming; But listen, now—is that a row? Poor Sam thinks he is dreaming.

The Invalid Clerk.

It was the twilight of a crisp, cold winter day. Outside, the cawing of a flock of belated crows made sorrowful music, as their wings were outlined against the deepening orange of the sunset, while in a cosy farm kitchen the lamp was already lighted, and Mrs. Flint was bustling about preparing the evening meal, while Marah, her niece, sat and sewed with flying fingers on the household linen.

"I should like it so much, aunt," said the girl, lifting her eyes wistfully to the old lady's face.

"But Marah," said Mrs. Flint, setting the earthenware teapot where its fragrant leaves could steep slowly on the back of the stove. "I don't see that I can spare you, my dear. There's so much to do, now that grandma is feeble, and your uncle has to hire two men for the wood cutting, and they've got to be boarded here, and your cousin Louisa coming here with her children until spring."

Marah sighed softly. Was it always to be her lot to be sacrificed for the general good of others?

"I never earned any money for myself, aunt," she said. "And this is such an excellent opportunity to get a place in Mr. Marchland's store. Sue Nellis has written to me that there will be a vacancy in the fancy department very soon, and—"

"John Marchland is a sort of a distant relation of ours too," said Mrs. Flint. "Though I've never seen him, I knew his mother well. And I dare say he would give you a good place and be kind to you, if you entered his store. It would be an excellent chance for you to see the world, too. For I know it's a dull place here, my dear, but I don't see any hope for it! Perhaps in a year or two we can spare you better."

So Marah Flint was compelled to give up the little plan over which she had dreamed so many pleasant dreams. For Marah was only eighteen and she had always lived in the backwoods, and worn her aunt's old dresses made over, and waited meekly on grandma and uncle Abner.

Mr. Marchland himself was, perhaps, a little disappointed, when Miss Nellis, the forewoman whose father owned the next farm to Abner Flint's, asked him if she should promote one of the packing girls to the van place in the packing department.

"But I thought you were going to write to that little unknown cousin of mine?" said he.

"So I did," said Miss Nellis, "but they can't spare her from home, it seems. It's a clear case of Cinderella, among the ashes. She is the sweetest, most unselfish girl I ever saw; but all the same it's a shame that she should be buried alive in that sort of a way."

"Very well," said Mr. Marchland, "I suppose she understands her own business best. Put Julia Finch in the place."

The next day Uncle Abner Flint, to his infinite amazement, received a brief note from Marchland & Co., asking if it would be convenient for him to receive, as a boarder for a few weeks, a young man from the store, whose health required change and rest.

"I will be responsible for his board," wrote Mr. Marchland. "He has only his own exertions to depend on, and I am sure I may so far presume on your distant relationship as to trust you will receive him kindly."

"Marah," said Mrs. Flint in some perplexity, "what are we to do?"

"Why, take the poor fellow, of course," said Marah.

"But it will make more work," said Mrs. Flint.

"Never mind the work," said cherry Marah. "I dare say we can manage it between us."

"Marah always did look on the sunny side of things," said Uncle Abner, who serenely left the domestic administration to his womenkind.

"We don't want no boarders here," said cousin Louisa, a low-spirited young matron, who talked through her nose and cried and sniffed a good deal over her troubles.

"There's the little room with the sloping roof close to the chimney," suggested Marah, "where we keep the chests of linen and herbs and seed corn. We might fit that up nicely. I could put down a breadth of new rag carpet beside the bed, and make curtains out of the worn out sheets; and, I dare say, the young man won't be particular."

"But he's a mere clerk—a porter, for all we know," whined cousin Louisa, whose deceased husband had been bar-tender in a railway saloon.

"I guess it won't hurt us to associate with him," said Uncle Abner, dryly; "and I tell you what, mother, if our Marah has all the extra work and care, she shall have the board money, eh?"

"Of course she shall," said Mrs. Flint. And cousin Louisa sighed deeply and remarked "that some folks always had all the luck and she never got no chance to earn money!"

The young man from the store arrived—a mild, unassuming person, who was very quiet and made very little trouble. He walked in the pine woods—for his health, he said, and helped the stalwart wood cutters now and then. He sat by the fire and read. He answered Uncle Abner's questions about the house of Marchland & Co. with great frankness. Yes, he liked the business. He hoped in time to work his way up in it. Mr. Marchland was very kind to him. He did not consider Mr. Marchland a haughty miser (this in reply to cousin Louisa). Mr. Marchland probably had his faults, but it was not his place to criticize his employer.

"Poor fellow!" said Cousin Louisa, when he had gone out with Uncle Abner to ride with the ox team into the woods. "I don't s'pose he gets six dollars a week, to judge by his talk. I thought p'raps I might be induced to change my widowed condition if he was a likely fellow, with a good income. But I guess I shan't waste none of my attention on him."

"He seems very quiet and pleasant," said Marah.

"And he steps about awful spry for a sick man," remarked grandma, who sat knitting in the chimney corner.

"Oh," said Mrs. Flint, "he isn't real sick. He's only a little down with malaria and overwork. He'll be all right by spring; you just see if he won't!"

At the end of the first week, when he offered to pay his board, Mrs. Flint gave it back to him.

"You needn't mention it to your employer, Mr. Johnson," said she (John Johnson was the name on the boarder's valise), "but we was thinkin' me and Marah, that p'raps you wasn't very well off, and so we'd make you a present of the board."

"You are very kind," said the young man, with a slightly flushed face, "but—"

"It's Marah's present, not mine," added Mrs. Flint, bluntly. "We told her she should have the money for the board." But he did not argue the point any further.

And Mrs. Flint confidently informed her niece that "she believed the board money was quite an object to Mr. Johnson, poor fellow."

While cousin Louisa elevated her Roman nose and remarked that "she didn't take much stock in paupers. If folks couldn't support themselves decently, she thought they'd ought to go to the poorhouse."

Marah, however, had all her sympathies thoroughly enlisted in behalf of the silent young guest. She mended his stockings on the sly; she saw that his linen was kept in good order; she made little dainties to tempt his feeble appetite from time to time.

"You are very good to me," he said one day, as he saw her swift needle glide in and out of the pocket handkerchief of his, which he got torn among the bushes from which he had been gathering scarlet wild berries. She smiled.

"We are both solitary and alone in the world," she said. "Only that you are friendless, and I have my good uncle and aunt to rely on."

"I am not so friendless as I was a few weeks ago," said he; "for I venture now to count you among the list of my friends. I have even dared to hope—"

"What?" she asked, without looking up, while the color deepened on her cheek, and her eyes were intently fixed on the progress of her needle.

"That if I can provide a humble home in New York on my return, you will not disdain to share it with me. Tell me, Marah, do you think you could care for me?"

The tears sparkled in Marah's eyes.

"Have I betrayed myself?" she said. "Have I allowed you to discover how dearly I love you?"

"And I loved you, Marah," he said, gravely, "when first I looked upon your face."

So Marah Flint promised to be the wife of the young man from the store.

Mrs. Flint sighed and shook her head, and said she didn't know how ever she would manage without Marah. Grandma expressed herself to the effect that "Marah would make the best little wife in the world." Uncle Abner said "he s'posed gals would get married, and they couldn't expect to keep her forever." Cousin Louisa said "she thought the gal was crazy to marry a poor clerkling fellow, like that!"

The young man smiled as he sat beside Marah, in the light of the huge burning logs, which crackled upon the evening hearth.

"I don't call myself a second Rothschild," said he, "and I am certainly conversant with all the duties pertaining to a clerk's office. But, after all, perhaps I am not a candidate for the almshouse. For I have not claimed all the name in this house to which I am entitled. I am John Johnson, it is true, but I am also Johnson Marchland, the head of the firm of Marchland & Co. And I am Marah's third cousin into the bargain."

"Je-rusalem," exclaimed honest old Uncle Abner. "And what brought you here?"

"Well," said Mr. Marchland, "I had heard Miss Nellis speak of my cousin Marah, and I felt a sort of curiosity to see her just as she was. I had been sufficiently disgusted by the airs and graces of city young ladies to wish for a genuine wildwood blossom, so I came to the old Connecticut farm, and here I have succeeded in finding my ideal." "Bless me!" cried Mrs. Flint. "So our little Marah will be a rich lady after all, and wear a silk frock every day, and keep a hired girl to do the kitchen work!"

"She deserves it all," said grandma. "Laws-a-massy!" said Cousin Louisa.

While silent little Marah was perhaps the most astonished of all. She felt like the heroine of fairy tales, whose sober, brown-coated peasant lover is turned suddenly into the beautiful young prince, all sparkling with diamonds.

But she was very happy. And it was as grandma said, she deserved it.

BE GOOD TO YOURSELF.—Think deliberately

of the house you live in, your body. Make up your mind firmly not to abuse it. Eat nothing that will hurt it, wear nothing that distorts or pains it. Do not overload it with victuals or drink or work. Give yourself regular and abundant sleep. Keep your body warmly clad. At the first signal of danger from any of the thousand enemies that surround you, defend yourself. Do not take cold, guard yourself against it; if you feel the first symptoms give yourself heroic treatment. Get into a fine glow of heat by exercise. Take a vigorous walk or run, then guard against a sudden attack of perspiration. This is the only body you will ever have in this world. A large share of pleasure and pain of life will come through the use you make of it. Study deeply and diligently the structure of it, the laws that should govern it, the pains and penalties that will surely follow a violation of every law of life or health.—Oakland Tribune.

PRESERVATION OF LEMON JUICE.—An attentive

observer says, after various experiments and a test of eight months exposure to the sun and heat of summer, he has come to the following conclusion: "Heating the juice or adding alcohol to the same would appear to be superfluous, as it is only necessary to filter it and keep it in sealed bottles; however, since filtration proceeds so very slowly, the best way is perhaps to add ten per cent. of alcohol to the fresh juice, and bottle. The Pharmaceutical Journal observes that it may be preserved without the addition of alcohol by heating it to 150° F., and then excluding it from the air by carefully closing the full bottles at this temperature. The operation should be carried out in winter.

ANTIQUITY OF ROPES.—Archaeologists know that ropes date from a very remote period, and had reached a date of considerable perfection at the dawn of the historical era. The first ropes were probably made from the fibers of the inner bark of trees, from grasses, or from the hides of animals. Among the relics of the ancient Egyptians have been found sculptures showing the process of rope manufacture practiced more than 4,000 years ago, while the oldest records of that people represent well-made ropes capable of sustaining enormous burdens. It appears that flax and the fibers of the date tree were employed for those ropes.

THE Archbishop of Quebec has warned the faithful not to accept invitations for the Masonic ball in honor of the Grand Lodge.

The Position of Women.

The advancement of women from the place of dishonor to which she has been consigned since the days of barbarism to the true position which is now being accorded to her by the enlightened public opinion of the nineteenth century is a subject we delight to contemplate. It is gratifying to note that even in the world of sentiment the popular idea of woman's position is being wonderfully elevated. It is, in fact, a substitution of true sentiment for a mawkish sentimentality. Instead of the plaything, the consolation, the ministering angel of mankind, as lordly manhood selfishly esteemed her, she is now coming forward into a truer companionship, a helpmeet; not as an underling, but as a mutual partner in the affairs of life. More than this, she is being more generally recognized as the great humanizing, elevating and civilizing agent in the life of the world. As she herself feels the weight of this new trust, she is rising to a better discharge of its duties. She is rising in art and filling our homes with the means of inculcating truer taste and a better appreciation of the beautiful in all material objects. She is rising in other lines of culture, and is charging the minds of the race with purer thoughts and more elevated desires. She is rising in her might in works of charity, and is improving and advancing public efforts for the consolation of the distressed, the unfortunate and the erring. In short, one cannot look out upon the social life of the world without recognizing the benign influence which peerless womanhood is exerting. As that grand woman, Julia Ward Howe, says in the last North American Review: "Civilization brings more and more in to play the social and intellectual faculties and places more and more in abeyance the animal and personal propensities. Out of this progress standards are evolved which commend themselves to the judgment of the few and to the affection of the many. From these society as a whole does not go back. Its tendency is toward the moral and the rational, though the main current is often disturbed by eddies of folly and passion. The solution of the mystery is beyond. The conclusion of the whole matter is neither with us nor before us. If Goethe could end the most wonderful of criticisms and of rhapsodies by exclaiming:

The eternal womanly draws us on,

We surely may rest in the belief that an immense value vested in the maidenhood and in the matronhood of the human race is destined to unfold itself more and more, and to enrich the future as it has enriched the past, only, if possible, more abundantly."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Causes of Dry Zones.

Professor Marsh, at the last Montreal meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, presented a paper from Prof. Guyot on the subject of "Dry Zones," and offered an explanation of the causes of dry zones in both hemispheres which Prof. Loomis had described. The zones were found in the sub-tropical regions, where the rainfall is usually greatest.

The first of these zones appears very generally around the globe between the 28° and 30° of north latitude, beginning in Southern California and continuing in Sahara, Arabia, Afghanistan and across a portion of the Malay peninsula. The second zone he marked on the southern hemisphere, beginning in Peru, appearing again in the Argentine Republic, and again noticeable in South Africa to the north of the Hottentot country, and then in the northern section of Australia.

The cause of these dry zones Prof. Guyot finds in the fact that on the regions in question during the continued dry seasons there is a "descending wind." The counter currents from southwest and northeast cause an ascension of the air at the equator, and these waves, as they may be called, descending again, take up the heat lost in the altitude and are subjected to such a pressure that they give up none of the moisture they contain. This accounts for the fact that although these waves are frequently cloud-laden, there is no precipitation.

A discussion of the paper followed, in which Prof. Hunt, of Montreal, Prof. Brown and Prof. Newberry gave isolated facts within their personal experience which tended to strengthen the views advanced by Prof. Guyot.

HOW TO GET PORTRAITS OF BURGLARS.—A

correspondent of the Scientific American says: "We have evidently entered the age of electricity, and I offer the suggestion of a detective trap for burglars as among the important possibilities. The burglar alarm now in use, true to its name, alarms the burglar, and he is away. Instead of ringing the alarm, let it be set to turn on momentarily the full glare of the electric light, and at the same instant have it expose a plate in a camera all ready to take an instantaneous picture. The burglar, of course, will take to flight, but will leave his photograph behind. The same blaze of light which has alarmed him will awaken the sleeping inmates, who can at once proceed to the camera and secure the negative. In order, however, that the camera should be set at the right focus, the alarm used should be an electric mat set in a certain place on the floor, that spot being covered by the focus of the camera. In case of banks and safety deposit companies the electric mats should be in front of the iron safes.

A Story of a Tooth.

It was a very troublesome tooth. Not a bit of anything sweet could Christie eat without making it ache. I cannot tell how many hours and hours in the night it had kept every one awake. "That child must go to the dentist to-morrow," said papa one night.

Christie was a little girl, not quite five years old, but she was tired of being a baby. It seemed to her that since all big girls have had teeth pulled, having a tooth out would make her a big girl. So she went down street beside mamma next morning feeling very happy.

"Hello," called out cousin Tom, whom they met, "where are you going?"

"I'm going to the dentist's to have a tooth pulled," replied Christie proudly.

"I wouldn't be in your shoes for anything!" added Tom.

"Is it very bad, mamma?" asked Christie.

But Mrs. Spencer told her not be frightened, for Tom was only trying to tease. I think the little girl's mother ought to have told her the whole truth. Don't you?

What a nice place that dentist's office was! There was a splendid great chair with a head-rest, and a pretty bowl beside it. There was a stand all full of funny little tools that Christie thought would be grand to play with.

What a pleasant man Dr. Snow was! He lifted her into the great chair and asked so kindly which tooth had ached. Then he took one of the little tools in his hand, and then such a straining and tugging and wrenching and breaking.

Christie didn't know that she screamed, but mamma told her afterward that her cries were frightful to hear. She only knew that she put both hands up to see if her head was still in place before she bounded out of the chair.

"You are just as mean as you can be, and I'll never come here again as long as I live! So there!" she cried.

In an instant she was in mamma's arms. She was told, between tears and kisses, that it was all over. Then Mrs. Spencer took from a paper a lovely new wax doll. In a little while Christie was as smiling and happy as ever.

"Now, dear," said mamma, as they started for home, "you run back and tell Dr. Snow you are sorry for being so naughty, and ask him to forgive you."

Back into the office went Christie.

"Please, Mr. Dentist, if you're sorry for being so naughty, I'll forgive you."

The doctor smiled and patted her head. Christie never knew that she hadn't said it right.

After all, she wasn't a big girl! That very night she was rocked to sleep in mamma's arms.

"LAY off your overcoat, or you won't feel it when you go out," said the landlord of an inn to a guest who was sitting by the fire. "That's what I'm afraid of," returned the man. "The last time that I was here I laid off my overcoat and I haven't felt it since."

A LITTLE girl asked her sister what was chaos that her papa read about. The elder replied, "It was a pile of nothing, and no place to put it in."

Smut.

Dick found her in the orchard one morning. Nobody knew where she came from; nobody ever claimed her.

She was a pretty little creature, snow white but for a tiny black spot on the tip of her nose, making her look for all the world as though she had been poking about among the stove pots and kettles.

One day Dick's wee niece, Maidie, came with her mamma on a visit to the farm; and her bright eyes soon spied the little white furry heap curled closely down beside the stove.

"Kitty's dot dirty face," she said, shaking her round yellow head solemnly. "Nose 'muddy; must be washed!"

So she got a dish of soap and water and scrubbed poor little Smut's black nose very hard and long, until Smut thought of the pins in her soft feet, and used them on Maidie's hand. Then Maidie let her go.

The next summer Smut became a proud and happy little cat-mother, with a family of three black-and-white kittens in the loft over Dick's hen-house. Dick's chickens were the delight of his heart. They knew their names, and would come in a hurry when he called them.

One night he forgot to shut the hen-house door. In the night there was a great outcry, then—a squalling and cackling, and a queer noise which nobody knew what to make of, all together.

Almost the whole family rushed out to see what it was all about, and there—there was a fox, a big, red fox, that had come to make a supper on Dick's cochins.

But he did not get even a bite; for down out of the loft had dropped brave little Smut, right upon his back, and there she hung, biting and scratching.

The fox was making the funny noise, which wasn't a bark nor a growl, but a little of both; and when he heard them all coming, he scampered away to the woods with Smut, who dropped off before long, and came back.

Wasn't she praised and petted! And didn't she live on cream for a week!

Of course the older folks said she was defending her own family, but Dick always declared she did it to save the chickens, because they were his, and because she was his own little cat.

Household Hints

MAGNETIC PURIFICATION OF PORCELAIN PASTE.—There is a difference in commercial value of 40 per cent. between pieces of porcelain which are absolutely white and those which present the slightest spot. The spots are produced by small quantities of ferruginous matter, of which the chemical composition is not well known, but which can be attracted by a magnet. Many attempts have been made to use magnets systematically, but they have hitherto been unsuccessful. Two French establishments have lately employed the following method with very satisfactory results. Each electro-magnet is composed of two coils placed in a line; their remote ends are connected by a long piece of iron; the two near ends are but a short distance apart, one representing the north pole and the other the south pole of the electro-magnet; between them there is a magnetic field which can be made very powerful, provided there is a sufficient exciting current. A tight box encloses this magnetic field; it is open above, and has a round opening below into which an escaping tube is inserted. The porcelain paste, very liquid, running into the box, encounters a small zinc diaphragm which sends it to the right and to the left over the polar faces; the magnetic particles are retained and the rest escapes. The polar surfaces are cleansed twice a day by a jet of water. The apparatus may be worked either with a Gramme machine or with a battery.—L'Eclair.

STRENGTH OF DIFFERENT KINDS OF HEMP.—Careful experiments made at the cordage works of Messrs. Frost, of Shadwell, Eng., and reported in Iron, give the following figures as the results of the trial. The experiments were made with fifty yarns of each kind, all spun 25 thread, and with the same machinery. Five tests were made with each kind, and the average breaking weight of each given as follows: Manila, 2,459 lbs.; Italian, 2,212 lbs.; New Zealand, 1,433 lbs.; Sisal, 1,280 lbs.; Russian, 1,228 lbs. It will be observed that the strength of Manila hemp is more than double that of Russian. The experiment is a very interesting and useful one.

A NEW WHEEL.—An Italian has invented a new carriage-wheel, in which the iron rim is united to the hub by semi-circular slat spokes. The curvature allows them to serve both as spokes and springs. The result of experimental trials is said to have surpassed the anticipations of the inventor. In great speed, especially, the irregularities of the road produce no shock. Elasticity, solidity and complete absence of noise are enumerated among the special advantages of the new invention.—Les Mondes.

EXPERIMENTS have recently been made in Sweden of crushing blast furnace slag into sand, to be utilized for road and railway making, etc., and a machine has just been constructed by the Ringshyllon Iron Works, which is stated to be very effective in the preparation of the material.

Home Treatment of Croup.

In a late paper we find a notice of a suit for $10,000 damages, brought by a father whose child had died of croup, against the doctor who attended it. This seems to us absurd, for we hold that when any parties assume the responsibilities of parentage there is implied a duty on their part to prepare themselves with the knowledge requisite for the protection of their children from the dangers to which they are liable to be exposed. Especially is this necessary in regard to the treatment of croup and its kindred diseases, which are so sudden in their attack, so swift in running their course, and, if neglected, so fatal in their termination. There can be no excuse for ignorance upon such subjects in these days of common sense, medical works, "Household Physician," etc.—particularly in regard to croup, in which delay is so emphatically dangerous.

This disease, taken in time, or as the doctors call it, "in the first stage," is a simple, easily-managed affair. If neglected from ignorance, want of care, or waiting till the doctor comes, the "second stage" quickly follows—wherein the skill of the best physician is often of no avail to save the life of the poor little sufferer, for whose death those having charge of the child are responsible, and not the doctor called in too late to save it. The season when children are most subject to croup is at hand, and we feel that a few hints regarding its home treatment may not be out of place at this time.

It is many years ago since we were first awakened at midnight by the shrill, barking cough of a baby with the croup. At that time we knew only enough of this disease to know that it was one which admitted of no delay in its treatment, and sent instantly for the doctor, who happened, luckily for us, to live near by, and came at once to the child's relief. We watched his every action with intense anxiety whilst he kindly explained to us the nature of the disease and the reasons for the remedies he applied.

Taking a narrow strip of flannel and dipping it into a mixture of sweet oil and ammonia, he put this around the child's throat to act as a counter-irritant and draw the blood from the seat of the disease (in the windpipe) to the surface. He left this cloth on until the little one's neck was quite red, warning us at the same time never to blister the throat externally, as that was not the object, but simply to redden it, when, if it caused the child much pain, a cloth dipped in the plain oil could be put on instead, which would relieve the burning sensation. The doctor then administered small doses of syrup of squills, from time to time, to soothe the irritation in the throat and relax the system, and under his care the little patient was sleeping quietly in an hour's time, with only a slight hoarseness left next day to tell of the danger through which it had passed. The fact, however, that it had had the croup and might be subject to it, alarmed us greatly, and we thought, with dismay, "Suppose we had lived five miles in the country with a 10-mile ride between us and a doctor? The child might have died before help could have been brought, and we, in our ignorance of what to do for it, would have been to blame for its death." We concluded to turn doctor ourselves, to that degree that we did not mean to rest until we knew all that a layman might concerning this dreaded disease, or at least enough to act intelligently for the child's benefit until the aid of a physician could be procured.

Our first study was old "Dewees on Children's Diseases," and other and later medical authorities followed after, until the cure of croup was reduced in our minds to the simple propositions of taking "time by the forelock," understanding the nature of the remedies to be used, and applying them instantly, thereby at once checking the progress of the disease, nor ever letting it pass into that dangerous "second stage," for which so little can be done, wherein the windpipe or trachea becomes filled with a tenacious phlegm or "false membrane," which prevents the child's breathing, and, in a short time, chokes it to death. We learned, then, that the first step in the cure of croup was to check by counter-irritation or reddening the throat externally the rush of blood to the diseased part. This may be done with many things, and it is well to know them, as the effect is what is desired, and it matters little what agent is used, so that this end is accomplished. Let us suppose a case.

In a lonely farmhouse, miles away from doctors or even neighbors, a child is taken at midnight with the croup. "What shall be done?" cries the young mother in dismay. Put a counter-irritant around its throat at once. "Of what?" Sweet oil and turpentine, mixed together in about equal parts. "We have neither in the house." Some melted lard then, with a little ammonia in it (not enough to blister, mind you). "Dear me, we are just out of both!" Quick, then, we are losing time. Get some coal oil from the lamp can. Put some in a saucer, dip your flannel in it, and pin it around the child's neck, or a weak mustard plaster, or red pepper sprinkled on a strip with melted lard—in fact anything which will produce the required effect, if you have not the turpentine, which the experience of many years has proved to us to be the best thing, for two reasons: First, because children usually dislike the strong smell of ammonia, mustard, etc., so much that they rebel at their application, and secondly, turpentine has, besides its rubefacient powers, a strong anesthetic effect, quieting the nerves and putting the little patient into a gentle sleep.

"The child's breathing is still very hard," cries the mother. Give it 15 drops of squills. "Haven't a drop left." Give syrup, then. "We never keep that." No matter! Drop four or five drops of coal oil on this teaspoonful of sugar and give that to the child. It cuts the phlegm some way, and usually acts like a charm; or five drops turpentine will answer the same purpose. There! Keep the little one well covered, and he'll be all right by to-morrow. Don't let him out of the house for a day or two though, or he may take fresh cold and have a relapse, when you will have your first work to do over.

For the first stage, in which croup should always be treated, one hardly needs a doctor at all, as the remedies are such everyday affairs that they may be found in nearly every household, and the reasons of their use are so obvious as to be easily remembered, whilst the relief given is, in 9 cases out of 10, so instantaneous that the patient requires no further medication. In every case, in our experience, the first croupy cough has been to us the signal for immediate action. Our bottles of sweet oil and turpentine are always on hand ready for use, and we mix them together according to the age of the child and the tenderness of its skin—using only a few drops of turpentine in the oil for the baby's neck—whilst as a remedy for sore throats for grown people the turpentine may be used nearly pure, and sometimes without any oil at all. So efficacious have we found this external application, if used at once, that the patient rarely requires anything more than this, which we often apply to the little ones by taking them in our laps before the fire and rubbing the mixture well in around their throats and chests, putting a "cravat" of flannel on afterwards to prevent any cold and keep the throat warm. This flannel we keep on the throat for several days, finding it assists greatly in preventing any relapse on the part of our patient.

The recovery of the $10,000 damages alluded to above cannot restore to that father his child—lost through the doctor's delay or his own ignorance, as the courts may decide—but the knowledge of the few simple remedies herein suggested (which have stood the test of many years' practice in the treatment of croup), may save the life of some little one, and deprive that scourge of childhood of most of its terrors in many a home. With this hope we send them forth, believing that where these remedies are promptly and properly applied this disease is no more to be dreaded in the household than an ordinary bad cold, into which it immediately merges as soon as its alarming symptoms have been checked by proper treatment.

THE TREATMENT OF RINGWORM.—A writer in the British Medical Journal says: "The difficulty experienced in the treatment of ringworm is known to everyone who has seen much of this disease. I therefore think your readers will be glad to hear of a remedy which I recently used with complete success. Struck with the similarity that existed between the disease known in the East Indies as dobitch, and ringworm, and knowing how rapidly the former yields to the application of goa powder, I was induced to try the active principle of this substance, chrysophanic acid, in the proportion of one dram to one ounce of vaseline. The result has been rapid destruction of the fungus, and consequently a complete cure. Chrysophanic acid has been recommended in the treatment of psoriasis, but I am not aware of its having been used hitherto for ringworm."

VINEGAR FOR THE SICK-ROOM.—There is a French legend that, during the plague at Marseilles, a band of robbers plundered the dying and the dead without injury to themselves. They were imprisoned, tried and condemned to die, but were pardoned on condition of disclosing the secret whereby they could ransack houses infected with the terrible scourge. They gave the following recipe, which makes a delicious and refreshing wash for the sick-room: Take of rosemary, wormwood, lavender, rue, sage and mint a large handful of each; place in a stone jar and turn over it one gallon of strong cider vinegar; cover closely and keep near the fire for four days; then strain and add one ounce of powdered camphor gum; bottle and keep tightly corked. It is very aromatic, cooling and refreshing in the sick-room, and is of great value to nurses.

A BONANZA OF BONES.—A gentleman who is exploring the wilds of Montana and Idaho writes that not far from Custer's battle-ground, on the Little Horn river, is a place where are to be found regular drifts of petrified wood and bones of extinct animals. There are to be seen great numbers of petrified logs, with one end buried in the side of the bluff and the other protruding out and breaking off in blocks. He says: Some of these are three feet in diameter, with each year's growth plainly visible in the grain. In the same bluff are tusks of the Megatherium as large around as a man's body, which are likewise imbedded at one end and breaking off into blocks at the other. The porous inside under the enameled surface is unmistakable proof that they are bones. Both the trees and the tusks are as black as coal at the exposed ends, but gray in color where covered by the hill.

Anniversary of Sts. John, 73.

On Thursday evening, Dec. 21st, the brethren of Sts. John Lodge, No. 73, celebrated their fourth anniversary by a select and well arranged musical and literary programme. Laurel hall was closely packed with a highly respectable audience. Placed over the main stand was a beautiful and large floral decoration, with evergreens and the American flag, in the center of which were the anchor and shield and the words, "Welcomed by Sts. John Lodge, No. 73, A. O. U. W."

Bro. John E. Parry, as master of ceremonies, made a short speech of welcome and introduced George T. Bromley, Esq., as the orator of the evening. His facetious and happy remarks kept the audience in the highest glee. A piano duet and anvil chorus, Miss Alice Bugbee and Master Chas. Prince, son of Bro. Prince, P. M. W., was an artistic effort that was heartily encored. Solo, by Miss Annie E. Nevers, daughter of Bro. Nevers, of Sts. John. This young lady has a clear, sweet voice, and her pleasing effort was greeted with a storm of applause. Reading, "McClain's Child," by Prof. H. C. Eastman, organist of Sts. John Lodge. Solo, Mrs. Norris. This was a chaste and operatic performance that was encored, and at the close she was presented with a fine bouquet. A comic recitation by Bro. Benhayon was an appreciable change, as the audience testified. Bro. Swan, organist of Friendship, 179, gave a baritone solo. Our entertainments are frequently favored with his pleasing voice in song, and he is always acceptable. Piano solo, Mr. Stephen Jackson, son of Bro. Jackson, of Sts. John. Although he has the misfortune to be blind, his excellent execution was accorded a recall, which he answered by rendering a fine sentimental and touching song that brought tears to many an eye. Miss Bernherd was his accompanist. Wm. B. Marshutz, P. M. W., gave a comic recitation which, for variety, was such a marked change that his audience showed its appreciation by loud approval. Song, "Warrior Bold," Mr. Harrie C. Biggs. Recitation, "Angels of Buena Vista," Miss Selina Cohn. This young lady acquitted herself with much credit, and was presented with a fine bouquet. Vocal duet, Misses Edith and Rosa Stanley. This was a highly artistic effort, and the happy blending of their voices gave evidence of high cultivation; each were presented with a large and beautiful bouquet. Piano duet, Mr. Wm. McCarthy and his sister Lizzie; a pleasing performance. Tenor solo, Senor V. Caranzi. His rare rendering of music shows great compass of voice. Recitation, "Battle of Iry," Master Chas. Dietrich, pupil of Prof. Eastman. His feeling recitation was alike creditable to him and teacher, and was one of the hits of the evening. A comic song, "The Monk of Old," was sung by G. Frank Perkins, who fairly convulsed the audience with laughter. Solo, "The King's Highway" by request, Mr. Stephen Jackson. Recitation, Dr. F. H. Dennis, of Sts. John Lodge. Duet, Misses Edith and Rosie Stanley. By request, comic recitation, Miss Selina Cohn, pupil of Prof. Eastman, and daughter of Bro. Cohn, Financier of Harmony Lodge, No. 9. A character recitation, by Bro. Marshutz closed the literary exercises. Miss Rooksie McFarlane was the accompanist. The entertainment was a decided success, and the Committee of Arrangements, consisting of Bros. H. S. Gray, M. W., Jno. E. Parry, Thos. Patton, F. S. J. Fletcher, P. M. W., J. O. Jephson, P. M. W., H. G. Prince, P. M. W., and W. B. Marshutz, P. M. W., are deserving of thanks for their efforts in behalf of this worthy subordinate Lodge.

District Meeting in Excelsior, 128.

A large and enjoyable District meeting was held in the hall of Excelsior Lodge, No. 126, Bro. Poland, Deputy, on Thursday evening, Dec. 14th. The members of Excelsior were out in force, and good delegations from Franklin and Harmony were admitted in a body with the usual honors, as also individual representation from a number of our city Lodges. The business of the Lodge was carefully attended to, and proposed legislation made that anticipated a reserve fund for the purpose of building a new hall. There were two petitions received for the degrees. An intellectual feast had been arranged, and was given as follows: Address of Welcome, J. F. Jenness, M. W.; opening remarks, Deputy Poland, in which He took occasion to compliment and congratulate the officers and members with whom he had the honor to hold official relations. The M. W. asked Bro. J. W. Howard, as chairman of the committee on entertainment, to take charge of the programme for the remainder of the evening. Prof. Hahn gave an overture; next a word picture and recitation, by Bro. Harvey, of Excelsior—a fine and tragic effort that was highly entertaining; vocal trio and encore, Bros. Sam Booth, P. M. W., L. S. Clark and Wm. Edminister, of Excelsior; address on hygiene and anatomy, Bro. Silas White, of Excelsior. He had provided for his interesting lecture charts and a skull, with other parts of animals. His illustrations and descriptions showed him to be master of his subject, and his suggestions relating to the laws of health were such that all should consider well; piano solo, Prof. Hahn; vocal trio, Bros. Booth, Clark and Edminister; speech, Thos. V. O'Brien, of Excelsior. In his remarks he gave a history of the rise and progress of fraternal organizations and the cause and necessity that brought them into existence, and in this connection he aptly drew conclusions that we have formed these great beneficiary societies as a feature of this advanced age; dramatic recitation, Prof. T. C. Maher, of Burns; for a hearty recall he recited "Meg and I," original song, Bro. Sam Booth, P. M. W., descriptive of Workmen, and in which was ingeniously blended the names of all the Lodges in this district; remarks by Deputies Danforth, McKay and Thompson, Grand Recorder Pratt, Deputy Grand Master Loud and the Grand Master closed one of the best meetings of the season.

Hercules' Monthly Social.

Following a custom of Hercules Lodge, No. 53, a social, musical and literary entertainment of much merit and excellence was given on Friday evening, Dec. 15th. The business of the Lodge was transacted quickly, and the doors were thrown open to an audience composed of Workmen, invited guests and their families, with a good sprinkling of little ones. Following is the programme: Overture, Prof. Kerr; address, Wm. H. Barnes, Grand Master, whose remarks were full of interesting facts and pathos intermixed with humor and witticisms that were very pleasing and interesting; reading, Bro. J. Taylor; vocal solo and encore, Walter J. Leon; instrumental solo, "Aerial Bells," Mr. J. F. Boardman; harmonica, Master J. Owens; dramatic recitation, "The Vagabonds," Prof. T. C. Maher. His masterly effort was listened to with wrapt attention, and at the close was given a hearty recall; vocal solo and encore, Mrs. Chas. Hill, a very pleasing performance; instrumental trio, Messrs. Adams and Finnigan Bros., with guitars and concertino; their effort was received with much favor, and were awarded a recall; recitation, "Barbara Freitohie," little Miss Montgomery, daughter of Bro. Montgomery, P. M. W. of Unity, 27; piano duet and encore, Miss Gertie Hill and Master H. Paulsen, son of A. Paulsen, of Hercules; recitation on, Miss Rubie Manzer, daughter of Bro. Manzer, P. M. W.; recitation, Martir Geo. Johnson; solo, Miss Tower, Miss Manzer playing the accompaniment; instrumental duet, Masters Walter and Geo. Johnson, sons of Bro. Johnson, of Hercules; recitation, little Lizzie Taylor; harmonica solo, Bro. Curtis, of Fidelity; his pleasing effort was awarded a hearty recall. The committee, consisting of Bros. Chas. Carroll, P. M. W., W. H. Hiller, M. W., John Taylor, organist, and A. Bergeman, are deserving of credit for the able management of this monthly social.

Memorial, 174

On Monday evening, December 19th, Memorial, 174, held their last meeting for this term, and made a good ending by conferring the J. W. degree on one candidate and the M. W. degree on one. There was a full attendance, and the officers for the ensuing term were elected. We believe that the selection made will honor the Lodge and be of the character and fitness of the efficient corps that have preceded them. There was what might be termed a lively time, and the young statesmen invoked all the subtleties of parliamentary law under the head "Good of the Order." Bro. Gyselaar, P. M. W., moved the sum of $10 be donated to each widow of a deceased Bro. of Memorial Lodge. The motion was carried.

Friendship, 179.

The brethren of Friendship on their last meeting night were out in full force, and held a very enjoyable meeting and spirited election. The J. W. Degree was conferred on one candidate, and the term has closed with 125 members. The principal officers for the last term were re-elected. There was a time in the history of our Order when several of our brethren prophesied the downfall of this Lodge, owing to the large number of older Lodges that had become fully established. To those who had then their doubts there can be none now, as Friendship, 179, is to-day one of our growing and vigorous Lodges, and bids fair to rival a number of the older Lodges ere long.

Lodge Locals.

Hope Lodge, 11, Nevada.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Dear Sirs: Hope Lodge, No. 11, A. O. U. W., held its regular annual meeting for the election of officers last Wednesday evening, December 20th. There was an unusually full attendance, and the following were elected officers for the ensuing term of one year: Dr. J. S. Hammond, P. M. W.; W. T. Hook, M. W.; O. B. Vincent, Fin.; Wm. Reagan, O.; Charles Lund, Rdr. (re-elected); C. M. Ritter, Fin. (re-elected second time); Samuel Crescenzo, Rvr. (re-elected second time); Walter Trestrail, G.

A fine of 50 cents was imposed upon each member absent from the meeting, and under head of "Good of the Order" remarks were made by Bros. Hook, Hammond, Vincent, Ritter, Miller, Weller and Daley, urging a thorough canvass of the city for the purpose of securing good material for members, thereby assisting Bro. Kinsley in his labors to secure the requisite 2,000 members. Nevada is tired of paying for Ohio delinquencies. Our percentage of deaths is as low as in any portion of the Union, yet our assessments are numerous. The Order here is composed of the very best of material, and we are desperately interested about a separate jurisdiction. Even though we should not reduce our expenses, we would still be in favor of it.

The M. W. degree was conferred on one candidate at this meeting. At the meeting two weeks before the M. W. degree was conferred on two candidates. The Order is growing as rapidly as could be expected. During the year we have added to our membership eight by initiation and three by card. During the same time we have lost two, one by suspension from the Order and the other by withdrawal card, having removed from the State. This we think is a very good record.

Redding Lodge, 72.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—For a long time Redding Lodge, No. 72, has had in contemplation the organization of a Degree of Honor Lodge, many believing that the establishing of such a degree for our wives and daughters would be of great advantage to the subordinate Lodge, bringing into prominence and holding up to the public gaze the grand principles of the Order and its sublime mission to the widow and fatherless. Upon the receipt of a circular from Grand Master Wm. H. Barnes, in which he touched upon the advantages of this degree, the brethren resolved to give it a trial, and as the result of this resolve 38 persons, composed equally of ladies and gentlemen, assembled at the close of our regular lodge meeting, and Oak Leaf Lodge, No. 13 was duly instituted by P. G. M. W. Clay W. Taylor, the organization being fully completed by the election of the following officers: P. M. S. of H., Mrs. F. M. Swasey; W. S. of H., Mrs. Geo. Groves; S. of H., Mrs. J. M. Gleaves; S. of C., Mrs. B. R. Morris; S. Sec., Mrs. S. J. R. Gilbert; S. Treas., Mrs. R. G. Dann; S. Usher, Mrs. J. H. Bailey; Maids of Honor, Misses Jennie Bailey and Florence Lewis; 1st and 2d Advisors to W. S. of H., C. E. Berry and J. H. Cooper; L. W., B. R. Morris; O. W., J. R. Lewis.

Great enthusiasm prevailed, especially among the ladies, and which did not in any manner relax when an adjournment was had to the Paragon restaurant, kept by Bro. Groves, and a splendid supper participated in by all. The exercises from first to last passed smoothly under the management of our installing officer, and the event will remain long in the minds of the members of the only (I believe) D. of H. Lodge north of Sacramento. Fraternally yours, RECORDER No. 72.

Entertainment of Los Gatos Lodge, 76.

LOS GATOS, CAL., Dec. 25, 1882.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—A few words from this thriving village may not be out of place. The members of Los Gatos Lodge, No. 76, got up a grand entertainment which took place on last Friday evening, the 22d inst. The members of John A. Dix Post, G. A. R., of San Jose, were invited as guests. The party proved to be one of the finest ever given in this place, nearly 1,000 people being in attendance. Three large buildings were used on the occasion to accommodate the vast assemblage. The entertainment was held in Lyndon hall, the Workman's hall was used as a reception-room, and the magnificent supper was served in the fruit cannery, where the tables were spread with a seating capacity of nearly 200 at a time. Excellent music, recitations, singing, feasting and dancing filled up the programme. Although the receipts were just about sufficient to cover expenses, everybody present acknowledged having "a terrible good time." Our Lodge at this place is in a very flourishing condition, and represents the best material of the town, which is rapidly improving, and the prospects are favorable for a large and healthy increase of members during the coming year. With a "Merry Christmas" and a "Happy New Year" to the brethren all over our happy country, I remain, yours truly, in C. H. and P.—W. S. WALKER, Reporter.

Mission, 56.

MISSION SAN JOSE, CAL., Dec. 1882.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Though you have not heard from us for some time past we are still alive and adding to our membership. During the last few weeks we have initiated eight new members. At our last meeting the J. W. degree was conferred on three candidates and two more applications were received. Before many weeks we will have the centennial number. While Mission Lodge could always boast of having good officers, who not only attended the meetings regularly, but also performed their work well, we must find at our next election the same material. Let every Lodge try and do the "work" well, especially when a new candidate is initiated, for the first impression one receives of our work will be a lasting one, and if this is done to the letter the impression will be good and the candidate will retain it for all time to come. Let us do away with our rituals on initiation night and try to commit to memory, and we will give satisfaction to ourselves and to our brethren. One of Mission Lodge's oldest and best known members, P. M. Fisher, P. M. W., will soon leave us to reside in Oakland, having been elected County Superintendent of Schools.—A. LEBRECHT, M. W., Mission Lodge, 56.

Keystone, No. 64.

The meetings of this Lodge are usually pleasant and agreeable, and the one of Tuesday, Dec. 26th, was similar to many others in that respect. Bro. John Munce, of Occidental, No. 6, was present and gave a little friendly criticism. He said that he had heard that Keystone was a solemn Lodge, but he had been disappointed. After speaking in the spirit of fraternal love of some erroneous "opinions," he scored some good points against Lodges transacting the work in levity. He put his foot down on the idea of transacting the general business of the Lodge in an indifferent, lax, or indecorous manner. He believed in having a good time and plenty of good humor under "Good of the Order." In fact, Bro. Munce gave a lot of good advice, self-evident facts, etc., applicable to Keystone, and, we are sorry to say, too much so to many other Lodges. The remarks of the brother were well received by the Lodge, and several members paid their personal compliments to him for his sincere and frank criticisms. It would be well were there more such visiting brethren like Bro. Munce going about from Lodge to Lodge doing good.

North Star, 213.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—For the past 12 months North Star Lodge has been merely holding its own ground; but now that the election is over, and the busy season among the ranchmen is past, we confidently expect, and are laboring to effect a lively increase of our membership, with fair prospect of success, fully realizing that a passive policy will not always bring about important results, although it sometimes works well for a brief period. Let every brother in the Order feel and act as though he individually is largely responsible (which is an undoubted fact) for the success and advancement of the interests of our beloved Order, and we will go forward with an earnestness and irresistible force that will lead to the high position that so noble an Order should occupy. On the 20th of next month will occur our first anniversary, and we anticipate an interesting time and profitable result from the public entertainment which it is understood will be given. By the way, will you be kind enough to favor your readers with a brief outline of the conception, origin and growth of the Order? Yours fraternally, O. V. WALLACE, Smith River Cal., D. C. 15, 1882.

Newark Lodge, 169.

Newark Lodge, No. 169, A. O. U. W., had an open meeting last Friday evening, Dec. 15th. By 8 o'clock the hall was filled. W. H. Barnes, Grand Master, was introduced and delivered a very fine and instructive address, dwelling at length upon the advantages of belonging to this Order, and cited several instances when delays proved unfortunate, and where one joined who lost his life by an accident within a few days after taking the degrees, and his family received the $2,000 promptly. At the close of the address he sang a few songs and related several anecdotes. The hall was then cleared of the seats, and the Centerville band of five pieces took its position and furnished music for the dancers. At an intermission refreshments were passed around. Dancing was resumed and kept up till 1 o'clock, when all departed hoping that Newark Lodge will hold another meeting soon. The prospects are favorable for the admission into the Lodge of several new members very soon. There was an initiation of two candidates on Monday evening, Dec. 18th.—Alameda Republican.

Lily of the Valley, D. of H., 11.

In a letter from D. M. Blank, M. W. of Sacramento Lodge, No. 80, he says the following of Lily of the Valley, D. of H., No. 11, an account of the institution of which was given in the issue of Dec. 1st: "It was instituted by Grand Master, W. H. Barnes, on the evening of Nov. 22, 1882, with 30 members. It meets now twice a month, first Saturday and third Tuesday eve of each month, Union Lodge giving use of hall Saturday eve, and Sacramento Lodge giving up the hall on Tuesday evening. On last meeting night, Dec. 9th, 21 new members were given the degree, making our membership over 50. The Lodge is vigorous and bids fair to be second to none in California. It has stimulated the attendance to our A. O. U. W. Lodges very much."

BRO. F. MANNIRE, of North San Juan writes: "Our Lodge is doing well; we have taken in seven new members already this term, and have two more applicants in. Inclosed find two new subscriptions to the WATCHMAN. I hope soon to be able to get more subscribers for your valuable paper, as it ought to be in every household."

BRO. MARTIN OLSEN, of Pennington, No. 21, Detroit, Mich., paid a visit to Myrtle, No. 42, on Dec. 23d, and intends to deposit his card with this growing Lodge. We gather from him that the Workmen are in great favor in Michigan and are growing in popularity.

BRO. V. P. FRITCHARD, of Lodi, No. 108, was in attendance at the last meeting of Valley, No. 30. He reports things in a very prosperous condition in Lodi and vicinity.

Resolutions of Respect.

[IN MEMORIAM.]

The following resolutions were passed by Pacific Lodge No. 7, to the memory of Bro. James E. Ingols:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our beloved brother, James E. Ingols; and whereas, it is but just that a fitting recognition of his many virtues should be had; therefore, be it Resolved, By Pacific Lodge, No. 7, A. O. U. W., that while we bow with humble submission to the will of the Most High, we do not less mourn for our brother who has been taken from us.

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Ingols this Lodge laments the loss of a brother and companion who was dear to us all. A citizen whose upright and noble life was a standard of emulation to his fellows.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of this Lodge be extended to his family in their affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of this Lodge, and a copy thereof be transmitted to the family of our deceased brother.

Fraternally submitted, R. B. S. YORK,

C. A. SHERMAN,

C. W. BAKER,

Committee on Resolutions.

BRO. JOSEPH GIUSLI will keep open house on New Year's day at 718 Broadway.

California Lodge, No. 1.

Early History and Introduction of the Order on the Pacific Coast.

The history of California Lodge, No. 1, A. O. U. W., is the history of the introduction of the Order into the State. The hall in which the first meeting was held was not one of large dimensions or fitted up for comfort (if the bare room can be called fitted up). There was no carpet on the floor, no shutters or shades on the windows, not a chair or anything else in the line of furniture in it. A few benches and a table of the cheapest kind was all that was inviting in it; but it was the largest and best in the vicinity at that time. The working tools which they provided themselves with were the most simple and rustic kind and inexpensive.

The charter members of California Lodge, No. 1, A. O. U. W., are entitled to the credit of first introducing the Order on the Pacific Coast. To say that these members overcame obstacles but poorly expresses the difficulties they had to contend with. The following gentlemen met at Pelouse's hall, West Oakland, on the evening of Aug. 21, 1875: Deputy Supreme Master Workman Bro. H. G. Pratt, J. C. Field, E. Surryhne, Wm. H. Fiske, B. B. Allen, A. B. Hoag, F. E. Langley, J. A. Carleton and E. Nowotony.

Bro. H. G. Pratt called this preliminary meeting to order and made the following temporary appointments of officers: P. M. W., J. C. Field; M. W., E. Surryhne; G. F., W. H. Fiske; O. B. B. Allen; Recorder, A. B. Hoag; F. F. E. Langley; Rec., J. A. Carleton; Watchman, E. Nowotony, and proceeded to initiate all present into the Order, by authority of the Supreme Lodge.

The Supreme Lodge was incorporated, and the acts of incorporation were passed by the Legislatures of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky, and were approved and adopted by the Supreme Lodge at sessions held in the cities of Cincinnati and Covington, commencing on the 11th of February, 1873. At its session in 1874 the constitution and acts of incorporation were revised, and under these revised acts California Lodge, A. O. U. W., No. 1, was instituted by Supreme Deputy, Bro. H. G. Pratt, who stated the objects of the Order.

The charter members of California Lodge, No. 1, A. O. U. W., were fully imbued with the principles and heartily endorsed the objects as set forth, and immediately proceeded to an election of officers, which resulted as follows: P. M. W., J. C. Field; M. W., E. Surryhne; F., Wm. Fiske; O., B. B. Allen; Recorder, A. B. Hoag; Fin., F. E. Langley; Rec., J. A. Carleton; W., E. Nowotony.

Friday evening was adopted as the night of meeting. After some instruction from Bro. Pratt the first meeting of the Order on this coast was closed in due form. The next meeting was held in the same hall on Aug. 27, 1875. At this meeting J. A. Chase, C. E. Henry and A. H. Anderson were initiated and became charter members. Bros. Anderson and Henry were nominated for the office of Outside Watchman. Bro. Henry was elected, and was immediately installed into the office.

The name of the Lodge had not yet been decided on. Some suggested Pioneer Lodge, and others California Lodge. A ballot was taken to determine upon the name, and the result was that California Lodge, No. 1, was adopted as the name of the Lodge. Bro. Surryhne, M. W., appointed Bro. Anderson as Guide. This completed the number of officers required. The dues were fixed at 50 cents per month, and the second meeting of California Lodge adjourned until Friday, Sept. 3, 1875. At this meeting Bros. U. A. Bear and W. H. Oney were initiated without ceremony. The following brothers were elected Trustees: Bros. Field, Henry and Fiske.

At the fourth meeting of the Lodge, Bros. Plummer, J. Wood and J. H. Tyler were initiated without form. At this meeting it was decided to have two meetings a week, and Tuesday and Friday evenings were adopted as the nights of meeting. The J. W. degree was exemplified, and each charter member taxed 25 cents, to assist in purchasing regalia. The fourth meeting was closed in due form.

At the fifth meeting it was demonstrated that the Treasury was in need of funds, and a motion that each member pay $3 as an assessment to be credited to him as dues prevailed.

The sixth meeting was an important one. A number of applications for membership were received and appropriately referred. The applicants were J. M. Shaw, F. Gross, G. Black and Henry Menzler. The Trustees reported that they had procured the chandelier for $15, and the tables for $5 each. The Financier, Recorder and Receiver were instructed to procure books, stationery, etc.

At the seventh meeting, Oct. 15, 1875, J. M. Shaw was introduced and initiated in due form, being the first to receive the work. At a meeting on Nov. 21, 1875, Bro. Plummer was tendered a vote of thanks for donating a frame for the charter, which had been received. November 23, 1875, the Lodge procured a carpet for the floor of the hall, and also two window shades, and locks for the drawers. Up to this time the Lodge had met in an uncarpeted room, without blinds or shades on the windows. A hemp carpet was procured and the Lodge decided to rent their hall to the "Latter Day Saints." December 14, 1875, eighteen chairs were procured for use in the Lodge, and Bro. Anderson was on motion allowed the use of the hall while demonstrating his skill as an artist in painting the pedestal.

On December 28, 1875, the following brothers were elected as the officers for the ensuing year: M. W., Bro. Fiske; G. F., Bro. Henry; O., Bro. Shaw; Recorder, Bro. A. B. Hoag; Financier, Bro. Anderson; Receiver, Bro. Carleton; O. W., Bro. Plummer; I. W., Bro. Bear. January 12, 1876, notices from Germania Lodge No. 2, of St. Louis, and Kentucky Lodge, No. 7, of Louisville, Ky., were received. No assessments required.

On May 30, 1876, Bros. Surryhne, Nickerson and Wilkinson were appointed as a committee to make arrangements for a picnic. On June 24, 1876, the first picnic of the A. O. U. W. was held. Bro. Pratt (present Grand Recorder) was authorized to make arrangements with the railroad company to take the members to the University grounds to attend the picnic.

At the meeting of June 27, 1876, the following brothers were elected as the officers of the Lodge: M. W., A. B. Hoag; G. F., J. Wood; O., L. P. Nickerson; Recorder, J. M. Shaw. Financier, W. H. Wilkinson; Receiver, A. H. Anderson; I. W., F. M. Burkhardt; O. W., E. Surryhne; Trustees, W. H. Fisk, A. B. Hoag, J. Wood. The members of the Lodge who did not attend the picnic were taxed 50 cents to assist in paying the transportation charges.

On July 11, 1876, a resolution signed by W. H. Wilkinson, S. P. Collins and J. Wood was read as follows, to-wit: "Resolved, That California Lodge, No. 1, pay weekly sick benefits to its members." The resolution was defeated at the following meeting. On August 15th the Lodge bought regalia for the officers.

At the meeting of December 26, 1876, the following brothers were elected as the officers of the Lodge: J. Wood, M. W.; J. M. Shaw, G. F.; J. S. Gibbs, O.; A. W. Smith, Rdr.; W. H. Fiske, Fin.; E. Surryhne, Rvr.; J. A. Carleton, I. W., and A. H. Anderson, O. W.

On February 6, 1877, a new feature under the head of "Good of the Order" was introduced. A committee of three was appointed to select a subject for debate, and the subsequent meetings of the Lodge were entertained by lively debates.

The programme for the next meeting was: First, recitation or reading by Bro. Fiske; second, debate. The subject for debate was: "Resolved, That the liberty of the press should be restricted." The affirmative was taken by Bros. Wood and Surryhne, and the negative by Bros. Smith and Hoag. The debate was decided in favor of the negative at the following meeting. The question for debate for March 27, 1877, was: "Resolved, That the theories of scientific men should not be accepted as facts." The affirmative won.

On June 21, 1877, California had a very successful entertainment at Nichol's hall. A new constitution was promulgated by the Snpreme Lodge, and at the meeting of June 26, 1877, the Lodge was instructed by D. S. M. W. Bro. H. G. Pratt to conform to it in the future. Rules of order and the by-laws were adopted in conformity to the instructions received from the Supreme Lodge. In the meantime other Lodges had been instituted; gradually, steadily and successfully, the Order kept increasing in number.

On October 27, 1877, California, with Pacific, Occidental and Alameda Lodges, celebrated the ninth anniversary of the Order. There is nothing of importance to write about in the history of the Lodge further. California was set aside as a separate jurisdiction July 2, 1878.

The A. O. U. W. introduced a new principle in secret societies—the paying of $2,000 on the death of a member. It was some time before the Order was understood, but it made itself felt, and received large additions to its roll of members. It was the means of introducing other Orders with the same principle, and benefitting the human race by providing a substantial aid for the widow and orphan.

J. HOLLYWOOD.

UNIVERSAL COOKING CROCK.—Bro. Charles Brown, 38 Geary street, is the sole agent for the Universal Cooking Crock. It is one of the sweetest, cleanest, safest, best and cheapest common sense cooking utensils yet invented. The cooking is done by the application of hot air to the sides as well as to the bottom of the crock, securing a uniform application of the heat. The crock cannot become warmer than the air surrounding it, consequently the contents will not burn. It is becoming very popular, and families that have used them will not do without them. They are sold on a warranty of giving perfect satisfaction or no pay.

BRO. ADAM MURPHY, long and favorably known as a dealer in fine coffees and spices in this city, has established the Continental Coffee and Spice Mills at 406 Sansome. A full line of spices, herbs, baking powder, flavoring extracts, coffee, green and ground, of the best quality, will be kept in large stock.

BRO. GEO. JORDON, P. M. W., has one of the finest stocks of watches, jewelry and silverware at his store, No. 433 Montgomery street, to be found in this city. He makes a specialty of manufacturing fine jewelry and repairing complicated watches, in which he has no superior.

BRO. CHRIS. WALLER, one of our leading and popular dealers in groceries and provisions, 1731 Market street, was elected for the tenth term as Receiver of Valley Lodge at their last meeting.

The Grand Bumper Degree.

Are You a Mason or Nodfellow—How Pa Was Nishiated.

"Say, are you a Mason or a Nodfellow or anything?" ask the bad boy of the groceryman as he went to the cinnamon bag on the shelf and took out a long stick to chew.

"Why, yes of course I am; but what set you to thinking of that?" asked the groceryman, as he went to the desk and charged the boy's father for half a pound of cinnamon.

"Well, do the goats bunt when you nishiate a fresh candidate?"

"No, of course not. The goats are cheap ones; they have no life, and we muzzle them and put pillows over their heads, so that they can't hurt anybody," says the groceryman as he winked at a brother Odd Fellow who was seated on a sugar barrel looking mysterious. "But why do you ask?"

"Oh, nuthin', only I wish me and chum had muzzled our goat with a pillow. Pa would have enjoyed becoming a member of our Lodge so much better. You see pa had been telling us how much good the Masons and Nodfellows did, and said we ought to try and grow up good so we could join the Lodges when we got big, and I asked pa if it would do any hurt for us to have a play Lodge in my room, and pretend to nishiate, and pa said it wouldn't do any hurt. He said it would improve our minds and make us men. So my chum and I borried a goat that lives in a livery stable. Say, do you know they keep a goat in a livery stable so the horses won't get sick. They get used to the smell of the goat, and after that nothing will make them sick but a glue factory. I wish my girl boarded in a livery stable, and then she would get used to the smell. I went home with her from church Sunday night and the smell of the goat on my clothes made her sick to her stomach, and she acted just like an excursion on the lake, and said that if I didn't go and bury myself and take the smell out of me she wouldn't go with me again. She was just as pale as a ghost, and the perspiration on her lip was jest zif she had been hit by a street sprinkler.

"You see, me and my chum had to carry the goat up to my room when pa and ma was out riding, and he blatted so we had to tie a handkerchief around his nose, and his feet made such a noise on the floor that we put some of baby's socks on 'em. Gosh! how frowzy a goat smells, don't it? I should think you Masons had strong stummix. Why don't you have askunk or a mule for a trade mark? Take a mule and annoint him with limberger cheese, and you could nishiate just as well and make a candidate smell just as bad as with a goshdarned, mildewed goat. Well, sir, my chum and me practiced with that goat until he could bunt a picture of a goat every time. We borried a buck beer sign from a saloon man, and hung it on the back of a chair, and goat would bunt it. That night pa wanted to know what we were doing up in my room, and I told him we were playing Lodge and improving our minds. He said that was right; there was nothing that did boys so much good as to imitate men and store by useful knowledge. Then my chum asked pa if he didn't want to come up to our Lodge and take the Grand Bumper Degree, and pa laffed and said he didn't care if he did, just to encourage us boys in innocent pastime that was so improvin' to our intellex.

"We had shut the goat up in a closet in my room, and it got over blating, so we took off the handkerchief and he was eating some of my paper collars and skate straps. We went up stairs and told pa to come up pretty soon and give three distinct raps, and when we asked him who comes there, he must say 'a pilgarlic who wants to join your ancient Order and ride the goat.' Ma wanted to come up too, but we told her if she come it would break up the Lodge, cause women couldn't keep a secret, and we didn't have any side saddle for the goat. Say, if you never tried it, the next time you nishiate a man in your Mason's Lodge, you sprinkle a little kyan pepper on the goat's beard just before you turn him loose. You can get three times as much fun to the square inch of goat. You wouldn't think it was the same goat. Well, we got all fixed, and pa rapped and we let him in and told him he must be blindfolded, and he got on his knees a laffing and I tied a towel around his eyes and then I turned him an made him get down on his hands also, and then his back was right toward the closet door, and I put the buck beer sign right against pa's clothing. He was a laffing all the time, and said we were as full of fun as they made 'em, and we told him it was a solemn occasion, and we wouldn't permit no levity, and if he didn't stop laffing we couldn't give him the Grand Bumper Degree.

"Then everything was ready, and my chum had his hand on the closet door, and some kyan pepper in his other hand and I asked pa, in low bass tones, if he felt as though he wanted to turn back or if he had nerve enough to go ahead and take the Degree. I warned him that it was full of dangers, as the goat was loaded for beer, and told him he yet had time to retrace his steps if he wanted to. He said he wanted the whole business, and we could go ahead with the whole menagerie. Then I said to pa that if he had decided to go ahead and not blame us for the consequences, to repeat after me the following: 'Bring forth the royal bumper and let him bump!' Pa repeated the words, and my chum sprinkled the kyan pepper on the goat's mustache, and he sneezed once and looked sassy, and then he see the lager beer goat rear ing up, and he started for it just like a cow catcher and blatted.

"Pa is real fat, but he knew he had got hit, and he grunted and said: Hell's fire, what are you boys doin'?" and then the goat gave him another degree, and pa pulled off the towel and got up and started for the stairs, and so did the goat, and ma was at the bottom of the stairs listening, and when I looked over the bannisters pa and ma and the goat were all in a heap and pa was yelling murder and ma was screaming fire, and the goat was blating and sneezing and bunting, and the hired girl came into the hall and the goat took after her, and she crossed herself just as the goat struck her, and said, 'Howly mother, protect me!' and went down stairs the way we boys slide down hill, with both hands on herself, and the goat reared up and blatted, and pa and ma went into their room and shut the door, and then my chum and me opened the front door and drove the goat out.

"The minister who comes to see ma every three times a week, was just ringing the bell, and the goat thought he wanted to be nishiated too, and gave him one for luck, and then went down the sidewalk, blating and sneezing, and the minister came in the parlor and said he was stabbed, and then pa came out of his room with his suspenders hanging down, and he didn't know the minister was there and he said cuss words, and ma cried out and told pa he would go to hell sure, and pa said he didn't care, he would kill that kussed goat afore he went, and I told pa the minister was in the parlor and he and ma went down stairs and said the weather was very propitious for a revival, and it seemed as though an outpouring of the spirit was about to be vouchsafed to His people, and none of them sot down but ma, cause the goat didn't hit her, and while they was talkin' reldigin, with their mouths, and kussin' the goat inwardly, my chum and me adjourned the Lodge and I went and stayed with him all night, and I hain't been home since. But I don't believe pa will lick me, cause he said he would not hold us responsible for the consequences. He ordered the goat hisself and we filled the order, don't you see? Well, I guess I will go and sneak in the back way and find out from the hired girl how the land lays. She will not go back on me, cause the goat was not loaded for hired girls. She just happened to get in at the wrong time. Good-bye, sir. Remember and give your goat kyan pepper in your Lodge."

As the boy went away and skipped over the back fence the groceryman said to his brother Odd Fellow "if that boy don't beat the devil I never saw one that did."—Peck's Sun.

FOOD ADULTERATION.—Just at this time there is a commotion in Paris over the discovery that nearly every article of food which will admit of doctoring is adulterated. A series of analyses were made at the municipal laboratory, the results of which first drew attention to the matter. Of 62 samples of butter only 11 were found to be pure, 25 being described as "passable," and 26 as absolutely bad; of 31 samples of flour only 18 were unadulterated; and pure ground coffee was the exception, not the rule. Pepper showed the vilest adulteration, "the sweepings of the large shops" being a frequent ingredient, and only one sample in three being what it pretended to be. This is bad enough on the Parisians, but it is well known that the system of adulterating food prevails in this country also. The article of powdered sugar is in many instances mixed with flour. To obtain the proof of this—which is familiar to housekeepers—it is only necessary to drop a spoonful of the so-called sugar into a glass of water, which it will soon whiten to the color of milk. But flour is a harmless ingredient. If nothing worse were put into our food we would at least escape the chances of being injured in health. A great deal has been said and written against the obnoxious practice with but little effect. It will never be suppressed until after the passage of such laws as can and will be rigorously enforced.

NEW USE FOR COTTON SEED OIL.—Cotton seed, from being considered a useless waste, to be got rid of by burning or otherwise, is fast becoming a valuable product, and will soon be made to add largely to the profit of the cotton crop. New uses for the seed are constantly being opened up. It is now reported that a factory has been opened at New Orleans to make illuminating and lubricating oil out of cotton seed. The apparent decadence of kerosene and whale oil for moveable lamp use may possibly soon open up a valuable market for cotton seed oil for that purpose. It seems to be a rule that every approaching need is sure to be met and supplied either by natural discoveries or by the inventive genius of man.

A COMMITTEE at Paris for the promotion of a treaty of commerce between France and the United States have decided to make presentations to the French Government next week, urging it to carefully watch the interests of French commerce during the discussions in Washington on the tariff question.

A LARGELY attended meeting was held in London Sunday night for the purpose of organizing a fund to relieve the distress in Ireland. Many telegrams and letters from clergymen, describing the outlook as a gloomy and appalling one, and stating that the people were on the verge of famine, were read.

The Bulb Garden.

The other day in passing the home of one of those old-fashioned angels, one of those low-roofed, deep-windowed houses which are giving way on every side to modern improvements, I saw along the garden walk a yard-wide border of blooming "What?" I asked a little maid swinging on the gate; "what do you call those pretty flowers?" "Why," she said, with wide open eyes, "don't you know Chinaman's lilies?" and at once, with the old-fashioned hospitality, she pulled a great handful of them. Since the Potter garden in Oakland was cut up and built over I had not seen such a spread of Narcissus; and until that moment I had not realized that the spring is here.

Some Californians long for a more marked change of the seasons, and one delightful way to obtain it is to plant a bulb garden. Just where one can look into it from the pleasantest window of the household room, there should be a large bed devoted to bulbs. This is not necessarily a costly luxury, though in Holland it is the fashion to make them so; and nowhere out of California can the beauty of such a garden be made to cover so many months of the year.

A bank against the south side of the house which is somewhat shaded by trees is a very suitable place for bulbs. The taller growing kinds should be planted next the wall, and the lowest at the outer edge. Suppose we begin with Ornithogalum, which has such pretty grassy leaves, for the outermost. Next to it plant pink oxalis; then snow drops or yellow crocus, or "Daffydown dillies;" then the blue hyacinth, and so on, band after band of color, until the ground is full.

Another side of the house might be given up to California bulbs alone. Nothing that we can import or acclimate can surpass the delicacy and richness of our natives. There ought to be a representative collection on the University grounds. There was formerly a most interesting one at Nolan's gardens, on Telegraph avenue, Oakland, to which Mr. Bolander and Dr. Kellogg had generously contributed from their botanical treasures. The Californians are generally a little later than the imported bulbs, though I have picked yellow bells at Sisson's from the edge of the snow. I said our natives were equal to the foreign species. Compare Brodiaea in cultivation with Agapanthus, and Brevortia coccinea with the cultivated crown imperial, and our squill with the European, and you will agree with me. When Prof. Wood found Brevortia for the first time in Shasta county, he felt richer than if he had found a bonanza, and named her Ida Maia, for his daughter. This plant gives a fine effect planted with the Brodiaea laxa and grandiflora. The wild fritillaria, or crown imperials of this coast are a captivating family. We have ten species, of which recurva is the prettiest, wearing a scarlet coat with a yellow lining. This is prettily checked off with scarlet, the checks so regular as to seem almost artificial. The crown of stiff leaves makes it appropriate for rock work. Again we have an Erythronium that is as graceful as a fairy's wand growing abundantly in Yuba county, and thence northward. This sister of the "dog-tooth violet" or adder tongue of the Eastern woods is more graceful and open, many flowered as are the tinier orange and purple kinds. And we have tulips in all our wild pastures, green, purple, yellow and blue, in all 25 well defined species. No one (hardly) thinks of cultivating, though every woman exclaims, "How beautiful!" when she finds them or hears them called by their Spanish name, "Mariposa." Mr. J. B. Hickman, of Monterey county, and Mr. Joseph Clark, of Cahto, have collected quantities of their bulbs for Eastern and foreign florists, and could no doubt supply anyone desirous of growing them. The California lilies are peerless, unless we except the Japanese, and I prefer the Washington lily to that. I have written often of them, and this time pass them by to mention some of the bulbs which our dealers furnish at such prices as bring them within the reach of all. The Oxalis, already spoken of, is a general favorite. O. Floridunda is later and many-flowered from a single stem. O. Lasiantha is very showy, bearing a head of 20 or more bright crimson blooms. While in Sacramento I bought at a sale of Mr. Hutchinson's the hoop petticoat narcissus, and esteemed it greatly—so did the red ants, the most persistent enemies of my bulbs. These pests seem to enjoy the sweet, juicy canes of almost all choice plants, and are hard to meet on their own ground. The large jonquille is among the loveliest of early spring bulbs; but my best beloved is the dear old narcissus poeticus. It is the only waxen-white blossom which has a line of pure scarlet running along its inner edge; besides, the other narcissi and jonquills have a cloying fragrance; this is like that of gardenia or cape jasmine. The combination of sweetness produced when the poet's narcissus is grown in a bed of blue grape hyacinth is not likely to be forgotten by anyone who has enjoyed it.

Another precious bulb, not often seen in California collections, is St. Bruno's lily, often called by its botanical name, "paradisaea." It grows from one to two feet high, and is crowned in the early summer with a large cluster of fragrant, delicate white flowers, each petal of them tipped with green. A small frame, in which Mesembryanthus or flowering Rusellian can be started is an almost necessary adjunct of the bulby garden, as they can be planted among the bulbs when these go to sleep without injury to them. A light dressing of earth and manure should precede this later planting.

A few pots of Alroma make a pretty covering for the nakedness of the dormant bulb garden. Any of the plants which derive most of their support from the air answer this purpose, but verbenas and creeping myrtles are almost certain to destroy the bulbs by abstracting all the nourishment from the soil.

What prettier holiday present could be offered than a set of hyacinth glasses and a choice selection of the bulbs? A clear glass dish, half filled with Chinaman's lilies, is no mean gift. I often wonder why the florists are not patronized as well as the book and bric-a-brac sellers during the holiday season, and am certain that to a lady of refinement the basket or stand of living ferns would be more highly prized than Dresden China or fancy furniture.—Jeanne C. Carr, Pasadena, Dec. 12, 1882.

UNDERGROUND WIRES.—It has been claimed that there was an insuperable difficulty in putting electric wires under ground without injury to their working capacity. It is on this assumption that all our cities have been allowed to be disfigured with unsightly poles and the air darkened by a network of wires. It is now stated that experiments in working underground wires have been tried with such success in Philadelphia that the problem is considered as good as solved. If it is practicable to work electric wires under ground, other cities than Philadelphia will require telegraph, telephone and electric light companies to abate a nuisance that has been endured on the assumption that the business of the various companies depended upon its toleration. It is well known, however, that in Germany nearly all the telegraph wires in the country as well as in the cities are laid under ground. A New York contemporary says it is not a question so much of science as of dollars and cents.

NOVEL BRIDGE ENGINEERING.—J. E. Smith, of Leicester, England, has suggested a novel method of building bridges either for temporary or permanent use, which seems to have many advantages both in simplicity and cheapness. Iron or steel cylinders, 20, 40 or more feet in diameter, constructed of plates riveted to rolled iron or steel ribs, are rolled into the stream over which it is desired to carry the bridge. These gigantic cylinders with half their diameters sunk under the water form so many arches upon which a level road can easily be thrown. The cylinders can be built upon the spot where they are required, or, filled in with a temporary floor at one end, can be readily floated to their destination. The system is expected to be useful in laying railroads across land subject to occasional flood.

"Look at you!" shrieked Mrs. Ecomi, as the nurse let the baby fall over the second floor baluster. "Two inches nearer the wall and that child would have smashed a $50 statuette and the hall lamp." And then they picked up the baby.

Relative Longevity in Various Occupations.

An interesting exhibit of the mortality in the different walks of life was furnished by the General Register in report on the death rate of the whole population of England in 1881. From this it appears that out of every thousand persons between the ages of 25 and 55, 40 died on an average. Classified according to the most favorable mortality, and increasing downward, we have the following tables:

1. Merchants.	7. Miners.
2. Weavers.	8. Tailors.
3. Cobblers.	9. Bakers.
4. Carpenters.	10. Butchers.
5. Blacksmiths.	11. Liquor dealers.
6. Laborers.

The mortality of the eleventh class is so great that in good insurance companies they are only admitted with great caution, and on short endowment or term policies.

Mariners also are considered poor risks, as 35% of the deaths among them are attributable to accidents; among miners, 25%; among machinists, 15%; and among painters, well-diggers and glaziers, 10% die in consequence of casualties. The callings of brewer, typesetter, tin-smith, lithographer and stonecutter are also in

Academy of Sciences.

Dr. Behr presided at the regular meeting of the California Academy of Sciences which was held on the 18th ult. Wm. R. Eckert, S. B. Leavitt, J. F. Houghton, F. Lamberghini and Dr. Paolo Vecchi were proposed for membership.

Dr. H. W. Harkness read a list of 15 new species of fungi parasites on vegetation. He also presented for inspection the jawbone of a mastodon which was found in a tunnel in Butte county 1,400 ft. in and 600 ft. below the surface. A feature of this was that in one of the teeth was seen a small piece of gold—the first instance of the exemplification of prehistoric dentistry on record.

Dr. Henry Gibbons, Sr., made some interesting remarks on the recent meteorological conditions, showing the concurrent action of the higher and lower strata of clouds in the formation of rain clouds. He had observed that our rains frequently commenced with high clouds moving from the northwest, which is accompanied by a southerly lower current. He said it was very important to better predict the weather, and studious investigations to this end were well undertaken.

Dr. Harkness had also observed that clouds coming from northwest had acted as rain-carriers. He thought the observation and study of the upper strata should be more thorough than it was at present.

Charles Wolcott Brooks exhibited a rain-band spectroscopic, invented by Professor Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer Royal for Scotland. When rain is to be expected dark lines appear between the yellow and orange shades of the prism, which indicates the amount of rain to be expected in proportion to their intensity.

George C. Hickox, on behalf of the committee appointed to nominate officers of the Academy for the ensuing year, submitted the following as the "Regular Ticket:" President, George Davidson; First Vice-President, Justin P. Moore; Second Vice-President, H. Herman Behr; Corresponding Secretary, Samuel B. Christy; Recording Secretary, Charles G. Yale; Treasurer, Elisha Brooks; Librarian, Carlos Troyer; Director of the Museum, William G. W. Harford; Trustees—Charles F. Crocker, William Ashburner, George E. Gray, Thomas P. Madden, Ralph C. Harrison, Louis Gerstle and James M. McDonald. The President appointed Charles Wolcott Brooks and Charles D. Gibbs, Judges of Election; also, W. F. Myers and Albert K. Hogg, M. D., Inspectors of Election.

The Publication Committee reported through the Secretary that all the papers on the subject of the Carson Footprints had been published with the appropriate engravings. Copies of the papers were distributed to members.

Curious Patents.

Some investigating person has furnished the New York Times with a brief list of patents on small things which in many instances have proved great mines of wealth to the lucky discoverer. The list might be extended to a much larger number, but we only state those given in the Times. Among these trifles is the favorite toy—the "return ball"—a wooden ball with an elastic string attached, selling for 10 cents each, but yielding to its patentee an income equal to $50,000 a year. The rubber tip on the end of lead pencils affords the owner of the royalty an independent fortune. The inventor of the gummed newspaper wrapper is also a rich man. The gimlet-pointed screw has evolved more wealth than most silver mines, and the man who first thought of putting copper tips to children's shoes is as well off as if his father had left him $2,000,000 in United States bonds. Although roller skates are not so much used in countries where ice is abundant, in South America, especially in Brazil, they are very highly esteemed, and have yielded over $1,000,000 to their inventor; but he had to spend fully $125,000 in England alone fighting infringements. The "dancing Jim Crow," a toy, provides an annual income of $75,000 to its inventor, and the common needle-threader is worth $10,000 a year to the man who thought of it. The "drive well" was an invention of Colonel Green, whose troops during the war were in want of water. He conceived the notion of driving a two-inch tube into the ground until water was reached and then attaching a pump. This simple contrivance was patented after the war, and tens of thousands of farmers who have adopted it have been obliged to pay him a royalty, a moderate estimate of which is placed at $3,000,000. The spring window shade yields an income of $100,000 a year; the stylographic pen also brings in $100,000 yearly; the marking pen for shading in different colors, $100,000; rubber stamps the same. A very large fortune has been reaped by a Western miner, who, ten years since, invented a metal rivet or eyelet at each end of the mouth of coat and pants pockets to resist the strain caused by the carriage of pieces of ore and heavy tools.

A DETROIT citizen whose wife deserted him for a handsomer man, was just a bit pleased to learn that in less than a week the new man had his nose flattened and one eye destroyed by an accident.

Grand Recorder's Department.

Headquarters of Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Rooms 40 and 41, St. Ann's Building, corner of Eddy and Powell, San Francisco.
H. G. PRATT, G. R.

Most sincerely I wish to all the members of our Order a "Happy New Year," and especially I wish it to the readers of the WATCHMAN, who, appreciating its value to the cause we love so dearly, have contributed their share towards its support. But aside from the service the WATCHMAN has done for the A. O. U. W., it owes none of its patrons anything. It has given full value received to its subscribers, individually and collectively. It has been a high-toned, clean and able advocate of the Order, and, in addition, a valuable illustrated literary paper. It has done great credit and honor to its publishers, but it has made for them little or no money, as I understand. We have no right to expect this condition of things to last always. Men of business and capital are not apt to long continue losing or non-paying enterprises. The Order cannot afford to see the WATCHMAN deteriorate or languish. It gets no support from the Grand Lodge. Its subscription list is scarcely half enough to meet its cost. The balance must be made up, if made up at all, from advertisements. This is very hard to do. If all our Lodges would pay for their cards in the directory it would be a big lift. Every Lodge should at least do this. The amount would be saved in assessments, for the influence of the paper would always give us sufficient new members to do this. These things are said without solicitation or knowledge of the publishers of the WATCHMAN, and simply for the good of the Order. The commencement of the new year seems an opportune time to speak of this matter, and the subject is of such importance that no excuse need be offered. Brethren, the WATCHMAN has no superior as a fraternal paper. It is a source of pride to every California Workman. Let's keep it so.

RECORDERS are expected to be prompt in sending in their monthly reports for December. If this has not already been done not a moment's time should be lost. Our per capita tax to the Supreme Lodge must be determined from the number of Master Workmen in good standing on the last of December, and so must our vote in the Supreme Lodge, and our report to that body must be made the middle of the month. There is, therefore, no time to lose. The semi-annual reports in all cases should be sent in by the 15th inst. We need the names of the new officers and other important information which those reports only give, in order to correct or verify our books. If installation be deferred for any reason, send in the original report and show the duplicate report to the Installing Officer. He does not, or should not transmit the report. This is the duty of the Recorder. The Installing Officer collects and transmits the tax, and the report will show if his business has been correctly done.

It should be the ambition of every newly elected Master of a Lodge to make his administration more successful, if possible, than that of his predecessor. Above all, he should resolve that his Lodge must not decrease in numbers. The stability of the Order depends on keeping the ranks full.

RECORDERS will please fill out only the semi-annual blanks sent them. The old forms are obsolete and no longer of any use.

FOLLOWING is the membership of the Order throughout the United States and Canada, as given in the October summary of the Supreme Recorder: New York, 17,180; California, 14,985; Pennsylvania, 13,675; Illinois, 11,153; Missouri, 8,317; Michigan, 6,683; Ontario, 5,550; Wisconsin, 4,203; Kansas, 3,578; Washington and Oregon, 3,450; Ohio, 3,278; Massachusetts, 2,900; Maryland, New Jersey and Delaware, 2,619; Tennessee, 2,302; Minnesota, 2,300; Indiana, 2,272; Iowa, 2,000; Texas, 1,600; Kentucky, 1,525; Georgia, 1,226; Nevada, 1,128; Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona, 380. Total, 112,609. As will be seen, California stands second in point of numbers in the whole Order, New York only being ahead.

THERE is a great stir among the German press in consequence of the arrest at Vienna of the Berlin journalists who fled to Austria to avoid the fulfillment of sentences to eight months' imprisonment for libeling Bismarck.

A Question We Would Answer in the Affirmative.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—From afar I blow my bugle, not for war, but peace. A suggestion or two I desire to offer, which, if acted upon, may be of benefit to those members whom circumstances have caused to journey far from their Lodge, and there remain for a considerable length of time. My own case is one in point. I belong to a Lodge of A. O. U. W. in California. In July, 1882, business interests called me to Helena, Montana, where I have been since, and probably will remain for some months longer; then I intend to return. During this period I have, from time to time, sent money to my Lodge in advance, as a deposit to meet future assessments, etc., and by paying in advance I do not get any notification from my Lodge as to how much I have on deposit or how I stand with the Lodge; and it is impossible to tell without notification, for occasionally an assessment is paid from the general fund of the Lodge. In order to get notice from my Lodge I must, therefore, withhold forwarding until my deposit in the Lodge is exhausted, and an assessment is levied for more. Now, in this far-away country the delays of mails, etc., may be such that, after receiving the said notice, my remittance may not happen to reach my Lodge in time to save me from being reported as a suspended member. I have stated my case as an illustration of the condition of hundreds of others. Now, it seems to me that it is due the absent member to be notified whenever an assessment is levied, notwithstanding he has funds on deposit with the Lodge to meet the assessment. He should receive notice of the assessment, and, if paid from the general fund, it should be so stated, that he may know how he stands financially with the Lodge. Does he not merit that favor for being more than punctual in fulfilling the requirements of the laws of the Order? Another member goes to a distant country, is negligent, and does not advance money, and is always in arrears. The Lodge notifies him and keeps him well posted. He suffers himself to be at times suspended, then reinstated, and causes the Lodge officials much extra labor. But in this way he at all times knows just how he is financially with his Lodge. Now the point is, should it not be made the duty of the financier or the Lodge to render information monthly to the meritorious and worthy brother as well as the dilatory or unworthy brother? Under the present instructions of the Order, the rule is reversed.—C. H. KELLOGG, Helena, Montana, Nov. 24, 1882.

The A. O. U. W. in Missouri and St. Louis

DEAR WATCHMAN:—It may be interesting to our Order in California, and especially to those who are disposed to complain of too frequent assessments, heavy dues, etc., to learn what and how the Order is doing in this State. As near as I have been able to ascertain, there are something over 8,000 member in this State, and there have been 19 assessments this year. This, compared with California, gives the following results: California, with a membership of 16,000, has had less assessments than Missouri. Consequently, if Missouri's mortality continues, when she has a membership equal to California, she will have twice the assessments she has now, or 38 assessments for 16,000 members. As it is, the assessments are twice as many in this jurisdiction as they are in the Grand jurisdiction of California. And yet I have not heard in this jurisdiction a single complaint about heavy assessments. There are five dollars in circulation in California to where there is one in this country. This large mortality list is very suggestive. Should it continue, when this jurisdiction has 16,000 members, the Supreme Lodge would have to aid it to the extent of 15 assessments or $30,000. This certainly indicates a lack of careful discrimination in the selection of material for the construction of the Order, which is certain to result in disaster, unless these faults are remedied, and remedied soon. St. Louis has, I am informed, some 28 or 30 Lodges. She has some 4,600 places for the sale of liquor. The largest tobacco interest in the world, almost everybody smokes—smokes to excess; this produces nervous depression and renders man an easy subject for disease and death. Hence I am persuaded it has much to do with this heavy mortality list in this State. It is at least sufficiently suggestive to justify careful inquiry on the part of the Executive of this jurisdiction. Say, Brother, send me an occasional extra WATCHMAN to 608 North 13th street, St. Louis, and oblige yours in C. H. and P., J. A. MILLER, P. M. W., Oak Leaf, 35, Oakland, Cal.

OHIO'S NEW A. O. U. W. PAPER.—We have just received the third number of the Ohio A. O. U. W. Journal, edited and published by J. M. Dumenil, Grand Master of Ohio, at Hillsboro. We congratulate our Ohio brethren on again having an organ in their midst, and hope they will give it that encouragement and support which every journal needs to be successful. The number before us is replete with A. O. U. W. news, and shows that Bro. Dumenil knows how to get up a good paper.

Among our Exchanges.

NEW ENGLAND WORKMAN says: The Grand Recorder is threatened with Scivener's palsy. Three hundred certificates and over were issued from his office last month, and in addition to the work of receiving and receipting for assessments, and the preparing and forwarding supplies to our three Deputies. Two o'clock in the morning will sometimes see him at the A. O. U. W. work. The work of the office is growing very rapidly, when we consider that last year from 27 to 48 Lodges comprised the jurisdiction, while at the present time the number has varied from 48 to 81, and is increasing weekly. If our growth continues at this rate, it will soon require the services of an assistant. THIRTY-two hundred members and eighty-two Lodges at date.

No assessment for November.

THE Fraternal Courier says: New York has one assessment for December, making 17 for the year. Relief Call No. 2 has been paid by every lodge in the State, but with quite a shrinkage to our membership.

THIS MONTH $18,000 was paid from the beneficiary fund.

ON RELIEF Call No. 2, $8,226.50 has been collected and paid.

SINCE JANUARY 1st 1882 $270,000 has been paid from the beneficiary fund.

WISCONSIN Advocate says: Our Jurisdiction has 4203 members in good standing.

THE Cheyennes are peaceably organizing to protect themselves from the impositions of large cattle raisers. The Indians propose taxation pro rata among the herders, which it is thought will be a protection to the lesser cattle dealers.

Canvassing Agents.

We want several canvassing agents who will make it their business to solicit subscriptions and advertising for our first-class progressive newspapers. ### Absorption of Moisture by Building Materials.

Everyone connected with buildings of brick and stone knows the absorbent nature of those materials under the most favorable circumstances. It would astonish most people, adds the Building News (London) to be told what a large quantity of water is stored in the brick walls of an ordinary house after a heavy rainfall, the drying or evaporation of which must take place inside in cold weather, unless proper precautions are taken to render the walls impenetrable. The plea for hollow walls has been raised again and again in this journal, and though the system is coming to be adopted more generally in some districts, the idea of solidity of wall structure seems to have taken too deep a hold on the ordinary building mind to be given up. Some time ago a suggestion was made that colliery owners and others who have large quantities of slag might with profit utilize this material for building cottages and other purposes. We are not sure whether the hint was taken, but in some parts of the country the material furnishes an admirable aggregate for concrete. Where good aggregates exist like slag, broken brick, sandstone or furnace ashes, concrete building ought to be much cheaper than brick, as no skilled labor is required.

There is another consideration besides cost which tells in favor of concrete, and that is the non-porosity of walls so constructed. Not only does brick absorb moisture in wet weather, but it is now known to absorb animal gases as well, and here we have a condition which builders of our hospitals and infirmaries ought to be reminded of. We are not sure if concrete has been applied to any buildings in England of this kind on a large scale, but as absorbent walls are known to be injurious in harboring the germs of infection, the value of walls constructed of concrete made of burnt aggregates cannot be overrated. Slag-made concrete has the great advantage of being fire resisting, the material in its rough state having been subjected to intense heat. There is nothing in it to "kill" the cement, and the rough surface of walls built with it becomes an excellent "key" for the plastering. In the constructions of walls of this material three sizes of the slag may be used, the larger lumps being packed in layers in the middle of the wall, and the other two sizes, the larger of the size of walnuts, run in with cement on each face in the proportion of eight to one.

Forest Culture.

It is time to talk of tree planting, and we hope that all of our readers are doing a little better than talking—that is planting. The example of Europe in tree preserving and tree planting should not be unheeded. The Journal of Forestry, a new Eastern publication, contains some important statements on the progress of forest planting in France, a few of which we give in condensed form. The city of Bordeaux has become of recent years the great commercial center of southwestern France for certain grades of coarse lumber. In 1857 a committee having charge of wood plantations predicted that they would add more than a thousand million francs to the wealth of France in a region the most sterile and forsaken. This seemed at the time the declaration of some wild enthusiast, but the prophecy has already been more than realized. The plantations which have been made have also given employment to a large number of people. A turpentine forest, for example, in addition to the considerable local population required for its attendance, must have homes near their work, gardens and lands for cultivation, and cattle to supply fertilizers for their home land. The forests are dotted all through with little plantations, and the spaces which separate them prevent the sweeping fires which once proved so disastrous. These spaces afford pasture to stock, and the bushes and undergrowth are pulled up, pressed into small bales by powerful machines, and sent to Paris for oven-wood. A growth of young timber takes the place of that which is cut, and the production is indefinitely continued. An official report, speaking of these improvements, and their results in the expenditures of nearly two millions francs for country roads, another million for other improvements, and a million and three-fourths for public offices and schoolhouses, asserts that "this is one of the most beautiful pages in the history of civilization and progress—in a region that 20 years ago was the poorest and most miserable in France, but which is now one of the most wealthy and prosperous."

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS.—Those persons who are unfortunate enough to need artificial limbs are nevertheless fortunate to be living in an age when such things are so skillfully made as to nearly fill the requirements of a natural limb. Charles M. Evans, of Cincinnati, Ohio, manufacturer for the United States Government, has had many years' experience in furnishing artificial limbs, and stands at the head of manufacturers of such articles.

A DISPATCH from Provincetown, Mass., says: The whaling fleet of 12 vessels have brought in and sent home 2,400 barrels of sperm and 700 barrels of whale oil during the past year. It is a small average catch, and because of the extreme low price, the business does not pay expenses.

What is the Comet Made of?

MM. Thollon and Gouy have communicated to the French Academy of Sciences their results of their spectroscopic observations on the large comet now visible. It appears from these, says Engineering, that at the observatory of Nice, on the 18th of September, they detected very brilliant rays of sodium, which were slightly displaced toward the red.

On the 9th of October the sodium lines had disappeared, leaving only four ordinary bands of carbon, of which the violet band was very distinct, but feeble, while the others were bright, especially in the head. This gave at the same time a continuous spectrum, in which could be seen a great number of black and bright rays.

On the 16th of October the spectrum was much the same, except that the violet band had almost disappeared, and the continuous spectrum had become feeble. The spectrum, in fact showed a striking resemblance to that of the flame of alcohol. Of course this does not imply that alcohol is present in the comet, since it is known that all compounds of carbon give the same bands, and of these alcohol was only chosen because it was most convenient for comparison.

The "integral spectrum," taken by a direct vision spectroscopy, showed that the major portion of the comet's light was white, and probably reflected sunlight. The vanishment of the sodium lines and other brilliant rays would seem to prove that the spectroscopy cannot give a complete analysis of cometary matter. It is probable that this matter is similar to that of acrolites, and if the temperature of the comet is sufficient to produce an emission spectrum from the compounds of carbon, it ought also to give a spectrum of sodium; but this, as found by MM. Thollon and Gouy, is not always the case.

They are, therefore, led back to the electric theory of comets. It is known that if a carbonized gas is traversed by the electric discharge from a Holtz machine deprived of condensers, the gas kindles and gives the carbon bands; and if it hold metal dust in suspension, it will give the bands without showing the lines of the metals. Something of the same kind possibly takes place in comets.

No Whiskey!

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is one of the very few tonic medicines that are not composed mostly of alcohol or whiskey, thus becoming a fruitful source of intemperance by promoting a desire for rum.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is guaranteed to be a non-intoxicating stimulant, and it will, in nearly every case, take the place of all liquor, and at the same time absolutely kill the desire for whiskey and other intoxicating beverages.

Rev. G. W. RICE, editor of the American Christian Review, says of Brown's Iron Bitters:

Cin., O., Nov. 16, 1881.
Gents:—The foolish wasting of vital force in business, pleasure, and vicious indulgence of our people, makes your preparation a necessity; and if applied, will save hundreds who resort to saloons for temporary recuperation.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS has been thoroughly tested for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, weakness, debility, overwork, rheumatism, neuralgia, consumption, liver complaints, kidney troubles, &c., and it never fails to render speedy and permanent relief.

Transmission of Power on an Ordinary Telegraph Wire.

M. M. Deprez says in a late number of Comptes Rendus: "The Electrotechnical Committee of the Exhibition of Electricity at Munich having requested me to repeat upon a telegraph line the experiments on the transmission of power which I had previously made over great distances, I forwarded to Munich and Miesbach the fine wire machines which I had made use of in my laboratory experiments.

The telegraph line placed at my disposal by the administration of the German telegraphic system had a length of 57 kilometers. It is of galvanized wire 4.5 millimeters in diameter, and since, as a matter of precaution, I did not think fit to make use of the earth, I requested permission to employ a return wire identical with the former. The total length of the line traversed by the current is, therefore, 144 kilometers, and its resistance on measurement 950 ohms. The insulation is good, but differs in nothing from that universally employed on all telegraph lines. The two machines situate the one at Miesbach and the other at Munich, are absolutely identical, and have each a resistance of 470 ohms.

The total resistance of the circuit is, therefore, close upon 1,900 ohms. In the first experiment which was made there was immediately obtained at Munich a work of 38 kilogrammeters per second (or about one half horse power) at a speed of 1,500 revolutions per minute.

The generating machine, situate at Miesbach, turned at the rate of 2,200. The two machines being identical, the proportion of the work recovered at Munich to the work expended at Miesbach was, setting aside passive resistance of every kind, 1500/2200, or more than 60 per cent. The machines employed are of Gramme's "atelier" type, modified according to my calculations.

A heavy rain fell during almost the whole of the experiments.

The receiving machine serves at present to feed a water-fall of one meter in width and three in height, by means of a centrifugal pump.

Sparks are scarcely visible on the collectors of the two machines. The heating of the machine is scarcely appreciable after two hours' work.

A true assistant to nature in restoring the system to perfect health, thus enabling it to resist disease, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

"SARAH," said a teacher to one of his pupils, "Sarah, can you give the definition of a skipper?"

"No," answered Sarah, "but perhaps a cheese mite."

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has not been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we will split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

Good Land and Sure Crops.

There has been steady and tolerably rapid advancement made in the growth of a majority of the towns in Colusa, Butte, Tehama and Shasta counties. Especially is this so in the agricultural districts where the land produces at least fair crops in all seasons—wet or dry—as does the land on the Reading Ranch. Those looking for homes in California where diversified farming will pay every year; where wood and water are plenty and easy to be obtained, and other desirable advantages are to be had, should address the proprietor of the Reading Grant.

Some 14,000 out of 26,000 acres of the grant remain for sale at comparatively low rates, in quantities to suit purchasers, on easy terms. Prices range from $5 to $30 per acre. The tract is between two and three miles wide, with the Northern Division of the C. P. R. R. passing centrally through its entire length. Send postage stamp for free circulars containing information about Shasta County and these lands, to the proprietor of Reading Ranch.

Scientific Press Patent Agency.

(ESTABLISHED 1860.)

Inventors on the Pacific Coast will find it greatly to their advantage to consult this old experienced, first-class Agency. We have able and trustworthy associates and Agents in Washington and the capital cities of the principal nations of the world. In connection with our editorial, scientific and Patent Law Library, and record of original cases in our office, we have other advantages far beyond those which can be offered home inventors by other Agencies. The information accumulated through long and careful practice before the Office, and the frequent examination of Patents already granted, for the purpose of determining the patentability of inventions brought before us, enables us often to give advice which will save inventors the expense of applying for Patents upon inventions which are not new. ## A Long Parting.

"How handsome he is," thinks Daisy, as she leans over the rustic fence watching the mower as with long sweeps of his scythe he cuts down the swaths of grass. "I really believe that a man looks better in the roughest of clothes than in those stiff immaculate garments they call 'dress suits'—that is, if he is good looking at all."

It is only this morning that Daisy has come to the country to revel in its bracing air for the first time in her young life.

"Where are your roses, pet?" her father had asked her one day, a few weeks before, waking from his business plans to notice the pale, listless look of his child.

"I think I want quiet, papa. I am tired of dressing, calling and parties. Papa, may I not go to the country—to my old nurse's—instead of the Branch this summer?"

And Mr. Nelson had answered yes.

"I would like to come with you, but business will not allow it. So enjoy yourself all you can, my pet, and write me very often."

And with these words, kissing her affectionately, he had left her in Farmer Shear's care, who was waiting her arrival at the small station. Farmer Shear's wife had been Daisy's foster-mother, caring for her ever since her mother on her death-bed, calling her weeping housekeeper to her, and laying her child in her arms, had said:

"You have served me faithfully, Susan, and I know you will be kind to my baby."

And well that trust had been fulfilled. The first great grief Daisy had ever experienced had come to her when, two years before our story opens, her kind nurse had left her for a home of her own, offered her by a worthy farmer, who recognized in her just the sensible qualities his farm needed in a mistress.

It is 2 o'clock; dinner has been over a couple of hours, and since then Daisy has been luxuriating in the wild flowers and thousand and one delights new to her city-bred eyes. For the past 10 minutes she has been watching the mower at his work. She knows that he is Farmer Shear's nephew, for she met him at dinner; but she only gave him the most casual observation then, and now she notices, for the first time, how more than averagely fine looking he is.

She thinks herself unseen; but she is not, for a pair of amused dark eyes are watching her furtively as she peeps through the only partially concealing screen of wild rose vines that trail about her feet and, clambering upward, fling their scented arms high over head, making a charming frame for a charming picture. A great red lily lifts its tinted chalice in the center of the meadow; the sunlight touches it and makes it such a thing of beauty that Daisy longs to possess it. But the scythe with its measured strokes is nearing its slender stem.

"Oh don't."

The exclamation is involuntary, and Daisy flushes crimson as the mower glances up as if just conscious of her presence.

"The lily," she says, in answer to his questioning look. "I thought you were going to cut it down, and it is so pretty."

"Permit me."

It is the action of a moment to pluck it and present it to her, and as he does so Daisy wonders as much at the young man's easy, unembarrassed manner and refined tones as she did at the comeliness and grace of his appearance.

That was how it began—the summer idyl that was destined to have such an abrupt ending. Both young, both impulsive, what wonder that the more these two saw of each other the stronger grew the charm that drew them together.

Mrs. Shear looked on unsuspiciously; it pleased her genial heart to see "the children," as she called them, enjoying themselves; and so the summer hours flew all too swiftly by. At length came a day when, all through an accident in which, by the falling of a tree, Steven Houghton nearly lost his life, the thin veil which the saucy boy god had been rearing, called friendship, fell aside, and his true face became disclosed, and with a sense almost of fear, Daisy awoke, as from a dream, to see whither she had been drifting.

"Can it really be that I care for him—this young farmer who a few months ago I did not know?"

Then she questioned her heart, and its answer came quickly:

"Ah yes, I do! I do!"

And Stephen, lying in his room with his broken arm in a sling, felt happier than a king. Never, to his dying day, would he forget the look of anguish that he had read in the lovely face his eyes had rested upon when they had opened from the unconsciousness that the dreadful stunning had brought.

"She loves me!" he thought triumphantly, "and before long, please God, I shall hear her sweet lips say so."

But it was not to be, for it so happened that the young man had just arisen from his bed of pain and resumed the role of a convalescent, when Mr. Nelson came to spend a few days with his daughter. It was but a short time before, with a keenness of vision for which he congratulated himself, he saw how matters were. He noticed how the blood rushed to the young man's pale cheeks whenever Daisy addressed him, and how an answering lightsprung into the maiden's blue eyes.

"This will never do," he thought to himself, in positive alarm. "My Daisy a farmer's wife—or rather drudge? The idea is preposterous! How foolish I was ever to allow the child away from me. But after all it is not beyond remedy. He has not spoken to her, I know, for she would have told me. I will take her home at once. Once away from his society the danger will be over."

Poor little Daisy! She acquiesces unquestioningly to her father's sudden mandate of departure, as what else can she do? She well knows what the feeling is that throbs with her every pulse for Steven, but, though his admiration has been plainly evidenced, no words of love have been spoken, and when she sees how quietly, almost coldly, he answers her farewell, her warm young heart chills. And the years pass, and yet it does not awake from that chill.

In vain does her anxious father, inwardly remorseful for what he recognizes as his own doing, gratify, before it is spoken, every desire; nothing brings back the old, happy girlish animation.

At length they go away, Mr. Nelson fondly hoping great results from the change of scene and surroundings.

They are in London, when one evening Mr. Nelson urges his daughter to accompany him to hear a noted lecturer.

"I do not care much to go, papa, but to please you I will," Daisy answers.

And before long, leaning upon her father's arm, she enters the thronged hall.

Their tickets entitled them to seats in one of the foremost rows, and thither the usher takes them.

The lecture begins even as they enter.

What is it that causes Daisy to start and tremble? As the deep rich tones of the orator fall upon her ears they bring with vivid force that summer of five years ago, when all unmasked and unsought her girlish heart went out of keeping forever. With an effort she controls herself and raises her eyes to the platform. Her ears have not deceived her. She sees a tall manly figure whose handsome features, eloquent with power and talent, are those of the never-forgotten hero of her fancy.

At the same moment, looking down, his gaze meets full her own.

Never before did the great question upon which he is treating get as ably handled.

"Our favorite orator surpassed himself," so says the voice of the press the following day.

It does not tell, for it does not know, what it was that lent such more than usual fire and vigor to the speaker's utterances; but we who are behind the scenes can say that it was the radiant expression of surprised gladness that looked out of Daisy's blue orbs.

As Mr. Nelson and his daughter issue from the hall, some one comes toward Daisy with outstretched hand, and the exclamation:

"How glad I am to see you, Miss Nelson! It is an unexpected and therefore all the more welcome surprise. I read your familiar name amongst the list of arrivals published in the papers, but I did not know whether it were really my old friend or not."

The bright color bathes Daisy's face at the unaffected pleasure in his tones, and she answers frankly and simply, as she places her small gloved hand in his:

"I, too, am very glad to meet you." Then, turning to her father, who by this time has recognized to his infinite wonderment the celebrated orator the young man he met five years ago in the country, she says: "Papa, this is Mr. Houghton—you surely remember him."

After that every evening that Mr. Houghton's engagements allow him to call his own finds him at Daisy's side, and after a little everything is explained, and she learns how it was that he had allowed her, though loving her passionately, to go out of his life without a word or question, and how he, whom her father had looked upon as a detrimental, was in reality heir to a large fortune, and even then engaged in the scientific pursuits which after ward made his name noted. His health for the time having suffered from over application to study, he had come to his uncle's, his mother's brother's, to recruit, knowing the benefit fresh air and outdoor exercise does both to the brain and body.

A month goes by, and one afternoon Mr. Nelson concludes an all-important conversation by saying:

"I hope, Mr. Houghton, that now you are to be my son-in-law, you will let bygones be bygones, and bear me no malice for the past. I thought I was acting for the best. My daughter was my all, and I considered you not a desirable match for her. I trust you will pardon me for my frankness when I assure you how proudly and gladly I now resign her to you. When I intimated to you that there was another suitor in the case I did deceive you in the word—only in the letter—for there was one rich, and with fine prospects, who for some time had looked upon Daisy with the same feelings as yourself, though the truth was, and I knew it, she regarded him with utter indifference."

Stephen took the old gentleman's proffered hand.

"I can certainly condone the past," he answered, "in view of the joyous future which you have opened before me in giving me the right to woo for my own dear daughter."

And so, not long after, the merry bells ring out, and the sun, streaming through the stained glass church windows, falls like a radiant benediction upon the bowed heads of Steven Houghton and his newly-made bride.

And their prospect is of the happiest; for the love that could keep true, "though lost to sight," for five long years, will surely never falter through the varied experience of the wedded existence whose fairy portals they are so hopefully and trustfully entering.—Rocky Mountain Husbandman.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN AND THE LICK TELESCOPE.—The work on the lens of the great Russian telescope is practically done. Recently one of the lenses was taken from the polisher, placed in the cell with its mate and put in place in the temporary tube which has been used for testing it upon celestial objects. The lenses and cell casting of the objective weigh about 420 lbs., and four men were needed to handle it. The tube was inverted and the cell put in place and fastened by capstan-headed screws. It was then directed upon several objects, and to the unpracticed eye it seemed perfection. The brilliancy of even the smaller stars to a novice is astonishingly great. A day or two after several other optical tests were applied, and Mr. Alvan Clark said that the glass was so nearly perfect that it would not be advisable to attempt more work upon it, as the risk would be too great in proportion to any possible gain. The aperture of the objective, as our readers may remember, is 30 inches, the greatest that has yet been attempted, or rather the greatest that has yet been completed, for the same firm have a 36 inch objective now in hand for the Lick observatory. One of the Lick lenses is now at the works of Mr. Clark. It is ground and polished, and the firm is awaiting for Chance, of England, to cast a glass suitable for the other lens. It would seem that the optician is much ahead of the glass-worker in skill, and that great advances are still possible in the manufacture of large lenses when the glass-makers can produce finer glass of large dimensions.

DOES SMOKING INJURE THE MEMORY?—This question is answered by the Herald of Health as follows: Concerning the Abbe Moigno, an aged man, who possessed a remarkable memory, some practical facts and hints as to smoking and study have just been published. Before he ever commenced the use of tobacco he learned 12 foreign languages, and stored in his mind an immense number of historical, geographical and general facts. Whenever he wanted to recall the meaning of a word or the date of an event, he had no difficulty in doing so. As to philology and chronology, he was one of the most extraordinary characters of his time, and Francois Arago used laughingly to threaten to have him burned as a wizard. In course of time Moigno fell into the habit of snuff taking, and after associating with some Bavarian scholars he attained to smoking three or four cigars a day. "One day," says he, "I was painfully surprised to have to recognize that I was constantly obliged to turn to my dictionaries for the meaning of foreign words, which before happened to me seldom, or never, and that the dates of numerous facts which I had made my own had fled from my memory." The sufferer made a resolution that he would give up the use of tobacco, and he said: "It was for me a complete resurrection, not only of the memory, but of the general health and well-being."

AN IRON MAN.—Launceston, Tasmania, can boast of being the first town which has produced an iron man who can walk like his brethren in flesh without the aid of steam. The curious piece of mechanism we refer to is the invention of Mr. Hornburg, a mechanical engineer. The figure, which is dressed as a footman, is 2 feet 10 inches in height, and weighs 160 pounds. Its action arises from the power of a spring concealed in its inside, which enables it to walk with the greatest ease and wheel a man's perambulator before it. With the assistance of an ingenious piece of mechanism, an eccentric motion is obtained, which by the help of levers causes the legs to ascend and descend, similar to the walking movements of a human being. The automaton has been exhibited at the local Mechanics' Institute.—Cotton, Wool and Iron.

IMPROVEMENT IN PIANO CONSTRUCTION.—A Munich inventor has brought forward an improvement in the construction of piano-fortes, which, it is claimed, meets the problem of equalizing the strength and fullness of the different octaves. A series of tuning forks are freely suspended over the three highest octaves of the piano, each fork having the exact pitch of the string over which it is suspended. The vibrations of the string are communicated to the fork, which, in return, reacts on the string, and thus a full and sustained tone is secured, in strong contrast to the usual short and dry tones of this instrument.

CONTAGIOUSNESS OF CONSUMPTION.—Fresh proof of the danger of inhaling air exhaled by persons with lung diseases has been given by the curious experiment of M. Giboux. He took four young, healthy rabbits from the same litter, and kept them for 105 days in cages, as follows: Two were placed in a cage where they were obliged to breathe the air expired from animals with consumption, twice a day for two hours. In a short time they became sickly, and, on killing them, they were found to have tubercles in the lungs. The other two breathed twice a day the same air, disinfected by being passed through cotton wadding impregnated with carbolic acid. These rabbits remained in good health, and were finally eaten by the experimenter.

About Patents.

An industrial exchange, discussing the proportion of patents that pay, says: "Once upon a time a Commissioner of Patents, soon after he took the chair and when not very greatly conversant with patent matters, remarked that he supposed it was generally conceded that not one in a hundred patents paid. Now, if that, or anything like it, was a true statement of fact, there would be no demand for patents, and what in the name of all that is business, would men want to take out patents for? Certainly it would not be for the joy inventors find in the target practice the Examiners of the Patent Office have with almost every application. A man who has taken out a patent considers and considers before he makes up his mind to run the flagellating gauntlet of the wise or unwise examiners who seem to strive so hard to ruin a case, and are apparently so wholly indifferent whether or not an inventor has a good patent. * * * The sole and only reason why the number of patents increase so rapidly is because in a business way patents pay—there is money in them."

It is undoubtedly true, that whatever may be the proportion of patents that do not pay, every inventor who applies for a patent does so in the belief that his invention is worth more to him than the cost of securing a patent upon it, and further than this, believes it will pay. Under such circumstances we do not think it is any part of the duty of the examiners to decide whether an invention is valuable or otherwise, or to see how nearly valueless they can render an invention by an emasculating of its most important claims from the patent allowed.—Western Manufacturer.

HAS THE EARTH A FLUID NUCLEUS?—F. Folie proposes an astronomical criterion for settling the question whether any portion of the interior of the globe is fluid. He finds that Laplace and Poisson have entirely neglected, in their integrations, certain terms which have a period of a day or a fraction of a day. These terms would lead to a diurnal nutation, which could be approximately calculated if there is any considerable portion of melted matter about the center of the earth. Supposing that hypothesis to be true, the determination of the right ascension of stars which are situated as near as possible to the poles should give different values at different hours of the day, especially at epochs when the longitude of the sun and moon is 90°. Folie invites the attention of astronomers to the subject, especially of those who have a good alidzimuth, which will enable them to follow the movement of a star, and to make precise determination of its position at every quarter of an hour in its diurnal revolution.—Bull. de l'Acad. de Belg.

EFFECTS OF LIQUORS.—Cheap brandy and absinthe are the cause of a large proportion of cases of insanity in parts of France. The United States Consul at La Rochelle, in his report on French brandies, points out the fact that no pure brandy is now made in Cognac and the district adjacent. He says that German alcohol, distilled from potatoes, is imported, doctored and sold for brandy, and that the French artisans and peasants, who formerly used light wines, have of late years used much of this so-called brandy. He says: "Its characteristic effect is to produce an intoxication in which the patient is inclined to rage and physical violence, while hopeless insanity is the inevitable consequence of persisting in its use, even for a relatively short period of time." It is at least worth the physician's while to know that there is no such thing as pure Cognac now.

A VALUABLE MEDICINAL PLANT.—During the French invasion of Mexico a plant was discovered which was found to possess the property—when chewed or crushed—of stopping hemorrhages. To the native Mexicans this plant was known by a name which may be rendered as "fowlwort." The discoverer carried a specimen to Versailles and planted it in 1867, and it has since flourished, flowered and fruited without apparent change in its peculiar qualities. The action of this plant is said to exceed that of all styptics known, and this valuable property is likely to give it a wider extension, especially as it seems to be so readily acclimated in foreign lands. Its botanical name is Fradesantia erecta (Jacq.)

CALIFORNIA COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—The term of this leading business college will open under very favorable auspices. Bro. Bernard has added several new departments, among which is a regular system of practical business, including note and bank discount and commercial correspondence. With the facilities at hand, and the thorough and practical education given to the students, we can commend this institution as one of the best in the State. For further particulars inquire at 417 Kearny street.

AN IRON WATCH.—One of the chief features of interest at a recent county exhibition in Great Britain was an iron watch which had been turned out by Messrs. Crowther Bros. & Co., of Kidderminster, for the purpose of showing the extraordinary malleability of their metal. The watch is said to be perfect in every respect.

PENDING THE ACTION OF CONGRESS ON THE REDUCTION OF THE TOBACCO TAX.—The tobacco trade of the country is in a very unsettled state, and manufacturers will suffer severely unless something is done speedily.

New State Officers and Legislature.

The following is a list of the State officers elect, with postoffice addresses of same:

Governor—George Stoneman, San Gabriel, Los Angeles county.
Lieutenant-Governor—John Daggett, Oakland—formerly Klamath Mills, Siskiyou county.
Secretary of State—T. L. Thompson, Santa Rosa, Sonoma county.
Controller—J. P. Dunn, San Francisco.
Treasurer—W. A. January, San Jose.
Attorney-General—E. C. Marshall, San Francisco.
Surveyor-General—W. I. Willey, San Diego.
Superintendent of Public Instruction—W. T. Welcker, San Francisco.
Clerk of Supreme Court—J. W. McCarthy, Modesto, Stanislaus county.
Railroad Commissioners—G. J. Carpenter, Placerville, El Dorado county; W. P. Humphries, San Francisco; W. W. Foote, Oakland.
Board of Equalization—Charles Gildea, San Francisco; L. C. Morehouse, San Leandro, Alameda county; C. S. Wilcox, Yuba City, Sutter county; John Markley, Salinas.
Congressmen—Charles A. Sumner, San Francisco; J. R. Glascock, Oakland; W. S. Rosecrans, San Francisco; James H. Budd, Stockton; Barclay Henley, Santa Rosa, Sonoma county; P. B. Tully, Gilroy, Santa Clara county.

Senate.

First District—San Diego and San Bernardino, John Wolfskill, D., Bernardo, San Diego county.
Second District—Los Angeles, R. F. Del Valle, D., Los Angeles.
Third District—Ventura, Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo, George Steele, R., San Luis Obispo.
Fourth District—Fresno, Tulare, Kern, Mono and Inyo, Patrick Reddy, D., Bodie.
Fifth District—Mariposa, Merced and Stanislaus, J. D. Spencer, D., Modesto.
Sixth District—Monterey, San Benito and Santa Cruz, Benjamin Knight, D., Santa Cruz.
Seventh District—Santa Clara, C. H. Maddox, D., San Jose; B. D. Murphy, D., San Jose.

Recapitulation.

Senate—Democrats, 30; Republicans, 10; Democratic majority, 20. Assembly—Democrats, 62; Republicans, 18; Democratic majority, 44.

Mutual or Co-operative Assurance.

Co-operative organizations are not new; they are not a late invention, but have been tried in various forms for half a century, whether in the form of a payment at death, when disabled and infirm, or of assistance during sickness and distress, it matters not. The principle is the same, and it is not our purpose to enter into details now. There is, however, one thing in the history of all such associations that stands out pre-eminently prominent, and that is this: Of all the numerous institutions professing to attain these results, none have succeeded for any length of time but those that, like the A. O. U. W., have been founded on the basis of fraternity. We challenge any and all to prove the negative of this assertion. Every State can show its list of defunct co-operatives, but of what character are they? Examine the lists that are scattered broadcast by life insurance companies. When we investigate we find they are bogus co-operations. By this we mean that these organizations were never what they claimed to be. They never had the first principle of co-operation in their structure, and, as a consequence, fell to pieces. The very foundation stone of such institutions is, and must of necessity be, fraternity, a mutual banding together for one common purpose, the execution of which rests not only on a few, but is distributed equally on the shoulders of every member. Such an institution as this is the A. O. U. W., and if any fault is to be found with this Order, it must be that it has failed to impress upon each and every member thereof the very thing essential to its perpetuity; but it is not yet too late. Though 13 years old, we are yet in the vigor of youth, and let our future aim be to inculcate in the minds and hearts of all within the fold, and on those who may hereafter knock at the portals, the one central fact that we are a grand fraternal brotherhood, banded together for a common good, and that our motto is "Alterum Alterius Auxilio Eget." "The one needs the assistance of the other."—Pacific Overseer.

The Benefit of the Lodge Directory.

We copy the following pertinent and sensible paragraph in regard to the importance of societies publishing a complete directory of their subordinate Lodge and Council meetings in the society papers from the Ohio A. O. U. W. Journal:

"Some of the Lodges do not seem to appreciate the value of the Lodge directory. It is of incalculable benefit to the Order at large. Persons not members of the Order look to the directory to ascertain how many Lodges there are, and where they are. From the Lodge directory they receive impressions as to the prosperity of the Order. Again, if a person, not a member of the Order, becomes interested in the Order he will be enabled, by the aid of the directory, to learn to whom to apply for further information as to the Order, and how to become a member. If you hand your Journal to a neighbor to read he will judge of the prosperity of the Order at large and of your Lodge in particular by the appearance or non-appearance of its card in the Lodge directory. Certainly no Lodge can object to the rates offered for publishing the cards."

To traveling brothers a complete directory is a great accommodation, and the Lodges attended by some of the intelligent traveling visitors will frequently be well paid by the association and good words offered by the stranger, yet brother, from abroad.

A TELEGRAM from Trouteman, Bohemia, states that 50 spiritualists residing there have been summoned before a magistrate. The local press urges the Minister of the Interior to institute an inquiry on the subject of spiritualism, owing to the number of cases of mental derangement arising from its practices.

THE United States ship Alaska is being fitted for a voyage to the Hawaiian Islands to participate in the coronation of King Kalakaua.

Aims, Objects and Regulations of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen is a general organization for the mutual benefit of its members and their families. It embraces in its membership men of every vocation, profession and occupation—employers and employees—workers of all classes, whether their labor be mental or physical. It has no connection with any religious sect, political party, or organization for affecting the prices of labor or commodities, but is designed to promote fraternity, mental and social improvement, and mutual assistance.

BENEFICIARY FUND.

The most distinctive feature of the Order is what is designated as the Beneficiary Fund—a carefully devised, well-guarded, economical and beneficial system, by means of which the sum of

is secured to each member's family, or such person or persons as he may choose to designate. During the several years since the Order has been established this sum has been promptly paid in full in each case of death, to the persons entitled to receive it, within a few weeks, and without any litigation or troublesome formalities. A careful examination of the working of the system will satisfy any intelligent person that such will continue to be the case.

HOW ASSESSMENTS ARE PAID.

Each person who becomes a member of the Order pays to the Receiver of his Lodge one dollar for the Beneficiary Fund. Every Lodge has on hand, at the beginning of the month, ready for a call, one dollar of Beneficiary Fund for each member. When a death occurs, if there is a sufficient amount of the Fund in the Grand Lodge to meet the required payment of $2,000, no call is made upon the Subordinate Lodges, but if there is not a sufficient surplus from the last assessment, then the Lodges are notified at the first of the month to forward their portion of the Fund on hand ($1 for each member), and an assessment is made to replace the amount forwarded. By this means the Beneficiary Fund of the Lodge is again replenished, ready for a call at the first of the next month, if it should be made. Assessments are only made on the members at the first meeting night in each month, and a written and printed notice is sent to each member, bearing date of such meeting night. Twenty days time is given from that date to meet the payment. Thus the payments are made at such intervals, and are called for in such manner that they may be easily provided for and met without inconvenience even by persons of small income.

HOW MUCH DOES IT COST?

In the first year of the working of the Supreme Lodge (1873-4), the number of assessments made upon the members of the Lodges directly under its jurisdiction, was 20; second year, 14; third year, 15; fourth year, 15; fifth year, 14; sixth year, 16. Since that time, the average has remained about the same, and these figures will also apply to the Jurisdiction of California. It is probable that the future average will remain about the same. The average cost to each member, therefore, has been $15.66 per year; being a little more than four cents per day as the cost of a completely secured guarantee of $2,000, to be paid on the death of a member. Can any man who is in circumstances to avail himself of this system be justifiable in neglecting to give to his family the security which it affords? Does not prudence and affection dictate that he should secure for them the protection thus offered? A number of States, having over 2,000 members in each, collect and disburse the Beneficiary Fund separately through their Grand Lodges, instead of through the Supreme Lodge. In these, the cost per year has been, in some cases less and in others greater than that given above, but the average has been about the same.

California was set apart as a separate Beneficiary Jurisdiction in July, 1878, and at the end of July, 1879, had levied and collected ten assessments for deaths occurring in the State, and for the months of August and September three more, making a total for 14 months of 13 assessments, or an average of a little less than 93 cents a month for each member. During 1880, 16 assessments were levied in California, and for 1881, it is estimated there will probably be 14 assessments.

ADVANTAGES OF THE SYSTEM.

The A. O. U. W. Beneficial system is simple, easily understood, economical in its workings, and in all its details come under the direct observation and care of the members who meet weekly in their Lodges, where the business is transacted, and where they enjoy the advantages of social and fraternal intercourse, and of mental improvement. These Lodges are governed by officers regularly elected by the members—the financial affairs are under the proper guards and restrictions, and a careful system of checks prevents fraud or betrayal of trust.

PROTECTION AT NET COST.

All money paid on assessments for the Beneficiary Fund goes to the payment of death benefits without reduction even for expenses, these being provided for out of a General Fund raised in each Lodge. This fund is made up from initiation fees (usually about $15 for each member, with sometimes an advanced rate, according to age), and weekly dues of not less than 25 cents per month. The advantage which each member derives from the social, fraternal and educational features of the Order, and the good which is accomplished by it in these respects, afford a more than ample return for the sum he pays into the General Fund, which meets all the expenses of the Order, leaving the entire Beneficiary Fund intact for the beneficent purpose for which it is intended. There are no commissions, fees or salaries to be paid out of it, but the entire amount paid in goes to the widows, orphans and other heirs of deceased brethren. Thus the Beneficiary system may be fairly said to be carried on absolutely without any working expenses, and, at the same time, to be more closely under the observation of those interested in it, and more carefully guarded than any other method adopted for similar purposes.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION.

A medical examination is required under such rules as are generally adopted by life insurance companies. The character of the applicant must also be investigated, and the Lodge pass upon his application by ballot. Persons between the ages of 21 and 50 only are admitted.

BENEFITS OF SICK OR DISABLED MEMBERS.

The payment of weekly sick benefits to members is a matter left to the control of each Subordinate Lodge. Some provide in their By-Laws for such benefits—others do not. If sick benefits are to be paid, the initiation fees and weekly dues are fixed at an amount sufficient to cover the expense—each Lodge having the power to fix the fees and dues at such sums (not below $15 for initiation and degrees, and $2 for Beneficiary Fund and certificate, and 25 cents per month for dues) as may be determined upon.

GENERAL FEATURES OF THE ORDER.

The A. O. U. W. is a secret Order, having two degrees, with appropriate initiation ceremonies. These are simple, but impressive. The teachings are calculated to strengthen the character and elevate the moral principles of the members.

The Order is composed of Subordinate Lodges, Grand Lodges and a Supreme Lodge. Subordinate Lodges in States or Territories where no Grand Lodge has been established, are under the immediate jurisdiction of and report to the Supreme Lodge, until a Grand Lodge is established.

When a Grand Lodge has over 2,000 members under its jurisdiction, it can be set apart as a separate Beneficiary district if desired. In this case the members are assessed for the deaths which occur within such district or jurisdiction, and the Grand Lodge collects the assessments and pays the death benefits under the laws and regulations adopted by the Supreme Lodge. The Grand Lodges of Pennsylvania, New York, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, Tennessee, Indiana, Michigan, California, Wisconsin, Kansas, Oregon and Ontario have been thus set apart as to the Beneficiary Fund. In all other respects they remain integral parts of the Order.

PROGRESS OF THE ORDER.

The A. O. U. W. was started in Pennsylvania in 1868 but was not sufficiently established to pay the $2,000 benefit until 1873, from which time up to the 1st of January, 1880, the Grand Lodge of that State alone has paid over $46,000 of Beneficiary Fund.

The Supreme Lodge, up to June, 1881 had paid out $919,172.90 on deaths of members of Lodges under its immediate jurisdiction. The amount paid by the Order during the year 1880, was $1,305,887.00.

The membership reported on the 1st of March, 1881, was 97,179, with Grand Lodges established in the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Iowa, New York, Illinois, Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Tennessee, Michigan, California, Georgia, Kansas, Ontario (Canada), Oregon and Washington Territories, Massachusetts, Nevada, and Subordinate Lodges in a number of other States. In all these States the Order is steadily and rapidly growing. With the increase already since the above date, it is safe to say that before the close of the year 1881 it will number over 125,000 members.

The Order was founded by a few earnest, honest men, for fraternal and beneficent purposes. Its sphere of usefulness has been enlarged, and it has been faithfully conducted as its founders designed it to be—not to subserve the selfish interest of a few, but for the mutual benefit of all. Thoughtful and prudent men join it because they can thus provide, without present embarrassment, for the contingencies arising from the uncertainties of life, and at the same time aid each other in mutual improvement and the elevation of humanity.

CHARITY, HOPE AND PROTECTION.

To every loyal brother of the A. O. U. W. these words symbolize the greatness of an organization which, to-day, is doing good commensurate with the loftiness of its mission. Charity, hope and protection are the three cardinal principles of our Order. By a combination in the character of each member of these three attributes, we have men of noble mind working together for a common good. Our field is a world wide philanthropy, where the merits combine as to make of every member a true man. Selfishness is no part of the A. O. U. W. system. It is a departure from it as much as is possible. The true Workmen has none other than charity for a brother, hope for the good of the future, and protection for the helpless in time of sore trial and distress. These are the three talismanic words and objects of the Order, and he who cannot affiliate with those whose aims are embraced in these, cannot be, in word and deed, a true Workman.

ADVANTAGES OF THE A. O. U. W. SYSTEM.

Some one has epitomized the prominent reasons for joining the Ancient Order of United Workmen about as follows:

1. Because insurance benefits are furnished to all the members of the Order. Having had 14 years of practical experience and test, during which, hundreds of thousands of dollars have been paid to widows and orphans at less than half cost of insurance in stock companies, it is worth more than a trial.
2. The A. O. U. W. offers more benefits than any other Order.
3. Because the cost of all the above large benefits is less than one-half of a corresponding insurance in the ordinary insurance companies.
4. Because the assessments are based on the "Actuarial Table of Costs of Risks."
5. Because the Order is steadily and rapidly growing.
6. Because the whole membership is taken into full confidence as to the management, and in the monthly published reports of the officers every member can see what has been done with every dollar received by the Order, and the financial officers have given adequate bonds; and lastly, because

The Supreme Court of the A. O. U. W. will not take advantage of any technicalities, but will pay all claims promptly, whenever they arise.

A NEW LAMP.—It is stated that a new lamp, combining gas and electricity, giving remarkable economic results, has been brought out. Some years ago gas burners were not uncommon which had a small piece of platinum foil arranged on the burner so as to be burned in the flame. When this was heated by a gas flame, it, by a regenerative action, heated the gas coming from the burner and caused an improvement of the light. In this new lamp it is stated that the burner is so arranged that a small current of electricity is passed through the platinum. The gas is first lighted, and this heats the platinum, the resistance of which is thus increased, so that a current which would, when the platinum is cold, be freely transmitted, now heats the platinum to incandescence, and this in turn heats the issuing gas to a very high temperature, so that a light equal to 30 candles is, it is said, obtained by the consumption of two cubic feet of gas per hour and a small electric current. If this is the case, the existing gas fittings can all be utilized, and a secondary battery of no great number of elements would supply the current needed.

A NEW KIND OF GAS ENGINE.—Some of the London papers are quite enthusiastic over the new kind of gas engine which has recently been introduced there, among its advantages being a low consumption of gas, which can be regulated with great nicety according to the load on the engine—coal, petroleum, atmospheric water gas being also equally adapted. In its construction an oval-shaped iron casting of considerable thickness, cast in one piece with the cylinder, conceals the piston rod, connecting rod and crank, from view, and while imparting to the engine great firmness and steady-ness, prevents the risk of accident. Regularity in working is also attained by the employment of a specially heavy fly wheel, and all parts of the engine being constructed to gauge, are therefore interchangeable and easy of adjustment.
The working parts, which are few in number, are made of hardened steel, so as to secure the utmost durability and smoothness of motion.
A turn or two of the fly wheel by hand will set the engine going, and a boy or laborer can attend to it, and it is, moreover, very compact and portable.

POISONOUS COLORS.—The German Government has just laid before the Reichstag the following decree, bearing date May 1, 1882, concerning the prohibition of poisonous colors for the coloring of certain alimentary substances and articles of food: 1. The use of poisonous colors for the manufacture of food products or articles of food intended for sale is prohibited.
Those which contain the following materials or compositions are considered as poisonous colors within the meaning of this enactment: Antimony (oxide of antimony), arsenic, barium (except sulphate of baryta), lead, chromium (except pure chromic oxide), cadmium, copper, mercury (except cinnabar), zinc, tin, gamboge, picric acid. 2. The preserving and packing of food stuffs or food products intended for sale in wrappers colored with the above-cited poisonous colors, or in barrels in which the poisonous color is so employed that the poisonous coloring matter can pass into the contents of the barrel, is prohibited. 3. The employment of the poisonous colors enumerated in Article 1 is prohibited for the manufacture of playthings, with the exception of varnish and oil paints made of zinc-white and chrome-yellow (chromate of lead). 4. The use of colors prepared with arsenic for the manufacture of paper hangings, as well as that of pigments containing copper prepared with arsenic, and of matters containing similar colors for the manufacture of materials of dress, is prohibited. 5. The putting on sale, and the sale, wholesale or retail, of food stuffs and food products preserved or packed contrary to the regulations of Articles 1 and 2, as well as playthings, paper hangings and dress materials manufactured in contravention of the directions in Articles 3 and 4 are prohibited. 6. This law will come into operation on April 1, 1883.—British Medical Journal.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE NATIONAL
CITY AND CAJON VALLEY NARROW GAUGE RAILROAD have been filed. It is proposed to construct a narrow gauge railroad from the Cajon valley via Spring valley to National City. The road will be about 25 miles long. The survey has already been made, and the work of building the road will be commenced immediately. It is expected to be finished in a short time, as there are no difficulties of grade, etc.

AN ILLUSTRATED
AGRICULTURAL HOME JOURNAL.
Among other Reasons for Subscribing are the Following:

Because it is a permanent, first-class, conscientious, able, and well conducted journal.
Because it is the largest and best agricultural weekly west of the Rocky mountains.
That Patrons may be reliably informed on the progress of the Order in this and other fields.
That more farmers' wives and children in their rural homes may be cheered by its weekly visits, laden with its pleasing, yet moral reading, and sound instruction.
That a more extended interchange of views and opinions may be had among farmers, upon all the great questions touching their mutual interests and progress.
That the agricultural resources of the Pacific States may be more wisely, speedily and thoroughly developed by an open and free discussion in our columns.
That all the worthy industries of our State may be advanced in connection with that of agriculture, our columns being ever open to the discussion of the merits of all progressive improvements.
That the RURAL, after having been read and pondered over by the home circle, can be filed away for future useful reference, or forwarded to the old Eastern friends of the Atlantic border, in aid of an increasing immigration to our sunny clime.

Subscription rates, $3 per annum when paid in advance. Please invite your friends to subscribe. We will send free sample copies for circulation and further information on subscription, etc., on application.
Secretaries, Lecturers and other Patrons are cordially invited to correspond for our columns, for the good of the Order and their local interests.

THE SEVERN TUNNEL.—There appears to be some chance of this tunnel being at length completed, as there are now 2,300 men engaged on the work, and it is expected to be finished in 4 years' time. One hundred and twenty houses have been built and 50 others are being constructed for the use of the workmen. This tunnel, which will be the longest in England, is 4½ miles long and crosses underneath the river Severn about 16 miles from Bristol, 2½ miles being under water. The Great Western Railway Company, which is the promoter, will save 45 minutes in the journey from London to South Wales, and the ferry service at Bristol will also be dispensed with. The work was commenced 10 years ago by the Great Western Company itself and carried on by it until the works were flooded out, when, by the advice of Sir John Hawkshaw, it was handed over to the contractor, Mr. T. A. Walker. The tunnel will be 25 ft. wide, 25 ft. high, and will be bricked from end to end, the thickness of the walls varying from 2 to 3 ft.

ENGINEERING ENTERPRISE IN HAMBURG.—The Senate of Hamburg, Germany, as recently reported in an exchange, have had under consideration a scheme for constructing a tunnel under the Elbe and an elevated railway in that city. The construction of a bridge instead of a tunnel is said to be out of the question on account of the width and crowded state of the harbor, and the author of the project has designed the tunnel of such dimensions as would provide both for vehicles and foot passengers, and a double-track railway for freight and passengers. This he proposes to effect by building the tunnel of two stories, the road for vehicles and pedestrians to be in the upper story, and the line of railway in the lower story. The estimated cost of the tunnel and railway is $6,250,000, and they are to be completed in five and a half years.

STRENGTH OF PAPER.—One of the most remarkable things about paper is its strength. As an illustration of this a note of the Bank of England twisted into a kind of rope can suspend as much as 329 lbs upon one end of it, and not be injured in the least. There is an article made of paper in the shape of a small kitchen or house truck on wheels used for wheeling loads around the house. The sides and bottom of this are made of finely compressed paper, and it is capable of bearing a weight of five tons. There are bath tubs and pots made in the same manner, by compressing the paper made out of linen fibers, which is painted over with a composition which becomes part of the paper and is fire proof. The tubs never leak, or may be put on the fire and will not burn. It is almost impossible to break them, as you can beat on them with a hammer and not injure them in the least.

SLEEPING WITH THE MOUTH OPEN.—The only true way for one to sleep as regards the position of the mouth is to have it closed. Nature has designed the nostrils as the breathing passage for man and beast. If you will observe the animals around you, you will notice that when quiet the mouth is closed. Breathing with the mouth open not only introduces the air too abruptly to the lungs, but also affects the condition of the membranes of the mouth and alters the constitution of the secretions. One who sleeps with the mouth open generally awakens with a dry, parched, disagreeable sensation which does not wear away very quickly. —Phrenological Journal.

AN IRON WATCH.—One of the chief features of interest at a recent county exhibition in Great Britain was an iron watch which had been turned out by Messrs. Crowther Bros. & Co., of Kidderminster, for the purpose of showing the extraordinary malleability of their metal. The watch is said to be perfect in every respect.

For aged men, women, weak and sickly children, without a rival. Will not cause headache. Brown's Iron Bitters.

OUR U. S. AND FOREIGN PATENT AGENCY presents many and important advantages as a Home Agency over all others, by reason of long establishment, great experience, thorough system, intimate acquaintance with the subjects of inventions in our own community, and our most extensive law and reference library containing official American and foreign reports, files of scientific and mechanical publications, etc. All worthy inventions patented through our Agency will have the benefit of an illustration or a description in the MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS. We transact every branch of Patent business, and obtain Patents in all countries which grant protection to inventors. The large majority of U. S. and Foreign Patents issued to inventors on the Pacific Coast have been obtained through our Agency. We can give the best and most reliable advice as to the patentability of new inventions. Our prices are as low as any first-class agencies in the Eastern States, while our advantages for Pacific Coast inventors are far superior. Advice and Circulars free. DEWEY & CO., PATENT AGENTS.

NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST, ORDER CHOSEN FRIENDS,
ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
ROYAL ARCANUM,
UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and carefully selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

Important to A. O. U. W.

We occasionally send complimentary sample copies of the WATCHMAN to the various officers and members of the A. O. U. W. We ask as a special favor that those receiving them, and all interested in the success of the various Lodges will lend us a helping hand in increasing our circulation. Nothing contributes more to the successful working of the A. O. U. W. than the circulation of general Fraternity news, and the best way to secure this is through the WATCHMAN, which is an able and faithful advocate. It is to the interest of the A. O. U. W. that the WATCHMAN be placed in the hands of every Workman, and to accomplish this we must rely in a large measure upon the voluntary efforts and subscriptions.

Liberal inducements will be offered to active and reliable members who will canvass for subscriptions. Sample copies will be mailed free on application to Workmen, all of whom are invited to endeavor to assist in extending the circulation of the WATCHMAN.

Let every Workman into whose hands this notice may come, if not already a subscriber, fill out the subscription blank below, enclosed for him, and send it to us for your year's subscription.

Non-Attendance at Lodge Meetings.

Grand Master Workman James of Pennsylvania, has recently been visiting the Lodges in his jurisdiction, and from his observations makes the following remarks upon the matter of attendance at Lodge meetings:

"It is a fact that many of the Lodges I have visited have very small attendance. Various reasons are given. Some allege business matters; some that many of the members reside at a distance; others, that their members are connected with some other organization. All these are considered ample reasons or excuses. When the Lodge is small it is doubtless difficult to obtain a quorum, but this cannot be given as a good excuse when the Lodge has a large membership. Other reasons must be sought. More than a dozen times during the trip was the writer introduced to prominent citizens of the places visited and informed that these were members of the Order, but they never attended Lodge meetings and did not know what was going on. It seemed sometimes as if this was spoken of in a boasting manner, as if it was something of which they were proud. Frequently they added: 'I only joined that my family might get the insurance,' and that 'they never intended to take any part in the Lodge proceedings.' They left that to those who 'like to attend Lodges.' These reasons contain the real causes for non-attendance. They seem to forget that, as members of a great fraternal organization, each one has a duty to perform, and that the business of the Lodge should not be left to the faithful few who are willing to attend to the Lodge duties. There is too much at stake to be passed by unheeded. The Lodge-room, besides, is a great school for study. Active, attentive and energetic members can soon make it a place to be eagerly sought for and a place of delight to the members. Not that our members can be so arranged that some attention may also be given to the Lodge meetings? What seems to be necessary is that there should be introduced, under 'Good of the Order,' various

Bishop's Head, on the Maine Coast.

The coast of Maine is fitly described in the words of the poet who pictured the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers, for it is "stern and rock-bound" to the last degree. It is also exceedingly broken and ragged. Following the line of the shores, Maine has 2,486 miles of sea coast, being the most irregular and deeply indented coast line in the United States. All along the shores there are jutting or solitary rocks which have taken names from their resemblance to animate objects. The one shown in the engraving is "Bishop's Head," and the mitered head of such a functionary is well brought out in the rock. The frowning shore above and the wild, dashing waves form a picture of nature in one of her heavier moods, which is most impressive.

Maine, with all her riches of coast scenery, does not possess a monopoly of threatening rocks or forms from nature's chisel which bear semblance to living objects. The resistless force of the waves has hewn mysterious shapes wherever rocky shores have attempted to fence in the ocean. Nor has the ocean alone been the sculptor. On this coast the work of river and glacier has left monuments standing far inland. The headlands along the Columbia river have a majesty peculiarly their own. Cape Horn will perhaps come to the reader's mind, as his eye rests upon the Atlantic scene which appears upon this page.

The mind lingers long in contemplation of such a creation at Bishop's Head. There are many weird fancies woven around it, and it has won a place in the literature, as well as in the art, of New England. It is also a notable point with mariners.

should neglect their business or other engagements, but is it not possible that engagements as in the art, of New England. It is also a notable point with mariners.

Home Miscellany.

My South Wind.

Steadily blow, my wind, steadily O,
Faintly, faintly blow;
With a sigh the mountains so still,
Over the meadows below.

My South Wind, hush, thy speeding we wait,
And the high-piled clouds you keep—Murmuring, where the Red Kings are,
Away on the measureless deep

O proud and strong, like an ocean song,
Steadily, haughtily blow;
And over the air now mute with a prayer,
An anthem of raining thaw.

My South Wind brave, sweep up from the wave
Each weary and passionate cloud,
To weep out its pain on thy breast with rain,
—My comforter, crowned and proud.

My Ruler, my King! come in triumph and bring
The hope of your heart, my love;
Chanting the strain of the on-coming rain,
Borne on thy pinions above.

My Mother-in-Law.

A Sketch.

How well I remember the first time I saw her sitting out of doors on a lovely summer evening surrounded by her children. They were of all ages, from 10 to 24, young men and maidens, as well as girls and boys, but to her they were all "the children" still, as she was to them the ideal mother.

I was a shy, awkward boy of 16 who had come to attend school in the neighborhood, and had brought from my aunt a letter of introduction to Mrs. Grey. This I had sent to her the day before, and now, as I advanced up the garden path, she rose from her seat and came forward to meet me. The pleasant smile, the warm clasp of the hand, as she called me by my name, scattered much of my usual bashfulness at once. She did not put me through the ordeal of a series of introductions; she merely said: "Children, this is Frank Fielding, whose mother was my dearest friend at school." Then, turning to me, she said: "I shall not puzzle you with a string of names, Frank; you will soon find out for yourself which is Kate and which is George, and all the rest of them. Now, sit down and tell me about your good aunt and your father."

While I answered her questions the girls were fitting hither and thither; two of the boys brought out a table and chairs, and presently Mr. Grey appeared, and we all sat down to tea under the drooping branches of a magnificent oak which stood near the house.

Then the merry chatter began, and very soon I knew all the family names, and amused myself by trying to apportion each to its proper owner. When the daylight faded we went indoors, and all too soon the evening was ended, which seemed to me one of the pleasantest I had ever spent.

It was my first glimpse of home life, utterly unlike any I had known before. My father was a grave, stern man whose one ray of sunshine had passed away when my mother died, after a single year of wedded life. Kind to me always, and conscientious in fulfilling all a father's duties, he never knew how to unbend, and I feared as much as I loved him. His older sister, who had come to take charge of his house and me, was very like him in character and in manner, and I had grown up in an atmosphere of restraint and repression.

What a revelation it was to me as I grew more familiar with this happy family! For it soon came to pass that I spent all my leisure evenings with them. There I saw the father and mother treated almost like an elder brother and sister, called pet names, coaxed and even teased or joked, yet never with a shadow of disrespect; love ruling the whole household, the fair reflection upon earth of that perfect love which casteth out fear.

I was soon the familiar friend of the boys, and as such treated with entire lack of ceremony by their sisters. Bright, attractive girls, they were much admired by all the young men of their acquaintance; but if in those early days I fell in love with any one under that hospitable roof, it was with the mother rather than with any of the daughters.

Years sped on. My schooldays finished, I entered a bank in the same town, and settled down to a man's work and a man's duties. Then it was that a sudden light dawned upon me. Wedding after wedding I had attended where either bride or bridegroom had belonged to the Gray family. The home nest was almost deserted; only the youngest daughter remained. What if some one should steal her away? I could never go to that wedding, never see my little Jennie given to another. My little Jennie! I did go to her wedding very soon after; but it was to stand beside the fair bride, and to take her into my own keeping "till death do us part."

And now did a sudden change come o'er the spirit of my dream. Mrs. Gray had seemed to me one of the noblest of women; was she henceforth my natural enemy because she had become my mother-in-law? Let the record of those years answer.

Did any change disturb the even tenor of our lives, whether it was joy or sorrow, the first one we sent for was "Mother." Children were born to us; they were first welcomed to her arms, watched over night and day until their young mother was restored to her usual strength and health, and ever after as much at home at grandmamma's as under our own roof. If one of them fell ill she was at our side, relieving half our anxiety by her mere presence. Was there an interesting lecture or a concert to which I wished to take my wife, or a pleasant excursion to be enjoyed on a holiday, she could go with an easy conscience and a light heart if only the babies were with mother.

Now, as I look back I wonder at the selfishness which allowed us to make all such demands upon her time and strength, for there were five other families of married sons and daughters to whom she was all that she was to us.

The officious interference so often charged against mothers-in-law, as a class, we never knew from her; perhaps because we never looked for it. Kind words of counsel and advice, given frankly when they were needed, seemed to me, as to my wife, fitting and proper coming from our mother. How much we owed to her wisdom, her discretion and her tact we never knew until we lost her presence from amongst us.

In the midst of her busy and useful life the summons came, so suddenly that it seemed impossible to realize it. But yesterday she was with us, full of eager sympathy as we talked of our plans for the future; and now—could it be that she was dying?

My poor little wife, with an infant but three days old, was instantly alarmed by her absence, and threatened with serious illness from grief and anxiety. I went from one to the other with messages of love and tenderness. All was peace with her whose work on earth was ended, and in quietness and confidence we waited, her last care being still for her children.

When all was over I turned away with a very heavy heart to bear the sorrowful tidings to my wife. As I walked down the street I was too much absorbed in my own thoughts to notice a group of young men with whom I was acquainted until I was accosted by one of them:

"Hello, Fielding; what's the matter? What makes you look so blue?"

"Why," exclaimed another, "to look at you a fellow would think you had lost your mother-in-law."

This witty sally was received with a shout of laughter, as such remarks invariably are. I waited for one moment until the merriment had subsided, then I said: "My wife's dear and honored mother died an hour ago. She herself is lying ill at home, and I am on my way to break the news to her. Good morning, gentlemen."

I turned away as silence fell on the party, and was gone before there was time for explanation or apology.

Years have passed, and time has softened our first keen sense of sorrow, but still we miss the faithful friend, the wise counsellor, the loving and unselfish companion; and often, as I read the taunts and sneers thrown out at those who stand in the same relation to others, I am filled with indignation, for the story I have given from my own experience finds the counterpart every day in countless houses throughout the length and breadth of the land. Women, good and true, are daily contradicting by their useful lives idle and silly accusations which are brought against them; and it is time that some of those who owe them so large a debt of gratitude should speak out as I have done in this little tribute to the memory of my MOTHER-IN-LAW.

EFFECT OF WIND ON DRAFT OF CHIMNEYS.—

In a paper bearing the above title, and which was recently read at Southampton, England, by Lord Rayleigh, it was stated that a horizontal wind would usually promote a draft, except in cases where the chimney opened out upon a large expanse of wall, and so was indirectly affected, in which case there was only one cure, namely, to carry the chimney higher. When the wind was inclined downward to the chimney at an angle of 30° and more, there was a down draft, and the maximum up draft was produced by wind inclined upward at about the same angle. The simplest thing to prevent wind blowing down a chimney was to erect a T-piece on the top. In that case a vertical or inclined wind favored the draft, and the effect of a wind blowing through the T tube was practically nothing. Lord Rayleigh, moreover, contended that chimneys should be turned upside down; that is, the opening at the fireplace should be narrow and the outlet wide; and that if all the chimneys in a house could be made to open into a common cloaca, a down draft would hardly ever occur.

THE SPRING STREET CAR MOTOR.—It is reported that recent experiments in Philadelphia have proved that it is possible to propel street cars smoothly and rapidly by the expansion of powerful steel springs, the difficulty of giving a uniform and perfect temper to the metal having been overcome. The company controlling the patents makes the following claims: The motor consists of six springs coiled upon a cylinder. Each spring will be made of a flat bar of steel 300 ft. long, 6 inches wide, and one-fourth inch thick. These springs are tempered by the new process so uniformly and delicately that their power becomes tremendous. After first being coiled so that their diameter is 18 ft., they are tempered, and then wound up until the diameter is 7½ ft. In this condition they are placed upon the motor truck and the appliance of the patents adjusted.

The Duties of Farmers' Wives.

Mrs. E. V. Gage recently gave a lecture before a farmers' meeting in Massachusetts on the "duties of farmers' wives," from which we make the following extract:

We may safely conclude that among the duties which a farmer's wife owes to her position are these: She must be energetic, methodical, quiet, with a temper sweet and genial, and a sunny temperament. She must be a chemist, that her bread be light, her butter yellow and sweet, her cheese rich and ripe, and her cooking healthful.

She must be an economist, that with limited means and but a little time for the performance of the several duties that crowd her daily life, she may still be able to show large results and to save a little time for her own needs and uses. She must be a strategist, that she may know how to circumvent the tactics of hired servants if she is so unfortunate as to be obliged to keep them, and be able to bring order out of the chaos which the duties of some days will inevitably bring. She must be a diplomatist, that she may glean from all other farmers' wives the sweets of their skill in housekeeping, without betraying any weakness in her own management. And she must be an alchemist, with magic touch transmitting the products of her hands into gold.

Her duties to society are no less. Because she is a farmer's wife, and spends her life in the obscurity of the country, it is not necessary that she be uncouth, or uneducated or ignorant (though one may be uneducated and be neither uncouth nor ignorant). Aside from her cares, and the time which they consume, there ought still to be time for keeping up a knowledge of the current literature of the day, and of the history that is being written all over the world. She should show by her daily life and actions her entire trust in the dependence upon the merciful goodness of the great Father of all, accepting the trials as cheerfully as the joys which He sends. She should have her influence in the church, and be ready and willing to be helpful, as well by her presence as by her charities. She should be charitable, knowing that God has made nothing common nor unclean; willing to take the erring by the hand, and set their feet in surer paths; seeking out God's messengers, the poor, and by them sending her fragrant portion to the city of the Great King.

She should be friendly, that the timid may find strength in her presence and comfort in her society. If among those about her there be those to whom has been denied the fulness of favor and grace that her own life gives, it is her blessing and her right to impart a portion so that the grand designs of nature may best be realized, by her sympathy and tact clearing out the tangled threads in the web of their existence, and she should set her face like flint against any impure thought, or word, or deed. The scoffer, the slanderer, the liar, the voluptuary, the drunkard, should shrink her sight, feeling, under the glance of her pure eye, under the light of her kind face, all the meanness and littleness and wickedness of their lives, and be kindled to a determination to become better and fitter to be her associate. Her duty to her family is, next, to the duty she owes to her Maker, the highest of all. Her husband should be the chief cornerstone of the family, and by her own respect and tender affection she should win for him the respect of her children and the deference of his fellow men. She should point out to her family in their daily contact and nature how God's great goodness and mercy underlie all the operations of nature and art, and how closely the law that binds the spheres holds them also responsible for the use or misuse of their time and opportunities. She should teach her children that to be truthful and honest is of first importance in the forming of a character; that to gain the respect of our fellow beings we must first respect ourselves, and that to command we must first obey implicitly. She should not ignore politics, for, since so many of our rulers and holders of responsible positions have been farmers and sons of farmers, she should be able to guide her own sons to form opinions and fix principles which will fit them for any sphere of action, and enable them to overcome any obstacle. It is not necessary that she herself should go to the polls and deposit her ballot for the handsomest man, or the best dressed man, or the man who drives the fastest team, or who can make a show of spending the most money; but she should so understand the issues of the day and the principles of a free government, that she can teach her sons that it is not the man nor the office that they should vote for, but the brain, the power to cope successfully with the difficulties arising out of self-government, and the principles of Liberty, Truth and Justice; and is not an opportunity like this, which every wife has, of greater moment than the crush of election day? Is not this God-given right one of the noblest of women's rights, a right which no man will question, no man deny? And she should teach sons and daughters alike that to be fit for positions of responsibility they must be faithful in little things; that thoroughness and accuracy underlie truth and honesty, and that nothing is trivial, nothing venial, nothing unbecoming, which the time and the place make a necessity of doing for TREMORS OF THE EARTH.—The London Times publishes a synopsis of some papers on the "Tremors of the Earth," by the committee appointed to measure the lunar disturbance of gravity and by Mr. G. Darwin, which contains some statements new to the public. It is considered proved by the men of science engaged that the crust of the earth bends under the weights imposed on it till, "when the barometer rises an inch over a land area like that of Australia, the increased load of air sinks the entire continent two or three inches below the normal level." The land actually sinks and rises under the pressure of the mass of water thrown upon it by the tides; the maximum of rise and fall on the Atlantic seaboard reaches five inches. The effect is felt at the bottom of the deepest mine, and may reach for an unknown distance. It follows that the crust of the earth must be of exceeding tenacity, exceeding as a minimum that of granite, and its swaying may be the causes of phenomena hitherto quite unexplained, as, for example, the relation between storm and earthquake. So universal, frequent and unavoidable are these disturbances that the inquiry into the lunar disturbance of gravity has been given up. No depth can be found at which a recording instrument can be placed so as to escape their effect. The round earth pants, in fact, like a breathing being, under changes always going on above her.

IMPROVEMENTS IN TEMPERING GLASS.—The high expectations in regard to the Bastic method of toughening glass do not appear to have been fully realized, and any improvement thereupon will be welcomed. That method consisted in immersing the article, while still red hot, in a bath of oil heated to about 390° Fah., and letting it remain there until it had cooled down to that temperature. Glass thus tempered, while tough, seems to be at the same time very brittle, so that when it does break it flies into very small fragments, much like Prince Rupert drops. It appears to have a hard skin, bound tightly over a less hard interior. F. Lubisch, a German, now claims to have devised an improvement on the Bastic process. He immerses the article in a hot bath, heated only to about 220° Fah., but takes it out when it has lost its redness and cools it gradually and very slowly in an oven. He also uses a solution of starch or gum, or some similar substance which does not soil the surface of the glass, as fat or oil does. It is claimed that glass so hardened resists pressure or shocks as well as the Bastic glass, while at the same time it may be cut with a diamond or polished and engraved with the sand blast, a process to which the Bastic glass cannot be safely subjected.

POWER OF THE WILL.—We hear frequently of pretenders who profess to heal diseases by "laying on of hands," etc. The real manner of healing in all such cases is merely the determined exercise of the will power, or what is the same thing, faith in the healer and his arts. Witness the following evidence of the power of the will in such cases: A lady was sick from apparent exhaustion, and for a long time had kept her bed. Her pastor, at her request, had prayed and prayed, but she was no better. A new physician one day called. He came to her bedside and said: "I think that the best thing you can do is to get up!" And she got up. "Go down stairs!" And she went down. The next day she was on the street, enjoying a walk after a long, long confinement. "I didn't cure her," said the physician, "for there was nothing to cure. She had lain in her bed so long that her will power had all gone." His prompt and heroic treatment startled into life her paralyzed resolution.

CHANGE IN DE LESSEPS' PLANS.—It is reported that the engineers of the Panama canal have made a radical change in their plan of operations. The intention of the projectors was to make a sea-level canal from one ocean to the other without locks of any kind. Information now comes out that they have found it impossible for any sum of money which could be raised to overcome the natural difficulties of such an undertaking, and they have decided to adopt the ordinary plan—that of locking, up and down the grades. The other scheme involved the operation of digging a canal for some distance through great cuts, which would have been several hundred feet deep, involving an amount of excavation the like of which was never attempted by human hands. There were other difficulties also in connection with that part of the canal where the bed of the Chagres river is utilized which the engineers concluded would form a fatal obstruction to the plan originally entered upon.

PROGRESS OF MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY.—The progress of manufacturing industries in the United States has been such that an arbitrary division into manufacturing and agricultural sections can no longer be maintained. In seven principal Western States—Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota—the manufacturing industries were less than one-half those of the New England States in 1850. Now these industries in the Western States named exceed those of the New England States. More than 10 years ago the annual aggregate value of manufactured products exceeded the value of all agricultural products in the above Western States. The number of patents now annually taken out in the Northwestern States far exceeds the number issued to citizens of the New England States.

The Naughty Bees.

The bees were naughty one day,
And wouldn't mind their queen;
They sniffed at the clover hay,
And scorned the scarlet bean;

Vowed they'd make no more honey,
But would haste to the river shore
To dig for Captain Kidd's money,
And be rich and happy evermore.

The queen let fall a dish of honey,
In astonishment and dismay,
"My dears, if you find this money,
What good will it do you, pray?"

"Can't we buy honey with money?
If we cannot, please tell us so."
"If never a silly bee makes honey,
You can't buy it, of course, you know."

The bees dropped their wings
And threw their spades away,
And toiled where the locust sings,
All the livelong summer day.

How Bruin Was Killed.

[Written by E. FREMONT WOOD.]

A Tale of the "High Sierras."

He was but a mere boy, thinly and raggedly clad. He stood shivering by the cook's log fire as we came in off the line. We were a party of railroad surveyors, and at that time were running a preliminary line in the "North Fork" canyon west of the Miners in one of the very wildest regions of the the wild Sierras. This was in the early part of December, 1881. The ground was covered with snow, the sky was dull and overcast, and that night a raw wind was whistling drearily through the tall pines. The boy seemed abashed at our approach, and drew back from the fire as the men gathered around it. We were in hopes that he was from the "Flats," our nearest postoffice, but upon inquiry at the office tent we learned that he was only from the meadows eight miles below; that he had brought up two pack mules loaded with deer meat. When we had received this information, supper was announced. After a hearty repast of deer meat, more logs were heaped upon the fire and we all gathered around the blaze to talk over the day's events. The new-comer, whose name was Harry—Harry Young, if I remember rightly—after eating his supper went down to the corral a few yards below camp to attend to his horse and mules. In a short time he returned, a fine looking dog following close at his heels. A dog was quite a curiosity in camp, we having seen none since leaving civilization, several weeks back. The dog, like the boy, evinced some shyness at first, but at length I succeeded in calling him to me. While patting him on the head I noticed that the hair was torn from his right ear and the flesh badly scratched.

"What did this, Harry?" I asked.

The boy grinned, looked knowing, and said: "Oh, that came from a little slap he got from a bear 'tother night."

"Slap from a bear? How was that? Tell us about it," cried several, solito voce.

"Well, you see," he began, with the characteristic introductory of the up-country incident narrator, "well, you see, me and my brother and another young fellow named Hurst lives in the log cabin down in the medders which you past on your way up. We've got a minin' claim up in the mountains to the right of the medders, and sometimes we all three of us works on the c'aim, and sometimes when grub gets short two of us works and the other'n turns out and hunts game. Other day it come Fred's turn to hunt, and when I and Hurst come in at night we found Fred there skinning some fine deers which he'd shot a little ways below the cabin. Well, when we'd eat all the deer meat we wanted we hung 'em up in the cabin, had a little smoke and went to bed. Sometime in the night, it must have been, maybe, 'bout 'leven o'clock, I waked up all of a sudden and heard 'Ned,' that's the dog, under the cabin a howlin' fearful."

"I just raised up in bed and took a look out a crack, and there in the moonlight I seed a big grizzly a walking up and down on a log, like as if he feeled pretty proud of himself. Then I knowed right off that Ned had been trying to drive the old feller away and had got half killed or scared to death himself. You see, Mr. Bear smelt the fresh meat, and thought he'd just come around and get some.

"What did I do? Well, I just quickly waked the boys up, and Fred got his "Winchester" and stood on a stool and rested it in the winder, while Hurst held a candle at the sight. Takin' aim as best he could, Fred fired, but I guess he missed him, for the bear turned 'round, growled hard and then started off on a fast trot. Next day Fred made up his mind that Mr. Grizzly would be back that night again. So toward evening he fetched Ned into the cabin, and then took his rifle out and fastened it to a big log, so as it couldn't move. Fixin' a good stout string to the trigger, he fetched it carefully 'round a small saplin' and then along the bar'l of the rifle. Then he fixed a piece of meat on to the string, and it was all ready for action. We all went to bed, but didn't sleep much for thinkin' on it, I tell you. 'Bout 3 o'clock in the mornin' the dog begin to get kind of oneasy, and went anuffin' at the door. I raised up and looked through a crack, and there a prowlin' 'round the log was two of the biggest grizzlies I ever seen. Fred and Hurst was a both wake, and I told them, and they got up and made the dog keep still, and then watched them out the winder. Pretty soon one of them bears seemed to get on to the scent and begin to sniff the air, and then goin' straight up to the muzzle of the rifle he grabbed the meat quick, like as if he was afraid the 'tother one'd get it first. But I tell you he let go on that meat quicker'n he took hold of it, when that big cartridge went a tearin' into him. First he keeled over on his side and begin to kick; then he got up and started up the hill back of the cabin like one possessed, the 'tother one a followin' after him. That was the last we seen or heard of them that night. Next mornin' we trailed the one that had been shot by the blood, and a little ways up the hill we found him lodged agin a tree where he had fell. We've got his hide down to the cabin now; stop and see it when you go down. It's a fine 'n. Fred was offered $50 for it by the livery stable man over to Bodie, who went through on the trail yesterday, but Hurst didn't want him to sell it."

But a few days after the narration of the above we were compelled to abandon work by the setting in of a heavy snow-storm. When we reached the meadows we stopped at the cabin, but the boys were not at home. Peeping through the chinks in the wall, however, we obtained a good view of the bear skin. The head part was nailed to the cross-beams, about 12 feet from the floor, and the hind feet fairly dragged upon the floor.

TEMPERING STEEL.—More tools are ruined by overheating, cold-hammering and overtempering than can be redeemed by all the new recipes that have been invented. The only way that is really good is first to find a brand of steel that is good and suitable for the tools to be made, and stick to it. Next find by a few trials the lowest heat that will harden it in pure water at 70° or ordinary shop temperature. If steel is hardened at the lowest heat, the temper will require drawing very little—i. e., to a pale straw, full straw, or brownish yellow, but not deeper unless for wood-working tools with thin cutting edges, when a full brown may be desirable. File makers use salt water for a hardening bath, because it makes the water more dense, and the teeth harder, and, of course, more brittle. Sulphuric acid or mercury is sometimes used for hardening very small tools for cutting glass and etching stone. For springs the same care should be taken in regard to low, even heating that is necessary with tools. Pure lard oil is as good, and probably better, than any of the many mixtures that have been tried for the hardening fluid. Burning off may do for drawing the temper of small or thick springs, but is totally unfit for long or slender ones. Dip the hardened spring into a bath of oil heated nearly to its boiling temperature. This is the only way to get an even temper.—Scientific American.

SUBWAYS FOR GAS AND WATER PIPES.—The New York World suggests the advisability of constructing under the streets of that city what it calls subways, through which working men can travel, as a means of avoiding the tearing up of streets for the repair of water, steam and gas pipes. This is by no means an infeasible scheme, since it has long been in operation in Paris, and for a city so troubled with travel and traffic as New York there are few greater nuisances than an uptown street. In time this difficulty will come to perplex us, after we have solved our bridge problem.

Salicylic Acid in Typhoid Fever.

A member of the French Academy of Medicine, at Paris, M. Vulpian, at a recent meeting of the Association asked if the terrible scourge of typhoid fever might not be more successfully treated by the employment of some soluble antiseptic, susceptible of finding its way, without alteration, into the intestines, and then neutralizing the typhoid virus. Trial in that direction had been made with various antiseptics, but salicylate of soda seemed to have been attended with the best results.

M. Vulpian, recalling the fact that typhoid fever, the same as the small-pox, the measles and scarlet fever, consists in reality of an intoxication caused by the virus absorbed, and which, on its first attack, we seek to combat in the blood itself and in its organic elements, remarked that the medicine ought to reach not only the microbes but the nervous centers, which impel the general circulation.

To effect this, his choice is salicylic acid, to which numerous German, Italian and American works have for a long time accorded an action certain and preponderate.

The dose of salicylic acid—given in unleavened bread—is about half a gramme every half hour or hour, but it has been increased successfully to 6, 10, and 12 grammes—one gramme is equal to 23 grains. It is the medium dose of 6 to 7 grammes per day which should form the base of the new medication.

From a careful study of various cases at the Hotel-Dieu, it is found that but little inconvenience is experienced in administering salicylic acid; while on the other side, the beneficial effects of salicylic acid have always been very striking, as follows:

The regular and permanent lowering of the temperature from 40° 5', to 39°, 38° 5', at the end of 24 hours. Amelioration of the general condition of the patient.

The action of this medicine is, then, logical, though it may not be all-powerful and veritably curative. Salicylic acid, given in sufficient doses, is, up to this time, one of the most powerful agents in moderating typhoid fever.

This point established, M. Vulpian demanded, "if salicylic acid could not be employed as a prophylactic and preventive agent in epidemics of typhoid fever, and if taking daily a moderate dose of the medicine would not have the effect of annihilating the action of the typhoid poison?"

The Digestibility of Oysters.

Why oysters should be eaten raw is explained by Dr. Willam Roberts in his lecture on "Digestion." He says that the general practice of eating the oysters raw is evidence that the popular judgment upon matters of diet is usually trustworthy. The fawn-colored mass, which is the delicious portion of the fish, is its liver, and is simply a mass of glycogen. Associated with the glycogen, but withheld from actual contact with it during life, is its appropriate digestive ferment—the hepatic diastase. The mere crushing of the oyster between the teeth brings these two bodies together, and then the glycogen is at once digested without any other help than the diastase. The raw or merely warmed oyster is self-digestive. But the advantage of this provision is wholly lost by cooking, for the heat immediately destroys the associated ferment, and a cooked oyster has to be digested, like any other food, by the eater's own digestive powers.

"My dear sir, do you want to ruin your digestion?" asked Prof. Houghton, of Trinity college, one day, of a friend who had ordered brandy and water with his oysters in a Dublin restaurant.

Then he sent for a glass of brandy and a glass of Guinness' XX, and put an oyster in each. In a very short time there lay in the bottom of the glass of brandy a tough, leathery substance resembling the finger of a kid glove, while in the porter there was hardly a trace of the oyster to be found.

CITY SEWERAGE.—In answer to a question recently, when before a committee of the City Council of Philadelphia, Col. Waring said, with reference to the ventilation of sewers: "I would use neither street openings nor tubes. Each householder should be required to run the drain pipe which carries the sewage from his house up to the roof. It should be left untrapped, and then every discharge of sewage all through the city would be followed by a draft of fresh air. With such sewers as yours the impregnation of the soil by noxious gases is much to be feared. It would cost little more to make them fit to do the duty for which they are designed. They should be cemented inside and out, the joints tightly closed and the material of the best, and they should be kept clean. But defective house drainage exerts influences as baleful as do the most wretched sewers. The greater number of the cases which doctors attribute to sewer gas is due to fault, not in the sewers themselves, but to the filthy pipes which carry off the house drainage. Illuminating gas very often escapes from the pipes into the sewers, and most of the explosions are apparently due to that cause."

Household Hints

Original Recipes.

[Written by M. A. S.]

CORNISH YULE CAKE.—Boil four medium-sized potatoes in one cup of water, mash fine when cool enough, add yeast sufficient to raise over night. In the morning sift three quarts of flour into a large pan or bowl; into this rub one-half pound of lard, the same of butter, two cups of sugar, one tablespoonful of salt. After rubbing these thoroughly together, then rub in one-half pound of finely shred'd citron, two pounds of raisins, two pounds of currants, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, same of nutmeg, one of mace. Make a hole in the center, add the potato, sponge five well-beaten eggs and warm milk to mix it into soft dough. Let raise quite light; it will take much longer than for bread. Mould into loaves and let it raise again; bake an hour and a half in a moderate oven.

CORNISH PASTIES.—Take a cup of finely chopped beef suet, rub into three cups of flour with a little salt with water and roll out about the size of a common round pie tin, and about a third of an inch thick. Fill each one with one cup of finely sliced potatoes, same of onion, then a little pepper and salt; add a half cup of raw minced beef, mostly lean and tender, with a little more salt and pepper; wet the edges of the crust, fold them tightly together; bake 10 minutes, then make a small hole in the top of each and pour in a large spoonful of hot water and bake in a moderate oven 50 minutes longer.

ORANGE PIE.—Take a teacupful of pulverized sugar and a tablespoonful of soft butter, and rub them till smooth as cream; mix a tablespoonful of cornstarch in as little cold water as will dissolve it, then stir it in a teacupful of boiling water; let this cook until it is thick, but not so thick that it will harden instantly when cool; add this to the butter and sugar. Grate the peel from half an orange, taking care not to grate any of the thick inner skin; add this and the juice of the orange and one beaten egg to the other ingredients. Make some nice paste, and line a moderately deep pie plate with it, arrange it around the edge as if for a custard pie, then bake it. Remove it from the oven and put it with the orange custard described above, and to this add thin slices of another large orange. Set this in the oven for the egg to harden. If you wish it to be especially tempting, make a meringue of the whites of two eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar; spread this over the pie when it is done, and let it brown lightly in the oven.

CLEANING PAPER HANGINGS.—The following is an approved method of cleaning paper hangings: Cut into six or eight pieces a good-sized loaf of bread that is two days old, and, after having swept all the dust from the paper hangings, commence from the ceiling downward, and somewhat lightly rub the paper with a downward stroke with one of the pieces of bread. Continue this round the room, and then commence lower down in the same way till the whole of the surface of the paper has been gone over. The bread will from time to time get dirty, and it should be cut off as often as required. Care should be exercised not to rub the paper with a cross or horizontal stroke, only with the perpendicular movement of the hand, or the paper may peel off the wall from the joints. With careful manipulation paper will look almost as good as new.

MINCED FOWLS.—Remove from the bones all the flesh of either cold roast or boiled fowls. Clean it from the skin and keep covered from the air until ready for use. Boil the bones and skin with three-fourths of a pint of water until reduced quite half. Strain the gravy and let cool. Next, having first skimmed off the fat, put it into a clean saucepan with a half cup of cream, three ounces of butter well mixed with one tablespoonful of flour. Keep these stirred until they boil. Then put in the fowl, finely minced with three hard-boiled eggs, chopped, and sufficient salt and pepper to season. Shake the mince over the fire until just ready to boil. Dish it on hot toast and serve.

THICKENING FOR SOUP.—The following rule for making a thickening called "Roux" for soup is excellent: Bring a piece of butter to a boiling point in a small stew-pan, and sprinkle in flour till quite thick, beating well with an egg whisk until the flour is well cooked; then drop in a little hot soup from the kettle to thin it sufficiently to add to the soup. This makes the soup much better than adding the butter and flour uncooked.

HANGING GAME.—Few cooks understand hanging game. Game is not like poultry; it must hang a long time before it has attained to its best flavor. The origin of the term "high," indeed, comes from this long period of hanging up. In larders made specially for game there are hooks ranged one above another right up to the top, and the birds go up a hook every day in succession. By this arrangement the topmost or "high" one is that which has hung longest and is the fittest for cooking.

Presentations in Harmony Lodge, 9.

At the conclusion of the installation services in Harmony Lodge, No. 9, on Saturday evening, 6th inst., sitting P. M. W., T. H. Wilton, was happily surprised with the gift of a souvenir manufactured by R. Schaezlein, 13 Trinity street, it being a valuable gold P. M. W. badge. Bro. Cohen in a few eloquent words made the presentation speech. Bro. Wilton accepted his magnificent gift with evident satisfaction, and pledged anew his services and devotion to the Lodge and brethren who had so graciously honored him. Engraved on this badge are these words: Presented by the members of Harmony Lodge, No. 9, A. O. U. W., to P. M. W., T. H. Wilton, Jan. 6, 1883.

On the same evening the Lodge, through Financier Cohen, presented Bro. Blight with a duplicate of the badge presented to Bro. Wilton. The Financier in making the presentation speech recited the valuable services rendered and the high esteem in which Bro. Blight was held by Workmen generally. Bro. Blight seemed to be very happy, and in a pleasant manner responded. Engraved on the reverse of the badge is the following: "Presented by the members of Harmony Lodge, A. O. U. W., to P. M. W., Fred Blight, Jan. 6, 1883."

This is the third presentation of a P. M. W.'s badge by the members of Harmony Lodge within sixty days. Bro. Z. T. Whitten, P. M. W., who gained his honors in Ohio, was presented with one of the same character in November, 1882.

After the presentations the election of representatives to the Grand Lodge was had. Past Masters Cohen (who receives the degree by continuous service of seven terms as Financier), Blight, Hilton, Whittier and Henry were elected. Under "Good of the Order" Bro. Sam. Booth, P. M. W. of Excelsior, entertained with an original song about the brother from across the bay who went calling on New Year's day in Frisco. Remarks were made by District Deputy Charles E. Alden, of Occidental Lodge, No. 5, C. N. Payson, P. M. W. of Franklin, No. 44 District Deputy Poland and J. A. Calhoun, P. M. W. of No. 44.

The installation of the officers was conducted by District Deputy Poland, assisted by District Deputy C. E. Alden, of Keystone, No. 64, acting as P. G. M. W.; Sam Booth, P. M. W., as G. F.; G. A. Bordwell, P. M. W., as G. O., and C. N. Payson, P. M. W., as G. G. The ceremony was well conducted.

Fidelity Lodge, 136.

Fidelity Lodge, 136, installed its officers on the evening of the 3d inst. The members were out in good force and an enthusiastic and interesting meeting, such as the brethren of Fidelity are wont to have, was enjoyed by all. The financial report of the Lodge showed a snug balance of upward of $1,200. The report of membership showed 359 in good standing; the average age being 34. We doubt if there is another Lodge of the same membership, unless it be Oak Leaf, No. 35, that can show a lower average age.

Bro. E. P. Fish, District Deputy, assisted by Bro. P. Veasy, as P. G. M. W.; Bro. C. Carroll, as G. F.; Bro. L. L. Dunbar, as G. O., and Bro. Frank Rosback, as G. G., performed the installation ceremony in a commendable manner, the ritualistic work being given without the use of the book.

After the installation services the Lodge was closed, and immediately thereafter Bros. Gallagher and Kalmos, with the assistance of a corps of helpers, transformed the large hall into a banquet-room, and spread the table with all manner of delicacies, including Eastern oysters, roast turkey, choice salads, etc. Feasting, toasting, speeches, humorous reading and instrumental music was sandwiched together, and a happy hour spent, when the whole company arose and sang as a parting song "Auld Lang Syne." The retiring officers of this Lodge are known and recognized as leading citizens, experienced and efficient officers. Those elected and installed for this term will prove themselves worthy of the responsible position they have accepted.

Silver Spray D. of H.

On Monday evening, January 8th, Silver Spray D. of H., No. 3, held an enthusiastic meeting and elected the following officers: Sister C. H. Caldwell, P. W. S. of H.; Sister F. Lord, W. S. of H.; Sister C. Sanson, S. of H.; Sister B. Lyle, S. of C.; Sister L. C. McNear, S. Secretary; Sister M. S. Black, S. Treasurer; Sister A. J. Lincoln, S. Usher; Bro. C. C. Terrell, I. W., and R. Mayo, O. W. Deputy McKay, assisted by Bros. Booth, Bordwell, Payson, Macdonald and Deputy Poland, installed them, after which Sister C. H. Caldwell was presented with a large gold jewel of the regulation pattern. On one side are these words: "Cornelia Caldwell, W. W. T. Q. E." On the reverse side is the motto of the degree, "Taltha Cumi." Bro. J. C. Hoag made the presentation speech. Sister Caldwell, in a few well chosen and feeling words, responded. Bro. Herbert Jones then in a few congratulatory words, presented Sister Caldwell with a magnificent gold chain from which to suspend the jewel. Sister Caldwell, on receiving this double gift was much affected.

Bro. E. H. Black then in a facetious speech presented Bro. F. Filmore with a leather medal and a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. A bouquet which should have been presented he kept himself.

Bro. Walter B. Lyon, in a humorous and very appropriate speech, presented Bro. Filmore with a tin plate with the alphabet stamped on it, done up in a cigar box.

Bro. Filmore turned the tables on Bro. Lyon by presenting him with a bouquet somewhat vegetable and containing more radishes than roses. After the funny business was over, a song by Sam Booth, P. M. W., and one of the sisters of Silver Spray Lodge, and some remarks by Deputy McKay, closed a glorious meeting for Silver Spray.

Washington Lodge, 60.

Washington Lodge, No. 60, one of the solid Lodges of this city, is enjoying a season of prosperity and steady growth. Her membership is now 203, with five applications. She has among her members a large number of our leading business men. On Thursday evening, the 4th inst., Deputy Fish, with the assistance of Bros. Lindsey, Veasy, Carroll, Farnsworth and Rosback acting as Grand Lodge officers, installed a well-selected set of officers—such as has been the good fortune of this Lodge in all its previous terms. The meetings of this Lodge are well attended, and always very interesting. Their Organist, Prof. George Knight, is a fine musician, as also are several members, who are always willing to entertain the Lodge and its visitors. After the Lodge was closed an adjournment was made to the banquet-room of the Louvre, and a happy time was spent in complimentary and fraternal speeches, and the enjoyment of other good things.

Magnolia Lodge, 41.

At the last meeting of this Lodge three candidates presented themselves to receive the J. W. degree. Deputy Danforth, aided by Caleb Brind, acting as P. G. M. W.; A. Montgomery, G. F.; P. Sherry, G. O., and Geo. Jordan, G. G., installed a good set of officers, and held a real enjoyable meeting. Bro. Al. Baker, of this Lodge, who resides in Stockton, was present, and was honored with a marked reception. After the Lodge was closed the large company marched to the Baldwin restaurant, on Geary street, and closed the evening with feasting, toasts and complimentary and congratulatory speeches. In the work and deeds of this Lodge is a commendable example of the benefits of association of men to help each other in the battle of life.

Installation of Bay View Lodge, 159.

Deputy McKay installed the officers of Bay View Lodge, No. 159, South San Francisco, on the evening of the 8th inst., assisted by Grand Guide Harry J. Lusk and other brothers. After the installation a collation was set, and a very enjoyable hour was passed in making toasts, responses and general remarks. Bay View is one of the enthusiastic Lodges of this city, and we wish them a prosperous term and a good increase in membership. The following are the officers for the term: Thomas Brown, M. W.; Hy. Giles, F.; A. Parsons, O.; H. Laukenan, Rdr.; J. Rojas, Fin.; H. Lehrke, Rvr.; Thor. Hennessey, G.; J. F. Lewis, I. W.; Wm. Hedenman, O. W.; Dr. M. A. McLaughlin, Trustee and Med. Ex.; Rep. to G. L. Geo. T. Shaw.

Franklin Lodge, 44.

This pioneer Lodge is in a prosperous condition. On the 5th inst. Deputy Poland and Bros. Jenness, acting P. G. M. W.; Quinton, G. F.; Bordwell, G. O., and Payson, G. G., installed the officers elect. A majority of the officers have been long in service in other organizations, and, having experience and ability, will honor their respective positions. The installation services were very happily given, without the use of the ritual, and the Grand officers were given a unanimous vote of thanks by the Lodge. It seems now that this Lodge, which has had heavy drafts made on her in the formation of other Lodges, will increase its membership considerably this term.

The Installation at Yerba Buena, 14.

On Friday evening, 5th instant, the officers of Yerba Buena Lodge, No. 14, were installed by J. D. Thompson, D. D. G. M., assisted by the following P. M. W. acting as officers of the Grand Lodge: C. L. Houghton as P. G. M., C. H. McCurry as G. F., J. G. Severance as G. O. and A. V. Thompson as G. Guide. The ceremony was impressively performed without the use of the ritual. The officers for this worthy subordinate have had experience and will prove themselves worthy to follow in the steps of their honored predecessors. At the close of the ceremonies a recess was had and the havanas passed around and a general good time had.

Spartan Lodge, 36

Deputy Danforth, with Bros. Jordan as G. G., Whitaker as P. G. M. W., installed the officers of Spartan, No. 36, on Friday evening, 5th instant. The ritualistic work was given from memory in a way that called forth several compliments from visitors and members. Bro. Wilson, the M. W. elect, assumed his duties like a veteran, and brought out expressions from the officers elect and visitors that were very interesting, closing with appropriate and happy remarks by himself that made the meeting attractive and pleasant.

Triumph Lodge, 180.

This young Lodge, only two years of age, has a membership of 170. The election of officers took place at the meeting of December 26th, when the Master Workman degree was conferred on one candidate in the presence of 70 members of the Lodge. The election passed off quietly, electing the Recorder, Bro. Ray, and Receiver, Bro. Nicolayson, for the fifth term. No sickness reported and none out of work. Triumph is one of our many happy families.

Unity Lodge, 27.

The record that this pioneer has made during the past term is very flattering to its members, as no Lodge in this State has exceeded it in proportionate gain in membership. It appears now that the present term will outstrip the last one. On January 10th two applications for the degrees, two by card, and six candidates received the J. W. degree. Unity has a membership of 270, having a gain of 31 during the last term.

ALAMEDA.

Occidental Lodge, 6—Letter from Brother Munce.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—On Friday evening, the 5th instant, Occidental Lodge, No. 6, held its regular meeting, a large number of the brethren being present. The Junior and Master Workman degrees were conferred in the usual correct and impressive manner for which our M. W., Bro. J. F. Hammer, is so justly celebrated.

After the initiation Bro. J. J. Schutz our worthy District Deputy, assisted by Bros. T. J. Carothers P. M. W., and R. Stephens P. M. W., proceeded to install the officers elect. The installation ceremony was performed in a solemn and impressive manner, the Grand officers setting a good example, which the officers of this Lodge will do well to follow.

At the conclusion of the installation the District Deputy, in the name and behalf of Occidental Lodge, presented the retiring M. W., Bro. J. F. Hammer, with a beautiful Past Master's badge. His speech on this occasion was good, and called forth hearty and long continued applause from the brethren.

Bro. P. M. Hammer responded in a neat and appropriate speech. Under the head of "Good of the Order, Bro. Stephens, P. M. W. reported a brother in distress, and we had an opportunity given to us to put into practice the fourth object or principle of our beloved Order, which we did by appointing a special committee with instructions to draw upon our Receiver to the amount of $30 for the relief of the brother; truly a good act with which to begin a new term. The District Deputy then introduced our "Mutual Friend, the havanas, after which a general good time followed. Speeches were in order. Good ones, and to the point were made by P. M. W. Schutz, Hammer, Hawkett, Parrie, Hoyt, Carothers, Woelfel and Stephens. Each of the new officers had a little to say on this happy occasion. At a late hour the Lodge was closed, the brethren departing well pleased with the labors of the evening.

Our Lodge has shown its appreciation of the zeal, integrity and devotion to duty of our Recorder, Receiver and Financier by not only re-electing them to their important positions, but by giving them the unanimous vote of the Lodge for an increase of their salaries. With such faithful and efficient officers on my right and left, I enter on the duties of M. W. of this Lodge with a feeling of confidence to which I would otherwise be a stranger. May the present term upon which our beloved Order has just entered be a prosperous and a happy one throughout the entire State, and may thousands of good and true men be brought underneath the broad and glorious shield of Protection.

Following is a list of the officers for the present term: P. M. W., J. F. Hammer; M. W., John Munce; F., D. S. Moulton; O., F. R. Weigle; Recorder (re-elected), W. G. Hawkett; Receiver (re-elected), N. B. Hoyt; Financier (re-elected), Wm. Parrie; Guide, G. H. Garthorne; I. W., A. Gibson; O. W. (re-elected), T. H. McDonald; Representatives to Grand Lodge, Past Masters R. Stephens, W. G. Hawkett and Wm. Parrie.

Our Lodge meets every Tuesday night, at Kohler's Hall, corner Chester and Seventh streets, where we will be glad to extend a hearty welcome to all Master Workmen who may favor us with their presence. Fraternally yours, JOHN MUNCE, M. W.

Brooklyn Lodge, 3

On the 28th of Dec. Brooklyn Lodge, No. 3, was favored by a good attendance of her members. Promptly at half past 7 o'clock, the M. W. called the Lodge to order. After the opening ceremony, on motion the rules were dispensed with, and opened under the head of election of officers with the following result: H. L. Farrier, M. W.; John Abraham, F.; Geo. Bryant, O.; Geo. Chase, Rdr.; L. J. Rector, Fin.; Jas. K. Smallman, Rvr.; E. W. Bradley, G.; B. F. Rector, I. W.; O. C. Kirk, O. W., and M. W. Fish, Med. Ex.

The Lodge then closed its session; the doors were opened, admitting invited guests, and their hall was soon filled. The M. W. then called the assembly to order and announced they would open under the head of a grand musical and literary entertainment. The first on the programme was singing the opening ode. The M. W., C. H. Townsend, in a brief but neat address, welcomed all present. Then followed a piano solo, exquisitely rendered by Miss Georgie Buddington. Quartet, by Misses Northey, Messrs. A. Hawthorne and D. Lawrence, was well rendered and heartily applauded. Song, by Miss Mary J. Sullivan, which was excellent. Miss Sullivan has a good voice and is a sweet singer.

Dr. M. W. Fish, Supreme Foreman, in a very interesting manner gave one of his usual choice efforts, briefly outlining the introduction of the Order, its objects and purposes, closing his remarks by presenting a beautiful P. M. W. badge to Bro. C. H. Townsend, who for the past 18 months has filled the chair as M. W. of Brooklyn Lodge, saying, "This beautiful badge is a token of your brothers' kind regards for services rendered them, and may it be but a type of that crown your Heavenly Father will give you if faithful to Him, when your labors are finished here below." Bro. Townsend responded feelingly, trusting that his life would be such as to merit a continuance of their favor, and at last to receive that heavenly reward.

Specialties were rendered by Andy Hampel, Andy is truly one of Brooklyn's lively actors. Song by Mrs. Adelaide Trethway was excellent and well received. Mr. Harry A. Melvin gave a humorous recitation. Song, by Miss Carrie Northy was good, and received merited applause. All united in singing the closing ode, and the M. W. then announced that refreshments for all were ready. Thus closed one of the most enjoyable entertainments given by No. 3. Much credit is due the Committee on Arrangements.

Ashler's Greeting.

Ashler Lodge, No. 165, gave a holiday entertainment at the Park Opera House, Park street, Alameda, on Friday evening, Dec. 29, 1882. Suspended over the stage were the words: "Ashler's Greeting, Welcome Friends. Ride si Sapio" (laugh if you are wise). The large hall was filled with a select and fashionable audience, consisting of members and their invited guests. The programme was original and well received. The first was an overture, "Lucia di Lammermoor," by Ashler's orchestra. Then came a vocal solo, "Wait till the Clouds Roll By," by Bro. W. D. Littleton, "Norine Maurcen," Bro. F. A. Harnden, "St. Patrick's Day Parade," Bro. H. B. Wheaton, "Hour of Sweet Repose," Bro. J. E. Baker, "Old Folks at Home," Bro. E. T. Barnes, "Over the Garden Wall," Bro. A. S. Cheminant. The laughable farce, "The Skidmore Guards," was then performed with the following cast: Bro. H. Wheaton as Captain, and Bros. E. Anthony, J. E. Baker, Fred. Bryant, A. S. Cheminant, R. Frank Clark, T. Collie, J. Dickson, C. A. Edson, J. W. Hand, F. A. Harnden, W. W. Haskell, J. W. Hayes, H. Michaels, C. F. Reynolds, P. B. McKay and J. B. Vosburg as guards. The performance called forth a hearty encore.

Part second was opened with an overture by Ashler's orchestra. The following are the musicians, with their respective positions and instruments: Bros. H. B. Wheaton and A. S. Cheminant, with tamborine and bones, acted as end men; Bro. W. D. Littleton, as middleman; Bro. J. A. Spink, banjo; Bro. R. Frank Clark, violin; Bro. F. A. Harnden, soloist; R. Gibbons, flute; E. T. Barnes, soloist; J. E. Baker, guitar; Mr. J. E. Duffy, violin, and Bro. H. E. Kaehler presided at the piano.

Then came musical cupids, Bros. Littleton, Barnes, Hand and Wheaton. The audience would not be quieted until they appeared several times. Baritone solo, "The Wolf," Bro. R. Frank Clark. Olympian sports, "Reynolds," Bros. Nahl and Reynolds. This was a laughable burlesque. Banjo solo, Bro. J. A. Spink. Sword dance, Bro. P. B. McKay, which was an artistic effort. Duet, piano and violin, "Fantaisie sur le Pirate," T. Duffy and Bro. H. E. Kaehler. "The Fairies Dream," ballet, Bros. Wheaton and Cheminant. A burlesque on the ballet.

The committee having engaged the services of Rhind's Quadrille Band, of San Francisco, Bro. J. W. C. Rhind, of Hercules Lodge, No. 53, leader, dancing was in indulged until an early hour. Bro. P. W. Barton acted as floor manager. The Lodge and the Order in general may well congratulate itself on having such enterprising and sociable Lodges as Ashler, No. 165. C. H.

Eden Lodge, 204, San Lorenzo.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—It is now 15 months since we organized Eden Lodge, No. 204, with 48 members on our roll, and at present we hold the fort with 54 M. W. degree members in good standing. In the meantime one brother withdrew and joined another Lodge; one was granted a final card; death called one from our midst, and two got astray. This certainly does not show a very rapid growth, but considering that three miles each side of us are flourishing Lodges, we have reason to thank our lucky star in accomplishing so much. Last Saturday, 6th inst., the officers elected for the present term were installed by our newly appointed D. D. G. M. W.; Bro. E. O. Webb, who performed his duty in a creditable and dignified manner. He was assisted by Bro. Sturtevant, of San Leandro Lodge No. 12, and Bro. Cunningham, of Hayward Lodge, No. 18, they acting as grand officers.

Our officers with the exception of the Overseer and the two Watchmen were re-elected. The Recorder, Financier and Receiver are now entering on their third term. On the night in question it was very pleasing to behold so many friendly and jovial faces among our visiting brethren hailing from our neighbor Lodges. It seemed they had brought with them an abundance of merriment and good nature, especially for this occasion, which gave vent when the "Good of the Order" was called for. Catching the opportunity, Bro. H. W. Meek, our estimable M. W., announced that there was yet something which awaited our attention and presence in a neighboring hall, and after the Lodge was closed in due form all hands repaired to the place, where on arrival every one present bore a smile, in consideration of the good things that greeted their eyes. After a short duration, having first satisfied the inner man, singing followed next in order, of which we had a variety. I can assure you, from a minstrel love song to "John Brown's Body," and from the most patriotic to the German "Lauterbach," where his strum was lost. Everybody was alike in good humor, and that such a jolly good time may soon come again is the wish of all who participated. Fartherly, yours,

Installation of Officers of Keystone, 64.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—On Tuesday evening, January 3d, I visited Keystone Lodge, No. 64, and found quite a number of brethren present on that occasion. The principal business of the evening was the installation of officers for the ensuing term. At the proper time the District Deputy, Bro. Charles E. Alden, and his assistants proceeded to install the officers. The ceremony of installation was gone through with in a manner which reflects the highest credit upon the District Deputy and his officers, the whole being given from memory and in a very impressive manner, neither of the officers having occasion to refer to the Ritual during the entire installation. This is as it should be. Example is better than precept, and a Deputy who thoroughly qualifies himself in the discharge of his duties can demand the same careful study and accuracy from the officers he may be called upon to install. District No. 2 has good reason to be proud of their Deputy. From the ability displayed by the newly installed officers in their new positions on that evening I conclude that Keystone has been very fortunate in her selection for the present term, and have no doubt whatever of her success with such officers at the helm. May she indeed prove a true and tried "Keystone" in the noble fraternal arch of Workmen of which she forms a part. May all her deliberations be characterized by harmony; may peace and prosperity reign within her walls. Visiting brethren wishing to spend a pleasant evening cannot do better than give Keystone a visit, where they will always be sure of having a good time and a hearty welcome, and go from the Lodge room feeling as I did, well satisfied with my visit. Fraternally, yours, A VISITING BROTHER.

Installation and Entertainment at Dixon.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—A few words from this thriving village may not be out of place. The members of Dixon Lodge, No. 50, got up a grand entertainment which took place on Wednesday evening the 3d instant. The Lodge met at an early hour. The business of the Lodge was transacted quickly. The following officers were installed, by G. M. W., W. H. Barnes, assisted by Bro. Mowder: Jas. Frizell, M. W.; George King, F.; P. R. Willot, O.; J. S. Brown, Rdr.; J. B. Barnes, Fin.; I. W. Colton, Rvr.; D. Osten, Guide; Wm. Ilgner, J. W.; Chris. Gleason, O. W. After the installation the doors were thrown open to an audience composed of Workmen, invited guests and their families. Following is the programme: Quartet by Messrs. Wallace and Frizell, Misses Saxton and Jones. Address, Bro. W. H. Barnes, Grand Master, whose remarks were full of interesting facts and pathos intermixed with humor and witticisms that were very pleasing and interesting to the audience. The brethren and people of Dixon generally have a high appreciation of Bro. Barnes and think he is just the right man in the right place. The literary entertainment concluded with quartet by Messrs. Frizell and Wallace, Misses Saxton and Jones.

After the conclusion of the entertainment in the Lodge-room the Bros. with their families and invited guests repaired to the dining-rooms of Bro. P. R. Willot, where they sat down to a sumptuous repast of the good things that Bro. Willot is noted for providing on occasions of this kind. After numerous toasts made and responded to by the brethren we adjourned at a late hour, all feeling that the evening had been socially and well spent. Great enthusiasm prevailed during the whole of the evening, especially among the ladies, as Bro. Barnes in his remarks led them to see that the Lodge of A. O. U. W. was gotten up for their especial benefit, and not simply a place for the men to go to get away from home. Bro. Barnes also assured the young unmarried men that they should join the Order, for said he, no one need be afraid to launch out into matrimonial life who held a policy in the Lodge of A. O. U. W., also that no sensible old man would refuse a young man the hand of his daughter who had been so careful to provide for future wants. Fraternally, yours,

Entertainment and Banquet at Redwood

Redwood Lodge, No. 25, gave a grand reception to G. M. W., Wm. H. Barnes, at Redwood City, on Friday evening, 5th inst. The A. O. U. W. are very thriving at this place, and on this occasion an attendance to the number of 200 couple were present. The officers were installed in the Lodge room early in the evening, by the G. M. Workman, and the secret work was exemplified, after which the Workman marched to Germania hall, where a large delegation of ladies and gentlemen from the surrounding country had assembled. G. M. W., Barnes, with D. D. G. M., George W. Lovie, P. M. W., Fisher, P. M. W., J. Spafford, and M. W., S. C. Leahy, were escorted to the large hall, where an address was listened to which was full of interesting facts, and pathos, intermixed with humor, and witticisms that were very pleasing.

At 12 all repaired to the Grand hotel where a banquet was given in honor of the newly elected officers. The table, which was served with all the delicacies that a skilled caterer could procure and furnish, was surrounded by a large number of the members of the Order and a few invited guests. The evening was pleasantly passed in conversation and anecdote, with mutual felicitations on the prosperity of the society which now numbers over 15,000 members in good standing. Dancing was resumed in the larger hall until an early hour. The music was obtained from San Jose. It was remarked by all that this was one of the largest and most select assemblies of gentlemen and ladies ever brought together in the place. The following were the committee: Floor Manager—P. H. McEvoy. Committee on Arrangements—S. C. Leahy, George H. Buck, J. C. Murry. Reception Committee—George H. Buck, Jas. Stafford, S. C. Leahy, Albert Harrison, J. C. Murry. Reported by C. C. H.

Entertainment of Ukiah, 33.

The members of Ukiah Lodge, No. 33, their families and invited friends, spent a most delightful evening last Thursday at the hall, where a literary and musical programme was rendered and afterwards at the Grand hotel, where about 75 partook of a sumptuous collation. Bro. H. A. Peabody presided. Bros. Tucker and Gunn, Mrs. Tucker and Mrs. Bransford sang four pieces of choice and appropriate music. Bros. McBride, Price and Peabody recited sentimental and semi-comic pieces. Bro. Ambros read a really laughable story about the "Bad Boy," while Bro. Rogers, Grand Foreman, entered into and gave quite a portion of the history—birth, progress and present status—of the Order. He spoke of the good work it is accomplishing. After the remarks by Grand Foreman Rogers, which were well received, the evening's enjoyment was ended by singing the Closing Ode.

The collation at the Grand presented a truly animated scene, and at its close there was a general expression of satisfaction, and what was better, an oft-repeated wish that the Lodge here might continue on the line marked out by this step and give many more entertainments of like character.

Ukiah Lodge has elected a good set of officers for the present term, and, following the rule long since adopted, Bro. Carpenter will represent us in the Grand Lodge. With the hope that the present year may prove a blessed one for the entire Order I have the honor to sign myself fraternally yours, in C. H. and P., H. A. PEABODY.

Lookout Lodge, 211.

EDITOR WATCHMAN:—Having been requested by my Lodge to write a few items for your estimable journal, in answer to your request, I submit the following: The seed of the A. O. U. W. was sown and caused to germinate here by a Master Workman of Woodland, three years ago. This was done by circulating copies of your paper. The practical workings and beneficent principles of the Order were effective, but potential, until January 12, 1882, when Bro. T. B. Sanders, of Laurel Lodge, conferred the insignia on 18 good, true and enthusiastic citizens of this place. Our number was small, but the Charity, Hope and Protection remained the same. We have now grown to 21 industrious and useful members, and we expect accessions next meeting. Our members are prompt with dues and assessments, and our meetings are very enjoyable. We have had no public demonstration yet, but contemplate such in the near future. We are building a new hall, and have it about completed. It will cost approximately $1,000 or $1,200, which, owing to the cheapness of lumber, makes it a very creditable edifice. With many hosannas and te deums for the prosperity of the Order, I remain, yours, in C. H. and P., W. D. MORRIS, P. M. W.

Bro. J. F. C. Johnson, Recorder of Wilmington Lodge, No. 130, under date of Jan. 1st, writes: "Our Lodge meets now in the new Masonic hall, on Canal street between First and Second streets. It is a beautiful and commodious hall, and quite an ornament to our little town. We are now 55 M. W., and we are in a flourishing condition, thanks to our officers in general. We have paid during the year out of the General Fund, most all the second assessments that have been levied during the year." We are glad to receive this cheering report from No. 130, and hope it will continue to prosper.

In tallation of Officers, Los Gatos, 76.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—On the evening of the 6th inst., the officers of Los Gatos Lodge, No. 76, were installed by A. B. Hamilton, D. D. G. M. W., assisted by S. B. Caldwell, acting as P. G. M., and J. P. Jarman, as Grand Guide. The installing officers were from San Jose and performed the ceremony well, making the occasion one of interest. At the close of the installation service an abundant repast was served in the hall, and all present enjoyed themselves exceedingly. I think you may safely count on Los Gatos Lodge numbering 100 members ere the close of the present year. The following are the officers installed: J. L. Berry, M. W.; L. L. Majors, F.; C. A. ### The Great Snow Storm.

An event which will linger long in memory, and be recited to wondering children a generation hence, will be the great snow storm of Dec. 31, 1882. Never since the occupation of the State by the Americans has such a storm visited the coast and valley regions of central California. There have been on two or three occasions slight falls of snow which have come and gone within the compass of a few hours, but a snow-fall of from four to six inches in depth, and lying for about 12 hours on low ground, is something wholly new to American eyes in California. The storm was borne upon a strong northeast wind, and accompanied by a chill which penetrated houses not built for wintry weather and not furnished with adequate heating appliances. Many groups might have been seen huddled around semi-tropical fireplaces, trying in vain to meet an Eastern temperature with a California fire.

Out of doors the landscape was clothed in the white mantle which many Californians had not seen for 33 years, and of which their children knew but by the engraver's or painter's representations. The disposition of the younger Californians to rush into snow was irresistible, successfully attacked. The appearance of a Chinaman on the street was a signal for all hands to pitch in, and some of these fellows made 2:12 time along the streets with hat in hand.

The Mongolians had a chance to get even when an alarm called the engines and a crowd of spectators to Chinatown. Then and there the Asiatic dweller pelted the native American with a just vengeance. The cars of the California, Union and Sutter street cable roads stopped running late in the afternoon. In some instances it was deemed unsafe to descend the steep hills, and again, the drivers, conductors and passengers were exposed to the attack of the snowballers. On the Union street line the snowballing was vicious and reckless. The Clay street and Geary street cars made trips on schedule time, but the attaches had a rough deal.

The trees and shrubs in the parks and cemeteries presented a beautiful appearance. All were heavily laden with a mantle of snow, through the opening in which little bits of verdure peeped here and there. The weight of snow bent gracefully the boughs of the pines and cypresses. Small plants with tender shoots, stems and branches, such as geraniums and fuschias, suffered considerably, the load of snow breaking them down.

Both in city and country rude sleighs were improvised out of wagon boxes with board

American vs. English Nailmakers.

Discussing the prospects of the nail trade, a Birmingham (Eng.) correspondent of the London Ironmonger says: Foreign competition in this branch is relaxed by the action of American nailmakers, who have advanced prices from 15 cents to 20 cents per keg. These advanced rates, which are much above those demanded by English makers, have of course greatly improved the chances of English nails in Canada, Australia and other neutral markets, though many even in our own colonies appear to be strongly biased still in favor of the American article, owing to the greater uniformity of quality. It is not denied that English manufacturers can produce as good or even a better nail than the Americans, but they do not always do so; and the merchants who conduct the trade are apt in buying to sacrifice higher considerations to cheapness. The Americans are wiser in their generation, and frankly recognize the impossibility of competing with English makers in cheapness; they strive to excel in quality, uniformity and excellence of patterns. On the whole, these tactics have been of great service to them, and have given them a footing in many markets from which it will be no easy matter to dislodge them.

Statistics show that over 85,000 kegs of

Electro-Generative Fuel.

At a recent meeting of the French Association for the Advancement of Science, Dr. Brard of La Rochelle, read a paper before the physics section in which he described a new method of generating electricity by the combustion of a peculiar kind of fire-slab. This slab consists of a brick of carbonaceous matter and a brick of nitrate of soda or nitrate of potash, placed together, but separated by a thin sheet of asbestos paper, and both enveloped in a wrapper of asbestos. The carbon brick is formed of about 100 grams of coal-dust kneaded into a paste with tar or molasses, and shaped in a mold by heat. The mold gives the brick a pitted surface above and perforates it with holes through and through from the upper to the under side. Strips of brass or copper are also imbedded in the under side of the brick to serve as an electrode for the carbon pole of the electro-generative element. The other brick consists of a mixture of three parts ashes and one part nitrate of potash or soda melted together and poured upon the pitted surface of the carbon, which, however, is first covered with a layer of asbestos paper. Strips of brass are also imbedded in this compound to serve as an electrode. The slab thus formed constitutes a generator of electricity when wrapped in asbestos and and many a little tot came crying to her mother with lamentations because the pretty snow hurt her fingers. Older children, and even those of maturer age, embraced the opportunity for a frolic, and there were probably more snow-balls thrown in California during a few hours than would suffice an Eastern State for an entire winter. Both in city and country, so far as the snowy dispensation extended, there was a quick recourse to wintry sports. In San Francisco everybody was snowballed. Neither age, sex, color or condition was respected. The Chief of Police himself got a swift ball under the ear from a young woman on Larkin street. The drivers, conductors and passengers on the cable roads were pelted without mercy. In many instances passengers on the cars or dummy provoked the assault by throwing balls at pedestrians on the sidewalk. Finally it became, in the language of the street, the "proper caper" to fire at the dummy drivers. The conductors took refuge inside of the car and the engineers crouched below the seat backs to escape the fusillade. Not infrequently the cars were boarded and snow thrown into the faces of the inmates without regard to sex or age. Many car windows were broken, as also windows of stores and private houses. Few pedestrians escaped being targets of the fun-loving boys. Umbrellas afforded some protection, but while protecting the front, the rear was often runners, and the novelty of a sleigh-ride led many to brave the storm.

The storm of snow seems to have extended southward along the coast to Santa Cruz county and in the San Joaquin Valley to Merced county, although on its southerly limits the fall was not so protracted as around the bay. While the snow was covering the ground in the central and northern areas of the State a generous rain visited the lower coast counties and the interior, and thus no section was slighted. The effect of the low temperature which preceded the storm does not yet fully appear, but so far as we have heard and seen, the great meteorological demonstration has been far less injurious to vegetation than the quiet but determined frosts of the three preceding years. On the whole the storm has proved a popular diversion, and in some cases an economical measure, for many young Californians who have been teasing their fathers and husbands for an opportunity to enjoy the "glorious winter of the East" are now quite satisfied with last Sunday's sample, and will be content to forego an expensive journey.

HIGH PRICED HORSES.—A cable dispatch from London states that at a sale of thoroughbreds yesterday, Isonomy brought 9,000 guineas, Seesaw 1,400 guineas, and Geologist 1,150, American nails and spikes were exported last year. They went to over 40 different countries, including England, Ireland and Scotland. Chili took the most, 1,806,500 lbs.; Mexico next, 1,321,512 lbs., and Cuba third, 1,269,120 lbs. The British possessions in Africa took 581,987 lbs. The new departure in this manufacture, of making nails from mild steel instead of iron, will no doubt greatly influence the quality of American nails, and possibly increase the foreign demand for them.

IMPROVEMENT IN WATCH HANDS.—A device in the arrangement of watch hands has been patented, whereby the traveler may see at a glance the time, both at the place he is leaving and whatever local time he may wish to keep at a distance. The value to the traveling public of such a service is apparent in the facility it affords for making connection between trains run at different times, etc. The improvement consists merely in a convenient device whereby a thin hand may be placed upon the dial without any change in the movements of the watch.

THE MINT IN SAN FRANCISCO is the largest in the world—twice as large as the one in Philadelphia, and three times the size of any in Europe, having $24,000,000 worth of coin and bullion stored away in its vaults.

placed in a furnace or fierce fire. In such an element the carbon forms the negative plate and is oxidized just as zinc is oxidized in the ordinary voltaic cell, the nitrate of potash being the oxidizing substance. The slab becomes a thermo-chemical battery, and Mr. Brard states that an electric current is obtained strong enough to actuate an ordinary electric bell. By connecting up several of these elementary slabs after the manner of a voltaic battery, a more powerful current is the result, three or four cells being sufficient to decompose water.

THE PROTECTIVE QUESTION.—A great deal of needless misunderstanding is occasioned in protection-free-trade discussions by not understanding terms and phrases. A high tariff is not necessarily a protective tariff, nor a low one for revenue. Protection is an end to which a tariff is the means, and this end may be secured, sometimes by a high tariff, sometimes by a low tariff, sometimes by no tariff at all. An exceedingly high tariff may not be obstructive after it has ceased to be protective. The duty on horse-shoe nails, for example, is very high and practically inoperative, but it is in no sense obstructive. A high tariff, when inoperative, is also obstructive only when it prevents competition and makes monopoly possible.—Boston Com. Bul.

PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN.

Issued on the 1st and 15th of each month.

Favorable to Advertisers.

By consolidating the large subscription lists of the Pacific Workman with the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN our advertisers gain an unusually great advantage. We doubt if any one weekly newspaper has ever been circulated to as many different readers on this coast, as have been served heretofore by the Workman and WATCHMAN together. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns cities of the coast.

We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

OFFICIAL RECOMMENDATION.

Resolutions adopted by Grand Lodge of Cal., Feb. 3, 1881
WHEREAS, the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, the pioneer A. O. U. W. advocate on this coast, without official aid, has long rendered able and valuable services for the good of our glorious organization, we earnestly recommend that our Lodges and the brethren individually patronize the WATCHMAN as liberally as circumstances will justify.

A Grave Peril.

In the midst of life we are in death. Joy is followed by sorrow, fancied security is followed by peril, fearful and desperate. In the last issue of the WATCHMAN we felicitated ourselves that all the serious troubles of our beloved Order were overpast, and that henceforth the stormy seas that betimes have threatened to swallow up our craft, that has to the present time so manfully outtrode every adverse gale, would be calm and still, and its onward course be undisturbed by any considerable warring of the elements. But our fond anticipations are ruthlessly dashed to the ground. The sleeping volcano in New York that we thought well nigh extinguished, seems about to burst forth with resistless fury.

We are not an alarmist. We have no conceiving desire to create a sensation. But we should be derelict in duty did we fail to point out dangers ahead when we see them rear their horrid front.

For four years the jurisdiction of New York has been leavened with the leaven of discontent and revolution. She has had just causes of complaint, but no more than many other jurisdictions that have never dreamed of revolution. These wrongs were righted at the last session of the Supreme Lodge so far as could be done by that body, so that now where complaint is made it is made without any sufficient reason. But men bent on revolution are not placated by removing the alleged cause of grievance. They can only be satisfied with revolution.

Such appears to be the condition of feeling that possesses the official heads of the Grand Lodge of New York, and such the feeling of many of the prominent lay members of that body. We sorrowfully say these things, but alas, we can no longer doubt the correctness of this conclusion. The evidence in our possession is conclusive and indisputable on this point. The revolutionists intend to separate the Grand Lodge of that State from the Supreme Lodge, and as a preliminary step in that direction have prepared and printed constitutions and by-laws for the government of the Grand Lodge and subordinate Lodges of the jurisdiction, in which the authority of the Supreme Lodge is utterly and entirely ignored. This is not the work of a few malcontents in their private capacity, but in the capacity of a Commission of Revision, appointed by the Grand Lodge at its last session, to report a revised constitution for the consideration of that body at its session in February next.

The adoption of the report of this Committee in its present form would practically sever the relations between the Grand Lodge of New York and the Supreme Lodge. Will it be adopted? Not if consciences in New York Workmen are stronger than selfishness. Not if fraternity is stronger than avarice. Not if the ablest and most loyal Workmen in the great State can compass the defeat in its design. God grant that this they may be able to do.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this, the oldest of the beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

Lodges That Have Not Reported.

Notwithstanding the fact that early in December we sent to each Lodge in the jurisdiction a printed blank with return envelope, for list of officers elect for the present term, more than one-third of the number has not yet been returned. We go to press this issue without making any changes in the directory for 1883.

The following Lodges have not sent us in the report of their officers elected for the present term as requested: Nos. 5, 11, 16, 24, 31, 33, 35, 36, 37, 39, 41, 42, 46, 48, 52, 56, 57, 61, 65, 67, 72, 81, 84, 88, 89, 91, 99, 100, 101, 104, 105, 106, 110, 111, 113, 117, 123, 125, 128, 129, 132, 133, 139, 142, 143, 146, 152, 155, 156, 157, 160, 164, 165, 168, 172, 174, 176, 178, 182, 186, 188, 189, 193, 195, 196, 197, 199, 201, 202, 203, 207, 208, 209, 211, 212, 213, 216, 218, 219, 220. We hope these Lodges will send in their reports to us before the next issue. The directory will be corrected for the issue of February 1st, as far as the reports are received by us, and our desire is to have it complete.

Probable Cause of the New York Trouble.

We opine the fundamental difficulty in New York comes from regarding the A. O. U. W. as a mere business concern, managed ostensibly on the broad principles of fraternity, but really on a basis of narrow selfishness, like ordinary public corporations. The obligations taken at the altar are looked upon as the mouthing of formal but meaningless words, binding neither upon the conscience nor honor of those who see fit to abjure them. We have never known disloyalty where fraternity was exalted in the Order, nor loyalty that could be relied on where fraternity is sneered at and debased. We have an end of benevolence as our aim. The means employed to secure the end is fraternity. Discard the means and the end will as surely fail of being accomplished as that effect will come without a cause. Brother Workmen, remember that the moment you forget the solemn obligations you have taken, that moment you are dead to the Order, so far as any strength is concerned that should come as your membership. You are a dead weight and a damage, and the sooner it is rid of you the better. A whole organization of such material would be like the apples of Sodom that crumble to pieces at the touch.

TRAVELING brethren should consult the directory of subordinate Lodges and should always have one in their possession. They will find it very convenient to refer to when they visit any of the interior towns, because it will give them the night of meeting of the Lodge and the name of the presiding officer and Secretary, to either of whom they can make themselves known, and by visiting the Lodge pass a pleasant evening.

One of New York's Staunch Workmen.

Among the foremost of loyal Workmen, of New York, stands Leroy Andrus, Supreme Trustee, whose residence is at Silver Creek. We give the residence of this noble champion of our Order, so that any one who may desire to strengthen his hands by words of encouragement may do so. Our Past Grand Masters all know of what sterling stuff Bro. Andrus is made. Some of them may be able to put a few missiles into his good right hand with which to slay these Philistines. We do not know that he will need any outside support, moral or otherwise, and hope he may not, but the chances are otherwise, in the light of our knowledge of the strength and devilish malignity of the conspiracy against the integrity of the Order. In half a month the battle comes.

How much support the gallant defender will have at home we have no means of knowing, but it is fair to presume it will be considerable. Nerved by the consciousness of defending a righteous cause, the Defenders of the Faith will contest the ground inch by inch. If they fall and our altars are overturned, they will, no doubt, gather the decimated forces and organize the loyal elements anew and raise high the banner of Fealty and Fraternity.

The Deputy G. M.'s Southern Trip.

The Deputy Grand Master, E. F. Loud, paid a visit to the Lodges of the Southern counties of the State. He reports the Lodges in a prosperous condition. The Lodges of San Luis Obispo were visited on the 27th ult., the meeting being held in the Lodge room of Olive Lodge, No. 212. The members of Higuera Lodge, No. 194, were present. The Deputy Grand Master exemplified the unwritten work, and made a short address. Remarks were also made by District Deputy Nichols.

On the 29th ult., Bro. Loud visited Santa Barbara Lodge, No. 172, representatives from Ventura Lodge, No. 173, and Los Alamos Lodge, No. 219, were present. The degrees were conferred on two candidates. Remarks were made by Deputy Grand Master Loud, District Deputy Wetherill, of Ventura county, Bro. Lucas, of Los Alamos, and M. W. Miller, of Santa Barbara. Bro. Loud is much pleased with his visit and the way he was received by the brethren.

THE new term commences auspiciously in every respect. As a feature that is worthy of notice, our organization has enlisted and is enlisting our best citizens into its membership. Our officers from the commencement, including our Grand and subordinate Lodge officers have been men of experience, executive ability and high social standing. The officers selected in the subordinate Lodges of this city have commenced their work like veterans, and each Lodge has had from two to seven candidates on the second meeting night of this term.

Letter from the Grand Master Workman.

The following letter from the Grand Master Workman, in relation to letters having the nature of a circular, or pertaining to matters liable affect the whole Order, is self-explanatory:

OFFICE G. M. W., A. O. U. W. OF CAL.,
San Francisco, Jan. 8, 1883.

WATCHMAN PUBLISHING CO.:—I thank you for the supervisory care that referred back to a Lodge a communication, for my approval, ere you published it, as said communication, in my judgment, is not a matter for public print, at least, not at present.

Lodges and individual brethren should be very careful when sending to public journals any proceedings occurring during Lodge sessions, for these are private matters, not to be made public except by the consent of the proper authorities.

Owing to the fact that installations, visits, remarks, presentations, etc., are "wrote up" and published, without objection, some have obtained the idea that it is allowable to criticize publicly the proceedings of a Lodge, a committee, or an individual, or that even a Lodge can publicly announce its proceedings on any subject. The danger of this was so evident that the Grand Lodge of this State adopted a law (see Article 1, Sec. 16, Laws of G. L. of Cal.), that all circulars intended for general circulation among members of the Order, whether emanating from a Lodge or individual member, should be approved by the G. M. W. before circulated; and how much more essential it is that a supervisory care should be exercised over that which goes to the world at large.

All matters calculated to create dissension and discord, to make public differences that may exist in subordinates, or expose matters pertaining to the privacy of the Lodge room, or of a political, sectarian or religious character, are not subjects proper for Lodge or individual members (as such) to put into print of their own volition; and while I would not desire to deter any brother from writing for the press, I would advise that the effort always be for peace, progress and harmony. Let differences be settled where they should be, in private. Should glaring wrongs or injustice be done to any, we have the proper tribunals to appeal to; those tribunals are not the public prints. Fraternally,

WM. H. BARNES, G. M. W.

WHILE we draw no invidious comparisons between the deputies in the interior as compared with those of this city in their work and labor during their term of office, we deem it a meet and proper commendation to the several deputies of San Francisco, as also to the Grand Master for his selection, to record the fact that each one has done his duty efficiently and thoroughly as faithful officers.

The Benefit of the Lodge Directory.

We copy the following pertinent and sensible paragraph in regard to the importance of societies publishing a complete directory of their subordinate Lodge and Council meetings in the society papers from the Ohio A. O. U. W. Journal:

"Some of the Lodges do not seem to appreciate the value of the Lodge directory. It is of incalculable benefit to the Order at large. Persons not members of the Order look to the directory to ascertain how many Lodges there are, and where they are. From the Lodge directory they receive impressions as to the prosperity of the Order. Again, if a person, not a member of the Order, becomes interested in the Order he will be enabled, by the aid of the directory, to learn to whom to apply for further information as to the Order, and how to become a member. If you hand your Journal to a neighbor to read he will judge of the prosperity of the Order at large and of your Lodge in particular by the appearance or non-appearance of its card in the Lodge directory. Certainly no Lodge can object to the rates offered for publishing the cards."

To traveling brothers a complete directory is a great accommodation, and the Lodges attended by some of the intelligent traveling visitors will frequently be well paid by the association and good words offered by the stranger yet brother, from abroad.

HEAD-CHEESE.—The time of the year is at hand for head-cheese, sausages, and all such things; for that reason recipes for making will not be out of place. After the heads have been properly trimmed (i. e., minus eyes, ears, and nose), and soaked in cold water two days at least to extract the blood, wash them in warm water and put on to boil; cook them in plenty of water till the bones drop out, then set off to cool, pouring all the liquid into one vessel and the meat in another; as soon as cool enough pick out every bone with your fingers, then chop the meat fine, the same as though making hash, season with plenty of pepper, salt, and pulverized sage. It is an improvement for those who are fond of high seasoning to chop up a good large red pepper with the meat, and put just a pinch of ground spice and cloves in with the pepper and salt. Skin all the grease you can off the liquid and put it and the meat back in the pot; let all boil together a few minutes, then pour in a pan to cool. If there are pigs' feet to pickle, boil at the same time and put the water they are cooked in in the head-cheese.—German Town Telegraph.

Grand Recorder's Department.

Headquarters of Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Rooms 40 and 41, St. Ann's Building, corner of Eddy and Powell, San Francisco.
H. C. PRATT, G. R.

At the time of writing this some 80 semi-annual reports are not in. They are needed to complete the roll of new officers. Several monthly reports are also conspicuous by their absence. They are needed at once to make returns from to the Supreme Lodge. Recorders will please make a note of these facts and act accordingly.

RECORDERS, FINANCIERS and RECEIVERS who have served in their respective positions for three years are eligible to receive the Grand Lodge degree. They should send in to this office certificates of such service and a recommendation to the Grand Lodge, and they will be placed on file for presentation to that body at its next session.

THIS question is almost daily asked: "Can a Recorder, Financier or Receiver who is eligible to receive the Grand Lodge degree be legally elected a Representative to the Grand Lodge?" This is properly a question for official decision by the Grand Master. I can only give my individual opinion. As under the law none but Past Master Workmen are eligible to election as Representatives to the Grand Lodge, except where a Lodge has not a sufficient number of Past Masters to fill its quota of Representatives, it would seem plain that Recorders, Financiers and Receivers, who are not Past Masters, but merely eligible to become such at the pleasure of the Grand Lodge, could not be legally chosen as Representatives. A case occurred, however, at the last session of the Grand Lodge, where a Recorder, eligible to receive the Grand Lodge degree, was chosen just previous to the session of that body, to fill a vacancy occasioned by the resignation of one of his Lodge. He presented his certificate of eligibility, received the Grand Lodge degree, and then produced his credentials as a representative, and was admitted as such. This precedent will probably govern the action of the Grand Lodge in like cases at future sessions.

Brief Lodge and Personal Notes.

San Mateo Lodge will hold a public reception on Monday evening 22d inst.

The brethren of Tulare City are to have a big blow out on the occasion of their anniversary, Jan. 31st.

The Lodges in Grass Valley are arranging for a good time on or about the 29th, when the G. M. W. is to make an official visit.

The Grand Master and District Deputies of this city have under consideration the subject of holding a grand mass meeting some time before the meeting of the Grand Lodge.

Saucelito Lodge, No. 20, will hold a public meeting on Thursday evening, the 25th instant, for which they are making great preparations. This Lodge was instituted January 25, 1878.

We are sorry to learn of the illness of Bro. J. H. Sturcke, Recorder of Butte City, No. 206, but are glad that he has recovered, and hope he will redeem his promise and let us hear from him.

Lodges of the Degree of Honor are about being started at Modesto, Turlock, Porterville and Middletown. The degree is becoming very popular, and several other Lodges are soon to follow.]

Bro. C. H. Townsend, of Brooklyn, No. 3, certainly deserved the handsome P. M. W.'s badge recently presented him by his Lodge, having served three consecutive terms in the M. W.'s chair.

San Fernando Lodge, No. 214, has an excellent record for the past term. None of the brethren have been delinquent either for dues or assessments. We wish this young Lodge many such terms.

Prof. H. C. Seib, organist of Fidelity Lodge, No. 136, has just returned from a trip to Europe and has resumed his duties in the Lodge, much to the gratification of his brother members and visitors to the Lodge.

Excelsior, 126, has adopted the policy of giving the third meeting night of each month to Golden Dawn, D. of H. This new feature is gaining ground and will be adopted by several more of the Lodges of this city.

The members of San Francisco Lodge, No. 4, will celebrate their sixth anniversary on the 24th inst. A district meeting will be held, and as old No. 4 is the mother of all the San Francisco Lodges a large attendance is sure to be had.

El Dorado Lodge, No. 118, at Placerville is in a flourishing condition, and is adding new names to its roll of members at nearly every meeting. The installation of officers took place on the 4th inst., and the J. W. and M. W. degrees were conferred.

The annual report of the Workmen's Guarantee Fund Association shows a membership of 1,502 on the first of the present month. It has been in existence just three years, and since its organization twenty-two assessments have been levied.

It is said that Ashler Lodge, No. 165, of Alameda, can boast the youngest Master Workman in the jurisdiction. Bro. Littleton, the newly installed presiding officer, is only 23 years of age. Can any Lodge show a younger executive?

From a recent letter we learn that Bro. N. H. Hapgood has succeeded in filling up the petition for a charter for a new Lodge at Johnsville. Bro. Hapgood has been elected by Quincy Lodge, No. 129, to represent it in the coming session of the Grand Lodge.

Bro. H. Lemmon, of Valley View Lodge, at Selma, Fresno county, was at Myrtle, No. 42, on the 5th inst. This Lodge is one of our young Lodges. It had the misfortune to have the Lodge room with the property burned on Dec. 9th. Bro. Lemmon believes that there will be a material increase in the membership of Valley View during the present year.

At the regular meeting of California Lodge, No. 1, held at their Lodge-room, Masonic hall, West Oakland, Tuesday evening, the 3d inst., the officers were installed. After the business of the Lodge was over the members were served with an excellent collation, to which ample justice was done, and at the close short speeches were made by several of the brothers, rendering the affair very pleasant and enjoyable.

We met Bro. R. M. Shackelford of San Benito Lodge, No. 96, situated at Hollister, recently. They have a membership of 85, and are taking in several new members each quarter. They have a degree of Honor attached, namely, Diamond, No. 5, Mrs. R. M. Shackelford, W. S. of H.; Mrs. W. F. Ellis, Sister Secretary. They meet the 2d and 4th Mondays in each month. They have a very large membership.

Bro. O. A. Dearing, P. M. W. of Olympic Lodge, No. 127, who for several years has had charge of the business of Miller & Richards' (now Palmer & Rey's) type-foundry, left this city a few days ago to establish a printing office in Los Angeles, and carried with him several mementos of the friendship and regard of those with whom he had business and other relations. He has the best wishes of the brethren of this city.

We are pleased to know that Grand Island Lodge, No. 116, at Grimes' Landing, is continuing in prosperity. Under date of Jan. 5th, Bro. D. O. Baker, Financier, writes: "Our Lodge is progressing nicely, and the members are of the choicest intellect of the vicinity. Please send us the WATCHMAN for the year ending Jan. 1, 1884. Give your account to H. G. Pratt, our G. R., and we will send money to him with our monthly report."

The members of Harmony Lodge, No. 9, of the city, believe in rewarding faithful and efficient officers by re-electing them. D. Cohen was elected for the fourth term as Financier at the last meeting in December. Bro. L. Johnson as Recorder and Bro. John R. Fishbeck as Receiver were also re-elected for the second term. Bro. Cohen has seen three and a half years' service as Financier, and his Lodge has selected him as one of the Representatives to the next session of the Grand Lodge.

We are pleased to learn of a neat testimonial recently made by the employees of the Main Street Iron Works to Bro. T. H. Macdonald, P. M. W. of Valley Lodge, No. 30. Bro. Macdonald has during the past year been foreman, and the occasion of the presentation was his resigning the position. The testimonial was a massive silver pitcher which bears the inscription, "T. H. Macdonald, from the employees of the Main Street Iron Works, Dec. 30, 1882." Mr. P. Barclay made the presentation speech. About a year ago Bro. Macdonald was the recipient of a fine gold watch from the same source.

The Electric Hair Tonic of Mrs. M. A. Reaves was a discovery by accident. It is a purely vegetable compound, and can be taken internally without injury to the system. From the testimonials of a large number of the well-known and leading citizens of this city and State who have used it, it is proven to be a remedial agent that will restore the hair in baldness, and prevent falling off of the hair. Contracts are made in writing. No cure no pay. Laboratory and office, 120 Golden Gate avenue.

Bro. J. P. LeCount, of LeCount Bros., 533 Market street, has gotten up what is termed the Financial Secretary's Cash Book, for the use of fraternal and social Orders. It is complete in its arrangement, and should be in every Lodge room. Financial Secretaries who have used them recommend them highly.

DRESSMAKING PARLORS.—Sister E. Stevenson's, 115 Kearny, over Keane & Co.'s store, rooms 7, 8 and 9, is one of the leading establishments of this city. Quite a number of the elegant suits for the first reception at Sacramento were manufactured at these parlors. Her terms are very reasonable.

Bro. F. JOE, LOCHNER, known as one of the best and most artistic tailors in this State, has opened a merchant tailor's establishment at 116 Post street.

St. Louis Smoke and Smokers.

DEAR WATCHMAN:—Yesterday, December 31st, I was in the office of the physician of this place, and, looking out of the window, my attention was attracted to the large number of passers by who were smoking. I counted 21 and found 20 enjoying the weed or 95%. I called the doctor's attention to the fact, and we commenced to calculate. We find that a healthy man in a normal condition ejects about 30 cubic inches of air at each expiration, and if he performs 18 respirations per minute, there is 30 times 18 or 540 cubic inches of air pregnated with the fumes of tobacco smoke every minute. Now, if he smokes four hours per day, and that is intensely moderate for a St. Louis smoker, 60 minutes to the hour—240 minutes. If, then, 540 cubic inches of air are thus pregnated in one minute, in four hours, of 60 minutes each, we have 240 times 5 or 32,400 cubic inches of air poisoned by each one of 95 inhabitants of this city. Suppose, then, there are 95,000 smokers in St. Louis, and each one is adding his individual quantum of smoke to this atmosphere, and that the city is 15 miles long and three miles wide, the daily cloud of tobacco smoke forms a cloud nine inches wide, the whole size of this area, which men, women and children are compelled to breathe. Now, if one cigar contains empyreumatic oil enough to poison two men, and it does, then how can the effect of this atmosphere on the human system be other than what it is? You will find in this city more pale, delicate looking females, more puny, sickly-looking children than in any city of the same size on this continent. This air produces irritation of the fauces, and predisposes children to diphtheritis, hence it prevails here. It weakens the lungs, hence pneumonia is abundant and fatal. This Grand Jurisdiction, with 8,000 of a membership, this last year had 19 assessments. If she had twice the number of members, it is reasonable to assume that she would have twice the assessments—38—or that the Supreme Lodge would have 14 or 16 assessments to pay for the Grand Jurisdiction of Missouri. Now, that this large mortality in the jurisdiction is due exclusively to the excessive use of tobacco, I am not prepared to say. But I will say this much, that there never was a Southern city stricken with yellow fever, in which the animal and paludal poison formed a cloud over the doomed place nine inches thick. If it irritates the pneumogastric nerve up to paralysis, which it does; if it attacks the red corpuscles in the blood and depresses them, which it does; if it impairs vital force to such an extent that the child of a smoking father never equals him in vitality, unless that vitality is supplied by the mother; if it has last year turned 70 little boys out of the schools of San Francisco as imbeciles, surely it is time for men to stop and think before they further poison the Lord's air.

An Unfortunate Fire.

Most conflagrations are unfortunate, but some particularly so when they destroy structures of public value and thus rob a multitude of people of comfort or enjoyment. Such was the fire at the Golden Gate Park, in San Francisco, on January 6th which destroyed a large part of the beautiful conservatory, one of the finest and largest in the country.

On the morning of Jan. 6th, the young man in charge of the heating apparatus took a short walk between 9 and 10 o'clock, and during his absence the fire broke out.

The central portion of the conservatory, under the great dome, was totally destroyed, but the wings of the building are but little damaged by the fire. The damage consists mostly of the breaking of a comparatively few panes of glass. There were perhaps 20 palms in the central portion of the building, worth from $50 to $100 each. Many of these will doubtless be saved by digging up the roots, well protected by earth, boxing them and keeping them in a house of proper temperature for six or eight months. Only a few of the orchids were destroyed, as they were in the westerly wing, and they are being protected by cloths until a temporary heating apparatus can be utilized. The Victoria Regia and other choice plants in the eastern wing will probably die.

The entire structure was 250 ft. long, constructed in oriental style, graceful in outline and highly ornamental. The main entrance, which was burned, was 25 ft. square, with a majolica fountain in the center. A terra cotta fountain of handsome design was in constant play among the mass of tropical foliage surrounding it. The conservatories covered an area of 15,000 ft., and contained over 10,000 case plants and greens. Thirty-five tons of glass and three tons of putty were used in the construction.

The loss by fire is difficult to estimate, but $15,000 would not cover the money expended, aside from the care and time required. The fire is believed to have caught from the heating apparatus.

The Oliver Case.

The decision of Judge Waymire in this case, and which was published in our columns Dec. 1, 1882, is important to all societies of a like character to the Legion of Honor, the one immediately concerned in it. The following statement by Grand Commander Wheeler of the causes leading to the adjudication of the claim before the civil courts, seems a clear and concise explanation of the case:

The misapprehensions concerning the above case have given the public mind wrong impressions relative to the animus of the American Legion of Honor. I therefore wish to state the facts as they transpired, that the case may have its proper influence.

First. The Medical Examiner's certificate was defective, and returned for correction.

Second. The correction was made and the document remailed, directed to the proper party at Boston.

Third. The mail failed to deliver the amended certificate at its destination, and hence it was never approved.

Fourth. As a necessary consequence, the applicant's name was not on the books as a beneficial member of the Order.

Fifth. Oliver, having done all that he was required to in order to become a beneficiary member, had no doubt he was such, and paid his dues to the Subordinate Council.

Sixth. In this state of the case Oliver died, and his widow applied in due form to the Supreme Council for the amount, for which he had supposed he was insured ($5,000).

Seventh. This was the first knowledge the Supreme Council had that the corrected certificate, professed to have been forwarded, or that Oliver claimed benefit membership in the Order.

Eighth. His name as a benefit member had never been received by the Supreme Secretary, and hence was not, as such recorded; and he was not "de jure" a member.

Ninth. The financial officers of the Supreme Council could not, with this state of facts, legally pay the claim.

Tenth. The claim of one whose name was not on the books as a beneficiary member, whatever the equities might be, could properly be paid only under an order of court.

Eleventh. As the adjudication of the point at issue, in reference to possible future cases, as well as the present, seemed desirable, as well as necessary, it was submitted to.

Twelfth.—The Supreme Council did not, in any way, impede progress or stay proceedings in the case, for a single day, and when the decision of court rendered it legal for them to pay the claim, proceeded, at once, to adjust and pay the full amount.

From the foregoing it will be seen that this was one of those cases where the equities were, apparently, on one side, while the technicalities, or rather I should perhaps say, the demands of law were on the other. While there was no disposition on the part of the Supreme Council to do anything but the strictest justice, there was a full determination to do nothing but what they were legally at liberty to do. Having been most familiar with the facts as they transpired, and with the testimony presented during the very careful adjudication of the case by his Honor, Judge Waymire, I deem this fair, plain, statement of the facts, due to a misapprehending public mind, as to the course and character of the American Legion of Honor, and especially to the vindication of truth.

It has been and may again be asked "If a judgment of the court was the only necessity, why did you not submit an agreed case and save the cost and delay of a trial?" This is a very proper question. Its answer is as cogent as the query is legitimate. It was only because the parties could not agree upon the facts to be submitted.

None can more sincerely regret the painful necessity for the delay and annoyance to the bereaved beneficiary than the Supreme Council does. None more heartily rejoice that the unwelcome case is judicially settled and the integrity of all parties fully vindicated. Very respectfully, yours,
O. C. WHEELER.

Postal Telegraph.

Why not postal telegraph as well as the old-time mail service? Why should the public enjoy the transmission of news, etc., at a nominal rate by train, and be forced to pay a private corporation a large rate by wire? That is the question, and the answer, in our opinion, is that the working of the telegraph at cost by the Government is just as much a needed contribution to the spread of intelligence to-day as the establishment of cheap mail service was years ago. It seems coming to that gradually. The probability is that we shall soon do much of our business and personal communication by lightning.

The present Postmaster-General is understood to favor the project, and various trade organizations have declared themselves as supporters of the demand for government telegraphy. It is not a new thing. It has been fully tried in England, and we are not therefore undertaking any visionary enterprise in adopting it. The English government bought the private telegraphs in 1869, and has extended them more than four fold since that time. The enormous increase in the value of the service to the public is, however, the chief feature. When the telegraphs were operated by private companies, rates were charged according to distance, and were very much higher than the rate established by the Government, which is one shilling, about 25 cents for 20 words besides date, address and signature to any part of the kingdom. With anything like the same ratio of increase in the use of the telegraph, it is evident that a higher rate would have yielded larger returns, which have inure to the public in the shape of reduced charges. The public was also benefited by the transmission of news, the number of papers served with telegraphic advice being increased from 173, in 1869, to 518, in 1880, the amount of news being largely increased, while the charge for this service was largely decreased. The private companies previously to the acquirement of the lines by government sent out about 6,000 words of news daily, when Parliament was in session, and 4,000 at other times. Under the government, 25,000 words of news per diem are sent when Parliament is in session, and 21,000 at other times.

In the United States our telegraph service, like that of operating railways, has been delegated to corporate organizations, and in the absence of proper supervision and control serious abuses have crept in, and the public has been taxed much higher for the use of these inventions (which it may be said have become necessities of commerce), than is necessary to yield a liberal return upon the capital actually invested. What this may be indicated by the remarks of President Norvin Green, of the Western Union Company, at the last annual meeting of that company, Sept. 13, 1882:

The same rate of increase for the next five years will produce gross revenues of thirty-one and a half millions and net profits of sixteen millions per annum. But as the growth of the company has been in an increasing ratio—each five years showing a larger percentage of increase than the preceding five years—we may reasonably expect a still greater ratio of growth, and, therefore, even larger figures for the year ending in 1887 than those above presented, enormous as they now appear.

It is estimated by good judges that there has never been paid in by stockholders $16,000,000 since the beginning of the Western Union Company, and that its present property represents simply water and the amounts extorted from the public to extend its lines, besides paying dividends.

This great system, as well as the ocean cables connecting us with the rest of the world, are now virtually controlled by one man, and this individual, whose name has become a synonym for unscrupulousness and rapacity, in common with a few others with similar character, now aim at, and have largely succeeded, in controlling the channels of intelligence, of thought and of commerce, in a nation of 50,000,000 of people.

STILL ANOTHER "NEW USE" FOR ELECTRICITY.—A significant feature of the use of electric lights in agriculture, and one pregnant with great possibilities for the insect-tormented farmer, is, the London Globe thinks, the wonderful inducement which the light offers to all sorts and conditions of insects to attempt multitudinous suicide by banging their heads against the crystal globe all through the night and the small hours of the morning. A simple mechanical arrangement, in the shape of a grated trap, into which the impulsive creatures could fall, and whence they could not extricate themselves, would assist them to complete the happy work of self-destruction.

METALLIC GAS.—Some of our cotemporaries are apparently making much of the alleged discovery of a Mr. John Dixon, of Liverpool, Eng., of what he calls "metallic gas." His process is merely a bungling way of making gas from petroleum, while he pretends the gas mainly arises from some hidden principle in various metals and minerals which he mixes with it—hence his title, "Metallic Gas." The scheme is merely the reproduction of an old deception practiced by the same party a year or two since in Sydney, where it was thoroughly exploded and shown up as a fraud.

MINUTE MICROSCOPIC MEASUREMENTS.—Mons. Perreux has constructed an apparatus for microscopic measurements which is capable of measuring 1-37,000th part of an inch. The instrument is so delicate that it can only be used at certain hours of the night when the jar of passing vehicles has ceased.

Silk Fashions and the Manufacturers.

The way in which the freaks of fashion sometimes embarrass the manufacturers is shown by the recent experience of the Eastern silk weavers. A dispatch from New York states that a well known silk manufacturer informed a reporter that the present depression in the silk industry arose partly from a fashionable demand for plain silk. Up to this winter brocaded silks were considered the proper thing, and looms adapted especially for this purpose were put up in the factories all over the country. Nearly all the great mills in Paterson, in which upwards of 20,000 people earn a living by silk weaving, manufactured nothing but brocades. Plain silks, which are now the rage, cost more to make and there is not so much profit in them to manufacturers, and looms and machinery of altogether a different pattern are required in the manufacture. Another reason for the stagnant condition of business is the strong competition of foreign manufacturers. "I have just returned from a trip through France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy, and I talked with manufacturers and closely studied their mode. Cheap labor enables them to undersell us, the wages there being from 90 cents to $1.25 per week. I have girls in my factory who make $20 per week. We pay all of our hands fully 100 per cent. more than foreign manufacturers." We should imagine that this disparity could not long exist, for there must be a great inducement for the immigration of silk weavers. The European girls will not long allow their American cousins to enjoy such wages without a share in them, and then the manufacturers will have more workers.

RAILROAD IN CENTRAL AFRICA.—A party of 80 Frenchmen, assisted by 1,400 African laborers, are to begin the construction of a railway between the Niger and Senegal rivers. Their operations will be protected by a military column, which will plant the French flag and erect two forts on the Niger.

THE ERIE CANAL was formally opened in 1825; it then carried a boat through with 90 barrels of flour; now 900 barrels are the regular cargo.

STRONG FACTS!

A great many people are asking what particular troubles BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is good for.

It will cure Heart Disease, Paralysis, Dropsy, Kidney Disease, Consumption, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all similar diseases.

Its wonderful curative power is simply because it purifies and enriches the blood, thus beginning at the foundation, and by building up the system, drives out all disease.

A Lady Cured of Rheumatism.

Baltimore, Md., May 7, 1883.
My health was much shattered by Rheumatism when I commenced taking Brown's Iron Bitters, and I scarcely had strength enough to attend to my daily household duties. I am now using the third bottle and I am regaining strength daily, and I cheerfully recommend it to all.
I cannot say too much in praise of it. Mrs. MARY E. BRASHEAR, 173 Preston St.

Kidney Disease Cured.

Christiansburg, Va., 1882.
Suffering from kidney disease, from which I could get no relief, I tried Brown's Iron Bitters, which cured me completely. A child of mine, recovering from scarlet fever, had no appetite and did not seem to be able to eat at all. I gave him Iron Bitters with the happiest results.

Heart Disease.

Vine St., Harrisburg, Pa.
Dec. 2, 1881.
After trying different physicians and many remedies for palpitation of the heart without receiving any benefit, I was advised to try Brown's Iron Bitters. I have used two bottles and never found anything that gave me so much relief.
Mrs. JENNIE HESS.

For the peculiar troubles to which ladies are subject, BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is invaluable. Try it.

Aims, Objects and Regulations of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen is a general organization for the mutual benefit of its members and their families. It embraces in its membership men of every vocation, profession and occupation—employers and employees—workers of all classes, whether their labor be mental or physical. It has no connection with any religious sect, political party, or organization for affecting the prices of labor or commodities, but is designed to promote fraternity, mental and social improvement, and mutual assistance.

BENEFICIARY FUND.

The most distinctive feature of the Order is what is designated as the Beneficiary Fund—a carefully-devised, well-guarded, economical and beneficial system, by means of which the sum of

TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS

is secured to each member's family, or such person or persons as he may choose to designate. During the several years since the Order has been established this sum has been promptly paid in full in each case of death, to the persons entitled to receive it, within a few weeks, and without any litigation or troublesome formalities. A careful examination of the working of the system will satisfy any intelligent person that such will continue to be the case.

HOW ASSESSMENTS ARE PAID.

Each person who becomes a member of the Order pays to the Receiver of his Lodge one dollar for the Beneficiary Fund. Every Lodge has on hand, at the beginning of the month, ready for a call, one dollar of Beneficiary Fund for each member. When a death occurs, if there is a sufficient amount of the Fund in the Grand Lodge to meet the required payment of $2,000, no call is made upon the Subordinate Lodges, but if there is not a sufficient surplus from the last assessment, then the Lodges are notified at the first of the month to forward their portion of the Fund on hand ($1 for each member), and an assessment is made to replace the amount forwarded. By this means the Beneficiary Fund of the Lodge is again replenished, ready for a call at the first of the next month, if it should be made. Assessments are only made on the members at the first meeting night in each month, and a written and printed notice is sent to each member, bearing date of such meeting night. Twenty days time is given from that date to meet the payment. Thus the payments are made at such intervals, and are called for in such manner that they may be easily provided for and met without inconvenience even by persons of small income.

HOW MUCH DOES IT COST?

In the first year of the working of the Supreme Lodge (1873-4), the number of assessments made upon the members of the Lodges directly under its jurisdiction, was 20; second year, 14; third year, 15; fourth year, 16; fifth year, 14; sixth year, 16. Since that time, the average has remained about the same, and these figures will also apply to the Jurisdiction of California. It is probable that the future average will remain about the same. The average cost to each member, therefore, has been $15.66 per year; being a little more than four cents per day as the cost of a completely-secured guarantee of $2,000, to be paid on the death of a member. Can any man who is in circumstances to avail himself of this system be justifiable in neglecting to give to his family the security which it affords? Does not prudence and affection dictate that he should secure for them the protection thus offered? A number of States, having over 2,000 members in each, collect and disburse the Beneficiary Fund separately through their Grand Lodges, instead of through the Supreme Lodge. In these, the cost per year has been, in some cases less and in others greater than that given above, but the average has been about the same.

California was set apart as a separate Beneficiary Jurisdiction in July, 1878, and at the end of July, 1879, had levied and collected ten assessments for deaths occurring in the State, and for the months of August and September three more, making a total for 14 months of 13 assessments, or an average of a little less than 93 cents a month for each member. During 1880, 16 assessments were levied in California, and for 1881, it is estimated there will probably be 14 assessments.

ADVANTAGES OF THE SYSTEM.

The A. O. U. W. Beneficiary System is simple, easily understood, economical in its workings, and in all its details comes under the direct observation and care of the members who meet weekly in their Lodges, where the business is transacted, and where they enjoy the advantages of social and fraternal intercourse, and of mental improvement. These Lodges are governed by officers regularly elected by the members—the financial affairs are under the proper guards and restrictions, and a careful system of checks prevents fraud or betrayal of trust.

PROTECTION AT NET COST.

All money paid on assessments for the Beneficiary Fund goes to the payment of death benefits without reduction even for expenses, these being provided for out of a General Fund raised in each Lodge. This fund is made up from initiation fees (usually about $15 for each member, with sometimes an advanced rate, according to age), and weekly dues of not less than 25 cents per month. The advantage which each member derives from the social, fraternal and educational features of the Order, and the good which is accomplished by it in these respects, afford a more than ample return for the sum he pays into the General Fund, which meets all the expenses of the Order, leaving the entire Beneficiary Fund intact for the beneficent purpose for which it is intended. There are no commissions, fees or salaries to be paid out of it, but the entire amount paid in goes to the widows, orphans and other heirs of deceased brethren. Thus the Beneficiary system may be fairly said to be carried on absolutely without any working expenses, and, at the same time, to be more closely under the observation of those interested in it, and more carefully guarded than any other method adopted for similar purposes.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION.

A medical examination is required under such rules as are generally adopted by life insurance companies. The character of the applicant must also be investigated, and the Lodge pass upon his application by ballot. Persons between the ages of 21 and 60 only are admitted.

BENEFITS OF SICK OR DISABLED MEMBERS.

The payment of weekly sick benefits to members is a matter left to the control of each Subordinate Lodge. Some provide in their By-Laws for such benefits—others do not. If sick benefits are to be paid, the initiation fees and weekly dues are fixed at an amount sufficient to cover the expense—each Lodge having the power to fix the fees and dues at such sums (not below $15 for initiation and degrees, and $2 for Beneficiary Fund and certificate, and 25 cents per month for dues) as may be determined upon.

GENERAL FEATURES OF THE ORDER.

The A. O. U. W. is a secret Order, having two degrees, with appropriate initiation ceremonies. These are simple, but impressive. The teachings are calculated to strengthen the character and elevate the moral principles of the members.

The Order is composed of Subordinate Lodges, Grand Lodges and a Supreme Lodge. Subordinate Lodges in States or Territories where no Grand Lodge has been established, are under the immediate jurisdiction of and report to the Supreme Lodge, until a Grand Lodge is established.

When a Grand Lodge has over 2,000 members under its jurisdiction, it can be set apart as a separate Beneficiary district if desired. In this case the members are assessed for the deaths which occur within such district or jurisdiction, and the Grand Lodge collects the assessments and pays the death benefits under the laws and regulations adopted by the Supreme Lodge. The Grand Lodges of Pennsylvania, New York, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, Tennessee, Indiana, Michigan, California, Wisconsin, Kansas, Oregon and Ontario have been thus set apart as to the Beneficiary Fund. In all other respects they remain integral parts of the Order.

PROGRESS OF THE ORDER.

The A. O. U. W. was started in Pennsylvania in 1868 but was not sufficiently established to pay the $2,000 benefit until 1873, from which time up to the 1st of January, 1880, the Grand Lodge of that State alone has paid over $546,000 of Beneficiary Fund.

The Supreme Lodge, up to June, 1881 had paid out $319,172.90 on deaths of members of Lodges under its immediate jurisdiction. The amount paid by the Order during the year 1880, was $1,305,887.00.

The membership reported on the first of March, 1881, was 97,179, with Grand Lodges established in the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Iowa, New York, Illinois, Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Tennessee, Michigan, California, Georgia, Kansas, Ontario (Canada), Oregon and Washington Territories, Massachusetts, Nevada, and Subordinate Lodges in a number of other States. In all these States the Order is steadily and rapidly growing. With the increase already since the above date, it is safe to say that before the close of the year 1881 it will number over 125,000 members.

The Order was founded by a few earnest, honest men, for fraternal and beneficent purposes. Its sphere of usefulness has been enlarged, and it has been faithfully conducted as its founders designed it to be—not to subserve the selfish interest of a few, but for the mutual benefit of all. Thoughtful and prudent men join it because they can thus provide, without present embarrassment, for the contingencies arising from the uncertainties of life, and at the same time aid each other in mutual improvement and the elevation of humanity.

CHARITY, HOPE AND PROTECTION.

To every loyal brother of the A. O. U. W. these words symbolize the greatness of an organization which, to-day, is doing good commensurate with the loftiness of its mission. Charity, hope and protection are the three cardinal principles of our Order. By a combination in the character of each member of these three attributes, we have men of noble men working together for a common good. Our field is a world-wide philanthropy, where the merits so combine as to make of every member a true man. Selfishness is no part of the A. O. U. W. system. It is a departure from it as much as is possible. The true Workman has none other than charity for a brother, hope for the good of the future, and protection for the helpless in time of sore trial and distress. These are the three talismanic words and objects of the Order, and he who cannot affiliate with those whose aims are embraced in these, cannot be, in word and deed, a true Workman.

ADVANTAGES OF THE A. O. U. W. SYSTEM.

Some one has epitomized the prominent reasons for joining the Ancient Order of United Workmen about as follows:

1. Because insurance benefits are furnished to all the members at cost. Having had 14 years or more of practical experience and trial, during which, hundreds of thousands of dollars have been paid to widows and orphans at less than half cost of insurance in stock companies, it is worth more than a trial.
2. The A. O. U. W. offers more benefits than any other Order.
3. Because the cost of all the above large benefits is less than one-half of a corresponding insurance in the ordinary insurance companies.
4. Because the assessments are based on the "Actuarial Table of Costs of Risks."
5. Because the Order is steadily and rapidly growing.
6. Because the whole membership is taken into full confidence as to the management, and in the monthly published reports of the officers every member can see what has been done with every dollar received by the Order, and the financial officers have given adequate bonds; and lastly, because

The Supreme Court of the A. O. U. W. will not take advantage of any technicalities, but will pay all claims promptly, whenever they arise.

THE ASHES OF THE DEAD.—A correspondent of Knowledge (London), who signs himself "A Brother Cinder," referring to the first two cremations which have taken place in England in modern times and to the disposition which was made of the ashes, begs leave to suggest "a far neater and more appropriate mode of disposing of the ashes of a corpse cremated. These ashes, I think," he observes, "consist wholly or principally of phosphate of lime, and therefore have only to be treated with sulphuric acid to convert them into sulphate of lime—i. e., gypsum of plaster of Paris. With this substance a model can be cast in a mould previously prepared, and representing either the full figure of the deceased or simply the bust, or the likeness can take the form of a medallion. Whichever form of memorial is adopted a glass case would be sufficient protection for it, and the costly urn can be dispensed with as unnecessary, while the remains of our loved ones will themselves be gathered into the form of a compact and lifelike memorial, which itself will be composed of the veritable 'ashes of the dead.'" It is doubtful whether in this country, for years to come, if ever, the idea of incineration or cremation can be popularized. There is a repugnance to it in the general mind which cannot easily be overcome. In France the subject is in a manner forced upon the public. The crowded condition of the cemeteries necessitates the removal of bodies long distances from the city—as much as 30 miles—the expense of which, when the poor are interred, falls upon the municipality. In consequence a bill is before the Assembly to legalize cremation. In England also this question of cremation is being seriously considered. The same argument applies to London as to Paris in reference to disposing of the remains of the dead. England will be slower to accept the alternative than France, but it would not be surprising if both countries would ultimately adopt it, as the least of evils presenting themselves in connection with sepulture.

SOME FACTS ABOUT BRICKS.—An average day's work for a bricklayer is 1,500 bricks on outside and inside walls; on facings and angles and finishing around wood or stone work not more than half of this number can be laid. To find the number of bricks in a wall, first determine the number of square feet of surface, and then multiply by 7 for a 4-inch wall, by 14 for an 8 inch wall, by 21 for a 12 inch wall and by 28 for a 16-inch wall. For staining bricks red, melt one ounce of glue in one gallon of water; add a piece of alum the size of an egg, then one-half pound of Venetian red, and one pound of Spanish brown. Try the color on the bricks before using, and change to light or dark with the red or brown, using a yellow mineral for buff. For coloring black, heat asphaltum to a fluid state, and moderately heat true surface bricks and dip them. Or make a hot mixture of linseed oil and asphalt; heat the bricks and dip them. Tar and asphalt are also used for the same purpose. It is important that the bricks be sufficiently hot, and be held in the mixture to absorb the color to the depth of one-sixteenth of an inch.—Railroad Journal.

A NEW CARVING MACHINE.—A Michigan man has invented a new carving and molding machine that takes the palm for rapid work. In its construction the machine is very simple, being composed of a tool attached to a spindle that when thrown into motion springs up through an aperture in the table. The piece of wood to be carved or molded is then pushed against the tool, and the work is done quicker and better than any man could do it. The machine is designed to do all kinds of fancy carving work on cornices, moldings, newels and scrolls.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has not been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we will split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

Patent Agency.

Inventors on the Pacific Coast will find it greatly to their advantage to consult this old experienced, first-class Agency. We have able and trustworthy associates and Agents in Washington and the capital cities of the principal nations of the world. In connection with our editorial, scientific and Patent Law Library, and record of original cases in our office, we have other advantages far beyond those which can be offered home inventors by other Agencies. The information accumulated through long and careful practice before the Office, and the frequent examination of Patents already granted, for the purpose of determining the patentability of inventions brought before us, enables us often to give advice which will save inventors the expense of applying for Patents upon inventions which are not new. Circulars of advice sent free on receipt of postage. Address DEWEY & CO., Patent Agents, 252 Market St., S. F.

The Chest of Drawers.

"Married!" said Mrs. Bubble—"married! And without neither wedding cake nor new bonnet, nor so much as a neighbor called in to witness the ceremony? And to Abel Jones, as is as poor as poverty itself? Mary, I never could have believed it of you!"

Pretty Mary Bubble's eyes sparkled, half with exultation, half with vague fear.

"It was out in Squire Larkins' garden, mother," said she. "Squire Larkins was there, and Miss Jennie Wynward and Mr. Hall. Abel was shingling the ice-house roof, and he said it must be now or never, because he couldn't endure the suspense. And the Squire is a Justice of the Peace, and I've got a certificate, all legal and right—see, mother! And as for being poor, why, Abel has his trade, and no one can deny that he is an industrious, temperate young man; and please, mother," flinging both arms around the old lady's neck, "if you'll forgive me for disobeying you this once I never, never will do it again!"

So Mrs. Bubble—although, to use her own words, she never could get over the mortification of having a daughter married by a "Justice of the Peace"—finally forgave bright-eyed Mary, and consented that Abel Jones should set up his shop at the foot of the farm lane, to commence the corset of life.

"Though I'm quite sure," said Mrs. Bubble, "that he never will earn his living; and I did hope, Mary, you would have married some one who could at least have cleared the mortgage off the old place."

But Abel and Mary were happy. Where Youth and Love are sitting in life's sunshine, old Cereus is one too many. Let him go his way; who cares for him?

"We shall get along," said Abel.

"Of course we shall get along!" said Mary. And thus matters stood, when Mrs. "Squire Larkins, with a young friend in flounced white muslin stopped at the Bubble farm-house to drink a glass of milk and eat some of Mrs. Bubble's cherry short-cake.

"I hope the bride is well," said Mrs. Larkins, laughing.

"To'able, thank you," said Mrs. Bubble. "She's gone up to Deacon Faraday's to get their rife for makin' soft soap. Abel's well, too, thankee. He's in the shop, now, at work. His hammer is sort o' company for me, when I set here alone. I don't deny as he's a decent young man enough, if he wasn't as poor as Job's turkey! And with Mary's face, and her term at boarding-school, she'd ought to done better."

"What a beautiful old chest of drawers!" cried Miss Wynward, ecstatically. "What lovely brass ornaments! And what picturesque claw legs!"

"O, yes," said Mrs. Larkins. "It is over a hundred years old. Everybody has heard of Mrs. Bubble's antique chest of drawers!"

"Oh, ma'am, it ain't the same," said Mrs. Bubble. "It ain't the old one at all. I sold the old one a month ago."

"Sold it?" echoed Mrs. Squire Larkins.

"I didn't want to sell it," said Mrs. Bubble, looking imploringly over the edge of her spectacle glasses. "It was given to me, you know, ma'am, when my father's estate was settled up and the old furnitoor was divided. My brother John's wife, she wanted the 'Death of Jonathan,' in a gilt frame, with cord and tassels, so she says, says she:

"'Sophiar, you can take the old chist o' draw's."

"And I knew I was bein' cheated then; but la! what's the use of trouble among one's relations? So says I:

"'Have it your own way, Abigail Ann.'"

"And she took home 'The Death of Jonathan,' and I took the chist o' draw's. And Abel he fixed it up dreadful nice, with a little sand-paper and varnish, and it was handy to keep old letters, and samples of patchwork, and paper patterns in. But when that fine young lady from the city, as is boarding at Dr. Holloway's, offered me twenty-five dollars for it, it seemed a wicked sin to refuse so much money; so I sold it. And John's wife, she couldn't hardly believe her ears when she heard tell of it. And she says, says she:

"'Sophiar, don't you s'pose you could sell 'The Death of Jonathan' for the same money?'"

"And I knew just how she felt, and I wasn't a bit sorry for her, for she always was a graspin' thing. But after it had gone away in Dr. Holloway's wagon, I began to miss it, and I fairly sat down and cried. And Abel, he says:

"'Cheer up, mother,' says he. 'I'll make you another one just like it!'"

"And so he did. And their it is," added Mrs. Bubble, with honest pride, "and you'd never know but it was the same old chist o' draw's. He's darkened it down and 'fild it up, and turned out claw legs and beat out a set of old brasses to cover the keyholes, until you never would know the difference. And I'm just as well satisfied as I was before."

So Mrs. Bubble put on her things and went to the sewing society when Mrs. Larkin and Miss Wynward were gone, so that there was no one in the big, airy kitchen when Prof. Eldred and his two daughters—maiden ladies of an unchronicled age—alighted from their open box wagon and stopped in for a drink of water.

There was the well, under the bowery apple-blossoms at the back; and there was the gourd shell, lying in the grass beside the sweep; and the cleanly-scrubbed kitchen floor, with its rag rugs at the doors; and the ancient clock, ticking away in its corner; and the old chest of drawers, between the two windows.

"Pa," cried Miss Etheldreda Eldred, putting up her eye-glasses, "what a lovely piece of workmanship!"

"Quite medieval," sighed Miss Ermengrude. "We must have this old Revolutionary relic in our drawing-room, pa."

The Professor stared around him.

"There's nobody to ask the price of, my dear," said he.

"That's just like pa!" said Miss Etheldreda.

"Don't you hear somebody hammering somewhere? There's a carpenter shop just down the lane. Go and inquire—do!"

Abel Jones was working diligently away at a step-ladder, when the Professor's bald head was thrust into his shop.

"En!" said Abel, looking very handsome in his shirt-sleeves and a scarlet necktie.

"I wish you a very good morning, sir," said the Professor, politely.

"Same to you, sir," said Abel.

"I wish," said the Professor, "to inquire the price of that beautiful old brass mounted chest of drawers in the kitchen of the house yonder. My daughters—"

"No price at all, sir," said Abel. "It ain't for sale."

"If a liberal remuneration, sir, would be any inducement to you—"

"Not for sale," good humoredly repeated Abel. "Nothing would induce my mother-in-law to part with it."

"An old family relic, eh?" remarked the professor.

"Exactly," said Abel.

And he went on hammering and whistling the tune of 'Robin Adair,' while the Professor made his way back through the prickly hedge of gooseberry bushes and black currants.

Half an hour afterward, Mary, the pretty first cause of all Abel Jones' romantic adventures, ran into the shop. They had been married for over three months now, but Abel's smile of welcome was no less bright than it had been in the days of the honeymoon.

"Bless me, Polly!" said he. "What is the matter? You look half scared to death!"

"And no wonder," said Mary. "There have been burglars at the house. Mother's chest of drawers is gone!"

"What!" shouted Abel.

"And these were left under one of the volumes of 'Barnes' Notes on the Gospel' on the kitchen table!" breathlessly added Mary, displaying five 10 dollar bills in the palm of her hand.

"Upon—my—word!" said Abel. "It's the old fellow with the bald head, Polly, and the spectacles, you may depend upon it. I thought he looked like an old furniture dealer."

Alas, poor Abel! not to be able to discriminate between a second-hand store-keeper and the Professor of Athletics and Belles Lettres in Hogley University! But such is life!

"But it's stealing!" cried Mary, breathlessly.

"Well, not exactly," said Abel, laughing. "The old thing in itself wasn't worth $10. If they choose to value it at 50, why it aint bad for us in the light of a pecuniary transaction, eh Polly?"

"But what will mother say?" pleaded Mary.

"I've got another one nearly finished," said Abel. "I was meaning to sell it to Mrs. Harrington. But I'll just set it up in the old place, and mother will never care whether it's number one or number two that is there."

So that when Mrs. Bubble came home from the sewing society Abel was just setting up the new chest of drawers, and Mary eagerly related to her the tale of the burglary, for so she still persisted in calling it.

"Well, I never!" said Mrs. Bubble. "Fifty and 25 makes 75. I'm glad I didn't take the 'Death of Jonathan!'"

"This means business," said Abel to himself.

And he set diligently to work to manufacture still other duplicates of the "chist o' draw's," staining them a dark rich brown, and beating out odd, well-shaped decorations to complete the illusion. And when the curiosity hunter came up the solitary road, embowered in elms, where it required considerable engineering for one load of hay to pass another, Abel sat whistling on his doorstep, ready to drive a bargain.

"Any old furniture or antiques to sell?" the hunter would blandly inquire.

"Not a stick," said Abel, and then, after a minute's blank silence on the part of the pioneers of the esthetic, he would add: "Unless you'd like to look at this 'ere chist o' draw's as I've just tinkered up. I can't say, up and down, you know, as it's old, but you can look for yourselves. There ain't no date on it. I don't care whether I sell it or not. Nor yet I don't put no price on it. I ain't none of your bargain drivers. If you like it, pay what you think is right; if you don't, why there ain't no harm done."

So that no less than seven editions of the chest of drawers were sold before the season was over. They became the fashion. Every person who bought one had a vague hope of having something a little different from his neighbors. And some of them have never yet ceased looking for hidden treasures, old papers or outlawed wills among the pigeon-holes and compartments.

And when the season ended and the city boarders went back to their brick-and-mortar wildernesses, Abel bought his mother-in-law a plethoric pocket-book.

"Three hundred and sixty-five dollars, mother," said he. "Enough to pay off the last installment of the mortgage on the old farm. We couldn't have made more money than that if we'd kept a houseful of boarders, as Polly wanted to do. But I don't mean Polly to be at the beck and call of a dozen fine ladies and work her roses off, not while I'm able to work for her."

And the report of Abel Jones' good luck spread far and wide through all the country side. Mrs. Hopper, the Abigail Ann of Mrs. Bubble's legendary reminiscences, heard the great news and drove down from Plum Hill to inquire into it.

"If it's true as you've found $500," said she dolefully, "in that old chist o' draw's, it's the law as all the heirs should divide equally, Sophiar Bubble."

"Bat it ain't true," said Mrs. Bubble.

"O!" said Mrs. Hopper. "I told my husband as it was all a made-up story!"

"Not that exactly, neither," said Mrs. Bubble, laughing.

And then she related the precise circumstances of the case.

Mrs. Hopper drew a long breath.

"I wish I hadn't chose the 'Death of Jonathan,'" said she. "The cord broke last week, and it fell down and smashed my best set of china. I never had no luck with it."

"And served you right for your greed and rapacity!" said Abel Jones, sotto voce, to Mary, who, in the next room, was helping him to varnish a set of hanging-shelves.

"Hush-sh-sh!" whispered Mary.

While old Mrs. Bubble smiled, and remarked, sagely, that "nobody never knew exactly how things was going to turn out."

"But," she added, wiping her spectacle glasses, "that chist o' draw's certainly did bring me good luck. It's paid off the last of the old mortgage, and laid in a stock o' real black walnut for Abel to work with, and got a new navy-blue cashmere for Mary. And if that ain't luck I don't know what is."—Saturday Night.

Parasites in a Fly's Tongue.

The microscope is constantly revealing wonder after wonder. The latest observation is from a microscopist at Cincinnati, who has been examining the anatomy of the common house fly, the tongue or proboscis of which he has ascertained is quite commonly inhabited by parasites. The operator had caught a fly, decapitated it and taken out the tongue. The reporter of the Cincinnati Commercial, who was present, writes as follows:

Under the microscope the proboscis bore a decided resemblance to a rough, uneven log, overgrown with dark, thick moss, at one end of which were a number of black projections having the appearance of heavy spikes driven into the log, but which were in reality infinitely small hairs. It was certainly a formidable looking object in its magnified state. The experienced eye of the professor detected a slight vibration upon the surface of the log, and that particular specimen of fly-tongue was pronounced one of those for which we sought. The tongue was inhabited, and again the fly had proved a success. The operation which followed was one of extreme caution and skillful manipulation, and consisted in splitting the organ lengthwise, which was successfully accomplished under the small microscope, with instruments of most delicate texture, requiring the greatest care in their use. The operation resulted favorably, and sure enough the "critter" was there. He had taken up his residence for the time being inside the tongue, although it has been demonstrated that he possesses the power of roaming at his own sweet will either inside or outside of his field of operation. He was captured without much of a contest, and was imprisoned in a small drop of water, which was placed upon a glass slide with a concave center, and subjected to the searching revelations of the microscope. He appeared to take naturally to his new element, and manifested a surprising activity in his liquid quarters. He was pronounced by the professor to be a very handsome specimen. He was almost transparent, had a flat head and the body of a serpent. And how he did squirm, filling the entire space of his miniature aquarium with his writhings and convulsions. By actual measurement this one was found by Mr. Mickelborough to be 93 1000 of an inch in diameter. The greatest number he has ever found on a single fly's tongue was three—enough, in all conscience!

Another Great Lake in Africa.

The discovery of another great lake in the interior of Africa is reported far to the west of Albert Nyanza. Occasional reports of such a lake have been current in scientific circles for some time, but it is only recently that any authentic data have been received. Recently F. Lupton, Governor of the Egyptian province of Bahr El Ghazal, has written to the London Times to the effect that Rafai Aga, an employee under his command, on his return from an expedition toward the Uelle, told him that he and some of the members of the expedition had seen a great lake in the country of the Barboa, a powerful copper-colored tribe clothed with a peculiar grass cloth (of which Mr. Lupton sends a specimen in his letter). Mr. Lupton gathered that the position of the lake was in about 3 degrees 40 minutes north latitude, and 23 degrees east longitude, and that it was quite as large as Victoria Nyanza. When the weather permits, the Barboas cross the lake in large open boats made out of a single tree, the voyage taking three days, and they obtain from the people living on the western side (their own country being east of the lake) articles of European manufacture, such as blue beads and brass wire.

Mr. Lupton gives in brief Rafai Aga's account of his trip to the lake, and concludes by saying: "I feel I should not be doing right in keeping dark this information, which, when looked into by competent persons, may throw some light on the famous Congo and Uelle rivers. I believe that the Uelle flows into the lake discovered by Rafai Aga, and that the stream which is said to flow out of the lake probably joins the Congo." Mr. Lupton further informs the Times that he is engaged in preparing a map of this province, and that he was about to start in a few days on a journey to a country called Umbungu, some 15 days' march to the west of Dahm Siber.

A MASTODON GRAVEYARD.—The city of Dallas, Texas, is said to be built over a graveyard of mastodons, and for five or six years past excavations for buildings have seldom failed to bring up their bones. A large number of these mastodon remains were unearthed recently, and some of the bones were of enormous size.

An effective medicine for kidney diseases, low fevers and nervous prostration, and well worthy of a trial, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

The Grandeur of Woman.

When you want to get the grandest idea of a queen, you do not think of Catherine of Russia, or of Anne of England, or of Mary Theresa of Germany; but when you want to get your grandest idea of a queen you think of the plain woman who sat opposite your father at the table, or walked with him arm-in-arm down life's pathway; or sometimes to the thanksgiving banquet, sometimes to the grave, but always together, soothing your petty griefs, correcting your childish waywardness, joining in your infantile sports, listening to your evening prayers, toiling for you with needle or spinning-wheel, and on cold nights wrapping you up snug and warm. And then at last, when she lay in the back room dying, and you saw her take those thin hands, with which she had toiled for you so long, and put them together in a dying prayer that commended you to God whom she had taught you to trust—oh, she was the queen! The chariots of God went down to fetch her; and as she went in, all heaven rose up. You cannot think of her now without a rush of tenderness that stirs up the deep foundation of your soul, and you feel as much a child again as when you cried on her lap; and if you could bring her back again to speak just once more your name as tenderly as she used to speak it, you would be willing to throw yourself on the ground and kiss the sod that covers her, crying: "Mother! mother! Ah! she was the queen!" To make one such a woman as I have described, how many would you want of those people who go in the round of fashion and dissipation, distressing their body until, in their monstrosities, they seem to outdo the dromedary and hippopotamus; going as far toward disgraceful apparel as they dare go, so as not to be arrested by the police, their behavior a sorrow to the good and a caricature to the vicious, and an insult to that God who made them women and not gorgons; and tramping on down through a frivolous, dissipated life to temporal and eternal damnation.—Dr. Talmage.

THE SUBMARINE TUNNEL BETWEEN ITALY AND SICILY.—From the project presented to the Italian Ministry and proposed to the Venetian Society of Construction by Signor Gabelli, the following particulars are taken: The length of the submarine tunnel between Italy and Sicily will be 44,000 ft. The maximum depth of the sea above the line of tunnel is 365 ft. The thickness of rock between the roof of the tunnel and the bottom of the sea is 115 ft. The direction of the tunnel from St. Agata to Punta del Pizzo is almost due northwest to southwest. The two inclines descending to the tunnel will first run parallel with the shore and then descend to the lowest level by spiral tunnels. The length of these inclines is each 15,000 ft., and the area occupied by each spiral tunnel is 1,160 ft. The degree of inclination will be 35 per 1,000. The center of the tunnel will be on a higher level than the two ends. Wells and subsidiary tunnels will be constructed to drain off the pre-casting water, and the most difficult part of the line will be first commenced, which will at once show the geological construction of the ground and the difficulties to be overcome. According to the opinions of all geologists the bottom of the Straits of Messina consists of crystalline rock (granite, gneiss and mica schists). Neither in Calabria nor in Sicily can the upper strata that covers this crystalline rock be so thick as to reach the level of the bottom of the descending incline.

CONNECTING THE CHESAPEAKE AND THE DELAWARE.—The Maritime Register says: We notice that there is a movement toward carrying out the project of a ship canal between the Delaware and Chesapeake bays. The projectors of this new scheme say that this canal will be pushed to completion without asking for Government aid. This is a very sensible decision on their part. There is no reason why the Government should furnish the money for this work, and if it will give the great advantages to Maryland and Baltimore which have been claimed, Baltimore capitalists ought certainly to be able to build the canal.

An Improved File-Holder.

An article which is valuable mainly for its usefulness, if simplified without being made less effective, is improved. The file-holder illustrated herewith is an invention of this sort. Its merits, however, are more readily observed by sight than described in words.

To file newspapers, or other printed matter, the round rubber band is slipped over the inclined end of the upper bar into the notched end of the lower bar. With the lower bar resting on a table the upper bar is swung vertically or sideways, leaving the point for receiving the papers entirely unobstructed. The hinged ends of the bars, being rounded and held elastically, the upper bar is easily and naturally brought back to the right position, where it is quickly fastened by slipping the adjustable band over the incline.

The pointed end of the holder should be kept farthest from the body and the bottom of the papers placed near the rubber band, which acts as a hinge. If the rubbers become lost or damaged the same kind can be obtained from the patentee, or those which will answer the purpose very well, may be had at small cost at any stationery store.

Among the advantages gained by this holder are the following:

It can be opened and closed quicker than others.

The points are less obstructed while the articles to be filed are being placed.

The papers (wholly or partly folded) can be either "straddled" over the lower bar, or filed in regular book order.

The elastic hinge and band accommodate and hold firm either a large or a small number of papers.

Devoid of surplus material, it approaches nearer to bookbinding than other file-holders.

With less material, it is lighter and less cumbersome than other holders.

It has no protruding ends to tickle the reader's ribs; no sharp corners or metal parts for defacing furniture.

It has no rigid hooks, hinges, or loose parts to break or get lost.

It has proved durable in practice. Consisting of so few parts, the two strong rubber rings are the only portions possible to wear out. These can be replaced at trifling cost. The file is adjusted but 52 times a year for a weekly paper. A sample holder can be opened and closed 1,000 times without showing depreciation.

Having, as a publisher, considerable use for fileholders, the inventor could find none of the hundred different kinds patented or in use devoid of decidedly objectionable features. For this reason he adopted and used some of the simplest forms conceivable. After several years' use and repeated improvements, the device we illustrate has proved the best.

The patent was allowed in April, 1876, since which time many holders have been used, giving full satisfaction.

Five sizes are made to suit the dimensions of different papers, viz. 18, 24, 26, 30 and 34 inches, inside measure.

From our own experience and the testimony of others, we do not hesitate to recommend this simple article as the best of its kind.

Liberal terms are offered to dealers for introducing this novel file-holder. Agents wanted in every town and county.

Patented by A. T. Dewey, S. F. Samples will be mailed for 50 cents, postpaid.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies. Issued on the 5th and 23d of each month. Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
INDEPENDENT ORDER FOREBROTHERS FRIENDS,
ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST,
AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
UNITED ANTI-TEMPLE ORDER OF DRUIDS,
IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN,
KNIGHTS OF HONOR.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and carefully selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

Goat Island.

Yerba Buena Island—better known as Goat Island—lying as it does immediately in front of San Francisco, and near the track of the ferry steamers, is known to all who come to the city. The island belongs to the Government, and is the headquarters of the Lighthouse Department of this district. All the lighthouse supplies are left at the sta-

It was found that there was no necessity of keeping a garrison on the island, as garrisons are already maintained on Alcatraz and Angel Islands, and at Black Point and the Presidio. The buildings shown in the engraving were taken on large barges or scows and towed to the Presidio, where they are now doing duty. The spectacle of a large house being towed across the bay by a steam tug, was one not often to be seen.

Esthetic Taste.

The growing culture and prosperity of the country is marked by nothing more strongly than the almost universal indulgence in decorative art. Homes, where once comfort alone was studied, beauty and grace are now considered to be of nearly as much importance. Furniture has lost its hard, monotonous and unsocial looks. The days of the prim, stiff precision was the order of the day.

Even business is putting on stylish airs, and signs, letter-heads and business cards are rapidly becoming works of art. The successful job printer of the day must possess an eye for light and shade, delicate tints, and finish, nearly equal to the landscape painter. This development of a love for the beautiful indicates moral and intellectual tion there, and the buoys, chains, and materials used for marking dangers are stored there.

Formerly a military station was maintained on the island, and we give an engraving herewith which shows the appearance of the quarters and barracks at the time the famous controversy between the city and the railroad, which resulted in the company abandoning all idea of using the place as a terminus.

There being no means of communication with Goat Island except by row-boat or sail-boat, it is seldom visited. All around the shores there is good fishing, and a visit to the light house is interesting.

The New England Workman, boasts the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts will soon embrace a membership that will exceed that of Kansas. Present indications point that way. The membership in Kansas is not increasing as it should.

hair-cloth sofas and six hair-cloth chairs to match, and which required the occupant to exercise no little skill in maintaining his equilibrium, have now nearly passed away, and graceful shapes, suggestive of luxuriant repose, taken their places. The windows of nearly every cottage are cheaply, yet prettily draped; ceilings and walls harmoniously colored; books, albums, vases and pictures in profusion, and elegant what-nots tastefully rowded with bric-a-brac, where years ago a advancement, and when it becomes so general and runs into such infinite detail, may be regarded as a sign of national progress. It is true, we have still a great deal of hideous caricature in the way of ornamentation. But even that is a good sign, for it is an instinct feeling for the light. The love of gaudy trinkets and loud colors, peculiar to savages and rude minds, is only a wild flower of human nature, that in time may be developed into a rose of rich beauty and fragrance.

Home Miscellany.

To a Field Mouse.

While I was plowing one day the rest of a little mouse was broken into. Following are some verses from a poem he wrote about it:

Wee, sleekit, cow'rin', tim'rous beastie,
Oh, what a panic's in thy breastie!
Thou need na start awa' sae hasty,
Wi' bick'rin' brattle!
I wad be laith to rin an' chase thee
Wi' murd'ring pattle!

I'm truly sorry man's dominion
Has broken Nature's social union,
An' justifies that ill opinion
Which makes thee startle
At me, thy poor earth-born companion,
An' fellow-mortal!

Thou saw the fields laid bare an' waste
And weary winter comin' fast,
And cozie here, beneath the blast,
Thou thought to dwell,
Till, crash! the cruel coulter pass'd
Out thro' thy cell.

But, Mousie, thou art no thy lane,
In proving foresight may be vain,
The best laid schemes o' mice an' men
Gang aft agley,
And lea'e us naught but grief an' pain,
For promised joy.

The First Clond.

"It was to meet such difficulties as this that tontines—" "Bother!"

I wrote the first sitting at my desk, and said the last aloud, impatiently—well, there, angrily for Mattie had hurried into the room, run to the back of my chair, and clapped her hands over my eyes, exclaiming:

"Oh, Dick, what a shame! And you promised to come up and dress!"

"I do wish you would not be so childish," I cried, snatching away her hands. "There's a blot you've made on my manuscript."

"Don't be so cross, sir!" she said, laughing, as she gave a waltz round the room, making her pretty silk dress whisk over one of the light chairs, which she merrily picked up, and then, coming to my writing table, she took a rose out of a basket of flowers, and began to arrange it in her hair.

"I'm not cross," I said, coldly, "but engaged in a serious work of a mercantile and monetary nature. You seem to think men ought always to be butterflies."

"No, I don't, Dick dear," she cried. "There, will that do?"

She held her head on one side for me to see the creamy rose nestling in her crisp dark hair; but, after a glance at it, I let my eyes fall upon my desk, and went on writing my pamphlet. I saw that she was looking wistfully at me, but I paid no heed, and then she came and rested her hands upon my shoulder.

"Are you cross with me, Dick?" she said softly.

"Cross? no!" I jerked out impatiently. "Only I thought I had married a woman, and she has turned out to be a child."

There was silence then for a few moments, only broken by the scratching of my pen. The little hands twitched a little as they lay upon my shoulder, and I very nearly wrote down, instead of "The calculations arrived at by the projectors of tontines"—"Richard Marlow, how can you be such a disagreeable wretch?" But of course I did not write it—only thought—and then I felt wonderfully disposed to turn round, snatch the little graceful figure to my breast, and kiss away the tears which I knew were gathering in her eyes.

Somehow or another, though, I did not do it—only went on glumly writing—for I was cross, worried and annoyed. I had set myself a task that necessitated constant application, and I was not getting on as I could wish; so, like many more weak-minded individuals of the male sex, instead of asking for the comfort and advice of my wife, I visited my disappointment upon the first weak object at hand, and that object was the lady in question.

"Please, Dick dear, don't be angry with me. I can't help feeling very young and girlish, though I am your wife. I do try, oh! so hard, to be womanly, but Dick dear, I'm only 18 and a half."

"Thirteen and a half, I should say," I said, scornfully, just as if some sour spirit were urging me on to say biting, sarcastic things that I knew would pain the poor girl; but, for the life of me, I could not help it.

There was no answer—only a little sigh—and the hands were withdrawn.

I went on writing—rubbish that I knew I should have to cancel.

"Had you not better get ready, Dick?" said Mattie softly. "You said you would come when I went upstairs, and the Wilsons won't like it if we are late."

"Hang the Wilsons!" I growled.

There was another pause, filled up by the scratch, scratch of one of the noisiest pens I ever used, and another little sigh.

Mattie was standing close behind me, but I did not look round, and at last she glided gently to a chair and sat down.

"What are you going to do?" I said roughly.

"Only to wait for you, Dick dear," she replied.

"You need not wait. Go on. I shan't come. Say I've been here—say anything."

"Dick, are you unwell?" she said tenderly, as she came behind me once more, and rested her little hands on my shoulder.

"Yes—no. Pray don't bother. Go on. Perhaps I'll come and fetch you."

There was another pause.

"Dick dear, I'd rather not go without you," she said meekly, at last.

"And I'd rather you did go without me!" I said angrily. "The Wilsons are our best friends, and I won't have them slighted."

"Then why not come, Dick dear," said the little woman, and I could see that she was struggling bravely to keep down her tears.

"Because I've no time for such frivolity. There, you've wasted enough of my time already, so go."

Scratch, scratch, scratch, went that exasperating pen, as I went on writing more stuff to cancel, and yet too weak and angry to leave off like a sensible man, run up and change my things, and accompany my little wife to the pleasant social gathering a few doors lower down our road.

She had been looking forward to the visit as a treat. So had I till that gloomy fit came over me; but as I had taken the steps already made, I felt that I could not retreat without looking foolish, so I acted with that usual wisdom displayed by man under such circumstances, and made matters worse.

"Did you hear me say that I wished you to go alone?" I said angrily.

"Yes, yes, Dick dear, I'll go if you wish," Mattie said very meekly; "but indeed I'd far rather stay at home."

"You are desired to go; you have a rose in your hair," I said, satirically—oh, what poor satire, when it was put there to please me!—"and they expect you; so now go—and enjoy yourself." I added, by way of a sting to my insensible speech.

"I can't enjoy myself, Dick," she said gently, "unless you come too. Let me stay."

"I desire you to go!" I exclaimed, banging my hand down on the desk.

She looked at me with the great tears standing in her piteous eyes, and then, coming nearer, she bent over me and kissed my forehead.

"Will you come and fetch me, Dick?" she said softly.

"Yes—no—perhaps—I don't know," I said roughly, as I repelled her caresses; and then, looking wistfully at me, she went slowly to the door, glided out, and was gone.

That broke the spell, and I started from my seat, but more angry than ever. I was wroth with her now for obeying me so meekly, and I gently opened the door, to hear her call the maid and tell her to accompany her as far as the Wilsons.

Then I heard them go—heard the girl return, the door close, and I was alone.

Alone? Well, not exactly; for, so to speak, I was having an interview with my angry self, as I felt that I was, asking how I could let a feeling of annoyance act upon my better nature, and make me behave as I had to the sweet little girlish being who, during the six months we had been married, had never looked at me but with the eyes of love.

"Change your things and go after her," something seemed to say; but I repelled it, threw my writing aside, kicked off my boots, snatched my slippers out of the sideboard, thrust the easy chair in front of the cosy fire, threw myself into it, and then with my feet on the fender and my hands in my pockets, I sat, morose, bitter and uncomfortable, gazing at the glowing embers.

"She had no business to go!" I exclaimed. "She knew I was up all last night, writing that abominable book, and was out of sorts, and ought to have stayed."

Then I reviewed the past half-hour, and grew calmer as I leaned back, knowing as I did, and well, that I had forced her to go, poor child, and how miserable she would be.

"She'll forget it among all those people," I said bitterly; but I did not believe it, and at last I sat there calling myself ass, idiot, blind madman, to plant, as I had, the first seeds of what might grow into a very upas-tree of dissension, and blight the whole of our married life.

"Poor little darling!" I said at last; "I'll wait up till she comes home, and then tell her how sorry I am for my folly, and ask her forgiveness."

"But, as a man, can I do that?" I said.

"Will it not be weak?"

"Never mind," I exclaimed, "I'll do it! Surely, there can be no braver thing to do than own one's self in the wrong. Life is too short to blur it with petty quarrels. And suppose she were taken ill to-night—my darling whom I love with all my heart? Or, suppose she went too near the fire, and her dress caught alight? There, how absurd! Thank goodness, she is in silk, and not in one of those fly-away muslins!"

I sat on, musing and musing, till suddenly there was a buzz outside the house, then the rush of feet. I fancied I heard the word "fire!" repeated again and again, and turning to the window, there was a glow which lighted up the whole place.

I dashed downstairs, and out of the door, to find the road thronged, for a house a little lower down was in flames, and, to my horror, I had not taken a dozen steps before I found that it was at our friends' the Wilsons'.

There was no engine, but a crowd of excited people, talking eagerly; and just then the fire escape came trundling along the road.

It was quite time, for the house as I reached it was blazing furiously, the flames darting out in long fiery tongues from half the upper windows, while at several there were people crying piteously for help.

I fought my way through the crowd, and tried to run up to the house, but half a dozen officious people held me back; while the men with the fire escape tried to rear it against the house; but it would not reach, because of the garden in front, so that they had to get the wheels of the escape over the iron railings, and this caused great delay.

"Let me go!" I panted to those who held me. "Let me go! Some one—some one in the house."

"You can't do any good, sir," said a policeman roughly. "The escape men will do all they can."

But I struggled frantically and got loose, feeling all the while a horrible despairing sensation, as I knew that my poor darling was one of the shrieking supplicants for help at the upper windows, and that but for my folly I might have saved her.

As I freed myself from those who held me, and ran to the escape, it was to find that the man who had ascended it had just been beaten back by the flames.

"It's no good," he said; "we must try the back."

He was about to drag the machine away, when I heard my name called, "Dick! Dick!" in piteous tones; and as I was once more seized, I shook myself free, rushed up the ladder, with the flames scorching and burning my face, and, panting breathless, I reached a window where Mattie stood stretching out her hands.

I got astride of the sill, the flames being wafted away from me, and threw my arm around her; but as I did so the ladder gave way, burned through by the flames that gushed furiously from the lower window, and I felt that I must either jump, or try and descend by the staircase.

There was no time for thinking, so I climbed in, lifted Mattie in my arms, feeling her dress crumble in my hands as I touched her, and the horrible odor of burnt hair rose in my nostrils as I saw her wild and blackened face turned to mine.

"Dick, Dick!" she gasped, "save me!" and then she fainted.

Fortunately, I was as much at home in the house as in my room, and making for the staircase through the flame and smoke, I reached it in safety, but below me was what seemed to be a fiercely blazing furnace.

I recoiled for a moment, but it was my only hope, and I recalled that the lower floor was as yet untouched by the fire: it was the one beneath me that was blazing so furiously.

So, getting a good tight grip on my treasure, I rushed down the burning stairs, feeling them crackle and give way as I bounded from one to the other.

It was a fiery ordeal, but in a few seconds I was below the flames, and reached the hall, where, panting and suffocating, I struggled to the door, reached it, and fell.

If I could but open it, I knew we were saved; but I was exhausted, and the hot air caught me by the throat and seemed to strangle me. I raised my hand to the lock, but it fell back. I beat feebly at the door, but there was only the roar of flames to answer me, and as I made one more supreme effort, panting and struggling to reach the fastening, I was, as it were, dragged back by the weight of the burden I still clasped to my breast.

It was more than human endurance could bear, and I felt that the end was near; and to make my sufferings more poignant, Mattie seemed to revive, struggling with me for her life, as she kept repeating my name, and clung to me till—

"Dick—dear Dick! wake; pray wake! Are you ill?"

I started up to find Mattie clinging to me; and clasping her tightly to my heart, a great sob burst from my breast as I kissed her passionately again and again, hardly able to believe my senses.

"Oh, Dick," she panted, "you did frighten me so! I couldn't stay to supper at the Wilsons'; dear, for I could do nothing but think about your sitting here, alone, and cross with me. So—so—so, I was so miserable, Dick, and I slipped away and came home to find you lying here, panting and struggling; you wouldn't wake when I shook you. Were you ill?"

"Oh, no, not at all," I said, as I kissed her again and again, feeling now for the first time sensible of a smarting pain in one foot.

"You've burnt yourself too, Dick: look at your foot."

It was quite true; the toe of one slipper must have been in contact with the fire, and it was burned completely off.

"But Dick, dear Dick," she whispered, nestling closer to me, "are you very, very angry with your little wife for being such a girl?"

I could not answer, only thank God that my weak fit of folly was past, as I clasped her closer and closer yet.

"Mattie," I whispered at last in a very husky voice, "can you forgive me for being so weak?"

I could say no more for the hindrance of two soft lips placed upon mine; and while they rested there I made a vow I hope I shall have strength to keep; for real troubles are so many, it is folly to invent the false.

At last, when I was free, I took the rose from where it nestled in her hair and placed it in my pocket-book, while, in answer to the inquiring eyes that were bent on mine, I merely said—

"For a moment of a dreadful dream."

By the way, I never finished that pamphlet. Casey's.

Tight Lacing.

This is a question, the mere mention of which is "tabooed" in polite society. He who is bold enough to protest against the prevailing fashions, whether of corsets, banded hair or high heels, must be prepared to encounter the frowns of the fairest, and, perhaps, excommunication from all social circles in which he dare exercise the liberty of free speech. It is utterly useless to attempt to convince young women of the evils that later come from lacing. No child is satisfied that fire will burn until his own fingers have been blistered, and, strange as it may seem, it is quite as difficult to convince matrons of middle age, when they have had their forms, from childhood, held in the grip of steel and buckram.

"Were I to leave off my corsets," says one, "I should be limp as a rag. These strengthen and sustain me." Quite right, madam, but why? Simply because you have worn corsets so long that they have appropriated the office that the muscles of the chest were intended for, and these, having nothing to do, have dwindled away or perished, leaving the upper half of your body to be supported by corsets. What nature has no use for, she finally dispenses with. She is generous, but, at the same time, exercises a wise economy, and does not long burden us with useless gifts.

Paralysis of the pectoral muscles is the least of the evils induced by lacing. Long continued pressure on the vital organs impedes their action and deranges their functions. It is a prominent cause of heart disease, consumption and spinal irritation. It is not necessary to be a physiologist to feel a sort of disgust for an abnormally small waist, or a philanthropist to pity its victim. There is something barbarous and repulsive in the fashion of making cripples of Chinese women by lacing their feet. Would it be more humane to make perpetual invalids of them by lacing their bodies?

Odds and Ends Corner in the Garden.

(Written by MURIEL.)

While cultivating and pruning a garden every-one will find cuttings, bulbs, seeds and roots too good to throw away, and no one to give them to; prepare the soil in a handy spot near the house and plant these odds and ends of every thing promiscuously, and just from the fact of having to give no thought to it, you will find it easy to save these things, and in a short time will appreciate such a spot for cut flowers when the parent plant will be resting, or under the best of seeming care, stubbornly refuse to bloom. Be sure and select the place handy for water, or near the kitchen, where it will get waste water enriched by a little of everything. In a long border down a walk but little used I have hundreds of narcissus bulbs, and as some get more sun or more moisture than others, I have them in bloom from October till May, and find them invaluable, as they fill the need of other light colored flowers. I find the Laurestinus very valuable also, all the year round. Always go to the shady side for pure white blossoms, while those kissed by the sun are flushed with pink. With white, pink and scarlet Bouvardias and tea roses, with Diosina alba, and Melaleuca Ericafolia for feathery green, a lovely, graceful bouquet is always to be had, providing you have the climate of any part of southern California, or any part where severe frosts do not prevail. Here in Santa Barbara we have an addition to the above from our gardens, at all seasons, tuberoses, gardenias, carnations and other very choice flowers.

A HEAVY BRAIN.—It is well known that, although many distinguished men have had very large brains, these have been occasionally equaled by the brains of persons who never displayed remarkable intellect. Another illustration of this has been lately published in the Cincinnati Lancet, by Dr. Halderman, of Columbus. A mulatto named Washington Napper, aged 45 years, recently died in the hospital at that town, in consequence of purulent infection due to an abscess of the thigh. His brain was found to weigh 689 ounces, nearly 5 ounces more than the famous brain of Cuvier. His height was six feet; his limbs are said to have been ape-like in length, his head was massive, lips thick, lower jaw prominent, but his forehead large and well developed. He had been a slave until the year 1862, and had never been regarded as particularly intelligent. He was illiterate, but is said to have been reserved, meditative and economical.

TO KEEP THE GRATES BRIGHT.—When a grate is purchased, and you ask how to keep the polished parts as bright as they then are, you will almost always get an evasive answer, for what reason I never could understand. I would suppose that the venders of grates would be pleased to know that the grates they dispose of would always look clean and bright after they have left their possession. I have, however, discovered a mode for keeping the polished parts of grates perfectly bright, without using an undue quantity of "elbow grease" either. It is simply to take a piece of flannel, moisten it with coal-oil, next dip in powdered emery, and rub, when brightness will suddenly appear, and the matronly heart will be gladdened.—*Cor. ### A True Story.

(Written by I. H.)

Daisy was a very little girl, and she lived in a large city where there was nothing to be seen in any direction but houses standing close to each other, and dusty streets full of noisy carts and wagons.

"I wish I could go to the country," she sometimes said to her mother, and Mamma would answer, "Well, some day you shall." But neither Daisy nor her mother had any idea of the way in which she was to go; and when you have heard all about it, you will think it was not a pleasant way at all.

Every afternoon in the summer when the sun was getting low in the west, and throwing long cool shadows down the street in which she lived, Daisy was taken up stairs and washed and dressed, a nice white apron was put on and her pretty soft hair brushed and curled, and then she went out and sat on the door-step and watched for her papa to come home to tea. Sometimes she took her doll; sometimes she played with the other children living near, but I am quite sure she had been told not to go out of sight of the house.

One day it happened that she was ready earlier than usual, so that none of her little playmates were to be seen when she went out. Mamma was in the back part of the house, and just then no one was passing by, so that for ten minutes Daisy was entirely alone; but in those ten minutes a very strange thing occurred. A woman came slowly walking along, and stopped when she saw Daisy. She was poorly dressed, and had not a pleasant face, but she spoke pleasantly enough to the little girl.

"Where is your mother, dear?"

"Up stairs—dressin'," said Daisy.

The woman looked quickly up and down the street. No one was in sight. She drew nearer, and said, coaxingly:

"What a nice little girl you are. I would like to give you an orange. You like oranges, don't you?"

"Yes," said Daisy, readily.

"Well, come with me round the corner and I'll give you a great big one."

Now no doubt Daisy ought to have said, "I can't go without asking my mamma," but she was a very little girl, and the temptation was too strong. She got up and went with the woman, who took her by the hand and seemed in a great hurry. Round the corner they went, but no oranges were in sight, and when Daisy asked, "Where's my orange?" the woman laughed, "It's only a little further off," she said; "I'll carry you, so you won't get tired."

"No!" said Daisy, beginning to be afraid, "I don't want to be carried."

But in spite of her struggles the woman picked her up. "Be quiet now," she said roughly, "if you make any noise I'll beat you till you're black and blue."

Pressing the child's face against her bosom to silence her cries, the woman hastened along and finally disappeared down a dark alley.

Little Daisy was stolen!

I can't tell you what Daisy's mother felt when she went to the front door and found no little daughter there; how she searched through the house and the whole neighborhood, but all in vain; how she met papa on his way home and told him the dreadful news; nor how the police and the newspapers the next day joined in the search for the lost child.

They did not find her, for very early in the morning the woman who had stolen her, took her out of the miserable bed where she had sobbed herself to sleep, and carried her, still sleeping, away beyond the city limits out upon a lonely road. She was a wretched tramp, who picked up a living by begging from the country people, and she thought every one would be more apt to help her if she had a child to take along with her. For this reason she had taken poor little Daisy. They stopped at a farm house where they got some breakfast and then walked on and on till the child was too tired to go further, when they rested beside a hay-stack and both slept for some hours. Another farm was reached about supper time, and there they slept in the barn. The woman was not unkind to Daisy, and when they were in the presence of other people spoke to her very lovingly, but at the same time she warned her that if she should tell any one that she was not her mother, she would kill her and throw her into the river. So you may be sure the little girl said not a word.

Day after day went by, but at last the fatigue and exposure made poor little Daisy ill. She awoke one morning with a sore throat and a burning fever, and the woman was frightened when she looked at her. She must find some way to get rid of her, she thought, for she could not be carrying a sick child about the country. She looked around. There was a house in sight, and, taking Daisy in her arms, she made her way to it, and told some pitiful story to the inmates.

They were kind-hearted people, and when they saw the little girl's flushed cheeks and glistening eyes, they said she was not fit to travel, and must stop and rest there with her mother for a day or two. This was just what the woman wanted. She seemed very grateful, and when Daisy fell asleep in her arms, she laid her on a lounge in the sitting-room, and sat in the kitchen talking to the farmer's wife for some time. No one noticed when she went out, or thought anything of her absence till Daisy awoke. Then, they went to call her, but she was not to be found.

The woman of the house came back to Daisy, and found her crying. "Don't cry, dear," she said kindly, "your mother can't be far off; she will be back presently."

"Oh," said Daisy, starting up, "she's not my mamma; she's not my mamma. She stole me from my own mamma; I hope she won't come back any more."

This seemed too strange a story to be believed at first, but when hour after hour passed, and the woman did not return, the people at the farm began to think it must be true. They questioned Daisy, who told a very straight story, and never altered it in the least; but when they asked her where her home was, she could only say "In the city." The name of the street she did not know, nor that her father and mother had any name but "papa" and "mamma."

"Did she know anyone else?"

"Yes; Mr. Jones, the baker."

The farmer looked at his wife; they knew a baker in the city, whose name was Jones; could he be the same? There was an easy way to find out.

"Nurse her up, wife, and get her well by tomorrow; I don't believe there is much the matter with her, and I'll hitch up in the morning and take you both in, and if we can't find her folks, we'll bring her back and keep her till we do find 'em."

So the next morning, Daisy, for whom a comfortable bed and good food had done wonders, rode back to the city seated between the farmer and his wife in the big wagon. They stopped before the bakery she knew so well, and out came Mr. Jones himself.

"Why, bless my soul!" he exclaimed; "who have you got here? Daisy! little Daisy!" and he picked her up and hugged her on the spot.

"Not a word," he said to the farmer; "I can't hear one word till I get on my coat, and go with you to take her home to her mother. Then you can tell me all about it."

So Mr. Jones got into the wagon, too, and they all went together to give Daisy back to her mother.

You will have to guess for yourselves how she was kissed, and hugged, and laughed over, and cried over, all in a breath, for I can never tell you. But of this I am sure, Daisy never after that would have gone away with a stranger, not even if she had been promised the moon.

YOUNG George D. having importuned his father for a horse, the indulgent parent presented him with the ancient steed which for years had carried him about the streets. A few days afterwards the affectionate son approached the father and renewed his request, saying: "Father, can't you give me a horse a little nearer my own age, that would be more of a companion for me?"

Household Hints.

ORANGE PIE.—Take a teacupful of pulverized sugar and a tablespoonful of soft butter and rub them till smooth as cream; mix a tablespoonful of corn starch in as little cold water as will dissolve it; then stir it in a teacupful of boiling water; let this cook until it is thick, but not so thick that it will harden instantly when cool; add this to the butter and sugar. Grate the peel from half an orange, taking care not to grate any of the thick inner skin; add this and the juice of the orange and one beaten egg to the other ingredients. Make some nice paste and line a moderately deep pie plate with it, arrange it around the edge, as if for a custard pie; then bake it. Remove it from the oven and put it with the orange custard described above, and to this add thin slices of another large orange. Set this in the oven for the egg to harden. If you wish this to be especially tempting, make a meringue of the whites of two eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar; spread this over the pie when it is done, and let it brown lightly in the oven.

LADY FINGERS.—Lady fingers made after this recipe are very nice for tea. Then should be eaten while fresh. Rub half a pound of butter into a pound of flour; to this add half a pound of sugar, the juice and grated rind of one large lemon, and lastly, three eggs, the whites and yolks beaten separately, and the whites stirred in after all the other ingredients are well mixed together. This dough, if properly made, will be stiff enough to make rolls about the size of a lady's finger. It will spread when in the oven so that it will be of the right size and shape. If you wish them to be especially inviting, dip them in chocolate icing after they are baked. Take pains to see that the icing is so hard that it will not run, and set the cakes on a platter in a cool room until the icing is firm.

BUCKWHEAT CAKES.—One teacupful of corn-meal, two of wheat flour, four of buckwheat, two teaspoonfuls of salt; mix all up with sufficient warm water to make a pouring batter, then add a teacupful of yeast. Let it rise over night, keeping it warm. Bake in the morning. Leave a pint of batter to set to again, and you do not need any more yeast the whole winter. Keep it cool when not wanted. It may happen that the batter gets sour, if so, add, just before baking, one teaspoonful of baking soda, dissolved in a teacup of cold water, stir and bake immediately. They will be light, palatable and more wholesome than when made all buckwheat.

BAKED APPLE PUDDING. Five moderate-sized apples, two tablespoonfuls of finely-chopped suet, three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of flour, one pint of milk, a little grated nutmeg. Mix the flour to a smooth batter with the milk, add the eggs, which should be well whisked, and put the latter into a well-buttered pie-dish. Wipe the apples, but do not pare them; cut them in halves and take out the cores; lay them in the batter, rind upmost; shake the suet on the top, over which also grate a little nutmeg; bake in a moderate oven for an hour and cover, when served, with sifted loaf sugar. This pudding is also very good with the apples pared, sliced and mixed with the batter.

PEACH ICE CREAM.—Delicious peach ice cream is made by rubbing through a sieve one dozen whole canned peaches, or what is equal to that number, and six ounces of white sugar, and one pint and a half of sweet cream should then be mixed with the pulp. After a thorough beating freeze it as you do common ice cream. If you wish to make the fancy complete and have the cream a peach color, a few drops of cochineal can be used; or if you object to that, the cream may be colored with the juice of the red raspberry.

WASHING harness with warm water and soap soon injures the leather. All varnishes, and blacking containing varnish, are injurious. When harness becomes rusty, give a new coat of grain black. Before applying this, wash the grain side of the leather with potash water, cold, until all the grease is removed. After the leather is quite dry, apply the grain black, and then oil and tallow. This fastens the color and makes the harness flexible and soft. Grained harness can be cleaned by a cloth moistened with kerosene, but should be immediately washed and oiled afterward.

TO PRESERVE WIRE ROPE.—The Scientific American says that to preserve wire rope against wet and rust and keep it pliable apply raw linseed oil with a piece of sheepskin, wool inside; or mix the oil with equal parts of Spanish brown and lamp black. To preserve wire rope under water or under ground, take mineral or vegetable tar, add one bushel of fresh slaked lime to one barrel of tar, which will neutralize the acid; boil it well, then saturate the rope with boiling tar.

TO REMOVE PUTTY.—Old putty may be readily softened and removed by using a paste of caustic lye, easily prepared by mixing carbonate of potash (or soda) with equal parts of freshly burned quicklime, which has been previously sprinkled with water so as to cause it to fall into powder. This should be mixed with water to a paste, and spread on the putty to be softened. If one application is not sufficient, it should be repeated.

Health Column.

SCIENTIFIC NURSING.—There is no subject so much general interest as this, concerning which there is, at the same time, such a widely prevalent ignorance. There are few, especially among women, upon whom will not devolve, at some time in their lives, the care of the sick; fewer still, who will not at some time become dependent upon such care; and it might naturally be supposed that matters of such primary and universal importance as sanitary conditions and the practical application in the sick room of scientific principles would be too familiar to every one to need to be further enlarged upon. But the fact is, it too frequently happens that all the scientific knowledge which ever enters the sick room comes in with the doctor and goes out again with him. This state of things requires to be improved. Knowledge, and that correct knowledge we call science, is just as indispensable to the nurse as to anybody else. It is a great mistake to suppose that all women—even good women—make good nurses. The best intention and the tenderest heart may co-exist with an utter lack of executive ability, and be more than counterbalanced by ignorance and prejudice. Native aptitude gives advantage, but it cannot be relied upon alone. Even those who possess in the highest degree the natural gift of ministration which renders them so acceptable to the invalid, would find their power of usefulness very largely increased by a familiarity with what may be properly called the science of the sick room. Physicians are recognizing more and more the importance of hygienic agencies in the treatment of disease, and with this there has come an increasingly urgent call for the scientific instruction and practical training of those who are to take charge of invalids. Science explains the conditions upon which the art of the nurse depends, and lays down principles which cannot be violated without injury; but it is not at all necessary to make a parade of technical language in stating its requirements. Popular Science Monthly.

EFFECTS OF TOO MUCH BRAIN WORK FOR CHILDREN.—On April 28th, Dr. Richardson delivering a lecture on "Natural Necessities as Basis of Natural Education," before the Society of Arts, brought forward, writes F. C. S., the following extract, which happened to be a report of the chairman of the evening. Mr. Edwin Chadwick, C. B., to the British Association in 1860, to show what an evil effect too much brain work, without a proportional amount of industrial occupation to support it, has upon young children: "In one large establishment, containing about 600 children, half girls and half boys, the means of industrial occupation were gained for the girls before any were obtained for the boys. The girls were therefore put upon half-time tuitions, that is to say, their time of book instruction was reduced from 36 hours to 18 hours per week, given on the three alternate days of their industrial occupation, the boys remaining at full school time of 36 hours per week, the teaching being the same, on the same system and by the same teachers, the same school attendance in weeks and years in both cases. On the periodical examination of the school, surprise was expressed by the inspectors at finding how much more alert, mentally, the girls were than the boys, and in advance in book attainments. Subsequently, industrial occupation was found for the boys, when their time of book instruction was reduced from 36 hours a week to 18, and after a while the boys were proved, upon examination, to have obtained their previous relative position, which was in advance of the girls."

HOW DIMPLES ARE MADE.—This is the way dimples are manufactured in Chicago, if a reporter of the Herald of that city tells the truth: "My arm being bare and the exact spot indicated, he (the operator) placed a small glass tube, the orifice of which was extremely small, upon the spot. This tube had working within it a piston, and was so small that when the handle was drawn up the air was exhausted from the tube and it adhered to the flesh, raising a slight protuberance. Around this raised portion the operator daintily tied a bit of scarlet silk, and then took away his suction machine. The little point of skin that was thus raised he sliced off with a wicked looking knife, bringing the blood. I tried hard not to scream, but it was so unexpected that I had to. Then he bound up the arm, placing over the wound a small silver object like an inverted cone, the point of which was rounded and polished. This little point was adjusted so as to depress the exact center of the cut. Then he told me to go away and not touch the spot until the next day. When I came at that time he dressed my arm again, and this operation was repeated for five days, when the wound was healed. The silver cone was removed, and there, sure enough beneath it was the prettiest dimple in the world! And all I had to pay was $10."

HEADACHE. Dr. Haley says (Australian Medical Journal, Aug. 15, 1881), that as a rule, a dull, heavy headache, situated over the brows, and accompanied by languor, chilliness, and a feeling of general discomfort, with distaste for food, which often approaches to nausea, can be completely removed in about 10 minutes, by a two-grain dose of iodide of potassium, dissolved in half a wineglassful of water; this should be so sipped that the whole quantity may be consumed in about 10 minutes. —Glasgow Medical Journal.

Lodge Locals.

Recorders are invited to correspond. Lodges may also find suitable reading here for "Good of the Order."

Excelsior, 126.

To keep alive the interest, and perhaps infuse a new vitality into the Lodge meetings, Excelsior has just inaugurated a series of "open Lodge" meetings, to be held on the third Thursday evening of alternate months. The first of these took place on Thursday evening, Feb. 15th, and was in every way a success. In spite of many competing attractions, Masonic hall, one of the largest Lodge halls in the city, corner of Sixteenth and Valencia streets, was comfortably filled. The following varied and excellent programme was presented: Piano solo, by the ever obliging organist of the Lodge, Prof. Hahn; address on revivals, having special reference to Excelsior Lodge, by Bro. T. V. O'Brien; quartette, "The Artillerist's Oath," by Messrs. A. L. and S. Mann, Mr. C. C. Flagg and Bro. S. Booth; recitation, by Bro. Hirsh, of San Jose; duo for violin and piano, by Prof. and Mr. Rudolph Hahn; vocal duet, "The Minute Gun at Sea," Mr. C. C. Flagg and Bro. S. Booth; original essay, by Bro. Wm. White; reading, by Bro. J. W. Howard; jubilee song and chorus, Bro. S. Booth, Messrs. A. L. Mann and C. C. Flagg, and Sister Ella Booth, of Golden Dawn, D. of H., No. 10; duo for banjo and bandoline, by Messrs. McMahon and West; recitation, by Mrs. Wm. White, who repeated by particular request, her inimitable personation of "Josiah Allen's Wife." In a programme of such general excellence, it would be invidious to single out anyone for special praise, but the Lodge is particularly indebted to Prof. and Mr. Rudolph Hahn, for their splendid duet on the violin and piano; to Bro. Hirsh, of San Jose, for his amusing sketches and imitations; to Messrs. A. L. and S. Mann and Mr. C. C. Flagg, for their vocal contributions; to Messrs. McMahon and West, for their admirable and unique performance on the banjo and bandoline, and also to Mrs. Wm. White, whose former favors are hereby acknowledged, and whose efforts are always warmly appreciated. The next open Lodge entertainment of Excelsior will take place on the third Thursday in April, when it will be the endeavor of the committee, to provide an entertainment, equally excellent and worthy the fame of the Lodge.

Hercules, 53.

The brethren of Hercules held their monthly social on Friday evening, February 16th ult. After the business of the Lodge had been finished, which was transacted with quick dispatch, the doors were thrown open to their families and invited guests, filling the hall. Wm. Leitch, M. W., acted as Master of Ceremonies, and in a very creditable manner introduced the following programme, viz: Overture, Prof. Kerr; a fine rendition; address, Wm. H. Barnes, Grand Master. His short and interesting speech was listened to with close attention. Among the many good things he said were these: "Eight out of ten of the widows, who have received the $2,000 at our hands, have been comparatively poor. I have traveled extensively in this State, and I know that we have the picked men of our community." Duet, Piano and violin, Masters George and Walter Johnson, a highly creditable and pleasing effort for these young artists; comic recitation, Edward Chandler. His characteristic delineations caused much amusement. Piano solo, Miss Blanche Brown; original essay, recited by little Miss Rachael Wolfsohn, daughter of Henry Wolfsohn, which we print elsewhere; vocal solo, Miss Carrie Hiennaman accompanied by Miss Rosenheim. This young lady has a clear, sweet voice of great compass and her artistic effort was awarded a hearty recall, and at the close these young ladies were each presented with a large bouquet. Specialties and recall, Mr. Edward Hines; piano solo, Prof. Kerr; Chinese imitations, Mr. J. Gorf, which created much laughter and received a double recall, which was kindly answered; recitation, Master George Johnson. At request Miss Rachael Wolfsohn recited a piece from the WATCHMAN, entitled, "Twin Evils—Intemperance and Tobacco," in a very entertaining manner. The Misses Heinnaman and Rosenbaum, by special request, sang a duet that fittingly closed a charming and instructive entertainment. The audience were dismissed by all joining in singing "Our Closing Ode." The monthly socials of Hercules are always a success.

SAN JOAQUIN.

Entertainment of Stockton Lodge, No. 23. Bro. J. H. Hornage writes the WATCHMAN of the good time they had on the visit of G. M. W., Barnes, of San Francisco, Feb. 23d. About one hundred members were present, and a large number of visitors from Linden and Lockport Lodges. After the Lodge was opened, the M. W., appointed P. M., J. W. Payne, J. R. Williams and M. Paulsell a committee to wait upon Mr. Barnes, who was stopping at the Yosemite house, that the Lodge was ready to receive him. Under the proper head, Grand Master Barnes, delivered a lecture, on the good the Order had done, and the outlook for future usefulness, which was listened to with intense interest. He then exemplified the secret work. Learning that Bro. Barnes was a good singer and performer on the organ, he was requested to entertain the members, which he did, for about twenty minutes, under the good of the Order, to their great satisfaction. G. M. Barnes gave such a glowing account of the good the ladies might be to them, should they organize a D. of H., that Bro. H. J. H. Hornage was appointed a committee of one to secure a list of charter members, and report at the next regular meeting of the Lodge. It will be organized without a doubt, as he has already secured over sixty names. After the Lodge closed, the members and visitors repaired to a restaurant, where a splendid collation was prepared, and spent an hour in feasting, making short speeches, and general good cheer.

YOLO.

Yolo Lodge, 22.

Yolo Lodge, No. 22, of Woodland, celebrated its fifth anniversary Tuesday evening, Feb. 20th, and the occasion gathered a large audience of the members, their families and friends. An address was delivered by Grand Master Barnes, and a concert of excellent music rendered by the Misses Walker, Miss Poole, Professor H. W. Hand, J. C. Williams and others, at the conclusion of which all were invited to partake of a liberal collation in the banquet-room. No. 22 is one of the old Lodges, has 107 members on its roll, been so favored as to lose only one member by death during its five years' existence.

Nevada.

St. James Lodge.

We had a pleasant call from Bro. A. C. McAlpin, member of St. James Lodge, No. 9, Winnemucca, Nevada. He says the A. O. U. W. are in a flourishing condition all over that State, the membership of that jurisdiction now numbering about 1,600. St. James Lodge has a membership of 53, and a fund of $1,100 in the treasury. All the leading citizens of Winnemucca are members of the Order. We should judge from Mr. McAlpin's glowing account that St. James was one of the bright stars in that jurisdiction.

A Letter from Michigan Bluff.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—So seldom do we notice in your valuable paper any communications from this district that we think it would not be out of place, to drop you a line to give evidence that we still live.

The A. O. U. W., at this place is one of the main features of the town, as also it is at our neighboring town of Forest Hill. The brethren of the latter place, have a petition in the hands of the Grand Master Workman, for the organization of a Lodge of the Degree of Honor, bearing 25 names, and Main Top Lodge of Michigan Bluffs, has set apart its meeting night, of Feb. 28th to admit the families of its members, to canvass the matter in regard to the formation of a Lodge of said degree. This Lodge has a membership of 38 Master Workmen in good standing, the most of whom are earnest and enthusiastic in the work of the Order.

Upon two occasions in our community within the last year has been thoroughly set forth the great good, for which the A. O. U. W., was founded, that of the reception of a $2,000 beneficiary by widows of deceased Brothers.

Brothers Powell and Campbell have been summoned from among us, and through the medium of the A. O. U. W., have each left a large family well provided for.

Main Top Lodge can point with pride to its record, as never having suspended a member for any cause whatever.

Feb. 11, 1883.

WORKMAN.

Brother Wm. A. Bennetts of Ione writes to the Watchman: Ione Lodge, No. 141, is progressing slow but sure—we now number about 54 members, all active, healthy and strong. We have just moved into a new hall owned by Bro. B. Isaacs; it is nicely furnished and very comfortable.

A good business in the reception of new members, is now being done by nearly every Lodge in California.

Reasons for Insuring One's Life.

1. Because it is every one's duty to provide for those dependent upon him.
2. Because this can be done more easily and certainly through life insurance than by any other means.
3. Because life insurance fosters habits of frugality and economy.
4. Because the insurance of one's life creates an immediate capital at a trifling outlay, which will be available to his family when they most need it.
5. Because the man whose life is insured is relieved from harassing cares in regard to the future of those whom he leaves behind him.
6. Because life insurance is the most potent preventive of pauperism, and the surest indemnity to society against the support of a helpless widow and children.
7. Because life insurance counteracts the tendency towards centralization of wealth and effects its distribution among those whose necessities are the greatest.
8. Because, if a man be poor, his family's entire support may be removed by his death, unless, by the practice of a little self denial during his life, he secures them a competency through life insurance.
9. Because, if a man be rich, the payment of the annual premiums will fall lightly upon him; and, by insuring his life, he provides effectually against all possible reverses of fortune.
10. Because, life insurance, regarded from a business point of view, is emphatically a good investment, it being the direct product of the cardinal business principles of prudence and economy, and securing the formation of a valuable aggregate out of small and unimportant savings.

11. Because the insurance of one's life creates a fund upon which he is not required to pay tax, which needs not to be insured against loss, cannot be taken for the debts of the insurer and is paid directly to the beneficiaries, without the delays and expenses of administration.—N. Y. Independent.

RECIPE FOR SECURING LARGE ATTENDANCE AT LODGE MEETINGS.—To ten pounds of Boston crackers and five pounds of cheese add three quarts of mixed pickles, (the cheese should be cut into small pieces.) Spread the crackers on a long table and set the cheese and pickles at equal distances, and to every two feet of table set one mug and spoon; fill mugs with hot coffee, say two-thirds old government Java and one-third Mocha; a variety of ice cream, say lemon, vanilla and strawberry, in equal parts, will impart a pleasant flavor and adds to the strength. The efficiency of the above is greatly enhanced by telling some "nimble tongue"—such as every regular and well-regulated Lodge is sure to have—when it is to be served, say two or three weeks in advance, not forgetting to add that it must be kept a secret.—Banner of Chosen Friends.

PERSONAL TESTIMONY AS TO EGG NOG.—The editor of the Sylvania (Ga.) Telephone has been to an egg nog party. Returning he composed the following: The brimming, tempting goblet of egg nog, so innocent within itself, conceals beneath its shining froth, a fiery serpent, whose sting is death. Many imbibe a fatal thirst from the first sip of this dainty glass, and although unfelt at the time, carry through a wretched existence to an early grave, the venom of the serpent's sting. Taste not, young man, this most alluring glass. It binds with fetters that cannot be broken at will. It benumbs the finer sensibilities of man's nature and he becomes coarse and brutal. We should ever bear in mind the words of Solomon: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

LAST year there were 765 deaths in the various States among our members. On each of these sorrowful occurrences there was paid to the representatives of the deceased brother, the sum of $2,000. We therefore paid out last year in death benefits, the sum of $1,530,000. Just think of it, readers! Over a million and a half in one year! Who can, hereafter, in view of this record, say that the Ancient Order of United Workmen is not one of the grandest institutions in the land? It obeys the scriptural injunction to visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction, and it shall receive the promised reward therefor.—Overseer.

Harmony No. 9, of this city, has arranged for the institution of its Degree of Honor Lodge on Saturday, March 3d. All the D. of H. Lodges in the city are invited, and an interesting evening is in prospect.

Solid and Substantial.

The New York Independent is the special organ and advocate of the old line life insurance companies, and has recently published a series of articles in their advocacy and reflecting upon beneficial societies, with all the usual and oft repeated clap-trap. The editor of the Fraternal Censor, in commenting on these articles, tells his experience with the solid and substantial companies recommended by the Independent, as follows:

"We have a distant recollection of paying about $75 per year in cash, besides notes, for an insurance of $5,000, and our age then was only 27. True, we were promised a paid up policy, and the probabilities are that one might have been given us, but unfortunately the premature failure of the company prevented any such possible arrangement. And, by the way, we were a subscriber to the Independent and believed all the Independent said about life insurance, and was particularly impressed with a glowing account of which appeared in its columns, concerning the peculiar advantages to be derived by taking out a policy in a solid and substantial company, whose net assets were a way up in the millions and whose officers were men of sterling worth and spotless character. We took out the aforesaid policy and paid the aforesaid amount of money to the aforesaid solid and substantial company, and received—nothing—not even having the privilege of continuing our payment of $75 per year. Now—and a few summers have come and gone—we carry $13,000 in the assessment Orders, at about the same cost; difference, if any, in favor of the Orders. Arguments and rhetoric are wasted in face of such facts as these."

The Men Who Succeed.

The great difference among men of all callings is the energy of character, or the want of it. Given the same amount of learning and integrity, and the same opportunities, and energy will make one man a conqueror. The want of it will see the other man a failure.

Dead-beats are all men without force. They had as good a chance as any of their companions. Others went ahead and carried off the prizes, while they were lying by the wayside, dispirited and despondent. It takes nerve, vim, perseverance, patient continuance in well-doing, to win a great prize. And the young man who goes into a profession without this pluck and force will not earn salt to his porridge. He will drag through life with the help of friends, getting some credit with them for being a well-meaning man, in delicate health and unlucky. The real trouble is that he lacks energy.

This is just as true of the minister as of the lawyer or the physician. Piety is not enough, and piety with much learning is not enough. All the Greek and Hebrew in the world will not qualify a man for usefulness in the ministry. It wants push, stamina, vigor, courage, resolution, will, determination—in one word, energy. If the youth knows a little Greek he knows what en ergos means, and without it Dr. Parr's knowledge of Greek will not help him to usefulness or success in the pulpit.—New York Observer.

CO-OPERATIVE INSURANCE.—Co-operative organizations are not new, they are not a late invention, but have been tried in various forms for half a century, whether in the form of a payment at death, when disabled and infirm, or of assistance during sickness and distress, it matters not. The principle is the same, and it is not our purpose to enter into details now. There is, however, one thing in the history of all such associations that stands out preeminently prominent, and that is: Of all the numerous institutions professing to attain these results, none have succeeded for any length of time but those that have been founded on the basis of fraternity. We challenge any and all to prove the negative of this assertion. Every State can show its list of defunct co-operatives, but of what character are they? Examine the lists that are scattered broadcast by life insurance companies. When we investigate, we find they are bogus co-operations. By this we mean that these organizations were never what they claimed to be. They never had the first principle of co-operation in their structure, and, as a consequence, fell to pieces. The very foundation stone of such institutions is, and must of necessity be, fraternally, a mutual banding together for one common purpose, the execution of which rests not only on a few, but is distributed equally on the shoulders of every member.—Overseer.

Interesting Lodge Items.

The Fraternal Censor says: The Grand Lodge of New York, in its ninth annual session, stands just where it did nine years ago—and without a single member to say to the contrary—is true to its obligation in every particular. While there is a universal opinion that New York should manage its temporal affairs independently of the Supreme Lodge, that a perfect guarantee can be afforded to every member of the Order, the opinion is equally strong that we recognize the Supreme Lodge as the source of law-giving and law-making power of the fraternal work.

The report of the Grand Recorder, A. O. U. W., of Pennsylvania, shows the following interesting facts: There were 1,965 beneficiary certificates issued during the year, of which 264 were issued to those who desired to change the direction as to payment of beneficiary, eight were duplicate certificates, and nine were to old members who had never taken out certificates.

Seven hundred and sixty five deaths are reported in the A. O. U. W. at large for 1881, upon which the magnificent sum of $1,530,000 was paid, all of which went directly to needy families.

The members of the Order in San Diego are making arrangements for a public reception of the Grand Master on the 13th, and those of Los Angeles, for a similar occasion sion, on the evening of the 17th inst.

A rousing "union meeting" will be held this month at Oakland. At present, it looks as if it would be with Oakland Lodge, No. 2, on Friday evening, March 9th.

San Leandro had a public re-union on the evening of Feb. 23. E. M. Reading, P. M. W., delivered an address.

Lake Lodge, No. 21, D. of H., has been instituted at Janesville, Lassen county, with 28 charter members.

Petitions have been received for new D. of H. Lodges at Forest Hill, Chico and other points.

San Rafael Lodge, No. 24, will celebrate its fifth anniversary on Wednesday evening.

No assessment for January in the jurisdiction of Kansas.

No assessment for February in the jurisdiction of Maryland.

"Brace up," whispered the hangman to the poor fellow whose hempen cravat he was adjusting. "Yes, it's easy for you to say that," was the grim reply, "because you are a suspender."

Overheard in the cloak room: "Did she marry well?" "Yes, indeed. He's worth over a million, and drinks so hard that he never can go into society, so she's not bothered with him."

News in Brief.

THERE will be a narrow gauge railroad into the northern mining camps from Tucson.

THE improving effect of the late rains is made manifest by the rapid growth of grain in the State.

FOUR more cadet officers were reduced to the ranks at Annapolis, Saturday, for recent acts of insubordination.

A POLE has been sentenced by a French court to two years' imprisonment for threatening to murder President Grevy.

OSCAR WILDE, it is said, will return to this country in the summer to superintend the production of a play which he has written.

THE Maine House, 104 to 37, ordered engrossed the prohibitory amendment. An attempt to except cider failed by a vote of 56 to 80.

A CHICAGO inventor of a rope fire escape, who refused to give his name, tried his apparatus Saturday morning, and sustained fatal injuries.

THE Fire Commissioners, of Buffalo, have ordered all hotels to place balconies on each floor and connect them by single ladders, under penalty of fine.

TWO hundred or more gambling and policy shops in Boston closed their doors Wednesday week, in consequence of an order by the Police Commissioners.

THE theory that tramps set fire to the New-hall house, Milwaukee, is now advanced. It is said they frequently sneaked into the coal cellar for a night's lodging.

THE New Orleans Picayune asserts that the death rate has increased at Memphis since the completion of the sewer system, and seems to prove it by statistics.

A BILL has passed the Arkansas Legislature prohibiting for two years the sale of intoxicants within three miles of any church or school, on petition of a majority of adult inhabitants.

BARTHOLOMEW's statue of Liberty is nearly completed. It is to be a free gift from France to the United States, and as yet the subscription to the pedestal is not sufficient to pay for a corner stone.

Treatment of Heart Disease.

There seems to be almost everywhere, a growing complaint of heart affections, and the Medical and Surgical Reporter, of New York, had an article recently on this subject, in which rest is recommended as the best remedy for some kinds of heart troubles.

By this, says the editor, we mean not positive, but comparative rest; neither do we refer to inflammatory affections of the heart, wherein, from the very gravity of the disease, confinement to bed and consequent rest become necessarily assured. We are thinking of those cases of heart exhaustion, so to speak, of individuals whose general health and tonicity is much run down, from overwork or abuse, and in whom the heart shares in this general vitiation. Possibly the organ is not in itself diseased; its organic integrity may be perfect, but its muscular walls may be flabby and weak, ready to yield, or, more properly, unable to resist any great strain. If, when in this condition, the man resorts to any violent muscular exercise, or subjects himself to the influence of violent physical emotions, this weak heart may become mechanically distended in its efforts to perform the extra labor demanded of it. Or, it may be, that dilatation has already taken place to some extent; then does it become important to allow the organ time for the development of the beneficent hypertrophy that will do so much to preserve its integrity.

By rest we mean to advise your patients who are threatened with or already have dilatation of the heart to do everything slowly, to perform every act of life deliberately, and to avoid, as far as possible, all occasions calculated to excite the passions or emotions. We must ever remember what a delicate machine the heart is, and how easily it can become deranged, and realizing this, must consider how much more care this organ requires when it is already diseased. We must, under such circumstances, walk slowly, think slowly, eat slowly—in a word, do everything slowly. It is not well, and we do not recommend the carrying of this advice to the verge of laziness; but what we do mean is that while it is well for all (either sound or diseased) to avoid hurry, it is 10 times more important, aye, absolutely imperative, for the man with a weak or diseased heart.

THE DECAY OF TEETH.—From a recent examination by Dr. Franzius, of the teeth of 650 soldiers in Russia, it appeared that 258, or nearly 40% had dental caries. He finds that, of all the teeth, the third molar is most often affected, such cases making up one-half of all the cases. The teeth are affected in a certain successive order; first the lower third molar is attacked, then the upper, then the lower fourth molar, and so on. The incisors and the canine teeth of the lower jaw stand last in the line. The durability of the upper teeth stands to that of the lower as three to two. The teeth in persons of fair complexion and hair are less durable than those of dark complexion and hair (40 to 37%). Stature has a manifest influence on the durability of the teeth, which increases with decrease of height, and vice versa. (Dr. Franzius seeks an explanation of this curious fact in a less perfect outer circulation in tall men than in short men.) The right teeth show a greater vitality than the left. The conditions of the soldier's life do not show any harmful influence on the state of the teeth.

The Fashions in San Francisco.

At this season of the year there is not very much that is new to chronicle with regard to the fashions. I give a few of the most important things to a woman who wishes to be well dressed; only it must not be forgotten that there never was a time when individual tastes had such liberty, and every woman could dress as much or as little as she chose. All

Dresses for Walking

Are made to escape the ground. If one has pretty feet and wears glove-fitting boots, they may be worn somewhat short, but only very young ladies look stylish in them. Middle-aged or elderly ladies should wear their skirts as long as they conveniently can, so as to just escape the ground. A dress worn exclusively in the house is prettier with a short train, but for any one having to visit their kitchen with a pretty house dress on, the short dress is preferable. I have heard many ladies declare that no matter what fashion decrees, they will never again wear a trained dress in the street.

A Lovely House Dress

Seen at a fashionable dressmaker's was of wine colored French flannel, cut all in one piece, called "princess" style, and trimmed around the bottom with a soft puff of the same, while down the front lay a piece of velvet the shade of the dress, braided in large arabesques, and cut away along the outside edge. Long satin ribbon loops and ends, confined with a buckle at the throat, gave a charming finish to this most charming dress. The cost of all the materials was only $14.

Skirts to Visiting Dresses

Are close and even shorter than they have been, and the false skirt of cambric, or a better material, if the expense is no objection, was never more in use than at present. A new mode of draping the over-long breadths which have been allowed to fall over the tops of flounces in past seasons, is that of catching them down here and there upon the false skirt, so as to form folds, puffs and the graceful loopings into which a handsome fabric seems to fall of itself.

In making up

Toilettes of Velvets

And Sicilienne, which are much admired now, many dressmakers are placing the velvet flounces or pleatings on a false skirt of cambric and making the box-pleated Sicilienne skirt entirely separate. With such a design, the overskirt is merely a scarf, covering the edge of the short basque, or Jersey, which is a part of the toilette. The pannier overskirt is a special favorite just now, and is detached. A lining of bright-colored satin is seen in many, and the drapery at the back is much raised. Some elegant costumes have a plain skirt of velvet and a polonaise of a rich satin brocade, which is open in front, and taken up very high at the side and back.

Without doubt the most popular material of the season is velvet, the plain and unfigured being employed for costumes of simplicity and richness, and the brocaded styles forming portions of more elaborate dresses in which the effects of light and shade are admirable. A novelty which is used for cloaks and parts of toilettes, is figured velvet, with a thick pile, the entire floral design displaying shades of one color; for instance, where brown is the pervading color, the pattern is in shades, ranging from the darkest tint, up to a dull ecru. The effect is very handsome.

The Newest Plushes.

Have a close short pile, the intention being to have them resemble velvets, rather than the long, furry plush in use last season. For showy suits there are checked plushes in squares of half an inch, alternating with squares of ribbed silk. Large plaids are seen in plushes this season in a combination of dark brown, terra cotta, and old gold. These showy fabrics are always made up with a plain silk or surah, matching the darker color for a skirt.

Tapestry Effects.

So much admired now, are seen in many of the new wool fabrics, the handsomest showing olive and old gold bayadere stripes. All of the tints are softened, as if by lapse of time or fading. In making up a plain bayadere stripe, it should match the darker tone of the tapestry woolen, and form the skirt of the dress. Many different effects of coloring are found in these handsome goods.

Expensive woollens to be associated with plain velvet come in dark green, olive brown, dull dark blue, etc. The figure is a large hollow circle, scalloped around both edges, and showing the twill of the darker ground through the bright coloring.

Cashmeres were never more popular than they are at present, and are displayed in great variety. Light-grade flannels, much used for children's, misses' and ladies' every-day dresses, show the peculiar tints seen in the most costly materials, as flame color, tan color, brick-red and popular tints of leather, dyed with oak bark.

In spite of the fact that small bonnets lead this season, there are

Many Styles of Broad Brims.

And every milliner gives them a different twist or stroke, which is the first essential with some ladies, whose horror it is "to have my bonnet looking like everybody else's."

After the display of fancy fabrics for several seasons past, it is not surprising that plain velvet once more takes the lead. Shirrings in satin are still somewhat used. Fur effects are seen on both hats and bonnets, the former having a borders to match the beaver or otter-colored foundation.

Ostrich feathers are as generally used as they have ever been, and dyers have succeeded in shading, as well as coloring them to perfection. Mr. J. Balny, on Market street, opposite the Palace hotel, takes the precedence of all the other ostrich-feather dyers here. The domestic cock's feathers are most beautifully dyed in all colors, and particularly in a golden green tint that is ravishing. They have been the rage this season, and will be worn this summer, no doubt, as they are cheaper than the ostrich, at first cost, and do not need the constant curling which our fogs in summer make a positive necessity.

Narrow ribbons, now used for garnitures and strings for small bonnets, are of velvet with an Ottoman silk face, or of plush with a silk underside, both of which are more becoming than satin strings next the face.

Wide ribbons, whether of Ottoman silk, ribbed velvet, or of satin surah with raised velvet figures, are made up in large flat bows, and much employed for trimming. New ribbons include surah, half of which is plain and the other half embroidered and a repped ribbon.

Pokes of different kinds are leading styles, and many after being bent to a high-pointed flare in front, are trimmed with lapping bows of wide ribbon.

Tinsel cord is extremely used in millinery just now; entire crowns are composed of it, and a wide braid to match it is worn on the edge of the brim. A length of velvet is braided with gold cord, and also used to cover an entire bonnet frame.

Buckles of extreme size are seen on bonnets, and very handsome ones have small leaves and flowers of tinted metal, overlying the metal of the buckle. In using, they must be bent to the required curve, and are set in diagonally.—Lizette, in Home Journal for February.

In the Yosemite Valley.

On this page we present a view in the canyon of the Merced river, Yosemite valley. In the foreground is seen the trail leading up the Merced canyon, and which brings the visitor ere long to a near view of the wonders which are peculiar to this branch of the Yosemite. The trail rises rapidly and follows the course of the Merced river. So sharp is the ascent that in two miles an elevation is attained 2,000 feet higher than the entrance to the canyon. In reaching the lower level the Merced river plunges over numerous cascades and makes two grand falls, which are among the greater attractions of the Yosemite. The first of these two grand cataracts is Vernal fall, which is shown in the center of the engraving. The height of this fall, at the average stage of the water in June and July, is placed at 400 feet. The rock behind the fall is a perfectly square cut mass of granite extending across the canyon. The rock near the bottom of the fall is steeply inclined, so that a precise definition of the place, where the perpendicular part ceases, is very difficult amid the blinding spray and foam. Alongside of the headlong roaring stream from Vernal fall

Engineering Enterprise in Hamburg.

The Senate of Hamburg, Germany, as recently reported in an exchange, have had under consideration a scheme for constructing a tunnel under the Elbe and an elevated railway in that city. The construction of a bridge instead of a tunnel is said to be out of the question on account of the width and crowded state of the harbor, and the author of the project has designed the tunnel of such dimensions as would provide both for vehicles and foot passengers, and a double track railway for freight and passengers. This he proposes to effect by building the tunnel of two stories, the road for vehicles and pedestrians to be in the upper story, and the line of railway in the lower story. The estimated cost of the tunnel and railway is $6,250,000, and they are to be completed in five and a half years.

With its large ports, its vast docks, its hundreds of vessels arriving from all parts of the globe, Hamburg presents a most lively picture of maritime activity. In front of the principal portion of the town, on the opposite bank, is situated the island Steinweider, which contains a number of docks. Steamships are regularly conveying travelers and merchandise between this island and Hamburg. Hence the necessity of this important engineering improvement.

THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT. Some 40 years ago, when the people of the United States had raised a considerable sum for the purpose, this monument was begun. When the monument had been built to 156 ft. in height the funds were exhausted. Finally the Government took hold and made appropriations to finish the work. But when the labor on it was renewed, examination showed that the foundation was not strong enough for the intended superstructure; but how to insert additional strength under a column weighing 32,000 tons without disturbing its equilibrium or making a crack in its walls, how to remove the dirt below this tremendous weight and insert concrete masonry therein, was a question that required inventive genius and delicate engineering. The difficult work was most boldly and successfully done. A solid body of masonry, about 126 ft. square, and more than 13 ft. in depth, now underlies this tall structure. It ought to have a solid base, for the monument, when finished, will have a total weight of over 80,000 tons. This pillar is now about 350 ft. high, and is rising in mid-air at the rate of nearly 100 ft. a year. From two to three more working seasons will be required to complete it. When completed it will be 555 ft. high.

PROPOSED SHIP CANAL IN CANADA. Some few years since a proposition was made to construct a ship canal across the isthmus which separates the Bay of Fundy from the Gulf of St. Lawrence, at a cost of $8,000,000. The project was abandoned; but recently Mr. H. C. G. Ketchum, a New Brunswick engineer, has been before the Dominion Parliament. Last year Mr. H. C. G. Ketchum, a New Brunswick civil engineer, came before the Dominion Parliament with a proposal to substitute a ship railway over the same route, in place of the defunct canal scheme. He obtained a charter and a subsidy of $150,000 per annum for 25 years, when and so long as the railway should be in successful operation. Mr. Ketchum carried the scheme to London, where he has succeeded in getting it taken up by an eminent English contractor, subject to the favorable report of his own engineer, who is now engaged with Mr. Ketchum in examining the site. If the scheme is carried out, the Dominion will be the first country in the world to possess a ship railway, and probably there is no other country which possesses a site more favorable in its engineering aspects for a perfect railway—that is, a ship railway without curves or grades.

GIRLS, be careful of your associations! The newspapers are filled with painful instances of girls misled and ruined, through folly in forming acquaintance of young men, of whom they know nothing, and whose intentions in seeking their society are evil. There are many traps set to catch the feet of unwary school girls, who think it is romantic to flirt with young men whom they meet on the street, or in the cars or elsewhere. (Girls, do not hold yourselves so cheaply.* Recognize no one, to whom you are not introduced by some one whom you know respects you, and would guard your welfare. Do not have acquaintances which you would not confide to your mother. You may consider it is a slow way to live, and you may think there is lots of fun in the adventures which your schoolmates boast of, but depend upon the it slow life is the true one, and that any girl who gives herself over so slightly to fast associates, is in danger of undesirable heartaches, and deceptions and peril, from which there is no escape.

TWELVE YEARS WITH BUT LITTLE SLEEP. There is a carpenter at work on some of the new residences, at Etiwanda, San Bernardino county, who, it is said, sleeps only one hour per night, and this habit he has kept up for 12 years. The fellow-workmen, who occupy the same room with him at night, state that they can speak to him at any time of night and find him awake; in fact, he is never found asleep. He appears to be nervous and restless, but enjoys ordinary good health.

Favorable to Advertisers.

By consolidating the large subscription lists of the Pacific Workman with the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN our advertisers gain an unusually great advantage. We doubt if any one weekly newspaper has ever been circulated to as many different readers on this coast, as have been served heretofore by the Workman and WATCHMAN together. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns cities of the coast.

We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

OFFICIAL RECOMMENDATION.

Resolutions adopted by Grand Lodge of Cal., Feb. 3, 1881
WHEREAS, the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, the pioneer A. O. U. W. advocate on this coast, without official aid, has long rendered able and valuable services for the good of our glorious organization, we earnestly recommend that our Lodges and the brethren individually patronize the WATCHMAN as liberally as circumstances will justify.

Over-activity.

Our readers may remember how Mr. Herbert Spencer took occasion at the farewell banquet tendered him, to give us a sharp lecture on the danger of overwork, and the blessed gospel of rest and relaxation. He felt confident that our culture and civilization were coming to us too fast, and that we were wearing out our lives twenty years earlier than we should. He said we turned gray ten years earlier than they did in England, and expressed surprise at the number of faces he had seen marked by the lines and seams of thought and care. This high-pressure life is killing you, and will entail irreparable injury upon posterity. As this was an after-dinner speech, we were inclined, at the time, to regard these remarks as a bit of pleasant irony, or the random shot of a dyspeptic philosopher who had not enjoyed one good night of sound, refreshing sleep in twenty-seven years. Mr. Spencer is one of the greatest men of the age, and has profoundly studied its social problems, but, as he avoided social intercourse, sought seclusion, and only caught the most furtive glimpses of American life from hotel windows and the daily papers, it was not to be expected he would seriously turn mentor at the close of a two months' sojourn. But in the current number of the Popular Science Monthly, he returns to the charge, and still insists that we are burning out the candle of our life at both ends.

No doubt we are working at a very high pressure in this country. It could hardly be otherwise where so many start from the bed-rock and become millionaires, and the poorest and lowliest born may reach the highest honors within the gift of the people. Such an activity could not exist under the social structure of the Old World. The masses have so little chance of overcoming their social environments, that they are not stirred and quickened by the hope of bettering their condition.

But when Mr. Spencer says that life here has reached such an extreme of intense activity as to threaten general, serious, physical mischief, the statement is too sweeping and must be taken with great abatement. Life insurance tables have been brought to such perfection that vast and profitable business operations are based upon them. These tables show that the average duration of life in active America, is a little above that of the slow-motioned population of Europe. Even where life is most intense, in New York, Chicago or San Francisco, the insurance tables compare favorably with London, Paris and other European cities, where business methods are more conservative, and life subjected to but little competition for wealth and honor. More rust out in Europe, than wear out in America.

Be all this as it may, we are confident that the number of victims from overwork in this country, is very insignificant compared with the number who break down from other causes. There is imputed to intellectual effort, or physical exertion, a vast amount of suffering, disease and premature decay that is attributable to inordinate passion, irregular habits, animal excesses and devotion to loo. Overwork is a very delicate periphrase to veil out of sight vices which are not presentable. Where hard work has slain one, drunkenness and debauchery have slain their ten thousands.

And then, where there is apparently good reason for the complaint of overwork it will generally be found a misconception. Here are two men of the same age and strength, doing the same amount of work; but one is breaking down, while the other finds his employment mere child's play. One allows his business to bridle and saddle him, and ride him day and night. He frets and worries in the collar. He bodes disasters in the merest trifles. The mistakes and breakages of clerks, bookkeepers and porters keep him in a constant stew and fret. He can take no pleasure in travel or recreation for fear something may go wrong at home. Is it any wonder he breaks down? The other man has just as much to worry and annoy him, but he has learned philosophy enough to keep cool, hopeful, look on the bright side of things, expend his vital forces with scrupulous economy, and leave business at night locked up in the safe.

In short, it is not hard work, but our bad habits, that should be denounced. If one persists in eating too much, drinking too much, doing everything in a hurry and at the wrong time, four or five hours a day may, in a few years, dig his grave. It would be difficult to find a man who is killing himself by legitimate hard work. The most of our business men have no heavier burdens than they are able to carry. It is only when men add to the burdens of business, their bad habits, that they break down, and then the plea of overwork comes in as a very convenient scapegoat to bear away their vices from the public gaze.

I. WISLER.—Our late Brother Ignatz Wisler, was one of the oldest members of the Order in this city, and greatly esteemed. He was a charter member of San Francisco Lodge, No. 4, and also of Golden Gate, No. 8, which was organized at his house, and continued to meet there for three months. At the organization of this Lodge he was elected Receiver, was re-elected eleven consecutive terms, holding the office to the day of his death. The funeral was largely attended. Bro. E. M. Reading, Past Master of Fidelity Lodge, No. 136, paid a glowing tribute to his character at the grave.

Brother Julius Wisler has been elected to succeed his brother, I. Wisler, deceased, as Receiver of Golden Gate Lodge, No. 8, of this city.

Use Judgment.

The success of the A. O. U. W. in California has produced, what may not inappropriately be called a secret society craze. Thousands not content with joining one or two societies have sought and gained admission to everything almost that has come along, and now, finding the self-imposed burden very heavy, either drop one or more or all, or pass a goodly portion of their time in complaining at the management of these institutions, charging to this cause what seems to them a higher death-rate than they had anticipated. We have frequently endeavored to impress upon our membership, the folly of supposing that an assurance of $2,000 could be carried for mere nothing. People will die, and death losses must be paid in dollars and cents, and these dollars and cents must come directly from the members' pockets. We have no other source from which to draw funds. It is beyond question that many are admitted into benefit paying societies that should be kept out, but it is impossible to avoid this altogether and always will be. It is indeed doubtful whether any very material change for the better in this regard can ever be made. At present, the death-rate in these societies is below one per cent. In time, it is fair to presume, about one per cent will be the rule. This would give in the A. O. U. W. 20 assessments per year, or four single assessments and eight double ones. In no other society can the same assurance be carried for any less money, for none is more carefully or economically managed, while some are extravagant in comparison. This appears, however, more in the shape of dues than assessments for benefits, but it depletes the member's purse all the same. It now costs a person to keep in good standing in the A. O. U. W. about $25 a year on the average, all told, and will probably never be less. Any member who cannot be content to pay that amount, had as well withdraw at once. In these societies where more is promised than in the Workmen more will of necessity have to be paid, for every pledge made by a benefit-paying society must be redeemed, if redeemed at all, in solid coin, and that coin must come from the purses of the members.

Now if you belong to the A. O. U. W. or Knights of Honor, or some other similar society, and cannot pay more than, say $30 a year, for its benefits present and prospective, be content, keep your standing good where you are, and let those who can afford it enjoy the luxuries of "jiners." Don't distress yourself and family all your life in order to die rich, nor carry so heavy a burden that you will always feel it a sort of religious duty to fill the air with grumblings and imprecations. First provide for your present wants and necessities, and then do what you may be able for the future, remembering always that we are prone to overestimate our abilities.

The Grand Lodge.

On the 3d day of April next, our Grand Lodge will meet in annual session in this city. There is not much to be done, aside from hearing the reports of the outgoing officers, and choosing new ones to guide the helm for another year. No doubt the same wisdom that has heretofore characterized this body in this regard will govern its action again. Good officers make a good Lodge, Subordinate, Grand, or Supreme, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred.

Aside from the matters and things just mentioned, we know of but two matters that are likely to claim much consideration at the hands of the Grand Lodge: One the Degree of Honor referred to elsewhere; the other the matter of a Chief Medical Examiner to meet the requirements of the Supreme Law of the Order. And here it may not be amiss to suggest, that in framing laws for the regulation of this matter, care should be taken to ensure prompt action on the part of such officer, and that whatever may happen the position shall not become vacant, and so block the wheels of progress. It is in the nature of the Order that it must progress or perish. Already we are hampered too much. It is too hard for desirable men to get in. The other kind will exercise more patience and tolerate any amount of red tape if, peradventure, they may at last secure admission. The tendency of legislation for some years, has been to shift responsibility from local Medical Examiners and Lodges where it belongs, and must be kept, to insure the best results, and to put it upon the shoulders of somebody else where it does not belong. We believe in a supervising power over all applications for admission to the Order, but such power should only be exercised in seeing that Medical Examiners are duly qualified, and that they and the Lodges conform to the prescribed results governing such matters.

We hope the Grand Lodge will do very little in the way of tinkering with our laws. They are now pretty generally understood, and in the main work exceedingly well. Changes are expensive and often demoralizing.

Degree of Honor.

The jurisdiction of California is making an honest effort to make the Degree of Honor a success. The WATCHMAN has been and is a friend to this degree, but in the light of past experience it has little faith in this branch of our Order, as at present constituted. There is absolutely nothing to hold the membership together except its social features, and this is not enough. A Lodge when first organized gets along swimmingly for a time, and then interest begins to die out and finally the organization ceases to be. Perhaps 500 of these Lodges have been organized, but it is doubtful if 50 are in existence to-day, a score of which are in our own jurisdiction, and very few anywhere else.

We have a standing committee on the Degree of Honor whose duty it will be to report a new constitution for the government of Lodges of this degree, at the coming session of the Grand Lodge. The committee is a good and able one, but will no doubt be largely governed in their action by the feeling of the Lodges in whose behalf they are to work. Presuming this to be true, we suggest to our Degree Lodges that they take up the matter of providing for a beneficiary feature in connection therewith. Let it be voluntary on the part of Lodges and members. Guard it round about with all the safeguards that wisdom, experience and prudence may suggest. Make a complete code of laws that shall at once be simple and comprehensive.

We would not have the death benefit pledged, exceed $500, so that assessments would be light.

With such a feature there would be something to work for, a bond of union that would be ten-fold stronger than social considerations. People love to feel that what they do for others, has in it something more substantial than mere momentary pleasure.

If a thing of beauty is a joy forever, how much more is a good deed, well done, a source of eternal pleasure to the doer. It is this that has made the A. O. U. W. the grand success we see it to be, in everything but this degree. Make it possible for our Degree Lodges to become beneficial and then if they fail, let us meet the inevitable like men, and cut off this branch of the Order altogether.

The Workmen Lodge of Haywards have decided to organize a Degree of Honor. The Lodge is entirely controlled by the wives, sisters or mothers of members, and bears almost the same relation to the Workmen as the Rebekah Degree does to Odd Fellowship. Eighteen members joined on Tuesday evening. This Lodge will meet once a month.

A large number of duplicate representative certificates are due and not received at this office. The committee on credentials will soon need the full list. Send them in.

By the kindness of some kind friend I am in receipt of copies of the daily proceedings of the late session of the Grand Lodge of New York, from which it appears that the best element of the Order there is clearly in the ascendancy.

There will probably be but a three days' session of the Grand Lodge, and that will cost over $4,000. Our treasury will not be sufficient to meet all our wants in this regard, and we shall of necessity be a little behind until July, when the semi-annual per capita tax comes in.

Supplies are out for the organization of several new Lodges, and no doubt they will be in time to be represented at the coming session of the Grand Lodge. There are several cities in the State with but one Lodge that should have two or more. It would largely benefit those already in existence, and add very many more good and true men to our ranks. A little local rivalry is always healthy to Lodges, but this fact is not always recognized.

Verein Eintracht Masquerade.

The masquerade party of the Verein Eintracht at the Mechanics' Pavilion on the 17th inst., was a most successful entertainment. There were at least 8,000 spectators in the hall, and 500 or more maskers on the floor. The grand march was a picturesque representation of the year, and was participated in by 350 people.

The first division, January, showed angels ushering in the New Year; the New Year's cornucopia was filled with flowers. Father Time, with his scythe, was seen at the further end of the wagon. The other divisions, representing the successive months, were as follows: February—Grand entry of Prince and Princess Carnival, with their two pairs of twins, clowns, courtiers, etc. March—The advance of Spring, seated on a wagon, preceded by butterflies. April—All-Fool's Day; the faithful wives of Weinsberg. May—May Day festival of Marie Antoinette at Trianon; courtiers, ladies, etc. June—Summer; Ceres, Goddess of Agriculture, with beehive; wagon surrounded by walking corn sheaves and bees. July—Fourth of July; Uncle Sam; perambulating firecrackers. August—Goddess of the Sun, with comets and stars; ice-cream man. September—Month in which the Verein Eintracht was organized; allegorical representation of the society. Vines, wines and Bacchus. November—Thanksgiving turkey dinner. December—Entry of winter. Twenty-four dances were on the programme.

Occidental, No. 6, paid a fraternal visit to Old California Lodge, No. 1, on Tuesday evening, February 20th, and had a delightful time.

Pleasantries.

Old Goodman went to some English opera, when he was in Chicago, of the Alice Oates variety. He came home a very wrathful man. "Don't talk to me any more about givin' women the ballot," he roared. "If ever I catch a wife or daughter of mine dancin' in a necklace and a pair of slippers, somebody'll have to read the riot act before the ballot is half over, I don't care who tries to stop me." And the Goodman girls haven't dared say "woman suffrage" or wear bangs from that day to this.

The grease: When he had called the meeting to order, Brother Gardner arose and said: "Gen'len, if it wasn't for de wheels on a wagon the wagon wouldn't move. When de wheels is on, den what?" "Grease!" solemnly exclaimed an old man. "Kerrect!" whispered the president, softly rubbing his hands together. "We hez de wagon, an' de wheels. We will now pass de hat aroun' for de grease."

"That was a powerful sermon the dominie preached this morning," said old Farmer Furrow to his wife, as they sat at the dinner-table yesterday. "Deed it was," replied she; "but do you know, John, every time the parson spoke of the golden calf that them 'ere heathens worshipped, I couldn't help thinking of you and the brindle heifer what you won't sell for love or money?"

Mark Twain failed to answer a letter written to him by Sergeant Ballantine. After waiting a reasonable time, the latter was so exasperated at not receiving an answer, that he mailed Twain a sheet of paper and a postage stamp, as a gentle reminder. Mr. Clemens wrote back on a postal: "Paper and stamp received; please send an envelope."

"Poor fellow! he died in poverty," said a man of a person lately deceased. "That isn't anything," exclaimed a seedy bystander. "Dying in poverty is no hardship. It's living in poverty that puts the thumbscrews on a fellow."

The latest wrinkle of fashionable architecture is a sitting-room exclusively for the daughters of the family. It is thought to foster a love for domestic life, and furnishes a retreat where solitude can be found for study, music and painting.

"That butter is all right," said a boarding-house keeper, "it is firkin butter, and tastes a little of the wood, that's all." "If that's the case," replied the boarder, who is a contractor, "I should like to get some of that timber to build a hall here with."

Get Insured.

The Santa Cruz Sentinel has the following timely words:

Poor men, laboring men who can pass a medical examination, what are you thinking of? Were you to die to-morrow you would leave your families without their natural and necessary supporters, homeless and hungry. The charity some airy people talk about is all imagination in this cold, selfish world. George M. Day, whose death occurred this week at Lorenzo, was a member of the Santa Cruz Lodge of Knights of Honor, and his family will receive $2,000 in good clean gold coin, and its obtainment will not cost them an effort or a cent. No litigation or probating expenses to pay on this item. Mrs. Alex. McDonald has received her $2,000 from the Workmen. All she had to do was to walk up to the bank and draw it. Two thousand dollars is a solid item to have about the house, more acceptable than Mrs. Partington's coffin, but some improvident husbands and fathers prefer to have a "ghost in the closet." What the policies of Messrs. McDonald and Day cost them we do not know, but probably not more than $50 or $60 each. The Santa Cruz Lodge of Workmen has been in existence four years next August, and has a membership of 109, but so far not one of its members has died of natural causes. Were we asked for advice by men who are not rich, we would say join the Odd Fellows for eight dollars a week benefits while sick, and some one of the fraternal insurance societies for the benefit of your families when the labors of this transient and fitful life are over. The fact that you are insured is a source of satisfaction to you. But this is not all. There is a temperance feature about these fraternal organizations. They prevent no man from drinking, smell no applicant's breath, but they are opposed to drunkenness, and the brother who gets drunk may wish that he had never been born.

A Tribute to the Order.

The following essay was recited by Miss Rachael Wolfsohn, aged 11 years, daughter of Henry Wolfsohn, P. M. W., on Friday evening, Feb. 15th, at the monthly social of Hercules, No. 53:

GENTLEMEN AND KIND FRIENDS:—As one who is an outsider, and not acquainted with the secrets of the grand Ancient Order of United Workmen, but judges the tree by the fruit it bears, I desire to pay a well-earned tribute to this beneficial society.

I know that its chief end and aim is protection. Protection for the widow and orphan in the hours of their direst need and distress. Protection against want and penury. Protection against the attacks of the corn-morants and harpies of society.

And this protection savors of a divine origin, for it is built up upon the foundation of the golden rule, that bids us do unto others as we would be done by.

God, in his infinite mercy, has implanted in the breast of each individual, a spark of love for humanity, and that leads us to the practice of charity.

Charity is born of faith; it is the noblest of the attributes of mortal man, and it outweighs an immense number of other defects. Charity is the cornerstone of every religion, and from it springs the protection this Order grants.

The benefits of the Order of United Workmen, are grounded and based upon all that is sacred and noble in all creeds, and thus commends itself to the contemplative mind of every one, and I only regret, that pursuant to your laws, the weaker sex cannot share in your noble work.

But, what woman can do to aid you will be done, in the furtherance of your grand mission. Woman will be ever ready to give you the meed of praise, after your exertions in the cause of humanity; and to the victor in the combat of right against wrong, the war of intelligence against error; light against dark,—she will extend the laurel wreath and the palm of fame.

Persevere in your good work; verify the scriptural tenet of the creation of Man in God's image, and be assured, that, though the world at large may not applaud, by reason of spite, malice, or ignorance, the faithful brother, the grateful widow, the comforted orphan, will all unite in a prayer to Our Heavenly Father, to foster, bless and preserve so good, so noble, so exalted an institution, as the Ancient Order United Workmen.

Kind friends, our faith is placed in you, As men and Ancient Workmen true; Protection is your chiefest aim, And Charity, not a hollow name.

Your name, our country's greatest son; No less than immortal Washington;* Should lead you on to noblest strife, To smooth the rugged paths of life.

Our earnest prayer, you dearest friends, Heartfelt, at night, to Heaven ascends, To bless, protect, and ever cheer, Washington Lodge in its career.

Oh, ever press on in the fight, Of right 'gainst wrong, and dark 'gainst light; Of Heaven's mercy have rich store, And please excuse me from saying more.

*This essay was first read before Washington Lodge, No. 60.

Brief Order Notes.

The hall of Stockton Lodge, No. 23, was crowded by Master Workmen, Friday 23d, ult. There were a large number of visitors from Linden, Lockford and Murphy Lodges. Speeches, collation and a good time. This Lodge is in a very flourishing condition.

We are glad to learn that Bro. Kinsley, Deputy Grand Master of Nevada, is rapidly recovering, and will probably be out in a few weeks. His injuries are not so serious as at first apprehended.

The Grand Lodge A. O. U. W. State of New York, has elected William G. Raines Grand Master Workman for the ensuing year, and adjourned Feb. 9th to meet at Syracuse 1884.

The reports of Lodges show that there is a total membership in the State of 13,166; but the Register of the Grand Recorder shows a membership of 13,450.

Forty members in Stockton have resolved to have a Degree of Honor Lodge organized in that city.

The Grand Lodge of California will meet in this city, at Dashaway hall, April 3d.

A new Lodge was instituted at Farmington, Feb. 28th.

No assessment for February in the jurisdiction of Massachusetts.

Deaths in our State.

Grand Recorder, H. G. Pratt, reports the following deaths occurring in our Order, in this State:

Bro. J. H. Oldham, of Myrtle Lodge, No. 42, San Francisco, died December 22, 1882, of consumption, aged 43 years. Joined the Order November 16, 1878. Payment from surplus.

Bro. Moses Hoyt, of Los Gatos Lodge, No. 76, died January, 14, 1883, of blood poisoning, aged 47 years. Joined the Order March 29, 1881.

Bro. Wm. Walsh, of Spartan Lodge, No. 36, San Francisco, died January 5, 1883, of general paralysis from softening of brain, aged 41 years. Joined the Order January 9, 1879. Payment from surplus.

Bro. S. K. Lowe, of Amador Lodge, No. 133, died January 16, 1883, from falling down a shaft 200 feet, aged 35 years. Joined the Order March 1, 1881. Payment from surplus.

Bro. Jas. N. Burson, of Burns Lodge, No. 68, San Francisco, died Jan. 19, 1883, of consumption, aged 50 years. Joined the Order Dec. 5, 1878. Payment from surplus.

Bro. Nelson King, of Union Lodge, No. 21, Sacramento, died January 20, 1883, of cancer of bone below the knee, aged 30 years. Joined the Order December 10, 1881. Payment from surplus.

Bro. H. A. Oliver, of Lakeport Lodge, No. 34, died January 20, 1883, of railroad accident (at Tehachapi), aged 39 years. Joined the Order May 23, 1878. Payment from surplus.

Bro. Geo. Saulsbury, of Red Bluff Lodge, No. 69, died January 29, 1883, of pneumonia, aged 46 years. Joined the Order December 11, 1878. Payment from surplus.

Bro. Richard Cluff, of Olympic Lodge, No. 127, San Francisco, died February 5, 1883, by being thrown from a buggy (accidental), aged 34 years. Joined the Order August 17, 1880.

Bro. Carl Eisert, of Harmony Lodge, No. 9, San Francisco, died February 6, 1883, of pneumonia, aged 43 years. Joined the Order January 18, 1881. Payment from surplus.

Bro. Wm. A. Dorr, of Stockton Lodge, No. 23, died February 7, 1883, of pleurisy, aged 38 years. Joined the Order March 9, 1878. Payment from surplus.

Bro. I. Wisler, of Golden Gate Lodge, No. 8, San Francisco, died February 14, 1883, of heart disease, aged 54 years. Joined the Order January 24, 1877. Payment from surplus.

"Members of the Order" Wanted.

We want one good, active and reliable member of the A. O. U. W. in every city and town on this coast to act as agent for the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN. The best of inducements will be offered. Send reference, age and past experience. We also want traveling agents for the WATCHMAN and other first-class illustrated and popular newspapers.

BY WRITING to N. Inman, care of the Master Workman of Los Gatos Lodge, No. 76, A. O. U. W., Los Gatos, parties can secure, at reasonable rates, a man who says in a letter to us that he can do heavy work, such as that of a porter, driving a heavy freight team or mill work.

Workmen Who Appreciate their Paper.

The following extracts from many encouraging letters received, show that our active sincere and steadfast efforts to sustain a good paper for the A. O. U. W. in the comparatively limited field on this coast are well appreciated by members of the Order in various quarters:

SHASTA, Jan. 22, 1883.
Watchman Publishing Co.—DEAR SIR: Your favor of the 8th inst., duly received and read to the Lodge. Your bill was referred to the Finance Committee and the Committee having reported the same, inclosed find postal order to be credited to Shasta Lodge, No. 71, A. O. U. Watchman Publishing Co.—GENTS: Please find inclosed postal order for two copies of the WATCHMAN to commence on the 15th of this month. Hoping to be able to get more subscriptions for your valuable paper—as it ought to be in every household, I am, yours truly,
 F. MANHIRE.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our Journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has not been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we will split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

Shorthand Writer.

A young lady who can give the best of reference wishes a situation as phonographic reporter or amanuensis in a first-class newspaper, law or business office, on very reasonable salary. Writes a good hand and is accustomed to correspondence. Address W., Box 2361, S. F.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this, the oldest of the beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

A TURNED LEAF will point out the article supposed to be of special interest to persons receiving sample copies of this paper.

Business Offices and Sunny Rooms to Let.

We have some desirable rooms to let adjoining the offices of this paper which will be rented on favorable terms. Stair entrance, No. 262 Market St. Elevator, No. 12 Front St. Parties wishing offices, etc., will do well to call and see them

A New Plan of Forest Preservation.

The bran new State of Dakota, or the Territory which is now, destined state wards, proposes to have a timber culture law and a tree preserving law which shall accomplish something more in the way of securing forests than the old timber culture law has done. It is an unfortunate fact that the present law gives away a good deal of land but it does not do much in the way of changing the features of the landscape in the way contemplated by its framers. Very few, if any, entering lands under the timber culture act ever continue the culture after securing their lands, and after completing their proofs there is very little timber on the land that amounts to anything. They simply plant a few scrub cottonwood trees, or something of like character, and after acquiring the title to the lands, allow the fire to run through them, and that is the end of their timber culture.

Dakota expects to have a law which shall be much more efficient. There has been introduced in Congress, by Mr. Pettigrew, a bill to be known as the Dakota Forestry Bill. It will provide for the granting of 400 sections of unappropriated lands in Dakota to the coming State, to be immediately selected by the Secretary of the Interior, appraised and sold at their appraised value on 10 years' annual payments, no deeds or patents to be given to the purchasers until after they have planted at least 12 acres of forest trees on each quarter section, and kept them in good growing condition for at least eight years, the trees to be planted at such place or places on the quarter section as shall be designated at the time of the purchase by a forestry commission, for which the bill provides. The money derived from the sale of the lands is to form a fund to be invested in government bonds, or other good securities, the interest of which is to be used for the establishment and maintenance of a school of forestry and experimental stations. This institution is to be under the supervision of a board of three Commissioners, two of whom are to be practical foresters, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, and one appointed by the Governor of the State of Dakota, and confirmed by the highest branch of the State Legislature, the Commissioners to hold their offices for 10 years, or during good behavior. If the proceeds of the land sold for this purpose exceed $200,000, the excess is to be used in constructing buildings and experimental forestry stations, if found necessary to do so.

The United States is certainly making much progress in forestry, and it is time it were done. We count the awakening of public attention to forestry needs and methods is a good mark of progress. The Government reports on forestry, the conventions of those interested in the subject, and the various distinctive publications in the interest of tree planting and preserving, are all signs of a general interest from which much may be expected.

How to Grow Fruit in Alaska.

Our prosperous fruit growers are continually on the search for lands, upon which they can invest their profits from the old orchards. They are continually exploring California, and it is not wonderful that they each succeed in finding land a little better than anyone else has secured. Perhaps when California is taken up, some of them will be disposed to try our new Territory of Alaska, and then they will have to grow their fruit by the Russian method. This is so greatly in contrast with our California methods, that we give a short sketch of what we have just read on the subject in the New York Tribune.

It seems that the whole of the large province of Vladimir, which is east of Moscow, is given to the growing of cherries; hundreds of proprietors in this province have each orchards of 10,000 "bushes." These fruit trees are not allowed to grow in tree form; the oldest branches are pruned out, it having been found that the best fruit is formed on young shoots, several of which are left to grow from one root. South of Vladimir, on the 56th parallel, where the thermometer sometimes falls to 50° below zero, immense quantities of plums are raised, many of the varieties being equal to the best German prunes. Pears and apples are also a success. The apple trees, too, are made to grow low and bushy, but they bear abundant crops of excellent, highly-colored fruit.

Henry Ward Beecher tells of a mother who took up alone the burden of life when her husband laid it down. There was but little property, yet out of her penury, by her planning and industry, night and day; by her willingness and love; by her fidelity, she brought up her children, and the world now has six men, all of whom are like pillars in the house of God. In commenting on her heroism, Mr. Beecher says: "Do not read to me of the campaigns of Caesar; tell me nothing about Napoleon's wonderful exploits; I tell you that, as God and the angels look down upon the silent history of that woman's administration, and upon those men—building processes which went on in her heart and mind through a score of years, nothing exterior, no outward development of kingdom or empire-building, can compete with what she has done."

A MEDICINE of real merit, prescribed by many leading physicians, and universally recommended by those who have used it, as a true tonic, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

SEEK

health and avoid sickness. Instead of feeling tired and worn out, instead of aches and pains, wouldn't you rather feel fresh and strong?

You can continue feeling miserable and good for nothing, and no one but yourself can find fault, but if you are tired of that kind of life, you can change it if you choose.

How? By getting one bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, and taking it regularly according to directions.

Mansfield, Ohio, Nov. 26, 1881.

Gentlemen:—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast, with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, and loss of appetite. I have taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters; I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pain in side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the king of medicines.

JOHN K. ALLENDER.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is composed of Iron in soluble form; Cinchona the great tonic, together with other standard remedies, making a remarkable non-alcoholic tonic, which will cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Malaria, Weakness, and relieve all Lung and Kidney diseases.

Patent Agency.

Inventors on the Pacific Coast will find it greatly to their advantage to consult this old experienced, first-class Agency. We have able and trustworthy associates and Agents in Washington and the capital cities of the principal nations of the world. In connection with our editorial, scientific and Patent Law Library, and record of original cases in our office, we have other advantages far beyond those which can be offered home inventors by other Agencies. The information accumulated through long and careful practice before the Office, and the frequent examination of Patents already granted, for the purpose of determining the patentability of inventions brought before us, enables us often to give advice which will save inventors the expense of applying for Patents upon inventions which are not new. Circulars of advice sent free on receipt of postage. Address DEWEY & CO., Patent Agents, 252 Market St., S. F.

An Irish Love Story.

The bright young sons of old Erin, who flock to our shores by thousands, penniless and uneducated, and yet full of hope and energy, often attract the attention of those who know not their history, nor their national adversities. Neither poverty, nor oppressive legislation, nor disruption of family ties, can crush out their hope of better days, or their aspirations for a higher and better life. Their wonderful industry, their endurance, their helpfulness, their adaptation to new kinds of labor, their good humor, their appreciation of little kindnesses, their devotion to their friends and helpers, all these are so deep and abiding as to appear almost unparalleled in the walks of humble life. They do not come among us "creamed and sugar-plummed, and resting on the eider down of life," but fearless of danger, and ready to toil and endure sore trials and hardship for the sake of an honest living. Seldom they murmur, but turn instinctively to labor for happiness and reward. Speak but a kind word to one of these men, and their warm spontaneous thanks and moistened eyes attest their gratitude and sincerity.

Many years ago I chanced to meet one of these hardy sons of the Emerald Isle, in a small boarding-house. The weather was rainy, chilly and dismal, and he sat for hours at night in the little parlor, turning over the leaves of books in which he could not read a word. Poor Patrick O'Nally, he did not believe that with his poverty it would be possible for him to acquire the mysterious art of reading. Not for him did he think any books were ever printed, and he did not hope for enjoyment or instruction from printer's type. The hours dragged along, and I said in my heart, "Poor Patrick, he is some mother's child," and my pity yearned towards the penniless young stranger, and I felt desirous to ask him about his native land and personal history. Having gained his confidence and noticed that he was evidently pleased at the little attentions the boarders had shown him, I took the initiative, and as kindly as I could, inquired of him concerning his personal history. "Well, Mr. O'Nally, you are so kind and obliging to our landlady, and she speaks in such praise of your appreciation of the ladies, that I wonder you have not married." His dark blue eyes sparkled with emotion, and with a strange and radiant expression of countenance he replied: "Weel, madam, it is seldom I speak of it. Seldom I meet one who cares niver a bit for a poor Irishman; so I keep me thoughts to myself." His rapid, burning words almost choked his utterance. At last he said, with quivering lips and with manifest effort, "Weel, madam, you see I loved a young girl in Ireland named Kathleen O'Sullivan. Me father and me mither lived near the lakes of Killarney, and in all that beautiful country there were none her like. Be sure, if you believe me, Heaven itself seemed to shine in her soft blue eyes, and I found, madam, that I lost meself from me first acquaintance. Indade, I did not know meself at all. You never saw the likes of her, niver at all. As true as I spake, there was none like her, niver, niver, and as quick as a bird, she took a particular hold upon me. It was tremendous. It almost struck me down, indade it did, and when I tried to speak to her I stammered and stammered, and me words died away in me throat. Oeh, she took a particular hold upon me. When I left her and went to work I could see her all the same, smiling and looking at me with her meek, loving eyes, in the field or the house. One Sunday morning I went down by one of the lakes for a stroll, never thinking to meet her there, but arrah, she was there pulling wild flowers to put in her Sunday hat. The darlint, she looked surprised, but I helped her get more flowers. She was swater and prettier than they were. Oeh, upon my soul, she was uncommon, and when she left me she stuck a few sweet flowers onto me coat. I can see her now, as she pinned them on. Her words were few, and she sighed and smiled as she did it. I walked home and felt as if I was in the seventh Heaven, you may be shure. But arrah, I missed her day and night, and felt iver so lonesome and bewildered.

"Was she amiable?"
"Shure indade, she was. I could niver make her mad. Always in good humor. She suited me weel, and she was of a good family. No spalpeens for me, but me father and mither was not willing, and they scolded, they fretted and tormented me so that I left home and the dear auld Ireland and came to this country. Even the nabors said no good iver comes of a boy who goes against the wishes of his father and mither. I was tormented and desperate."

He paused and sighed with deep emotion, and I was almost sorry I had unconsciously awakened a world of sad and tender memories. I expressed my sympathy and interest. He then said:

"Madam, you could marry a bad man, and make him a good one. You have a loving heart."

Thanking him for the unexpected compliment, I begged him to continue his story.

"Weel, I niver saw one like Kathleen, and if it was to do ever again, niver would I care for other people's advice. I would suit me own fancy." "Did you ever have a lovers' quarrel?" "Once, niver but once, and for three or four weeks I did not speak to her. At last we met by appointment half a mile from her home, and we talked it all over, and she said, 'Patrick, forgive and begin again.' I began to walk home with her, and when I said 'good-bye,' she turned and walked a part of the way to my house. And so we kept turning and walking backwards and forwards, till several hours had skipped by, and I forgot the time of day, and looking up I saw the moon shining in all her beauty upon the lovely lakes of Killarney. Everything seemed turned round, as if an angel was talking to me in a dream. Indade those were strange and happy times. She took a peculiar hold upon me, and if you'll believe me, it was the biggest job I ever was engaged in. Arrah, she suited me weel."

"What became of her at last?" I inquired. He sighed again and said:

"She came over to this country, and stopped in New York, hoping to find me once more. Oeh, the darlint, but I had come down this way and she longed and sighed for her home in auld Ireland, and a woman of my country told me she died of a broken heart, talking to the last about Patrick and Ireland. Niver do I care for young girls now. I could marry, but I could niver find the likes of swate Kathleen. Oeh, she suited me weel."

Some 30 years after that interview, I met the same man again, but how altered! Success had crowned his labors, he had amassed a large fortune, had educated several orphan children and was living in ease and elegance. He was spending his means judiciously and wisely for the poor and motherless. But the fair vision of young Kathleen had not faded from his memory, and he still loved to dwell upon her character and wonderful beauty. At his princely home I was delightfully entertained, and could but think Kathleen had elevated and enlarged his mind, purified his imagination, kept him from vicious associations, and made him a wiser and better man. For her sake his heart yearned over suffering humanity and devised means to relieve distress and misery.

Shall I say that one of his orphan boys, whom he educated, became distinguished for bravery on the battlefield, another for legal knowledge, while another thrilled the Senate of the United States with his burning words of power and eloquence?

Liebig has said, "All great actions spring from the heart," and a poet has sung—

"It is truth beyond our ken,
And yet a truth that all may read,
It is with roses as with men
The sweetest hearts are those that bleed."

—Isabella Carey.

AGRICULTURE IN COMMON SCHOOLS.—One great difficulty in the way of the success of agricultural schools in the United States, lies in the fact that our people do not make use of the primary schools as auxiliaries—as feeders to them. Instruction in the elements of agricultural education should begin in the common schools of the country, especially in those where farmers' sons and daughters make up the bulk of attendance. This is being done in France and other European countries. The result is entirely satisfactory. Youth of both sexes can, in these schools, be instructed in botany, in the practical culture of trees, shrubs and flowers; in grafting, budding, hybridizing, seed selection, and a score of other things that will amuse and instruct them, and at the same time beget a love for rural pursuits, and a desire for higher instruction in the science and art of agriculture, horticulture, stock breeding, etc. Public sentiment needs arousing in this direction. —Chicago Herald.

PACIFIC GROVE RETREAT.—This popular seaside resort is now ready for the reception of visitors, tourists and campers. Great preparations have been made for the season. New cottages have been built, tents, equipments, and all that is necessary to accommodate the large multitude that flock to this retreat, to rest and recreate. During last year there were nearly 800 lots sold, and the demand is so great that the promoters of this enterprise have laid out an addition, and now offer to the market about 1,000 more at nominal prices. As it is now a settled fact that Monterey is the Newport of the Pacific coast, there will no doubt be a ready sale for them.

The new Photographic Gallery of Bradley & Rulofson, over the "City of Paris," between Market and Geary, is one of the largest and finest in the United States. They have on hand over 60,000 negatives, a large number of them representing noted persons that have from time to time visited this coast. Orders promptly attended to, and visitors made welcome. Bro. G. A. Gawthorn, P. M. W., one of the genial artists, will take pleasure in showing them through this extensive gallery. Take the elevator, 14 Dupont street.

THE repairs and improvements that have been in progress at Ixora hall, on Mission street, are now finished. The hall has been finely repainted, frescoed and remodeled. The dining room has been enlarged, and the ladies' parlor newly decorated. Electric light is used, and all the appointments are first-class. Several societies of the city celebrate their anniversaries and hold their parties here. It is particularly well adapted for this.

THE receipts of the Garfield Monument Fair, at Washington, were $22,778 and the expenditures $15,184, leaving a balance of $7,593. A very slim showing for such a tremendously advertised speculation.

A HOME BLESSING. What a blessing to a household is a merry cheerful woman—one whose spirits are not affected by wet days, or little disappointments, or whose milk of human kindness does not sour in the sunshine of prosperity! Such a woman in the darkest hours brightens the house like a little piece of sunshiny weather. The magnetism of her smiles and the electrical brightness of her looks and movements infect every one. The children go to school with a sense of something great to be achieved; her husband goes into the world in a conqueror's spirit. No matter how people annoy and worry him all day, far off her presence shines, and he whispers to himself, "At home I shall find rest." So day by day she literally renews his strength and energy; and if you know a man with a beaming face, a kind heart, and a prosperous business, in nine cases out of ten you will find he has a wife of this kind.

PACIFIC MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA.—In another column appears the advertisement of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company of California, the only institution of the kind existing under the laws of this State. This Company has been transacting business for 14 years and has disbursed large sums of money to its policy holders and representatives, its total payment of this character now aggregating something more than $2,200,000. It is managed by experienced and competent officers, and its directory is composed of men whose names will be recognized as among our successful and responsible business men. As an established and well known and enterprising home institution, we take pleasure in referring the company to all such as desire to carry a policy of life insurance.

Easy Binder.

Dewey's patent elastic binder, for periodicals, music and other printed sheets, is the handiest, best and cheapest of all economical and practical file binders. Newspapers are quickly placed in it and held neatly, as in a cloth-bound book. It is durable and so simple a child can use it. Price, size of Mining and Scientific Press, Rural Press, Watchman, Fraternal Record, Home Journal, Harper's Weekly, and Scientific American, 75 cents; postage, 10 cents. Postpaid to subscribers of this paper, 50 cents. Send for illustrated circular. Agents wanted.

Type for Sale

15 Cts. per lb.

About 1,000 lbs. of Scotch brevier type used on this paper previous to Jan. 13th, 1883, will be sold in lots of 100 lbs., or more, for 15 cents per lb., and cost of boxing and shipping, if applied for soon. Apply to Dewey & Co., Publishers, No. 252 Market St., S. F.

Agents Now Wanted.

Extra Inducements will be offered for a few active canvassers, who will give their whole attention (for a while at least) to our business. Apply soon, or address this office, giving address, age, experience and reference.

Dewey &amp; Co., American and Foreign Patent Agents.

PATENTS obtained promptly; Caveats filed expeditiously; Patent Reissues taken out Assignments made and recorded in legal form; Copies of Patents and Assignments procured; Examinations of Patents made here and at Washington; Examinations made of Assignments recorded in Washington; Examinations ordered and reported by Telegraph; Rejected cases taken up and Patents obtained; Interferences Prosecuted; Opinions rendered regarding the validity of Patents and Assignments; Every legitimate branch of Patent Agency Business promptly and thoroughly conducted.

Our intimate knowledge of the various inventions of this coast, and long practice in patent business, enable us to abundantly satisfy our patrons; and our success and business are constantly increasing.

The shrewdest and most experienced Inventors are found among our most steadfast friends and patrons, who fully appreciate our advantages in bringing valuable inventions to the notice of the public through the columns of our widely circulated, first-class journals—thereby facilitating their introduction, sale and popularity.

Foreign Patents.

In addition to American Patents, we secure, with the assistance of co-operative agents, claims in all foreign countries which grant Patents, including Great Britain, France, Belgium, Prussia, Austria, Baden, Peru, Russia, Spain, British India, Saxony, British Columbia, Canada, Norway, Sweden, Mexico, Victoria, Brazil, Bavaria, Holland, Denmark, Italy, Portugal, Cuba, Roman States, Wurtemberg, New Zealand, New South Wales, Queensland, Tasmania, Brazil, New Granada, Chile, Argentine Republic, AND EVERY COUNTRY IN THE WORLD where Patents are obtainable.

No models are required in European countries, but the drawings and specifications should be prepared with thoroughness, by able persons who are familiar with the requirements and changes of foreign patent laws—agents who are reliable and permanently established.

Our schedule price for obtaining foreign patents, in all cases, will always be as low, and in some instances lower, than those of any other responsible agency.

We can and do get foreign patents for inventors in the Pacific States from two to six months (according to the location of the country) SOONER than any other agents.

The principal portion of the patent business of this coast has been done, and is still being done, through our agency. We are familiar with, and have full records, of all former cases, and can more correctly judge of the value and patentability of inventions discovered here than any other agents.

Situated so remote from the seat of government, delays are even more dangerous to the inventors of the Pacific Coast than to applicants in the Eastern States. Valuable patents may be lost by extra time consumed in transmitting specifications from Eastern agencies back to this coast for the signature of the inventor.

Confidential.

We take great pains to preserve secrecy in all confidential matters, and applicants for patents can rest assured that their communications and business transactions will be held strictly confidential by us. Circulars free.

Home Counsel.

Our long experience in obtaining patents for Inventors on this Coast has familiarized us with the character of most of the inventions already patented; hence we are frequently able to save our patrons the cost of a fruitless application by pointing to them the same thing already covered by a patent. We are always free to advise applicants of any knowledge we have of previous applicants which will interfere with their obtaining a patent.

We invite the acquaintance of all parties connected with inventions and patent right business, believing that the mutual conference of legitimate business and professional men is mutual gain. Parties in doubt in regard to their rights as assignees of patents or purchasers of patented articles, can often receive advice of importance to them from a short call at our office.

Remittances of money, made by individual inventors to the Government, sometimes miscarry, and it has repeatedly happened that applicants have not only lost their money, but their inventions also, from this cause and consequent delay. We hold ourselves responsible for all fees entrusted to our agency.

Engravings.

We have superior artists in our employ, and all facilities for producing fine and satisfactory illustrations of inventions and machinery, for newspaper, book, circular and other printed illustrations, and are always ready to assist patrons in bringing their valuable discoveries into practical and profitable use.

Spotting of Looking-Glasses.

A trouble of this kind is frequently met with by housekeepers. It is generally caused by undue exposure of the glass to the sunlight, or to the heat of a stove or fire-place. It is not as generally known as it should be, says the Manufacturer and Builder, that the amalgam with which looking-glasses are coated, to give them their perfect reflecting property, is very readily crystallized, when exposed even for a short time to direct sunlight, or to strong heat from a stove or fire-place. A mirror, hung where the sun can shine on it, is soon spoiled from this cause, taking on a granulated appearance, which is familiar to most housekeepers. Where this action is allowed to proceed for some time, it involves the whole of the amalgam surface that is exposed, and the glass becomes worthless as a reflector. The continuity of its reflecting surface is destroyed, and it ceases to reflect the outlines of objects with precision. To avoid this trouble, care should be taken in hanging; if a glass is placed where the direct rays of the sun can strike it, it should be covered during that part of the day in which it is so exposed. It is better, of course, to hang it where it will not be exposed; but this is not always convenient, especially with large and expensive glasses, for which in modern houses there is usually provided a space for their reception.

Where granulation has already commenced, its further progress may often be checked, and the glass preserved, by simply changing its position. As above remarked, looking-glasses will be spoiled as well by the action of heat, as by that of direct sunlight. It is, therefore, important to avoid hanging a mirror near a stove or fire-place, where strong radiant heat will reach it. If this precaution is neglected, granulation is likely to occur, even in a comparatively dark room, from the action of heat instead of light. Another thing to be avoided, is having a lamp or gas jet burning too close to the glass, for though the heat may not be sufficient to crack the glass, it will often bring about the same injurious granulation. By observing the precautions above given, many of our readers may avoid future difficulty. A looking-glass can be re-silvered for about one-sixth or one-fifth of its original cost.

REDLANDS.—According to all reports, Redlands colony, in San Bernardino county, is progressing very satisfactorily. The elevation has been found a great advantage during the cold winter, effects of frosts being less than in most other localities. The march of improvements has been kept up, and tree planting and home-making have kept the many colonists busy. All visitors are charmed with the beautiful situation of the lands and other superior advantages. Those seeking homes in the southern country should not overlook the claims of Redlands.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the 8th and 23d of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
INDEPENDENT ORDER CHOSEN FRIENDS,
ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST,
AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS,
IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN,
KNIGHTS OF HONOR.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and choicely selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

Man and Animals.

There can be no doubt, says Nature, that dogs associate with barking in certain tones special emotional states in their companions. In fact, it is probable that dogs can in this way communicate with each other a wide range of states of feeling. But those states are present states; not past or future. They are their own states; not the states of others.

A dog can call his companions' attention to a worriable cat, or he may have his own attention roused by the simple exclamation, "cat!" uttered by a human being. But no dog could tell his companion of the successful "worry" he had enjoyed, or suggest that they should go out for a "worry" the next day or evening.

And here we come upon what appears to be a fact which raises man so immeasurably above the level of the brute. The brute has to be contented with the experience he inherits or individually acquires. Man, through language, either spoken or written, profits by the experience of his fellows. Even the most savage tribe has traditions extending back to the father's father, or beyond. And the civilized man—has he not in his libraries the recorded results of many centuries of ever-widening experience and ever-deepening thought?

Thus it is that language has made us men. By means of language, and language alone, has human thought become possible. This it is which has placed so enormous a gap between the mind of a man and the mind of a dog. Through language each human being becomes the inheritor of the accumulated thought and experience of the whole human race. Through language has the higher abstract thought become possible.

The firm of Shaw & Sharp, importers and dealers in coal, No. 10 Fremont street, do a large business in their line. They make a specialty of supplying the country trade. Bro. Shaw, as the office man, is generally at his post and can fill an order for a cargo, or family supply of one ton.

New Sheet Music

Quite a variety of songs and pieces appears among the newest publications of Ditson & Co., just received. First there is a quaintly pretty "gospel song," by Bonar, "Is this all?" (30 cents), made into an acceptable sacred quartet by C. W. Green. Then we have "Voices" (30 cents), a melodious song by Birch; "Oh, You Little Darling" (30 cents), in popular style, by Tabran; "Laughing Old Farmer Magee" (35 cents), comic song by Newhall; "Invitation to the Waltz" (50 cents), for violin and piano, by Winner; "Laxey Glen Schottische" (30 cents), by S. M. Tod; "Album Leaf" (30 cents), piano piece by Lunge; another quite different "Album Leaf" (30 cents), by Eschman, and good plantation song, "When the Ole Man is laid away" (30 cents), by L'Orange.

Life Insurance.

The attention of the reader who contemplates life insurance is directed to the advertisement of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Insurance Association, which may be found in another column. It is a new order of association organized for the purpose of furnishing life insurance at much cheaper rates than have hitherto prevailed, and this is done by reducing expenses, reducing risks and in other ways which enter into the foundation plan of the association. The claims of the company are of such a character and promise such great advantages that its plan and operations should certainly be examined by those who desire assurance that their demise does not leave loved ones without the comforts which they are at present securing for them by their enterprise and industry. From what we hear of this new plan of insurance, and from the character of some of the names we see in its list of assured, we can consistently say investigate the plan and methods of the Mutual Reserve Fund Association.

A Portable Electric Lighter.

A Portable Electric Lighter for $5 is being extensively sold by the Portable Electric Light Company, of 22 Water Street, Boston. It is an economical and safe apparatus for lighting for home and business purposes.—Scientific American, New York, Dec. 16, 1882.

The Pacific Rural Press.

[Established in San Francisco in 1870.]

This is the leading farming journal on the western half of the continent, and second to none in America. It is well printed and illustrated, weekly. Contains an unusual amount of fresh, original farm, household and family circle literature. Careful attention is paid to giving full and reliable weekly market reports. The following are among its ably conducted departments: Editorials on agricultural and other timely and important subjects of live interest to farmers and their families; agricultural and other useful and ornamental illustrations; correspondence from various quarters of our new and rich developing fields of agriculture on the Pacific coast, embracing new hints and ideas from progressive men and women in all branches of rural industry; Horticulture; The Garden; The Home Circle; The Grange; Young Folks; Domestic Economy; Good Health; Entomological; Sheep and Wool; The Dairy; The Stock Yard; Poultry Yard; The Swine Yard; The Apiary; The Vineyard; Queries and Replies; New Inventions (and illustrations of new and improved machinery); Agricultural Notes; Items of General News, etc. Its columns are studiously filled with choice, interesting, fresh and useful reading, devoid of questionable literature for old or young and fancifully alluring clap-trap advertisements. Send for sample copies. Subscriptions, in advance, $3 a year. Agents wanted, on liberal pay. DEWEY & Co., Publishers. No. 252 Market St., S. F., Cal.

Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association,

149 Broadway, Cor. Liberty Street, New York.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK.

EDWARD B. HARPER, President. F. T. BRAMAN, Secretary. CHARLES R. BISSELL, Treasurer.

O. D. BALDWIN, President 4th National Bank, New York, Auditor of Death Claims and Reserve Fund.

The 4th National Bank has a paid up capital of $3,200,000. $21,000,000 daily balance. $30,000,000 passes through the President's hands each day.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY, OF NEW YORK which has assets of $12,000,000—Trustees of Reserve Fund Account

$10,000 LIFE INSURANCE FOR $50. $5,000 FOR $30.

OUR PILLARS OF STRENGTH.

First.—Graded assessments, so that the young and old will pay their exact proportion, and only as the same shall be required.

Second.—A Reserve Fund, so that the permanency of the Association is guaranteed.

Third.—A careful Medical Examination, so that only the healthy can become members, thus insuring a low mortality.

Fourth.—The Tontine System, so that old members will reach a point where no further payments will be required. New members will endeavor to reach this point by being persistent in their payments.

Fifth.—By placing the Trust Funds beyond the control of the Officers and Directors, so that no part of the same can be used in paying exorbitant salaries or expenses, or misappropriated or corruptly handled by them.

Sixth.—An open Ledger, so that the affairs of the Association may always be known to its members.

Seventh.—The limitation of the expenses of the Association to the amount received from the admission fees and annual dues.

No Association presenting these combined features has ever failed in the history of insurance. No plan of insurance ever presented to the public has such a universal hold of the hearts of the people and has been so unanimously accepted as a sound basis for permanent protection to the insured, as that adopted and presented to the public by this Association.

The Assessment for 1883, at age 35, was only $3.10 for each $1,000.

This Association is to-day composed of over ten thousand leading men, such as Bankers, Merchants, Lawyers, Professors of our Colleges, Clergymen, Manufacturers, United States and State Senators, Chiefs of our Government Departments, and others, all united together for the protection of their families, upon a common-sense plan, each member contributing the exact amount required for the protection afforded.

Our business in force at the beginning of the year was $7,661,000. At the end of the year it is $35,171,250.

The assessments for death claims per year, for the past two years, have been at the average age of 35, but $3.10 per thousand dollars insurance, while all of our death claims have been paid in full when due; while, at the same age, the usual rates under the old system are $26.50 per year, or $53 for the two years on each one thousand dollars of insurance.

APPOINTMENT OF AUDITOR.

Mr. O. D. Baldwin, the highly-esteemed President of the 4th National Bank of New York city a bank possessing assets exceeding $20,000,000, has become our Auditor of the death claims, Reserve Fund and Assessment accounts. Within the past four months he has caused two examinations to be made into our accounts. In each case his examination, as per his report, has proved eminently satisfactory.

TRUST COMPANY AS TRUSTEE.

Your Board of Directors within the year have also selected the Central Trust Co., of this city, to act as Trustees of our Reserve Fund, of which Mr. Henry F. Spaulding is President, and the Hon. J. P. Olcott, late Comptroller of the State of New York, is the Vice-President. The contract made with the Trust Co. places the funds of the Reserve Fund beyond the control of the management of this Association, yet retaining a contingent supervision to prevent speculation from other sources. The Central Trust Co. has a cash capital and surplus of $1,900,000, with assets exceeding $12,000,000; thus all conceivable safeguards have been thrown around the affairs of this Association.

OPINIONS OF ACTUARIES.

Within the past year we have received written opinions from the great Actuaries of our country, Hon. Elizer Wright and Mr. Sheppard Hommann, as well as the opinions of many other, equally as reliable Actuaries. In every case the report has been that our system is correct, and our Association will be a permanent and useful institution.

TWO SYSTEMS ANALYZED.

The fact is, there are two systems of Life Insurance in existence to-day. The one is known as the Level Premium system; the other is known as the Assessment system.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.

The assessment system requires the members to pay for their losses as they occur. It admits of the insured being the most miserly of their own money, and it is absolutely needed; and its only weakness, as developed by the experience of the past, is a lack of cohesiveness, which has been fully provided against under the Reserve Fund system of this Association.

LEVEL PREMIUM SYSTEM.

The Level premium system requires the members to provide for the losses before they occur. To determine the proper amount to be collected in advance, they have adopted what is known as the American Experience Mortality Table. The correctness of this table is not a matter of doubt. That it, with the interest on the excess of payments are the only elements to be considered in making up the cost of life insurance, is a disputed question to say the least.

Our rates are based on actual and not on assumed mortality, as is the case with the Old Line Companies, which require in advance, four times the actual cost of insurance.

We occasionally send complimentary sample copies of the WATCHMAN to the various officers and members of the A. O. U. W. We ask as a special favor that those receiving them, and all interested in the success of the various Lodges will lend us a helping hand in increasing our circulation. Nothing contributes more to the successful working of the A. O. U. W. than the circulation of general Fraternity news, and the best way to secure this is through the WATCHMAN, which is an able and faithful advocate. It is to the interest of the A. O. U. W. that the WATCHMAN be placed in the hands of every Workman, and to accomplish this we must rely in a large measure upon the voluntary efforts and subscriptions.

Liberal inducements will be offered to active and reliable members who will canvass for subscriptions. Sample copies will be mailed free on application to Workmen, all of whom are invited to endeavor to assist in extending the circulation of the WATCHMAN.

Let every Workman into whose hands this notice may come, if not already a subscriber, fill out the subscription blank below, enclose two dollars, and send it to us for a year's subscription.

REDLANDS.

Good water, rich soil and magnificent view. High elevation, dry air, few fogs and northerly. No brush or fences on the land, which is especially adapted to the culture of the orange and raisin grape.

Near to church, school, store and depot. Hotel open. Telephone communication.

Stage from San Bernardino Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

The following information concerning one of the best-reputed and promising colony enterprises in Southern California, is from the Riverside Press, of San Bernardino County, April 1, 1882.

A Model Settlement

"No place in California has sprung into public notice so rapidly and gained so deserved a reputation in so short a time as has the new tract of Redlands.

This tract is located between Old San Bernardino and Crafton, on the south side of Mill Creek ditch, and comprises 2,500 acres of as choice fruit lands as can be found in the State. The land is of a reddish clayey loam, not clayey enough to work hard, having sufficient admixture of sand to hold moisture and give the best results when planted to orchard or vineyard. The red lands of the State are everywhere celebrated as being superior for tree and vine.

The tract slopes to the northwest, and commands one of the grandest views to be found in the State. The track of the Southern Pacific railroad runs one and a half miles from the center of the Redlands tract, and a depot has been established for the accommodation of Redlands and neighboring settlements.

The Redlands tract is laid off by running avenues from northeast to southwest, one-quarter of a mile apart and cross streets at right angles to those avenues every half mile, thus cutting the tract into blocks, each of which contains 80 acres. The avenues are each 100 ft. wide. The cross streets are 60 ft. wide.

Town Plat

Near the center of the tract is a town plat, consisting of 140 acres, cut up into lots ranging from an ordinary business lot to two and a half and five-acre residence lots.

The Water System

Is one of the most perfect in the State. The water supply comes partially from the South Fork ditch of the Santa Ana river and partially from private water developments in the Santa Ana canyon and other localities. The waters are to be conducted to a large reservoir, located in a canyon adjoining the tract, and distributed from this reservoir by means of cement pipes. These pipes are so laid as to carry the water without loss to the highest point on each ten-acre lot. The basis of water supply is one inch of water, statute measurement, to each eight acres of land. This is ample, and up to the best irrigated tract in the State.

The orange, lemon, apricot, peach and raisin grape will grow here to perfection. Judson & Brown (San Bernardino P. O.), owners of the tract, are energetic men, who leave no stone unturned to make their enterprise a success. They do not try to figure how little they can do and sell their land, but where they can put another thousand dollars and make the tract more desirable to first-class settlers. There is nothing shoddy about their operations. Redlands will stand in a few years as one of the finest settlements on the Pacific coast."

Make It Short.

As has been announced, the Grand Lodge treasury will not be equal to the probable cost of the coming session of the Grand Lodge. It is a large body, and necessarily expensive. The pay-roll last year aggregated over $4,000. This year a session of for our Grand Lodge to meet, transact its business, and adjourn in two days. Our Lodges are now sufficiently burdened. Let's make an honest effort to avoid an increase of the load they have to carry.

the present, will be advertised in one or two of the daily papers, and also in the WATCHMAN. As this organization has not been christened with a permanent name, we for the present, call it a School of Instruction.

The Mother's Joy and Pride.

Our illustration this issue is as striking as the name mother synonymous with all that is good and worthy. The mother begins at once to enter into the life and spirit of her babe, and as it grows and develops, expanding under the sunshine of her love, she becomes its companion and confidant.

In our illustration we have a mother amusing her babe. She is as much interested as three days will cost not less than $4,500. We believe all that ought to be done could be finished as well in two days as in fifty. We need very little legislation. If we did nothing at all but to organize and elect officers we should not suffer greatly—not more probably, than the cost of a day's session. We trust we may be pardoned for suggesting that if a few of our wisest heads would prepare the little legislation we need in advance, and do it carefully and well, it might be possible

At the last meeting it was formally organized by the election of the following permanent officers: E. F. Loud, President; W. I. McKay, Vice-President; J. D. Thompson, Secretary; E. Danforth, Treasurer. It will meet on the first and third Saturdays of each month, in Shiels' building, 32 O'Farrell street. All Master Workmen are invited to attend, and visitors from the country who may desire to see the work exemplified are cordially welcome. Each meeting for it is real and truthful. The new life committed to every parent's charge when a child is born, warms the heart with gratitude and makes life give promise of greater happiness. Particularly is this true on the part of the mother. Immediately she realizes her maternal responsibility, and with that sweet sympathy so characteristic of her sex, she takes up the duties of mother, and throws around the new birth those hallowed influences of love and mercy which makes is the little one. Her whole being seems devoted to the child, and we feel certain that as the years go on and the "new life" becomes a boy, then a youth, and finally the man, that she will be able to influence him to become upright and respected among his fellow-men.

Since the Order was planted in Philadelphia there have been but three District Deputies, J. C. Davit, E. S. Perkins and Milton Shive.

Home Miscellany.

Wandering from Home to Home.

When swallows build in early spring
And the roses were red in June;
When the great white lilies were fair and sweet,
In the heat of the August noon;
When the winds were blowing the yellow wheat,
And the song of the harvest nigh,
And the beautiful world lay calm and sweet,
• In the joy of a cloudless sky—

Then the swallows were full of glad content
In the hope of their northern nest;
Were sure that the land they were tarrying in
Of all other lands was the best.
Ah! if they had heard in those blissful days
The Voice they must heed say, "Go,"
They had left their nests with a keen regret,
And their flight had been sad and slow.

But when summer was gone and flowers were dead
And the brown leaves fell with a sigh,
And they watched the sun setting every day
Further on in the northern sky,
Then the Voice was sweet when it bid them "Go,"
They were eager for southward flight,
And they beat their wings to a new-born hope
When they went at the morning light.

If the way was long, yet the way was glad,
And they brighter and brighter grew,
As they dipped their wings in the glowing heat,
As they still to the southward flew;
Till they found the land of the Summer sun,
The land where the nightingale sings,
And joyfully rested 'mid rose and song
Their beautiful weary wings.

Like swallows we wander from home to home—
We are birds of passage at best—
In many a spot we have dwelt awhile,
We have built us many a nest.
But the heart of the Father will touch our hearts,
He will speak to us soft and low,
We shall follow the Voice to the better land,
And its bliss and its beauty know.

The New Bed Covering.

Cheese-Cloth Comforters.

The recent cold snap which visited our State (reminding the elders of the community so forcibly of their homes in the East), with its mimic snow storm and heavy, white frosts, developed a shortness of bed covering in our domestic regime, which we proceeded at once to supply by the construction of a few more "cheese-cloth" comforters.

These have proved themselves to be so easily made, and so admirably adapted to supply all the requirements of the most perfect bed covering, combining as they do the warmth and lightness of an eider-down quilt, with the superior recommendation of an inexpensive-ness, which places them within the reach of all, that we have no hesitation in pronouncing them perfection, in their special department, and "handy to have in the house" at any time.

As quilts and comforts have gone out of style somewhat since the days of our grandmothers, some directions for making them may not be amiss at this time, since Prof. Vennor, the Canadian prophet, insists that we are just in the commencement of our climatic difficulties, and predicts that from the last of January until the middle of March will be a time of unusual cold and unprecedented storms throughout the world. It is just as well, therefore, to be prepared for emergencies by having a plenty of warm bed clothes at hand, in case the Professor's predictions should be fulfilled; and to the good housekeeper, even though they may not be required for immediate use, there is nothing that gives quite the satisfaction that comes from the knowledge that her household closet is so thoroughly stocked that no unexpected draft upon its contents can run them short.

In the first place then, to commence operations, one must have a set of old-fashioned "quilting frames," which consist of four strips of straight-grained lumber, two of which are nine and two eight feet in length. Upon one side of each of these is tacked closely a doubled strip of strong cloth, which is left projecting half an inch beyond the side of the frame, and extends its entire length. These cloth strips are for the purpose of attaching the quilt, or comfort to be made, on to the frames, which is generally done by sewing the edge of the comfort to them with a strong double thread, stretching it at the same time perfectly straight with the frames. These are held in place at each of the four corners (where the timbers cross each other) by a patent adjustable screw clamp brought on for this purpose, and obtainable at almost any hardware establishment. We have found our frames and clamps useful for various household purposes besides quilt making, and, by using shorter cross pieces, just the things to stretch the "burlap's" foundation upon, when making imitation "Persian" or "drawn in rugs," as with the patent screws, the size and shape of one's work may be regulated at pleasure, rolled under and out of the way on a side that is finished, and let out at will upon that whereon one wished to work, so as to require no tiresome reaching at long distances to accomplish the desired end.

Having the frames and clamps all ready, we proceed to make our comfort, for which the following materials are required:

10 yds unbleached cheese cloth, at 6 cents per yard.....	60
6 rolls best Sea Island cotton, at 12½ cent per roll.....	75
1 twist scarlet Germantown yarn (for tabbing).....	25

Total cost of materials for comfort .....$1 50

The cloth is cut into two equal lengths, and seamed together on the sewing machine. Then double it exactly in half, fasten the lower part into the quilting frames upon all four sides, and stretch it perfectly smooth and square, leaving the upper half at one side of the frame until it is needed.

Although the cotton comes in rolls only a foot long, it is really a yard in width, which is folded with the outside edges both lapped into the center, and when the roll is unwound, these sides can be delicately opened (from the inside of the roll always), and spread out to their full width upon the stretched cheese-cloth, allowing a broad lap of the cotton where the two rolls come together, and, spreading in this manner, three rolls down the length of the comfort, then, crossing these at right angles, three more across the breadth of it, which will ensure an even distribution of the cotton over the whole. A third layer may be spread in the same manner over these two, if the comfort is desired to be of more than usual thickness, but two will be found to be sufficient for all ordinary purposes. The odds and ends left over from the rolls are spread upon any spot that seems not to be of the required thickness, until all parts are alike. The top of this comfort is then spread carefully over the whole, (so as not to disturb the position of the cotton by the operation) and stretched, straight and smoothly into its place where it can be either sewed or pinned upon the bottom cloth so as to fasten it all around to the frames, when it is ready for the next part of the performance.

These comforts do not require to be "quilted" in the old fashioned way, but simply to be "tabbed" closely, with some bright-colored worsted. After having with chalk and ruler marked off the cheese-cloth into long lines, crossing each other, and forming diamonds or squares of any desired shape or size, the tabbing is performed in this manner. At each point, where the lines intersect each other, a needle, threaded with a long doubled thread of the scarlet yarn, is pushed down, and drawn through to the under side, leaving the last end of the thread projecting about an inch and a half above the cloth. The needle is then pushed up again, close to where it went down, so as to make a short stitch, (or else the tab will not be a strong one.) Between the two ends of this thread the "tabbing strand" is placed. This is composed of six long threads of the scarlet yarn laid smoothly together. Upon these, with the two ends of the worsted in the needle tie a firm, hard knot; then gather the whole bunch, tread and all, up into the hand and clip off all together, a half an inch above the cloth. The result is a little, round tuft or "tab," which, if they are placed near enough together, will hold the cotton of the comfort firmly in its position under all ordinary wear, and be far more ornamental than the more tedious process of quilting in the end. When the comfort has been "tabbed" around the outside edges, it can be loosened from the frames where the work is finished, and that part rolled under and out of the way, the clamps readjusted, and the "tabbers," by this means, enabled easily to reach the center, until all is completed, when the comfort is cut loose from the frame.

The edges are then turned in evenly all around, and finished off with a coarse button-hole stitch, made with the same yarn used in the "tabbing" and the comfort is done.

The result is a soft, light, cream-tinted covering, seven and a-half feet long by six feet wide, of exceeding warmth and agreeableness to the touch, which we think superior to anything we have yet come across, in the way of bed clothing. The time required to make it is one day for one person alone, or, if a friend will "drop in and lend a hand," the whole thing can be finished in an afternoon, whilst the affairs of the neighborhood are being amicably discussed.

In former times we thought our bed not properly furnished unless we had upon it, besides the counterpane, two pairs of heavy mission blankets, whose weight had to be borne to secure the warmth we required. For the last two years we have used, winter and summer, just one of these cheese-cloth covers, made as above directed, and found ourselves fully as warm and infinitely more comfortable than when we slept under the far more expensive but heavier blankets, to which nothing could induce us to return since knowing the luxury of this truly named "comfort," which combines at so little cost, warmth, light weight and beauty in one admirable, easily contrived covering.

With a stock of these on hand, we defy Prof. Vennor and his cold weather prophecies to upset our equilibrium, and at night, as we tuck the soft folds around us, "and half our prayers slip into dreams," they are blended with the wish that there were "cheese-cloth comforts" enough to go around for all the world, and that we had the credit of their distribution in the records kept above.—Lucy Winston, in Rural Press.

Women's Christian Association Report.

The following report shows one of the good ways in which women are increasing their usefulness, and we hope that those of our lady readers who are able, and who are not yet connected with some such noble association will not be slow in joining hands with the tireless workers already in the field.

The first meeting of the new year was held in the Association's new rooms, 1274 Franklin street, Oakland. The attendance was large and enthusiastic. After the opening devotional exercises the Secretary and Treasurer's reports were read and adopted. Thus closed the record for 1882. As we look back over the year's work our hearts are full of gratitude to those whose liberality has enabled us to carry on our varied enterprises. Most cordially do we acknowledge the continued generosity of friends whose means and time have been so freely bestowed in behalf of our work. A new page is turned for us in the "great volume of time." It is our duty to see that the writing to be traced therein shall tell of faithful service to those for whom we are privileged to labor. The managers of the Women's Christian Association view with pardonable pride their beautiful new Home, fitted up with the taste and refinement of a private residence. As you enter the front hall the sound of footsteps is lost in the comfortably carpeted floor. The carpet is largely the gift of Mr. P. Sather. To the right, are the large parlors so well adapted for the various meetings of the Association.

To those of us accustomed to shiver in large, bare rooms, stores, cold chapels, anywhere we could be accommodated, there is solid comfort. A bright fire blazes in the grate; snowy curtains drape the windows (the gift of Mrs. Dr. Glenn), nor is the soft carpet lacking here, with its bright border and cozy rugs, the result of untiring energy on the part of Mrs. Louis Janin, our Treasurer. Above the mantel hangs a beautiful picture of Mrs. R. B. Hays, in rich ebony frame, the gift of Mrs. J. C. McChesney to the Women's Christian Temperance Union, who hold their meetings in the same place.

Across the hall we find the rooms of the Industrial Department, under the efficient management of Mrs. A. J. Ralston. Here, on Wednesday morning, may be seen many of the industrious women of our city poor, waiting for parcels of sewing. "Give me work," they beg; "tis all I ask." The following monthly report of Mrs. W. E. Hale, Secretary of this branch, will tell its own story: Since October 16, 1882, the Committee has given sewing to 20 women; 163 garments have been made, 81 of these being orders. A large number have been given away to needy ones. We feel thankful we can make so good a financial report. The lecture given by the Rev. Robert McKenzie, through the united energy of the Committee and kind friends, was a great success, enabling us not only to pay our debts, but also to have a balance in bank. We also tender our thanks to those who have given us such generous patronage in the past, and trust our orders may be even more numerous in the coming months. We have seamstresses among our employees whom we can recommend. But we invariably find the poorest women the least able to earn their bread. The garments made by these—for we refuse none—we can only give away; thus accomplishing a double charity. This also taxes the depth of our purse greatly, as we pay the women for making the garments which we give away, as well as paying for the raw material. But we find the "bread cast upon the waters" ever brings back a blessing. We have had no material donated through the month, but return thanks for partially worn clothing sent us. We can make use of anything in this line, as our applicants for clothes are constant. The 3d of January was the first birthday of the Industrial Committee. When we review the year and compare our feeble condition with the vigor and hope of to-day, we cannot be too thankful, and trust that as each anniversary comes round, we may be able to bring even a better record to our mother society.

To give some idea of the work done by this department, we give the Treasurer's quarterly report. Mrs. James E. Gordon thus reports: Total receipts, $285.65; total disbursements, $212; balance on hand, $73.65. Under the roof-tree of this Association is also gathered the Sheltering Home, designed as a temporary home for destitute women, and since the establishment of the Home, more than 50 women and children have here found refuge. Mothers with helpless little ones, driven from their homes by the brutality of drunken husbands, or widowed without work, gladly welcome this shelter, where rest, means for bathing, and wholesome meals strengthen and refresh them for seeking employment, or possibly the continuance of their journey to friends. During the month one inmate was dismissed to the County Hospital; another is before the Commissioners of Lunacy, and we fear will find a home in the Insane Asylum. To Capt. Ainsworth we are indebted for a Christmas present of $50; also, $50 from Mr. A. Chabot, and $30 from ex-Governor Perkins. Friends, from the fullness of heart, we thank you.

The Helping Hand school still increases in interest and attendance; 153 scholars answer to its roll call. New friends are being raised up to this important work. A large class of boys attract the visitor's attention. One has made a shirt for himself, button holes and all, and marches off with it triumphantly home.

Each garment belongs to the little maker. By personal solicitation, Mrs. Pomeroy added $10 during the month to its treasury. To this band of faithful teachers will be added for the coming year, Mrs. Cassidy, well-known as the gifted talker to children. Let us run to the rescue. Every little life snatched from ruin will be a power for good reaching to future generations—

"Only an hour with the children,
Pleasantly, cheerfully given;
Yet seed was sown in that hour alone,
Which will bring forth the fruit for heaven."

We could not repress a sigh of disappointment as the Secretary read, "The Fruit and Flower Mission has gone out from us, preferring to be alone." We give up this branch of our work with deep regret. We beg, however, that this, our child, will always remember that it has, in its efforts to stand alone, the earnest sympathy, and hearty co-operation of its mother, the Woman's Christian Association.

Mrs. WM. SUBLETTE,
Pres. of Women's Christian Association.

The Hills of Contra Costa.

[Written by D.]

Many of you little children have heard stories about the people who live in the mountainous districts of Ireland and Scotland. There is a gentleman, now residing in San Francisco, who used to be very fond of telling me little incidents of his baby life while in Scotland. One in particular was the care he received from an old mother goat, who had lost her little ones.

His father died leaving his mother very poor and to her care, two little brothers, besides himself, for the support of whom she was obliged to go out to labor for others, taking the two larger ones with her and leaving the wee laddie at home in the yard with the goat. Do you think she ever hurt him? No, quite the contrary, she was very fond of him and when he would fret she came running up to him crying, mah, mah, and looked anxiously around with her great brown eyes, to see if anything was wrong.

Not seeing anything, she would sidle up to him thinking him hungry, and sometimes he was. He told me he could remember very definitely, getting down on his knees and taking his dinner after the fashion of little goats. However, it does not seem to have injured him any for he is a very fine specimen of a stout, healthy, well to do business man to-day.

But would you like to know something about those who live in our own native hills? Now, do not imagine that I am going to tell you that they have goat mammas, for such a thing as a goat is scarcely to be seen, though some of the hills look more a fit habitation for a goat than anything else. But dropped down deep among these mountains you will find fertile little valleys, with clear, rippling streams and long, luxuriant grass that makes you feel very much like lying down and taking a good roll on its soft, downy surface.

These valleys are almost entirely taken up by settlers. They are mostly poor people from the city, with large families, who came out in the country with the hope of making homes on Government land. But, owing to some dispute that has arisen, they cannot improve their homes as they would like to, and build nice houses and fences, so they have to do the next best thing.

I saw two little girls with pretty blue eyes and lovely flaxen curls assisting their parents the other day in rather a novel way; each little girl was astride an old gray horse, which had been previously harnessed for her with heavy straps hanging down on each side, to these they had fastened long poles, and would drag them along the hillside, apparently enjoying the sport. On being questioned as to what they were doing, they said they were helping pa to build fence, so the cattle could not eat their grain.

Many of these hills produce an abundance of small fruit, such as blackberries, raspberries and strawberries, the latter, however, require cultivation to make them produce well. Hazel nuts, or filberts, grow here and there along the hills. The dainty little water-cress we see in the market lines the margin of these brooks the whole year round, and the wild birds fill the air with songs in the spring as sweet and clear as our own dear little canaries in their gilded cage at home.

MALARIA IN NEW ENGLAND—SUGGESTIVE FACTS.—A short time ago the key to the mysterious extension of malarial diseases in New England was supposed to have been found in the damming of the streams for manufacturing purposes. Now the Boston Advertiser says that intelligent people living in the districts invaded, say that the appearance of malaria in New England dates from the introduction of the cultivation of tobacco on a large scale upon the intervals of the Connecticut, and that its spread has kept even pace with the extended growing of this crop. The most plausible theory of the introduction and propagation of the aerial poison is this: The tobacco crop is a proverbially exhaustive one. To keep up the productiveness of the soil fertilizers are freely used. The manure is brought from New York City, mostly in scows, which are unloaded on the banks of the river where the cargo is to be used. All the autumn and winter these heaps of putrid matter are fermenting and breeding disease. The air that comes in contact with these piles of filth is contaminated and rendered unfit for human lungs to inhale, as it is offensive to the senses.

A Boy's Victory.

I don't think Harry ever realized that he had any very serious faults. He was a good boy, as boys go; that is, he was honest and truthful, obedient to his parents, a diligent pupil at school, and at home obliging and reliable. What more could be expected of any boy? I can tell you in two little words—good temper. Often when others praised him his mother would sigh. "Yes," she would say, or think if she did not say it; "yes, he is a good boy, if only he would learn to control his temper."

All the household knew that this was a lesson he had never learned. Not a day passed without painful proof of the fact. If he and Jack were set to any task together, and Jack failed to do his part just as Harry thought he should, you could hear him shouting in passionate tones, scolding and threatening, and sometimes, I am sorry to say, using words he had much better not have used. Father and mother had talked to him many and many a time. They had punished him, too, more than once, but all in vain. Now they were almost ready to despair, for he was 14 years of age—old enough to see the folly and the sin of giving way to such fits of passion, and yet there was no improvement. I don't know what Harry thought about it himself. I am very sure he would have been horrified if he had seen his father or his mother act in the same manner; and if his teacher had flown into a rage at every slight provocation, no boy in school would have lost respect for him sooner than Harry. Perhaps he imagined that some morning he would wake up and find himself a man, with his childish faults outgrown, like his last year's suit.

Ah, boys! no such thing as that will ever happen to any of you. Faults of character are not outgrown; they must be conquered. Whatever a boy is and chooses to be to-day, he will most probably be 10 or 20 years hence; and it was because they realized this, and knew how much unhappiness may be caused in any household by an ungoverned temper, that his parents were by no means so well satisfied with Harry, as Harry was with himself.

One day it happened that he had a good deal of trouble with a long sum he had to do in school. He went over it again and again, but the answer would not come right.

"Come and let me see if I can help you to find the error," said his teacher kindly, seeing the boy's face begin to flush and his manner grow nervous and irritable.

He went over his work again aloud.

"One from one leaves one—"

"What?" said the teacher.

"One from one leaves one," he said, positively.

"Hardly, I think, Harry. You know better than that. Come, come, my boy, that was a mere accident, such as has happened to many a good accountant." And to relieve the boy from his angry confusion the teacher passed on to the next example.

But, unfortunately, Jack had heard, and Jack was a tease.

The next day was Saturday, and in the afternoon the boys were alone at home. Harry was working at his carpenter's bench, where he was very expert, when Jack came idling along and accidentally pushed the board he was planing.

"I wish you'd look where you're going!" shouted Harry, angrily.

"Oh, I'm not going anywhere, I only came to ask you how much one from one leaves," and Jack seated himself on the end of the bench as if he meant to stay.

Harry scowled, but gave no answer. Jack began to whistle. Presently he stopped.

"Well, Harry, have you found out yet? One from one leaves?—I'm waiting."

"Get out of that!" roared Harry, and seizing something which he thought a piece of smooth wood he threw it at his brother.

It was the hatchet, and barely missing Jack's head it stuck firmly in the trunk of a tree beyond him. Jack shuddered as he tried in vain to pull it out.

"You might have killed me, Harry," he said very quietly.

"Served you right if I had," said Harry; "what did you come here tormenting me for? You'd better go away or I'll hurt you."

Jack went away; and Harry tried very hard to convince himself that he had been quite excusable, but try as he would he could not get rid of a sickening sensation when he looked at the hatchet sticking in the tree and thought where it might have been.

It required all his strength to pull it out, and after that his carpenter's tools ceased to interest him.

Jack was no tell-tale, and he said nothing to any one of what had occurred; but that night Harry lay awake a long time. Once or twice he raised himself up and looked at his brother lying quietly asleep beside him. At length he fell into an uneasy slumber. His mother was just going to bed when she heard a cry from the boys' room and went quickly to see what was the matter. It was Harry who was struggling and calling for aid.

"Oh! help me! help me, somebody! I can't get it out."

"Harry!" His mother's touch on his arm aroused him, and he opened his eyes. "You are dreaming, my boy," she said.

"Yes," he answered with a gasp, "it was a dream, but it was possibly real—wait a little, mother."

She sat down beside him and softly stroked his hair. But in a moment he sat up and said excitedly, "Let me tell you all about it. I dreamed that I had thrown the ax at Jack and killed him. It was sticking in his head and I was trying to pull it out."

"My dear boy, don't allow yourself to get so wrought up by a dream," said his mother, a little frightened by his manner.

"But it was not only a dream, mother, I did throw the hatchet at him to-day, and I don't believe I am any better than Cain. It was not my fault that it missed him."

Mother leaned over and pressed her lips softly on Jack's brown hair. "Thank God," she said fervently, "Thank God, for saving both my boys."

Then she made Harry lie down, and talked to him soothingly for a few moments. It seemed to her that the boy's own conscience was speaking to him so plainly that there was less need than ever before for any words from her. She left him at last with a good-night kiss. As soon as she was gone Harry got out of bed, knelt down, and for the first time in his life he really prayed. I do not mean to say that he had never said his prayers before; every night since he could remember he had said them, sometimes thinking of what he was saying, and at other times not thinking at all. But now from the depths of the boy's heart there arose a cry for help; for he had begun to feel that there was something within him that he must confess; something he could not conquer by his own strength.

The next day mother had a little talk with Jack who was very much surprised when she asked him about the throwing of the hatchet.

"Why, how do you know anything about it?" he asked. "I didn't tell."

"No, but Harry did. He only told me of his own share, however; now I want to hear of yours."

"Oh, I was teasing him, that was all; he made a mistake in his examples on Friday at school, and I thought I'd get some fun out of him; but Harry's such an old peppep-box, he just flies in your face if you touch him."

"Jack," said his mother very gravely, "if Harry had killed you in the fit of passion you aroused, do you think all the sin would have been his?"

"Why, mother I don't see that it would have been my fault."

"Well, I do, and that is just what I want to make you see. You know Harry's weak point is his temper, and when you try to stir him up and put him in a rage you are just as bad as he is. I am not sure that you are not the worse of the two. It is Satan's work to lead others into sin. Think of that, my boy, and try to find your fun in some other way hereafter."

Jack was a heedless little soul, but he was not heartless, and he proved that he understood his mother's words by saying nothing more to Harry about "one from one."

Not very long after this a wonderful thing happened in the town where these boys lived, which was nothing less than a visit from General Grant. Now, if there was any living man whom Harry would have liked to see in preference to all others, that man was General Grant, for whom he had a most enthusiastic admiration. For a week before the great event he could think of nothing else but the preparations which were being made to give his hero a fitting reception. Part of the programme for the day included a procession in which the school children were to join, and on his arrival the General was to pass between the lines of boys and girls drawn up upon the platform of the station. All were to carry bouquets or baskets of flowers, and great was the rivalry to see whose selection of flowers would be the most beautiful and appropriate.

In his secret heart Harry was sure he would win the palm, for had he not in his own garden an "American Banner Rose?" The red and white buds were almost ready to unfold; they would be in all their beauty by the eventful day, and when massed together, and surrounded by a deep border of blue forget-me-nots, could anything equal such a combination?

How he watched his precious rose-bush day by day, anticipating the envious glances that would be cast upon him at the station. What, if by some happy chance, the great General himself should pause and see the bouquet with its patriotic meaning, and perhaps accept it from his hand!

Alas! alas! three days before the time so eagerly anticipated, the whole family were sitting on the front porch about sunset. Father was reading the paper, mother and sister Susan were sewing, the boys busily engaged over a kite they were making, and no one particularly attentive to the baby—the little toddler who was trotting up and down the gravel path. She went round the corner of the house in the direction of Harry's garden, and no one noticed her. But presently she came back with something clutched tight in her chubby little hands. "Pitty fowers, pittty fowers," she said, dropping her treasures into mother's lap.

"Oh, baby, baby, what have you done?" There was real distress in mother's voice, and no wonder; there were Harry's rosebuds, every one snapped off close to the head, without an inch of stem.

"The little wretch!" said Jack. "I do believe she's been at Harry's rose."

Harry sprang to his feet, the hot blood rushing to his face. He made one bound down the steps and around the house, while the others gathered about the broken buds, and poor baby looked on bewildered, not knowing what mischief she had done.

It was Harry who picked her up in his arms, just as the little mouth began to quiver and the tears to gather in the pretty blue eyes.

"Never mind, baby," he said bravely. "Don't you cry; you shall have all the flowers you like. Don't scold her, mother, she did not know—" and then Harry almost broke down. He set baby on mother's knee and went back to his kite, from which he did not once raise his head till tea-time.

Mother was the only one who ventured to speak to him on the subject again. "Dear," she said as she bade him good-night, "I am very, very sorry for your disappointment."

"So I am," he said, putting his arms round her and hiding his face from view, he felt the tears so near his eyes. "But after all, perhaps Gen. Grant does not know an American Banner rose from any other, and I will just take some red ones and some white ones instead."

"That was a pretty hard trial for him," said his father, when Harry had left the room. "The boy is surely learning to control himself."

Susan, the kind elder sister, who was almost a second mother to the boys, looked up with her eyes sparkling. "Indeed he is, father, and after what we saw to-day I don't care whether I see Gen. Grant or not."

"Why?" asked her father, slightly puzzled; but Susan only smiled, and said she would not tell him yet.

And so the great day came and passed, and Harry was so happy as to stand close to his hero five minutes, and in his enjoyment he was able to overcome his last regret for his broken rose.

Sister Susan was mysteriously busy just about that time, and when Harry's birthday came, soon after, the result of her private occupation was discovered. By the early light when Harry awoke he could see a picture hanging on what had been a blank wall at the foot of his bed last night. He sprang up and examined it. It was a verse from the Bible, beautifully illuminated in red, blue and gold letters; around it was a wreath of forget-me-nots and fern-leaves; at the top a medallion with the head of Gen. Grant, and below a lovely spray of rose-buds, the "American Banner," in all their glory of red and white. More than once Harry read over the words his sister had so beautifully traced. They were these—

"He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city."

Household Hints.

A Wonderful Kitchen.

The domestic difficulty which troubles all nations has been solved by an American lady whose exploits are described by a Washington correspondent: With the daring of her race, this lady—who, we are told, moves in the best society, drives a stylish carriage, dresses well, and goes everywhere—has "solved the problem of how to live comfortably in her own rooms, with little work and no worry or servants." She dispenses with all domestics but a maid-servant, who for a special fee washes the dishes, and she does the cooking herself in an æsthetic kitchen. Her husband is delighted, and her friend, the correspondent, who was appealed to as to the prettiness of the kitchen, describes it as follows: "It was, indeed, prettier than I ever imagined a kitchen could be made. Pretty china was displayed on shelves, brackets, and in a tiny corner cupboard; Japanese scrolls, fans and plates hung upon the walls, and there was nothing about the room suggestive of cooking except an innocent-looking little oil stove, which stood on a box curtained with chintz, bearing printed figures from the opera of 'Patience' in soft æsthetic colors. A breakfast table stood at one side of the room—which was little larger than a hall bedroom—a pretty dressing case occupied one corner, a washstand stood in the other, and the only remaining corner was filled by a small wardrobe. In a box were all the utensils necessary in cooking. Further investigations revealed the fact that the dressing-case was only used to hold groceries, while the washstand concealed the tin dish, basin, soap, etc. Market baskets, tea towels, work aprons, and the like, were stowed away in the wardrobe. There only needs to be added to this idyllic picture of æsthetics in the kitchen that all the kitchen refuse is lowered by a basket from the bath-room to the basement where it is emptied. It saves the running up and down stairs, and besides has a flavor of the Princess in the Tower about it, which relieves it from absolute commonplace." The fair Cinderella of Washington is evidently newly married.—Pall-Mall Gazette.

CORK SHAVINGS FOR VINEGAR.—The wood shavings commonly employed in vinegar factories preserve their activity for a certain length of time, and then become useless. Bersch explains this on the supposition that the shavings, becoming saturated with liquid, get heavier, and press down on those beneath so hard as to prevent the air from circulating through them. He, therefore, recommends the substitution of the waste cork from which stoppers, etc., have been cut, for the wood chips. The elasticity of the cork is increased by moisture, so that they cannot pack together, even in the tallest tanks. Small organisms exist in the pores of the cork, and among these, many vinegar bacteria, so that the cork is very active in making vinegar.

PEACH ICE CREAM.—Delicious peach ice cream is made by rubbing through a sieve one dozen whole canned peaches, or what is equal to that number, and six ounces of white sugar, and one pint and a half of sweet cream should then be mixed with the pulp. After a thorough beating freeze it as you do common ice cream. If you wish to make the fancy complete and have the cream a peach color, a few drops of cochineal can be used; or if you object to that, the cream may be colored with the juice of the red raspberry.

WASHING harness with warm water and soap soon injures the leather. All varnishes, and blacking containing varnish, are injurious. When harness becomes rusty, give a new coat of grain black. Before applying this, wash the grain side of the leather with potash water, cold, until all the grease is removed. After the leather is quite dry, apply the grain black, and then oil and tallow. This fastens the color and makes the harness flexible and soft. Grained harness can be cleaned by a cloth moistened with kerosene, but should be immediately washed and oiled afterward.

HOW TO DISTINGUISH BETWEEN BUTTER AND OLEOMARGARINE.—Mrs. Caroline H. Dall tells the Boston Transcript how to distinguish between butter and oleomargarine, as follows: "Now, no person with keen sense of taste can be deceived about oleomargarine. Butter is pure oil. Put a little of it in a warm place and see how quickly it liquifies. If the temperature comes close to boiling, the butter is 'oiled,' and unfit for food. Try the same experiment with oleomargarine. It will not harm it, and you will find it difficult to melt it if you drop it in boiling water. It will dissolve like tallow, not like butter. It also cuts like tallow, with a sort of metallic glint. Oleomargarine, if 'flavored' with true butter and made into 'prints,' always keeps the original clear lines. You can handle it without crushing it. It seems as if it had just come off ice."

BLOOD DIET.—A French savant, M. Regnard, has been lately trying the effect of a "blood diet" on lambs. Three lambs, which for some unexplained cause had been abandoned by their mothers, were fed on "powdered blood" with the most gratifying results. The lambs increased in size in the most marvelous fashion, and attained unusual proportions for their age. The coats of wool also became double in thickness. Encouraged by his success with the lambs M. Regnard is now feeding some calves on blood.

Lodge Locals.

Recorders are invited to correspond. Lodges may also find suitable reading here for "Good of the Order."

OUR CITY LODGES.

Burns, No. 68.

This Lodge, named for the famous bard of fair Scotia's Isle, is prospering finely. Its members are always pleasant and harmonious. Its growth is not rapid, but slow and sure. Its faithful Secretary and Financier are re-chosen each term and are to be found in the lodge room every meeting night, and the other officers are punctual in attendance. The Chairman of the Committee of Laws and Supervision of the Grand Lodge, and who has been a member of that Committee for several years, is a member of Burns. Burns will have three delegates to the Grand Lodge next month.

Hercules, No. 53.

Hercules Lodge, of the Western Addition, continues to add new members to swell the grand total in the State. The officers perform the work creditably, in fact, Hercules has been noted for the efficiency and accuracy of its officers. Visiting brethren always get a warm greeting in Hercules.

Olympic, No. 127.

Olympic contains some of our most active Workmen. Its members are all enterprising and energetic men, and its meetings are always entertaining. Visiting brethren are cordially welcomed and made to feel at home. Once a month it yields its lodge room to its Degree of Honor Lodge when the brethren, their wives and visitors from other Degree of Honor Lodges meet together and pass a pleasant and agreeable hour.

Spartan, No. 36.

Friday evening, March 3d, the hall of Spartan Lodge was crowded with members, in anticipation of a visit from Yerba Buena Lodge, No. 14. As soon as the regular business of the Lodge had been finished, the visiting delegation were admitted with honors, and a few appropriate remarks from Bro. Wilson, M. W. of Spartan. Judge Ferral was requested to make an address of welcome, which he did, in his usual felicitous manner. Bro. Hartwell and Prof. Perkins, organist of No. 36, entertained the brethren with a song. The cigars were then passed, and after some time spent in a free, uncere-monious conversation, remarks were made by Bro. Thompson, M. W. of Yerba Buena, and Bro. G. G. Burnett, of Spartan, that were well received. Then a duet by Bros. Russell and Belcher, rendering in a pleasing style "Larboard Watch." A. A. Eygleston, P. M. W., was very happy in a short congratulatory speech. Bro. Rankin, of No. 36, sung by request, a song in deep basso, that called forth applause. Deputy Danforth read a humorous piece which created great merriment. An instrumental performance on the flute, by Bro. Lawlor, of No. 36, was given a recall, to which he kindly responded. Deputy Thompson, in a few words, paid a glowing tribute to the members of No. 14. Bro. Schenck, Financier of No. 14, told a story appropriate to the occasion. Prof. Perkins then sang a character song, that was highly entertaining. Bro. Gleason, of No. 14, made a short speech, in which he paid Deputy Danforth a deserved compliment for his arduous labors in behalf of the Order. Bros. Shaw, Jordan and a few others, made fraternal remarks, which closed one of the most interesting meetings of the season.

Unity, No. 27.

This Lodge is enjoying a degree of prosperity rarely witnessed among fraternal societies. It has recently been paying sick benefits at the rate of $10 per week, and is very liberal in donations to sick and distressed brethren of other Lodges who may be sojourning in the city. The books of their Relief Fund shows an expenditure of over $1,800 the past year. There has also been a steady increase in members, averaging six per month, generally young men. Feb. 28th, the M. W. degree was conferred on six candidates, each officer discharging his part in an admirable manner. One wholesome feature is, the usual good attendance; another is, the spirit of harmony that prevails. The debates are sometimes very earnest, but they are conducted with decorum, and the brethren always part in the most kindly manner. It is confidently expected that their membership will exceed three hundred during this term.

Valley, No. 30.

This Lodge held one of its most pleasant and interesting meetings, Wednesday evening, Feb. 28th. The Lodge hall was well filled with members and visitors, among whom were the Grand Master, and a number of brethren from the interior. The M. W. degree was conferred on fourteen candidates, active business men, whose average age was thirty-nine years. This swells the membership of Valley Lodge up to the 946 mark, and the members are sanguine of reaching a thousand before the close of the present term. The present officers, C. M. Singer, M. W.; C. O. Burton, F.; Dr. Chas. W. Decker, O.; and L. Fitzgerald, P. M. W.; performed the work in a very impressive manner. It is very instructive to hear the work rendered in a pleasing manner. A very convivial recess, was followed by some pertinent remarks from Deputy W. I. McKay on the practical benefits of the new School of Instruction. Bro. Henry Hoeber gave a succinct account of his recent trip into the country. Bros. S. V. Nichols, M. W. of University Lodge, No. 88, Berkeley, and Deputy Hann and J. J. Wright, Recorder and A. Kschieschong, Foreman, all of the same Lodge, made appropriate remarks. They all took occasion to refer in a very complimentary manner to Bro. M. Singer, formerly a member of University Lodge. The Grand Master entertained the audience with a short practical speech heavily freighted with historical and statistical facts. He said, "Our average age as an Order is growing less, as it appears from the report of the Grand Master of Illinois. That bright as our fires are burning in the city, the country Lodges equal, if not surpass us in their devotion and self-sacrifice. The name of A. O. U. W. is a synonym of success, and the best men of this State are marching under our glorious banner."

Yerba Buena, No. 14.

This prosperous Lodge continues to increase in membership having applications and initiations almost every Lodge night. It now has 254 members in good standing and will have five representatives at the coming session of the Grand Lodge. Last meeting night it had two candidates, and received five applications. It will confer the J. W. degree on two applicants on next Friday evening. Recently the initiation fees were raised by the Lodge.

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

Keystone, No. 64.

Keystone, No. 64, Oakland's youngest Lodge, is having a prosperous term. Degrees have been conferred every evening since installation, and on no evening has a single officer been absent from his post of duty. Keystone, perhaps too well known in the past for the levity of some of the seasons, conducts its work under M. W., Robert Gay with the utmost decorum and precision. The music has improved with the leadership of P. M. W., Frank Carey, until nearly every voice joins heartily in the inspiring songs of the Order, much being thus added to the attractions of the initiatory and other ceremonies. The result of the improvements shows increased attendance and new membership. At a recent meeting of Keystone, the J. W. degree was conferred on three new members. By dispensation from the M. W., both degrees were conferred in one evening on W. K. Maitland, 1st assistant engineer of the steamer State of California; for the reason that it is so uncertain when he will be in town again on a Tuesday evening.

Oakland, No. 2.

This prosperous Lodge gave a magnificent reception to the Grand officers and members of sister Lodges, last Friday evening, at Milliken's hall, corner of Twelfth and Franklin streets. The Committee of Arrangements, consisted of Bros. Moses Eadon, P. White, E. K. Russell, E. H. Luke and W. E. Hughes. The beautiful hall was well filled. After the usual business formalities, Master Workman Bishop, on behalf of the Lodge presented to Grand Master Barnes, an elegant floral anchor, an emblem of Hope. At 8:30 o'clock 175 Master Workmen adjourned to the banquet-room below, where they found a sumptuous collation in readiness. A. W. Bishop, M. W., of Oakland Lodge, presided. The following programme was carried out: Music, Plantation Echoes, band; address by Bro. A. W. Bishop, M. W. Oakland Lodge, No. 2; music, Anvil Polka, band; address by Bro. W. H. Barnes, G. M. of California: music, band; address by District Deputy C. E. Alden; music, Xylophone Polka, band; recitation, Bro. C. H. Dunton; song, Bro. H. T. Smith; Health and prosperity of our sister Lodges, responded to by visiting brethren; music, band; recitation, Bro. A. Gaukrogger; song, Bro. C. G. Reid; anthem, "America," by the brethren; "Home, Sweet Home," band. At eleven o'clock the fraternal meeting adjourned, all agreeing that they had never spent a more pleasant evening, and that great praise was due the committee for their excellent arrangement. Such reunions are the life of the Order, they break up the dull routine of business, bring members into closer fellowship, creating acquaintances that often end in life-long friendships, and give a charm and attractiveness to the Order that promotes harmony and growth.

Occidental, No. 6.

We had the pleasure recently of meeting at Valley Lodge, No. 30, Bros. John Munce and T. R. Martin from Occidental Lodge, No. 6, West Oakland. They report the Lodges in Oakland all flourishing, and that Occidental in particular, is enjoying a season of prosperity. Twelve Master Workmen have been initiated during the term, and a number of applications are upon the Recorder's desk. March 16th, the members of Occidental will celebrate the arrival at the two hundred mark, by giving one of their popular entertainments. Their wives, families, and friends will join in the festivity, and a joyous time is anticipated.

COLUSA COUNTY.

Colusa, No. 66.

The following preamble and resolutions were adopted at a special meeting of Colusa Lodge, No. 66, A. O. U. W., held March 1st:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Supreme Master Workman of the Universe, in the exercise of His inscrutable providence, to remove from our midst, by death, our beloved Brother, J. M. Banks, the first Past Master Workman of this Lodge, and since its institution, one of its Medical Examiners; and

WHEREAS, It appears to us proper to express our sorrow at the loss of such a Brother, and to tender our heartfelt sympathy to those who were bound to him by ties far stronger than any we can claim; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we are called upon at this time to mourn the loss of a true Workman—one whose devotion to the Order could not but be admitted; one whose charity was unequalled save by the sterling integrity which characterized his every act; whose great hope was, that the protection guaranteed to those near and dear to us should be scrupulously guarded.

Resolved, That in the death of Dr. J. M. Banks this community has lost a valuable and valued citizen; the Medical Profession an able and most conscientious member; and his family a kind and affectionate husband and father.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved wife and children of our deceased Brother our heartfelt sympathy in this their dark hour.

Resolved, That the Chapter of this Lodge be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days, and that the Brethren wear the customary badge of mourning for the same period.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Lodge, a copy furnished to the family of our Brother, and published in the Colusa Sun and Pacific States Watchman.

Oliver Lodge, No. 220.

At a regular meeting of Oliver Lodge, No. 220, A. O. U. W., held February 26, 1883, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Great Architect of the Universe to remove from our midst our late Bro. H. A. Oliver, therefore be it Resolved, By Oliver Lodge, No. 220, A. O. U. W., that while we bow with submission to the will of the Most High, we do not the less mourn for our brother who has been taken from us.

Resolved, That in the death of H. A. Oliver, this Lodge laments the loss of a brother who was ever ready to proffer the hand of aid and the voice of sympathy to the needy and distressed of the fraternity, an active member of the Order whose utmost endeavors were extended for its welfare and prosperity, a friend and companion who was dear to us all, a citizen whose upright and noble life was a standard of emulation to his fellow.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of this Lodge be extended to his family in their affliction.

Resolved, That the charter of this Lodge be draped in mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Lodge, and a copy thereof be transmitted to the family of our deceased brother, also to the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN.

Respectfully submitted in C. H. and P.

MODOC COUNTY.

Lookout, No. 211.

Dr. C. A. McCash, P. M. W. of this Lodge, is in the city, as a delegate to the Grand Lodge. He reports A. O. U. W. affairs in Modoc as in a very prosperous condition. Lookout Lodge has a membership of thirty and own a commodious hall which cost $1,000. Such progress in so short a time, shows that the good seed has fallen upon a goodly soil, and we may expect a still larger harvest.

Manzanita, No. 154.

Our correspondent at Washington Bluff, kindly furnishes us the following facts: Manzanita Lodge, at Forest Hill, is rapidly increasing in membership. It was visited Feb. 24th by District Deputy Grand Master Workman, Ed. S. Thompson, when the M. W. degree was conferred. The Lodge then adjourned for the purpose of instituting a Lodge of the Degree of Honor, which was christened Lucretia Lodge, No. 22, to meet on the third Saturday of each month. The officers elect are: P. M. S. of H., Mrs. M. West; M. S. of H., Mrs. S. E. Chapman; S. of H., Mrs. C. G. Myres; S. of C. Mrs. Chas. Albrecht; S. S., Mrs. G. W. Simpson; S. T., Miss Samantha Moorhead; S. W., Miss Ella Moorhead; F. M. to S. of H.,

Mrs. H. Laycock; S. M. to S. of H., Mrs. J. Moorhead; F. A. to W. S. of H., G. W. Simpson; S. A. to W. S. of H., C. G. Myres; I. W., J. N. Burk; O. W., S. E. Chapman. The officers are all well adapted to their several positions, and the Lodge bids fair to be a grand success.

Sugar Loaf, No. 157.

Located at Iowa Hill, is not strong in membership or attendance. As it is too often the case the affairs are run by a faithful few. At present there is nothing of importance to note in

Main Top, No. 156.

Further than nearly every meeting is the occasion of a lively discussion, which insures a good attendance, almost invariably.

Shady Grove, No. 223.

A new Lodge of Workmen, Shady Grove Lodge, No. 223, was instituted Feb. 28th, at Farmington, by D. D. G. M., E. Lehe, assisted by E. Delano, M. Dowser, A. Noack, J. H. Hornage and brethren of the Order from Oakdale and Linden. The following-named members were installed as officers for the term: P. M. W., N. S. Harrold; M. W., H. C. Frost; F., T. J. Webb; Rec., James Stiff; Fin., A. W. Harrold; Receiver, D. F. Long; G., John F. Campbell; I. W., M. C. Church; O. W., N. Metz; Trustees, J. S. Dunham, L. Fink, L. S. Harrold. After the business of the Lodge was over, all were invited to an excellent supper at the hotel. Bro. E. Lehe, who has had extensive experience in organizing A. O. U. W. Lodges, says the Shady Grove Chapter members were as fine a body of men as he had ever seen. A noticeable feature was the preponderance of young men, three were barely twenty-one years old. Some of the members think that within a short time their membership will reach fifty at least.

Oak Grove, No. 198.

Oak Grove Lodge, No. 198, about fifteen miles south of Farmington, was organized about two years ago, with a charter membership of ten, now has thirty-six members and is in a flourishing condition.

Stockton, No. 23.

Bro. J. H. Hornage writes the WATCHMAN that Stockton Lodge, No. 23, will institute the ladies D. of H., Friday evening, March 16th, and G. M. W. Barnes, of San Francisco, is expected to visit them at that time. Extensive preparations are being made, and all are looking forward to a good time. Stockton is alive in the good work, and a more earnest, harmonious and social lot of members would be hard to find anywhere.

Evening Star, No. 22, D. of H.

Saturday evening, 3d inst., the Grand Master, W. H. Barnes, instituted Evening Star Lodge, No. 22, at Washington hall, Eddy street. There was quite a large delegation from Silver Spray, No. 3, and Golden Dawn, No. 10. By request of G. M., Sister Poland, P. W. S. of H., conferred the degree in a very charming manner, on thirty candidates, nineteen gentlemen and eleven ladies. It is understood that this Lodge, for the present, will meet once a month. The following officers were duly installed, viz: Mrs. T. N. Wilton, P. W. S. of H.; Mrs. Josephine Fishbeck, W. S. of H.; Miss Emma Shearer, S. of H.; Mrs. John Gallup, S. of C.; Miss Mary Shearer, S. Sec.; Mrs. Fisher, I. W.; S. Black, O. W.; short and appropriate speeches were made by the Grand Master, Deputy Poland, and others. This Lodge starts out under the most favorable auspices.

Some of the prominent features of this college are annual scholarship, free text books, and personal attention by the manager, Mr. Bernard. Parents and guardians are cordially invited to call and investigate their system of education.

AMONG the many active workers in our Order, we take pleasure in calling attention to the house of Sanborn, Vail & Co., 857 Market street, large importers and dealers in artists' material, mirrors, pictures, frames, etc. This house is reliable, square-dealing, and has but one price for all its patrons.

Eulogy on the Late H. A. Oliver.

Death! Let it come when it may, and under whatever circumstances, is always a mournful visitor, whether it strikes down the prattling babe or the doting parent, the newly made wife in the bloom of health, or the loving husband in the strength of his manhood, grief and mourning are sure to pervade the household. None the less are we filled with sorrow when the dread messenger invades our fraternity, bearing away one of our beloved brethren, and the poignancy of our grief is only assuaged by the reflection that our departed brother was prepared to enter the new state into which he was called. In paying this tribute to our departed brother, H. A. Oliver, I am actuated by a desire that the records of his well spent life may incite us who are left behind to fight out the battle against error and darkness, to emulate his example, and be always ready, in season and out of season, to further the cause of our Order and good morals, so that those who are without the pale may be led to avail themselves of our privileges, and become good and true members of our Order. Life is too short and good men too few not to be sorry that our brother has passed away so early in life, and we deprived of his counsel and experience; but let us hope, though he is numbered with the dead, he may still speak to us through his past record and influence our actions for good, so that when the conflict ends and slowly clears the smoke from out the skies, when far down the purple distance all the noise of battle dies, when the night's last solemn shadows settle down on you and me, may the love that now faileth take our souls eternally.

No language at my command can adequately convey the deep feeling of sadness that pervaded our entire community when it was announced by telegraph that he who, but one week before, left us in perfect health, full of energy, life, and hope, had been removed from the active scenes of life to that mysterious realm where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death. As the sandal tree emits its sweetest fragrance at the moment it is struck by the ax, so the life of a good man shines purer and brighter just as his earthly tenement is dissolved and he enters "that home not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

The night dew that falls, though in silence it weeps,
Shall brighten with verdure the grave where he sleeps;
And the tear that is shed, though in secret it rolls,
Shall long keep his memory green in our souls.

May the earliest buds of spring unfold their blossoms over his resting place, and there may the sweetness of the summer rose linger longest.

DALLAS POSTON,
P. M. W. of Oliver Lodge, 220, A. O. U. W.
Middletown, Feb. 26, 1883.

Where the Money Goes.

An investigation into the salaries and fees of the life insurance companies was made in 1877, under the auspices of the New York Legislature, and the following startling state of affairs was disclosed:

The Equitable Life paid its President $49,500 per year, and he also drew as Boston agent for another company, $20,000, making a total annual salary of $69,500; the Vice President received $22,000; Actuary, $20,000; Secretary, $16,500; Attorney, $12,000; Medical Director, $16,000; Total $135,000.

The New York Life paid its President $31,250; Vice President, Actuary and Secretary in one, $31,250; Medical Examiners, $41,491; Attorneys, $11,376. Total, $115,367; The Mutual Life, of New York, paid its President $20,000; Vice President, $18,000; second Vice President, $12,400—total annual cost for Presidents, $60,400; Actuaries, $28,300; Medical Directors, $19,200; Attorney, $4,400. Total, $121,300.

The North American Life paid its President $12,000; Vice President, $6,000; Attorneys, $13,250. Total, $31,250.

Germania Life paid its President $16,867; Vice President, $10,600. Total, $27,467.

Washington Life paid its President $10,000; Vice President, $9,000. Total $19,000.

United States Life paid its President, $15,000; Medical Examiners, $12,000; Attorneys, $18,715. Total, $45,959.

The Knight Journal commenting on this fearful extravagance and immense drainage on the pockets of the policy holders, says: The exorbitant salaries have been apparently somewhat reduced since the exposure which shocked the public and aroused the indignation of the victims, but the fact that the premium charges have not been proportionately cut down justifies the suspicion that the money is made up to the officers in some other way. Thus insurers in the companies still have to pay a large surplus over and above the actual cost of their indemnity, to make the coffers of the speculators overflow with richness.

Other Jurisdictions.

At the late session of the Grand Lodge of Ohio, Walter Pickens, of Toledo, was elected G. M.

Cincinnati was selected as the place of holding the next session of the Grand Lodge at Ohio.

In Michigan, one assessment pays three death losses and leaves a surplus of over $500.

Whole number of members of the A. O. U. W., February, 1st was 114,728.

Pennsylvania had three assessments for February, and they were willingly paid.

The Grand Lodges of Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and New York met in February.

Bluff City Lodge, Nashville, is the Banner Lodge of Tennessee in point of numbers.

Grand Recorder of Illinois, says that the postage account for the past year was $625.62 and his telegraph and expressage account, $274.11, making a total expenditure for these three items of $899.73.

Victor, N. Y., is to have a new Legion, that is if Canandaigua does not get one first.

Minneapolis, Minn., will have the honor of having the pioneer Legion in that State.

Grand Commander Schoeffel has forbidden Sunday parades in the S. K. within the State of New York. It is in accordance with a decision made by Supreme Commander Knapp, and in accordance with the laws of the State.

Kansas City takes six Supreme Legion beneficiary certificates; St. Catherines, Ont., six more. The next grand report will be made April 1st.

Illinois, during the past year, had 51 deaths paying $110,000 upon 11 assessments.

During the last year, New York, A. O. U. W., lost by death one lawyer, three physicians and one veterinary surgeon.

New York lost 143 members during last year. The Grand Medical Examiner, A. H. Briggs, M. D., rejected 113 out of 2,349 applications. He was compelled to return for correction 235. The average age of applicants during the year was 34.8 years; that of those joining in 1881 was 35.58. The average age at the time they joined the Order of those who died during the year was 36. Of the total number, 5,000, who have been admitted to membership since February, 1881, but two have been reported as having died from so-called chronic diseases during the past year.

The Protector says: The result of the action of the Grand Lodge in New York in re-affirming its fealty and loyalty to the whole Order has had a wonderfully beneficial effect in Pennsylvania. Now that New York has attested its unqualified disapproval of secession in whatever form it may come, some in Pennsylvania who quoted New York's action will be bereft of argument.

ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS.—Many ancient manuscripts of untold value are believed to be stored away in the monasteries of Greece. A loss that will never be understood to its full extent has just been sustained in the destruction of the monastery of Vatopedi, which took fire through the carelessness of one of the monks, and, in the absence of any appliance for extinguishing the flames, was speedily burned to the ground. Several thousand Byzantine manuscripts were consumed in this fire. To prevent such irreparable losses in the future, the Greek Government has sent two Athenian professors, Findiklis and Kalogeras, who are experts in deciphering old manuscripts, to examine the libraries and archives of the monasteries, and to send such manuscripts as they find of value to the national library in Athens. These gentlemen report that they have already discovered a great store of parchment treasures in the monastery of Dusiko, among them some of ancient Greek authorship. It is said that they have found an unquestionable tragedy by Aeschylus and one by Sophocles.

PHOTOGRAPH OF THE LATE COMET'S TAIL AND STARS.—Dr. Gill, at the Cape of Good Hope, succeeded in photographing the comet's tail, and with it 50 stars that were seen through the tail. The plate was exposed 140 minutes, and was kept up to the motion of the earth by clock-work.

Complimentary Sample Copies of this paper are occasionally sent to parties connected with the interests specially represented in its columns. Persons so receiving copies are requested to examine its contents, terms of subscription, and give it their own patronage; and as far as practicable aid in circulating the journal and making its value more widely known to others and extending its influence in the cause it faithfully serves. Subscription rate, $3 a year.

N. B.—Personal attention will be called to this (as well as other notices, at times) by turning down a leaf.

What You Make—Tempests and Teapots.

[Written by EDWARD BERWICK.]

Time out of mind life has been symbolized by the tempestuous ocean breaking in tumultuous billows on the misty sands of eternity. For my present purpose I will somewhat circumscribe this vasty deep of the general life of humanity, and consider it as limited by the individual teapot. And it is really astonishing how the mighty ocean thus circumscribed varies in condition and temperature. One teapot is lashed into a perpetual tempest, in another is perennial calm. Hot water continually abounds, frothing and seething in one, while a delightful coolness pervades its fellow, and a third is found frigid even to zero.

The amusing point is that each judges of the entire ocean by the contents of his individual teapot. One considers that there is nothing but "hot water" in this world, simply because the warmth of his temper maintains a very high temperature on all occasions. Another believes earth to be a "desert drear," all friendship "perishing, all loving mere folly," justifying his belief by the iciness of own disposition.

We are exceedingly apt to credit "circumstances" with the formation of our characters and conditions of life. Ought we not rather to reverse this and to regard our characters as shaping the circumstances of life? Take for example two farmers: Mr. Rasper regards his business as an unpleasant necessity only undertaken as a means of money-grubbing, "ugliness," it is safe to predict, will be his most prominent trait; and selfishness will exhibit itself in all his dealings with his fellows. Rapacity and smartness will make him odious and despicable, and, knowing himself hated and despised he becomes filled with suspicion and hatred. Constantly in a hurry and worry, he frets and drives to extort from his hired hands rather more than they can properly perform. He reaps no joy from life, culls no flowers by the wayside, and the very slight satisfaction his increasing "pile" affords him, is limited by a grudging thanklessness that the increase is so slow.

Equally fast, indeed, increases the "pile" of his neighbor, Gladsome, who regards his work as a thing to be enjoyed, as a constant source of comfort and happiness. Gladsome, made in the image of his Maker, throws his heart into his toil, and pronounces the result "very good." Each day "something attempted, something done, has earned a night's repose." Gladsome is one of those who "take joy home" and lets her sing to him when he is

Joy sings in his heart all day, a happy song, a royal rede, "Thy Father loves thee." What need to drive; what need to fret; what need to hoard?

"He only who forgets to hoard Has learned to live."

Rasper and Gladsome may be both alike as to the externals of their individual tea-pots, but how different within. Why, the wealth of all the Indies piled into Rasper's lap would not make his whole life worth one day of Gladsome's.

Rasper always scents calamity afar, and emits a dismal, incessant croak, even when prospects are fairest; even disseminates "the blues" unfaithfully. Gladsome enjoys perennial good times, at least in anticipation, and seeks, when catastrophes do come, to make as light of them as possible, and hope once more.

"Of all God's creatures, Man alone is poor."

Says Carlyle's wife. Gladsome declines all connection with that kind of poverty—the poverty of heart and meanness of spirit that often co-exist with pecuniary wealth.

By the by, it is the "root of all evil" that makes the water so hot in some of these teapots; others are kept warm by that other source of heat, the tongue. "The tongue is a fire, as you know, my dear; the tongue is a fire." Learn, dear reader, to think more of the internal state of your individual teapot, and less of its externals. Don't talk of circumstances controlling you and your life. It's for you to control yourself and your life, and to make circumstances mere adjuncts or accidents. "The life is more than meat and the body than raiment." Consider the lilies; sunflowers, also, if you wish; but not as a disciple of Oscar's.

It is you who makes your own life. You can make yourself a "Rasper" or a "Gladsome." You can make the atmosphere around you perpetual sunshine or impenetrable gloom. You can choose for a life companion the demon of greed or the spirit of love. As you choose, so will it be unto you. Don't halt between two opinions. But, as the Prophet of Horeb put the question before the men of his day, "If the Lord be God, follow him, but if Baal, follow him."

RAILROAD BUSINESS.—There are now 115,000 miles of railway in the United States, which, reduced to fair values and excluding "watered stocks" have cost, with the equipment, more than $5,000,000,000. This sum is more than one-tenth of the value of the whole property of

A Government Asked for Alaska.

Senator Cross has introduced the following concurrent resolution, requesting Congress to pass an Act providing for a civil government for the Territory of Alaska: Whereas, the mining and commercial resources of Alaska Territory are believed to be of great value, and many mining and business companies have been organized in San Francisco and elsewhere for the purpose of developing such resources; and, whereas, the honorable Commissioner of the General Land Office at Washington has decided that no applications for patents for mining lands in Alaska Territory will be received or considered by the Department of the Interior, Congress having ## Washington's Birthday.

February 22d was pretty generally celebrated throughout the city and the State as the anniversary of the birthday of George Washington, familiarly known as the "Father of Country." In the city nearly all business was suspended, and many of the streets were as quiet as Sunday. The military had a parade and were reviewed during the afternoon on Van Ness avenue by Governor Stoneman and staff. During the evening a Mardi Gras parade on the principal streets, and a bal masque at the Mechanics' pavilion occupied the attention of numbers of residents. The streets along the line of march were thronged with people to see King Carnival and his followers pass by.

We have chosen, as an illustration appropriate to the occasion, an ideal sketch of a monument to the memory of Washington. The design is intended by the artist to fitly embody the idea, not alone of the majesty of the character of our country's father, but to typify the growth of the principles which he held as the corner-stones upon which to found a nation. It must be remarked that such a monument as yet exists only in the artist's drawings, but it is put forth to the view of the people as something worthy of their study, in the hope that some future year may see it, or something like it, hewn from enduring marble to remind coming ages of the veneration in which the great founder of the Republic is ever to be held in patriotic hearts.

As most readers are aware, there is already a monument to the memory of Washington in progress of construction at the national capital. On this, it may be briefly said that it was commenced in 1848 by an association incorporated by Congress. After an expenditure of $230,000, raised by voluntary subscription, the monument came to a standstill for 20 years. Thus for a score of years it stood an unfinished column of 174 feet in height. By Act of Congress, passed in 1876, appropriating the sum of $200,000, this monument is to be finished, and will form a lofty and imposing plain obelisk, 70 feet square at base and 470 feet high. It is constructed of great blocks of crystal Maryland marble, lined with blue gneiss stone, and, while simple and majestic in form, without attempt at ornament, will constitute a mausoleum that will last for ages, erected by the people of the whole country to its greatest citizen on a scale worthy of the nation.

It is the design of the artist, whose work we present on this page, to have the imposing plain obelisk which we have described serve as the central column of the majestic, yet richly ornate structure shown in the engraving.

The designer of the sketch presented is Mr. Arthur F. Mathews, a resident of Oakland, with Britton & Rey, lithographers of this city. The sketch was drawn in 1879, when the artist was less than 20 years of age. It was undertaken in response to a request from the publishers of the American Architect to students of architecture and art throughout the United States. Mr. Mathews' design received the commendation of that journal, of the American Art Journal, and others.

THE GLUCOSE BUSINESS.—It is stated by those connected with the trade, that the glucose business is in a bad way; that most of the factories throughout the country are closed, and that glucose is selling at a lower price than when corn was but 30 cents a bushel. The enormous profits realized by those who first went into its manufacture created a boom which led to the building of factories all over the country, till there has been an over-production. Meanwhile, the novelty has worn off, and the public has learned that it is a spurious, bastard product, having a low intrinsic value, and its use and consumption have greatly fallen off in favor of straight sugar goods. The charges that it is objectionable on sanitary grounds, and injurious to health, have never been proved, and it is doubtful if they can be sustained. Its growing unpopularity arises mainly from the fact of its low sweetening properties, only about two-fifths that of sugar syrups, together with more or less of prejudice, on the ground that it is unwholesome.—Chicago Grocer.

AN IDEAL PLAN SUGGESTED FOR THE NATIONAL WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

the people of the United States, including private lands, and more than one-fifth of the whole capital which the products of labor have placed upon the land. In 1881 the railroad employed in operating the roads and in construction 1,600,000 persons, equal to a seventh part of the male adult population of the United States. In the same year they paid out $450,000,000 for wages and material. These figures show the very great relative importance of railway property in this country, and the vast demand for labor which its service creates. In 1881 the railroads of the United States moved 350,000,000 tons of freight. Of this tonnage more than nine-tenths was made up of food, fuel, and materials for shelter, commodities in which the working people—using that term to distinguish the great body of the people from capitalists, as a class—have a common and equal interest as consumers, failed to organize said Territory into a surveying district; and whereas, the effect of this decision is to hinder and retard the development of the mineral resources and the settlement and occupation of the public lands in said Territory, and whereas, the said Territory of Alaska is without local government, and its inhabitants have petitioned the Congress of the United States to organize a Territorial Government in said unorganized Territory, and a bill is now pending before Congress with such object in view. Therefore, be it resolved, that the Senate in Congress be instructed and our Representatives be requested to use all honorable means in their power to secure the passage, at the present session of Congress, of an Act of Congress providing for a civil government for the Territory of Alaska.

PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN.

Issued on the 1st and 15th of each month.
At No. 252 MARKET STREET, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Take Elevator No. 12 Front Street.

Favorable to Advertisers

By consolidating the large subscription lists of the Pacific Workman with the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN our advertisers gain an unusually great advantage. We doubt if any one weekly newspaper has ever been circulated to as many different readers on this coast, as have been served heretofore by the Workman and WATCHMAN together. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns cities of the coast.

We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

OFFICIAL RECOMMENDATION.

Resolutions adopted by Grand Lodge of Cal., Feb. 3, 1881
WHEREAS, the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, the pioneer A. O. U. W. advocate on this coast, without official aid, has long rendered able and valuable services for the good of our glorious organization, we earnestly recommend that our Lodges and the brethren individually patronize the WATCHMAN as liberally as circumstances will justify.

Home Building.

Since the days of Adam Smith a great deal has been said and written, more, indeed, than we know what to do with, on the subject of political economy, or the art of managing so as to enrich the country by making the most possible out of capital and labor. But domestic economy, the duty of home-building, the wise foresight that seeks in the days of health and manly energy to lay up a competency for sickness and old age, more seriously concerns us all. More of our happiness may lie imbedded in this duty than we now foresee.

The question of happiness does not much worry men in a savage state. They have not intellect and refined sensibility enough to feel any degree of shame and mortification at poverty, squalor and want. It is hard to make a savage unhappy. If he has a mud hut, a hollow log, or a jutting rock to shelter him, a little coarse food, a dog, gun, and blanket, he feels content. The tribes in the interior of Africa, that Baker, Livingston, Stanley, and others have visited, know no such distinction among them as rich and poor, and hence no one is made restless and unhappy by contrasting his condition with that of some more fortunate neighbor. Civilization breaks up this torpid and monotonous state of things and multiplies artificial wants. Civilized man grows expensive and hard to keep. It costs more to clothe, shelter and feed him. His tastes are more dainty. Hence, if any of us in the struggles of life shall fail from improvidence, carelessness, or indolence, or in any other way, to lay up a sufficiency for the approaching years, we are destined to sink into a painful disgust and mortification at our lot. It is hard, perhaps it is impossible, for a man in the late afternoon of life, to look out of his shabby home at the lights of social privileges, as they glimmer far away along the sunny hillsides of comfort, wealth and luxury, and feel content and happy.

And yet, there are very few in this land of free, bounteous opportunity, who do not realize deeply, after passing middle life, that they might have been in more easy and comfortable circumstances, had they been more careful of their earnings. But the present hour has such a voracious appetite that a great many scarcely manage to save anything. However good their wages the wants of the hour are adequate to make way with them. A morbid fashion, bad habits and prodigal vices will empty a purse or dismantle a house as quickly as a burglar or highwayman. It may be more pleasant to be robbed by self-indulgence than by a thief, but the beggary in either case is the same ugly fact, and in the future brings the same sense of mortification. There may be some forms of labor which secure no fair wages, and it may seem a little cruel to lecture poor, underpaid people about economy and forethought, but in ninety cases out of a hundred, among the wage-receiving class, the toilers might build more comfortable homes for the future, were they not robbed of their hard earnings by bad habits, lack of frugality, or a false pride that seeks to sport a style of living they are not able to afford. Let not the laborer exhaust upon today the wages of to-day, and upon tomorrow the wages of to-morrow, for the hard toiling days should not be allowed to cover all of life to its last hour.

Then, the heart is so made that it is only happy so far as it can see before it a possible rest and peace. It must see a home before it, planted by some grove, or stream, or hillside, so that the toil of each day may not be a hard task, a weary drudgery, but the cheerful building of a better future, a joyous incentive, falling as a dew from the days to come.

In Memoriam.

Time moves on, but the past years do not live again. As in nature, the flower and fruit go on, but not the same flower and fruit, so mankind lives but not men. The race continues, the individual dies. The cradle and the coffin, and a few swift years between. We stand around the cradle with joy, but we follow the casket that contains the ashes of our dead with sorrow. And yet there ought to be some solace in the reflection, however sad our bereavements, that death is not a blunder, no accident, no judgment of wrath, no stupid fatality that strikes in the dark, but is part of the same beneficent plan that made the sea and stars, and appointed unto the leaf and flower their season. It is God's hand softly gloved in natural law that closes the eye and stills the pulse. Our dead do not merely live in memory and love. That infinite thirst of knowledge we possess; that power of thought which sweeps beyond the world of sense and time; that inexhaustible activity of imagination which creates new worlds; our desires for a fuller, richer life; our delight in reverencing something better than ourselves; what is it all, but the earnest of a grander life.

With nearly every issue of the WATCHMAN it becomes our sad duty to chronicle the death of some highly esteemed brother. Last week it was Bros. H. A. Oliver and I. Wisler; this week we are called to announce the death of Dr. J. M. Banks, of Colusa, who died at his residence, Feb. 28th, after a lingering illness of nine months. Bro. Banks was born at Elizabeth, North Carolina, December 17, 1845, and entered the Confederate army when only sixteen years of age, and served through the entire war. On the 5th of March, 1868, he graduated at the head of his class, from the University of Maryland. In a short time he moved to Wyoming, and in 1871 came to Colusa, and began the practice of medicine. December 12, 1872, he married Miss Howard, daughter of Rev. B. C. Howard, who bore him two children, and who survives him. He was a great reader on the higher levels of thought, and possessed a large and rich fund of information upon almost all subjects, especially the scientific. He was emphatically a student, did not know how to hunt or play, could find no regalement in sports of any kind, but was always happy when he could find a friend who could talk with him about Darwin, Spencer, Huxley, and the scientific tendency of the age. He was devoted to his profession, but was exceedingly tolerant of other medical schools. He was the first M. W. of Colusa Lodge, No. 66, and always took a warm interest in the growth of the Order. He was also a member of the Independent Order of Chosen Friends. A noble life has passed into silence. May his mantle fall upon his brethren.

Welcome.

On the third of April, the Grand Lodge will meet at Dashaway hall, in this city. It is estimated there will be about 200 delegates present, and many, no doubt, will find it convenient to bring their wives and families with them, and make the week one of pleasure and sight-seeing, as well as official duty. It will be the pleasant privilege of the numerous brethren in this city, to extend to these representatives a most cordial greeting, and make their sojourn among us as enjoyable as possible. Their time, for at least a couple of days, will be taken up with important business connected with the welfare of the Order, and the most of us will have no opportunity to meet with them personally. Would it not be well to give them an entertainment in one of our spacious halls, where we can all meet and have a chance to cultivate those social feelings and amenities, which should ever exist among members of the same Order. We are one family, bound by a tie that should throb a kindred feeling in every heart; and the members of the various Lodges in this city, should promptly see to it, that the occasion is made a love-feast of the brotherhood. Let us show to these visiting brethren from all parts of the State, that Fraternity is not an empty word, an abstraction, a beautiful ideal hung in the clouds, but a joyous, spontaneous, living reality, finding its most complete embodiment and fragrant illustration in the Order of A. O. U. W.

Personals.

It is well known that a large number of our leading business men are active and enthusiastic Workmen. Bro. Barna McKinnie of the firm of Scrivner & McKinnie, leading attorneys at law, is taking a prominent part in helping to build up our Order. He is, not only a constant attendant, at his own Lodge, Valley, No. 30, but visits weekly several of our city Lodges.

We saw a number of members of the A. O. U. W., among the Press Association excursionists on Monday morning. G. M. W. Barnes is the President, and was one of the party. He will visit a number of the Lodges in the southern part of the State while there.

BRO. WM. ZELNER, Receiver of Franklin, No. 44, has served in that office nearly four years, and will receive the P. M. W. degree at the coming session of the Grand Lodge.

It is said that Grand Foreman Rogers' adherents intend to stand by him at the coming session, first, last, and all the time, for the first place.

We were pleased to see Bro. Eugene J. Gregory, P. M. W., of Sacramento, a few minutes on Monday last on his way to the train for home.

We are pleased to learn that Bro. J. W. Camp, the Financier of Valley, No. 30, is rapidly recovering from his late illness.

BRO. J. P. ZIPF, P. M. W., of Manzanita Lodge, No. 154, is in the city, and thinks he may attend the Grand Lodge as a spectator.

Important to Workmen.

The WATCHMAN of April 1st will be worthy of preservation by all members of the Order. The double edition, consisting of 24 pages—some eight pages more of reading matter than usual—well filled with Order news, ought to satisfy the most fastidious that the standard journal of the A. O. U. W. on this coast fulfills its promises of progress and excellence.

To publish a journal of this character, handsomely illustrated and of exceptionally fine typographical appearance, ably edited, with full reports of topics of interest, is no easy or inexpensive task. It is not too much to claim that the WATCHMAN is, in these respects, ahead of any journal published in the interest of a secret beneficial order in the United States.

The edition of April 1st will be special in its nature. Among other things will be given a

A Complete Directory

Of the Lodges in this jurisdiction, with the name of the Master Workmen, place of meeting, name of Recorder, day of meeting, etc., officers of Grand Lodge, with the committees, District Deputies; officers of Grand Lodge of the jurisdiction of Nevada, Utah and Montana, subordinate Lodges of each jurisdiction, with names of Master Workmen, Records, dates and place of meeting, etc., a complete list of

History of the A. O. U. W.

Since its inception will also appear, with a brief but comprehensive record of the Order on this coast; full "Lodge Locals," general order news, and editorials on timely topics. The illustrations will be varied, attractive and up to the WATCHMAN's usual standard.

A Special Enterprise.

The full list of officers for the present term of all subordinate Lodges of the A. O. U. W. in California (numbering 223 Lodges)—as heretofore published in our usual sized type—will be photographed down and engraved in miniature form, thus grouping in one page of the WATCHMAN the names of 2,500 officers and leading Workmen of our progressive Order in one solid body.

In addition to our regular large circulation we shall mail postpaid over 3,000 extra complimentary copies of our double sheet to the names of these subordinate Lodge officers, District Deputies, Grand Officers, etc., on this coast, making an immense distribution among a very select class of thrifty, enterprising, business, professional and industrial people.

Samples will also be liberally furnished to visiting brothers at the Grand Lodge. The many thousands of complimentary copies heretofore circulated of our carefully prepared and handsomely printed sheet have surely materially advanced the cause.

We feel no hesitation in asking all Workmen to lend their individual aid in furthering the progress of the WATCHMAN, feeling that in so doing they also materially aid the order. No such journal as the WATCHMAN can be published without substantial pecuniary assistance. In each subordinate Lodge there should be a large proportion of subscribers.

It is suggested that members of Lodges who are not already subscribers, but who wish to become so, give their subscription money to their Representatives to the Grand Lodge. We do not think any of the representatives will decline to take this small trouble. It will afford an excellent opportunity for many to subscribe for the official organ of the order. We shall have a representative of the paper at the meetings, so no unnecessary trouble will be entailed on those who bring subscriptions for others.

If the Master Workmen or Records of the Subordinate Lodges who receive this notice, will, in fraternal kindness and justice, bring this matter to the attention of their members, under "Good of the Order," we shall feel under obligation. We are confident that there are many Workmen who would subscribe for the paper devoted specially to their interests, if the matter was brought properly before them. We hope this appeal will be received in the proper spirit, and be productive of immediate results, since the better support we have, the better can we advance the interests of our noble order.

Recorders frequently err in reporting members suspended from the Order for six months' delinquency on assessments, when in fact they are only delinquent five months. When an assessment is levied on a member twenty days must elapse before it becomes delinquent, and it requires six months from date of first delinquency, or six months and twenty days from date of assessment on the member before he can be legally suspended from the Order for non-payment of assessments. If a member keeps his dues paid up he can be delinquent on assessments during all this time, and be entitled to the same benefits and privileges of every kind that he would have been entitled to if he were not so delinquent, except the right to participate in the beneficiary fund, and to represent his Lodge in the Grand Lodge, or do some other thing which the law may specifically provide can only be done by a member in good standing.

Several duplicate representative certificates are still wanting. I need them to make out the list for printing. The Finance Committee wants them, and so does the Committee on Credentials. Recorders please take notice.

The session of the Grand Lodge will begin on the 3d of next month, in this city, at Dashaway hall, on Post street.

C. P. Hitch, Grand Recorder of Illinois, in his second annual report, presents some interesting tables. Sixty-two deaths have occurred during the year, of which 35 are under 45 years of age. Nine of the deaths were accidental; no suicides. Thirteen assessments of $1 each have been sufficient to pay all losses. The average death rate per 1,000 members for 1882 was 5.4-11 per 1,000 a little over one half per cent. The State has 232 Lodges and 11,809 members. The average age of the membership in the jurisdiction is 36 years and 11 months, which is less than the average age was last year. One hundred and eighty-four members is the largest number reported by any one Lodge in the State.

There are two assessment in Pennsylvania for March, on 13 deaths.

Reserve Funds.

It is natural for men to run in ruts. The path the father trod seems the natural way for the son and the son's son to go. Perhaps in nothing is this more true than in business methods. In the matter of Life Insurance we have been taught that men will die in accordance with certain rules, based on age at joining a company or association, which are as unfailing as the rolling years, and that these rules should govern in fixing the rate of payments of the assured during his connection with the organization. Time and actual experience have proven this a fallacy, but still men are prone to follow their early teachings in the face of established facts to the contrary. Again, we have been taught that any scheme of life assurance that does not embody some provisions for a Reserve Fund must necessarily be faulty and unsafe, for the reason that some time in the history of all nations and peoples there must be periods of excessive and unusual mortality, which should be provided for in advance of their coming. This seems business prudence. It, like graded payments, seems correct in theory, but tested by experience proves likewise a delusion and a snare. Reserve funds in far too many instances have been funds reserved for somebody to steal. The instances are few indeed, where those for whose benefit they were ostensibly raised have ever realized a penny on the investment. Somehow when they have been needed they have mysteriously disappeared. It has been a common practice with Life Insurance companies to create from the payments of policy-holders a large reserve fund, and at the same time to provide for the absolute forfeiture of all rights of the policy-holder therein on his becoming delinquent on any payment stipulated to be made. If the policy-holder paid to the company only the proper cost of his assurance, there would be no injustice in cutting him off for delinquency, for he would have received just what he paid for as he went along, but when he contributed to the creation of a reserve fund, he acquired rights therein that should not be impaired by delinquency in payment of a single stipulated installment. This became so apparent, and the hardships of policy-holders so grievous, that the Legislatures of several States compelled the Life Insurance companies to make their policies in a measure non-forfeitable, i. e. they compelled them to apply certain moneys from the reserve fund to keep the members' policy good till his interest in such fund should become exhausted, and this was right.

Now, if any beneficial society should create a reserve fund, no doubt we should shortly see our law-making powers stepping in to compel us to make our Beneficiary Certificates non-forfeitable. At any rate, if we did not the law-makers would be to blame. We have no more right to do wrong in the name of fraternity than in the name of selfishness, and if we do our punishment should not be mitigated in consequence.

Make our certificates non-forfeitable, and the power of our Order would be gone forever. We would no longer have any way to enforce obedience to our laws. We have neither swords nor spears, nor cannons, nor armies, nor navies, not even the force of civil process at our command—nothing but the power to compel refractory or delinquent or otherwise undesirable members to part company with the rest of us. The moment we give up this privilege, or put ourselves in a position that we cannot exercise it, we surrender everything that is of any value to the Order, and the creation of a reserve fund would, in the end, compass this result if it did not, if possible, do worse. The best place for a reserve fund is in the pockets of individual members. We find the burden heavy enough when we pay net cost for our assurance. Our accounts are fully balanced from month to month. We owe the Order nothing, and it owes us nothing. We can quit at any time we like and lose nothing.

ing. On the other hand, we can steer clear of legal difficulties and control our members as an organization, with a reasonable hope of its perpetuity for ages and ages to come. To organize a reserve fund would be to dig our graves with our own hands. Are we ready for this?

To Young Men.

The good influence of the lodge-room, especially on young men, can scarcely be over-estimated. The lessons of Fraternity are there taught and exemplified by practical examples. Valuable acquaintances are made, the ways of conducting business in legislative assemblies are learned, and a constant training is had in business promptitude. Especially is this the case in a society like the A. O. U. W., where, in order to maintain good standing, the frequent calls upon the members must be met at stated periods. True, the demand is not great, but it is of more importance that we learn to be prompt and careful in small things than in the larger ones. It is a trite and true saying that if we take care of the pennies, the pounds will take care of themselves. It is trifles that make perfection. Nowhere can these things be more thoroughly learned than in the lodge-room. Again, many a man has first learned his possibilities as a debater and orator in his Lodge, and from the beginning there made has scarred his name high on the temple of fame. Every young man is better thought of in the community because of his belonging to the A. O. U. W. If he has a wife, she is in a measure protected from want, if he has not, some other dear friend is nominated as his beneficiary, who, in case of his sickness and distress will kindly care for him. To do this is but business prudence, a fact in itself that commends the young man to men of business affairs. The money paid into a Lodge is very rarely expended except in doing good to our fellowmen. The doing of one good deed is but the forerunner of another, for man delights in righteousness rather than evil, else the world had gone down to destruction straitway from the creation. The good inherent in human nature grows with what it feeds upon, and the same is true of the evil we may possess, but in an even race with iniquity righteousness will always win. That it does not always gain the victory is because the race is not even. Shakspeare has truly said, "thrice armed is he who hath his quarrel just." To make men better is easier than to make them worse, and if we believe with the sacred writer that righteousness exalteth, but that sin is a reproach, we cannot do a better or nobler thing than to encourage the good we have and discourage the bad, and if there is any better place to do this than in the lodge-room we have never found it. No young man who is financially able and eligible to become a Workman should be left outside the fold, and if not financially able no good friend could do him a more substantial kindness than to help him in that regard.

THE wedding cards have been issued of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. H. Barry, of this city, Miss Nellie V. Barnum being the happy bride. The young lady has been connected with this office for some years, and the gentleman is a rising young printer. They have our hearty congratulation.

Liberalism is creeping into all churches; but the poor preachers notice that it has not yet struck the contribution box.

WATER A PRESERVATIVE OF TIMBER.—The posts of a railing recently put up in the new office of the Sycamore Powder company, on Market street, Nashville, are carved out of white oak timber cut about 45 years ago, at Sycamore Mills, in Cheatham county, Tenn. The timber out of which these posts were made was used by the late Judge Samuel Watson in the construction of a mill-race, and lay immersed in the water over 42 years, when they were taken out, and after being seasoned, Major Eugene Lewis, Manager of the Powder Company, had them fashioned into their present shape. The wood is as sound as it was the day it was cut, and has become as hard as iron, and turned very dark, almost black color.—Southern Lumberman.

Local Notes.

The number of certificates issued in California from January 1, 1882, to January 1, 1883, was 2,283. During this year 133 died and 652 were suspended. The net gain was 1,408. Membership—January 1, 1882, 13,668; Jan 1, 1883, 15,166. Only Master Workmen in good standing are given. Those whose names are on the rolls as Junior Workmen, or those in a temporary state of suspension, are not reported. These average about five per cent, which added, gives the actual number in this State as 15,924.

Large delegations from Empire, No. 112, Turlock, No. 182 and Sonora, No. 197, were present at the lodge room of Oak Grove Lodge at Oakdale, Stanislaus county, at the recent visit of the Grand Master. A ball and supper closed the festivities.

The new "School of Instruction" was regularly organized on the evening of the 24th ultimo by the election of E. F. Loud, president; W. I. McKay, vice-president; J. D. Thompson, secretary; E. Danforth, treasurer.

The members of the Order in San Diego are making arrangements for a public reception of the Grand Master on the 13th, and those of Los Angeles, for a similar occasion, on the evening of the 17th inst.

The Grand Lodge of this State will meet in this city, at Dashaway Hall, Post street, on Tuesday morning, April 3d. The Supreme Lodge is to convene at Buffalo, N. Y., on Tuesday, June 5th.

At a regular meeting of the Southern California Lodge, No. 191, A. O. U. W., held March 7th, Mr. J. H. Benetome was elected Financier, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. W. T. Knox.

A new Degree of Honor Lodge was instituted by Ed. S. Thompson, deputy, at Forest Hill, Placer county, with twenty-five charter members, on Saturday evening, February 24th.

The records of Valley Lodge, No. 30, to date, show 1,031 certificates issued, 16 deaths, 69 suspended, and 946 Master Workmen in good standing on March 1, 1883.

Subordinate Lodges are in process of formation at Lompoc, Santa Barbara, and at Alturas, Modoc county. Supplies have been sent to the latter point.

A Chico Degree of Honor Lodge was instituted Thursday evening, March 8th. It promises to be a success.

A union meeting was held with Oakland Lodge on Friday evening, March 9th.

Yerba Buena, No. 14, visited Spartan, No. 36, last Friday evening.

San Rafael Lodge celebrated its fifth anniversary on the evening of March 7th.

Supplies have gone forward for a D. of H. Lodge at Cloverdale.

Bro. H. K. Schwartz, No. 524 Battery, watchmaker and jeweler, has a fine reputation as a skilled workman, in making and repairing intricate movements. Those who have patronized him speak in very favorable terms of his uniform good work, and very reasonable charges.

Bro. Chas. E. Pearson, the well known caterer and late manager of Swain's restaurant, of this city, will open a restaurant in Los Angeles. He is a genial brother, knows how "to keep a hotel," and we hope he will receive a warm reception at the hands of our brethren which is due to him.

An exchange says that to "wear patched clothes is no disgrace," but it looks like sin struck with a club, and we wouldn't do it if—if we were engaged in any other business.

Home Manufactures.

All history will vindicate the statements, that exclusively mining and agricultural countries are usually poor and dependent, that the production of the raw material from the fields, forests or mines is not the productive wealth that builds up towns and cities, of at least the kind that most greatly benefits the trading and wage-receiving classes. It is a kind of wealth which stands in pools, and does not spread out over the whole country and make the wilderness and solitary places glad, and the deserts rejoice and blossom as the rose. It does not thrill and electrify the social, educational and material interests of the country so thoroughly as to cause all parts to pulse with life and health. The reason is obvious. The raw, bulky, heavy material goes abroad at low rates, and returns as the product of skilled labor, at high rates. The difference between the price of the two commodities is the loss sustained by the non-manufacturing producer, and no people can claim to be well on the way to the highest prosperity who are content to be vegetable dealers and marketers, the producers of raw material, wholly dependent upon the capricious and fluctuating prices of the foreign purchasers and manufacturers for the necessities and comforts of life.

We study the future in the light of the past, and what home manufactures have done for other nations and States, we may safely calculate they will do for California. We need only the example of our English ancestors. Though England is first known in history by the efforts of the Phœnician navigators to obtain the products of her mines, and although her pastoral and agricultural wealth chiefly attracted the Roman conquerors, still England never emerged as a first-class power in Europe until she had learned to manufacture her own productions. Then the island became a busy hive of industry and wealth. England exports no raw material; and what is the consequence? The whole land shakes with machinery, and her sea coast is one long counter, where she trades with the world, buying the crude material and selling the refined and putting the difference into her pocket. Home manufacture has largely been the recuperative power of France, Prussia and Holland, after being prostrated by long, devastating wars. These countries have steadily grown rich—have money to loan and invest in great public enterprises—while Russia, whose exports consist chiefly of the raw material, is one of the poorest nations of Europe, considering her extent and resources. Home manufactures made New England, with her thin soil, granite hills, and rough climate, rich and self-reliant; while the sunny South, with a fertile soil, a delicious climate, but exporting all she raised, languished in poverty. But the claim of a new era of prosperity in that fair clime is evidenced by the fact that her capital is beginning to whiz and whirl in her looms and spindles.

We need only study what the mining products, the coal measures, and a system of careful agriculture combined, have done for the political and material prosperity of Great Britain, to learn where the great secret of California's future prosperity lies if duly appreciated. There is no State in the Union that possesses so many marked advantages for building up a large manufacturing industry. We have wood, coal and petroleum in abundance. The out-door laborer rarely suffers from heat or cold. The ice never pinions the mill wheels, and the path to the shop or factory is never blocked with snow. Then, nearly all the staples, which constitute the same material, can be produced with the greatest ease, and in the largest quantities. The soil and climate are adapted to an almost endless variety. Anything in the line of wood, grain, wool, cotton, silk, California can produce of the best quality, and as cheaply as the most favored country in the world. There is no reason, then, why we may not manufacture, at least four fifths of our present importations, and lay the foundation of an export trade, that will whiten the Pacific with the sails of our commerce.

There is already a great demand for our woollen goods, many mills reporting it impossible to fill their orders, and yet the bulk of the wool crop is still shipped east. Last year, California flour went to Great Britain, Germany, China, Japan, Central America, Australia, British Columbia, Mexico and the Pacific Islands, and everywhere at good profits to the shippers, and yet, the most of our wheat still goes in the sacks to foreign countries. Now, any portion of this raw material which we can manufacture to export, is just so much more added to the wealth and prosperity of the State.

Home manufactures made England the richest and most powerful nation on the globe! Home manufactures made New England the leader of a mighty republic! And home manufactures may make California the commercial empire of the Pacific coast.

Workmen Who Appreciate their Paper.

The following extracts from many encouraging letters received, show that our active sincere and steadfast efforts to sustain a good paper for the A. O. U. W. in the comparatively limited field on this coast are well appreciated by members of the Order in various quarters:

JANESVILLE, Feb. 7, 1883.
Editor Pacific States Watchman.—DEAR SIR AND BRO: I was elected M. W. the first of the year, and find it almost impossible to instruct my brethren without the aid of your valuable paper. We have a thriving Lodge of 20 members and two applications; six months ago there were only 12 members. Jan. 27th, D. D., T. B. Saunders, organized a D. of H. with our lodge, known as Lake D. of H. Enclosed you will find six months, subscription and address. Yours in C. H. and P., M. T. SPENCER, M. W., Lake Lodge, 135.

SHASTA, Jan. 22, 1883.
Watchman Publishing Co.—DEAR SIR: Your favor of the 8th inst., duly received and read to the Lodge. Your bill was referred to the Finance Committee and the Committee having reported the same, inclosed find postal order to be credited to Shasta Lodge, No. 71, A. O. U. W., as per bill rendered, and the balance to be credited to Messrs. L. H. C. Prehn and Earnest Dobrowsky for one years subscription each. A. H. SPRAGUE.

WILMINGTON, Cal., Jan. 22, 1883.
Watchman Publishing Co.—GENTLEMEN: Your bill against this Lodge for advertising card in A. O. U. W. Directory came duly to hand, inclosed please find money order in payment of the same and also for one year's subscription of your valuable paper, the WATCHMAN, from Jan. 1, 1883 to Jan. 1, 1884. to Bro, Joseph Johnson. Very respectfully, J. F. C. JOHNSON, Recorder.

VALLEJO, JAN. 24, 1883.
Editors Watchman.—Your bill for advertisement of card of Vallejo Lodge, No. 75, A. O. U. W. in WATCHMAN for 1882, has been referred to the Finance Committee of the Lodge, and the amount will probably be sent by our Receiver with his next remittance to the Grand Recorder. The Lodge also voted to continue the card during 1883. Fraternally, etc.,
 A. L. HATHEWAY, Recorder.

WOODLAND, Yolo Co., Jan. 1883.
Editors Watchman.—Inclosed please find list of officers installed by Dist. Deputy Mull. We now number 106 active members. Your bill received and amount will be forwarded as soon as reported on by Finance Committee. Fraternally, yours,
 S. M. GRIGGS, Recorder, Yolo Lodge, No. 22.

NEVADA CITY, Jan. 17, 1883.
Pacific States Watchman.—DEAR SIR: Inclosed find check for publishing Lodge notice in Directory for two years. The following is our list of officers, etc. We hold our own. Yours, fraternally, GEO. A. GRAY, Recorder, Nevada City Lodge, No. 52.

HALL EL DORADO LODGE, No. 118, }
 PLACERVILLE, Cal., Jan. 11, 1883. }
Watchman Publishing Co.—GENTS: Please find inclosed P. O. for publishing card in paper. Please change the card of the Lodge to read, etc., Yours in C. H. and P.
 H. B. TURMAN, Recorder.

NORTH SAN JUAN, Dec. 11, 1882.
Watchman Publishing Co.—GENTS: Please find inclosed postal order for two copies of the WATCHMAN to commence on the 15th, of this month. Hoping to be able to get more subscriptions for your valuable paper—as it ought to be in every household, I am, yours truly,
 F. MANHIRE.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has not been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we will split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the 8th and 23d of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
 ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
 KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
 ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
 INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
 INDEPENDENT ORDER CHOSEN FRIENDS,
 ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
 GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
 NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST,
 AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
 PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
 UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS,
 IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN,
 KNIGHTS OF HONOR.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and choicely selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

Look for Your Subscription Credit.

Subscribers on paying for this paper should look at the date of the printed labels on their papers, and if the same is not credited, in due time, up to the date paid to be sure to write us without delay. If an agent or clerk receiving the money should inadvertently or intentionally fail to credit, it is important to the subscriber and ourselves that we be informed of it IMMEDIATELY, that we may act accordingly. Subscribers will please notify us of all errors which they may notice of any kind on our mail list. Be sure to write us if the paper comes after you wish it discontinued.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this, the oldest of the beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

Easy Binder.

Dewey's patent elastic binder, for periodicals, music and other printed sheets, is the handiest, best and cheapest of all economical and practical file binders. Newspapers are quickly placed in it and held neatly, as in a cloth-bound book. It is durable and so simple a child can use it. Price, size of Mining and Scientific Press, Rural Press, Watchman, Fraternal Record, Home Journal, Harper's Weekly, and Scientific American, 75 cents; postage, 10 cents. Postpaid to subscribers of this paper, 50 cents. Send for illustrated circular. Agents wanted.

Good Land and Sure Crops.

There has been steady and tolerably rapid advancement made in the growth of a majority of the towns in Colusa, Butte, Tehama and Shasta counties. Especially is this so in the agricultural districts where the land produces at least fair crops in all seasons—wet or dry—as does the land on the Reading Ranch. Those looking for homes in California where diversified farming will pay every year; where wood and water are plenty and easy to be obtained, and other desirable advantages are to be had, should examine the Reading Grant.

Some 14,000 out of 26,000 acres of the grant remain for sale at comparatively low rates, in quantities to suit purchasers, on easy terms. Prices range from $5 to $30 per acre. The tract is between two and three miles wide, with the Northern Division of the C. P. R. R. passing centrally through its entire length. Send postage stamp for free circulars containing information about Shasta County and these lands, to the proprietor of Reading Ranch.

Printing in China a Thousand Years Ago.

In an interesting article on printing in China, the North China Herald says that the first great promoter of the art of printing was Feng Ying, who in 932 A. D. advised the Emperor to have the Confucian classics printed with wooden blocks engraved for the purpose. The first books were printed in a regular manner, and in pursuance of a decree in 953. The mariner's compass and rockets were invented about the same time, showing that at this period men's minds were much stirred toward invention. Twenty years after the edict the blocks of the classics were pronounced ready, and were placed on sale. Large-sized editions, which were the only ones printed at first, were soon succeeded by pocket editions. The works printed under the Lung Emperors at Hangchow were celebrated for their beauty; those of western China came next, and those of Fok-hien last. Movable types of copper and lead were tried about the same time, but it was thought mistakes were more numerous with them, and therefore the fixed blocks were prepared. Paper made from cotton was tried, but it was found so expensive that the bamboo-made paper held its ground. In the Sung dynasty the method was also tried of engraving on soft clay and afterward hardening it by baking. The separate characters were not thicker than ordinary copper coins. Each of these was in fact a seal. An iron plate was prepared with a casing of turpentine, wax, and the ashes of burnt paper. Over this was placed an iron frame, in which the clay types were set up until it was full. The whole was then sufficiently heated to melt the wax facing. An iron plate was placed above the types, making them perfectly level, the wax being just soft enough to allow them to sink to the proper depth. This being done it would be possible to print several hundred or thousand copies with great rapidity. Two forms prepared in this way were ready for the pressman's use, so that when he had done with one he would proceed with another without delay. Here is undoubtedly the principle of the printing press of Europe, although western printers can dispense with a soft wax bed for types, and can obtain a level surface without this device. Perhaps the need of capital to lay in a stock of types, the want of a good type metal easily cut and sufficiently hard and the superior beauty of the Chinese characters when carved in wood have prevented the wide employment of the movable types which are so convenient for all alphabetic writing. The inventor of this mode of printing in movable types five centuries before they were invented in Europe was named Pi Sheng.

A Mosaic Portrait of Garfield.

A remarkable portrait of the late American President has just been executed by Messrs. Salviati and Burke, of Regent st., the well-known artists in mosaic and Venetian glass. The portrait, which is undeniably good likeness, is oval in form, with dimensions of about 3 feet by 2½ feet. It contains, in all, about 8,000 tesserae, the largest of which are perhaps half an inch square, while the smallest, which have been used for the treatment of the hair and beard, cannot be more than one tenth of an inch in diameter. It should be mentioned that in all mosaic work the size of the tesserae is determined by the distance at which the picture is intended to be seen. In the vast spaces of St. Mark's, this portrait of General Garfield would be wholly lost and ineffective; in the smaller compass of a modern chamber mosaic from St. Mark's would seem coarse and unrefined in color and texture. Visitors to Westminster Abbey will notice that in the mosaic—also by Messrs. Salviati—over the altar, which, though seen from a distance, is approached and approachable, this technical canon has resulted in the use of medium-sized tesserae. In the comparatively far-off mosaics of St. Paul's much larger individual pieces of color have been employed. The portrait of General Garfield is a gift to the American Nation, and will be placed in the Capitol at Washington, side by side with the mosaic likeness of President Lincoln which was presented by Messrs. Salviati some years ago. The gift has been officially accepted by the American Government.—London Times.

SLURS ON WOMEN.—One of the severest and most just rebukes ever administered to one of those masculine fools, who are always perpetrating slurs upon women, took place at a recent dinner, at which no ladies were present. A man, in responding to the toast, "Woman," dwelt almost solely on the frailties of the sex, claiming that the best among them were little better than the worst, the chief difference being in their surroundings. At the conclusion of his speech, a gentleman present rose to his feet and said: "I trust the gentleman, in the application of his remarks, refers to his own mother and sisters, not to ours." The effect of this most just and timely rebuke was overwhelming; the maligner of women was covered with confusion and shame. Of all the evil prevalent among men, we know of none more blighting in its moral effect than the tendency to speak slightly of the virtue of women, nor is there anything in which young men are so thoroughly mistaken as in the low estimate they form of the integrity of women—not of their own mothers and sisters, we are glad to say, but of others, who, they forget, are somebody else's mothers and sisters. The evil is far too general, and needs uprooting. The false ideas come from perverted and impure minds—never from an upright, honorable, moral gentleman.—Oakland Tribune.

A State Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Following is the full text of the bill creating a Bureau of Labor Statistics, which has received the Governor's signature, and has become a law. The institution may be of very great importance to the class it is intended to benefit:

The People of the State of California, represented in Assembly and Senate, do enact as follows:

Section 1. As soon as possible after the passage of this Act, and every four years thereafter, the Governor of the State shall appoint a suitable person to act as Commissioner of a Bureau of Labor Statistics. The headquarters of said Bureau shall be located in the city and county of San Francisco, said Commissioner to serve for four years, and until his successor is appointed and qualified.

Sec. 2. The Commissioner of the Bureau, before entering upon the duties of his office, must execute an official bond in the sum of $5,000, and take the oath of office, all as prescribed by the political code for State officers in general.

Sec. 3. The duties of the Commissioner shall be to collect, assort, systematize and present, in biennial reports to the Legislature, statistical details relating to all departments of labor in the State, such as the hours and wages of labor, cost of living, amount of labor required, estimated number of persons depending on daily labor for their support, the probable chances of all being employed, the operation of labor-saving machinery in its relation to hand labor, etc. Said statistics may be classified as follows:

First—In agriculture.

Second—In mechanical and manufacturing industries.

Third—In mining.

Fourth—In transportation on land and water.

Fifth—In clerical and all other skilled and unskilled labor not above enumerated.

Sixth—The amount of cash capital invested in lands, buildings, machinery, material and means of production and distribution generally.

Seventh—The number, age, sex and condition of persons employed; the nature of their employment; the extent to which the apprenticeship system prevails in the various skilled industries; number of hours of labor per day, the average length of time employed per annum, and the net wages received in each of the industries and employments enumerated.

Eighth—The number and condition of the unemployed, their age, sex and nationality, together with the causes of their idleness.

Ninth—The sanitary condition of lands, workshops, dwellings; the number and size of rooms occupied by the poor, etc.; the cost of rent, fuel, food, clothing and water in each locality of the State, also the extent to which labor-saving processes are employed to the displacement of hand labor.

Tenth—The number and condition of the Chinese in the State, their social and sanitary habits; number of married and of single; the number employed and the nature of their employment; the average wages per day at each employment, and the gross amount yearly; the amounts expended by them in rent, food and clothing, and in what proportion such amounts are expended for foreign and home productions respectively; to what extent their employment comes in competition with the white industrial classes of the State.

Eleventh—The number, condition and nature of the employment of the inmates of the State Prison, county jails and reformatory institutions, and to what extent their employment comes in competition with the labor of mechanics, artisans and laborers outside of these institutions.

Twelfth—All such other information in relation to labor as the Commissioner may deem essential to further the object sought to be obtained by this statute; together with such strictures on the condition of labor, past, present and the probable future of the same, as he may deem good and salutary to insert in his biennial report.

Sec. 4. It shall be the duty of all officers of State departments, and the Assessors of the various counties of the State, to furnish, upon the written request of the Commissioner, all the information in their power necessary to assist in carrying out the objects of this Act; and all printing required by the bureau, in the discharge of its duty, shall be performed by the State Printing Department, and at least three thousand (3,000) copies of the printed report shall be furnished the Commissioner for free distribution to the public.

Sec. 5. Any person who wilfully impedes or prevents the Commissioner or his deputy, in the full and free performance of his or their duty, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction of the same shall be fined not less than ten (10) nor more than fifty (50) dollars, or imprisoned not less than seven (7) nor more than thirty (30) days in the county jail, or both.

Sec. 6. The office of the bureau shall be open for business from nine (9) o'clock A. M. until five (5) o'clock P. M. every day, except non-judicial days, and the officers thereof shall give, to all persons requesting it, all needed information which they may possess.

Sec. 7. The Commissioner shall have power to send for persons and papers whenever in his opinion it is necessary, and he may examine witnesses under oath, being hereby qualified to administer the same in the performance of his duty, and the testimony so taken must be filed and preserved in the office of said Commissioner he shall have free access to all places and works of labor.

Sec. 8. The Commissioner shall appoint a deputy, who shall serve the same time and have the same powers as the said Commissioner as set forth in the preceding sections; he shall procure rooms necessary for offices, at a rent not to exceed fifty (50) dollars per month, and may provide the necessary furniture, at an expense not to exceed five hundred (500) dollars.

Sec. 9. The salary of the Commissioner shall be twenty-four hundred (2,400) dollars per annum, and the salary of the Deputy Commissioner shall be fifteen hundred (1,500) dollars per annum, to be audited by the Controller and paid by the State Treasurer, in the same manner as other State officers are paid; there shall also be allowed a sum not exceeding five hundred (500) dollars per annum for stationery, and other contingent expenses of the bureau.

Sec. 10. The sum of ten thousand five hundred (10,500) dollars is hereby appropriated out of any money in the State Treasury, not otherwise appropriated, for the expenses of the bureau for the first two years after its organization.

Sec. 11. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Thumb Portraits.

If the "ball" or cushion-like surface of the top joint of the thumb, be examined, it can be seen that in the center—as, indeed, in the fingers also—is a kind of spiral formed of fine grooves in the skin. The spiral is, however, rarely, if ever, quite perfect—there are irregularities, or places where lines run into each other here and there. Examining both thumbs, it will be seen that they do not exactly match; but the figure on each thumb is the same through life. If the thumbs of any two persons are compared, it will further be found that no two are alike. There may be, and generally is, a "family resemblance" between members of the same family, as in other features; there are also national characteristics; but the individuals differ. All this is better seen by taking "proof impressions" of the thumb. This is easily done by pressing it on a slab covered with a film of printers' ink, and then pressing on a piece of white paper; or a little aniline dye, Indian ink—almost anything—may be used.

The Chinese take advantage of all this to identify their important criminals, at least in some parts of the Empire. We photograph their faces; they take impressions from their thumbs. These are stored away, and if the delinquent should ever again fall into the hands of the police, another impression at once affords the means of comparison. The Chinese say that, considering the alteration made in the countenance by hair and beard, and the power many men have of distorting or altering the actual features, etc., their method affords even more certain and easy means of identification than our plan of taking the criminal's portrait. Perhaps we might with advantage take a leaf out of their book.—World of Wonders.

The Clever Women of Mexico.

Spanish tradition respecting the fair sex has not entirely died out in Mexico, and it is with some difficulty that a woman is able to do any work except that of teaching.

The stand taken by Senorita Montoya, of Puebla, is worthy of notice. At the age of 12 years this remarkable girl had finished the course of study at the young ladies' academy where she attended, but she was refused a final examination because it was never given to pupils under 16.

Resolved to waste no time, she pursued alone the studies of botany, philosophy, chemistry, and other subjects preparatory to the study of medicine, upon which her whole mind was bent. Before she was 15, her father, an officer in the army, died, leaving the family penniless, and she at once, assuming the support of her widowed mother, took up the business of nursing, making a special study of the diseases of her own sex.

Under a private tutor she studied Greek, Latin, and mathematics, and at length applied for admission at the Medical College at Puebla. After much opposition she succeeded in obtaining permission from the Government to enter as a special student. While pursuing her studies she has supported herself by teaching, and by acting as physician in the women's hospital. She has recently passed an examination with high honors, and will soon receive her degree as Doctor of Medicine. She is now about 25 years old.

Art culture is also well developed among the Mexican women. At the recent exhibition of paintings held to celebrate the centennial of the Academy of Fine Arts in the city of Mexico, the second prize was awarded to Senorita Elena Barreiro, the first having been given to Felix Parra, a young Mexican artist of considerable genius, now pursuing his studies in Europe.—Boston Transcript.

THIRTY-NINE pieces of orange-peel were found on a Hartford sidewalk, in a short distance Monday, which shows that the legislators of this day are more extravagant than those of 25 years ago, who carried the peel home in their coat-tail pockets and dried it for custards.

AN author who was eulogizing his own works as containing much "food for thought," was rather taken back by the remark of a friend: "They may contain food for thought, but it is wretchedly cooked."

Courtesy.

A paragraph went the rounds of the newspapers lately at which doubtless we all smiled. It stated that the announcement of a marriage somewhere had been followed by these words: "No cards, no cake, and nobody's business." Yet the sober second thought finds in them little cause for amusement, for the same principle carried out in our daily intercourse with one another would rob life of much that goes to make up the sum of its enjoyments.

Is it really nobody's business whether we are happy or miserable, prosperous or in poverty, sick or well? Would we like to have our friends and neighbors thus stand aloof from us, denying us their sympathy in times of sorrow and in days of rejoicing? Perhaps it is impossible for us to realize what life would be without the interchange of little acts and words of courtesy, so accustomed to them have we been from our earliest years. It may be that they sometimes express more than is really felt; but at any rate they are pleasant to receive, and we would gain nothing by declining to accept them for what they are worth.

It has been said that the tendency of our republicanism is to destroy these little amenities of our social life; to make every man so aggressive in his independence that he deems it an infringement of his dignity to treat his fellow-man with politeness! Surely it must be a very ignorant and narrow mind upon which the doctrine of equal rights produces such an effect. The man who truly understands and appreciates his privileges as a citizen of a free country is in no danger of becoming overbearing and insolent to others. Republicanism (I do not use the word in its party sense) equalizes by exalting, not by leveling; not only making me the equal of another, but also making all others my equals, and as such entitled to my respect and civility.

Yet it is undeniable that the freedom of our social customs has at times the tendency to make us careless in little things, to the neglect of certain rules of politeness which ought to be world-wide. And it is just here that I think we ought to guard ourselves very carefully, lest this liberty of ours be evil spoken of. Let me give an instance: Some years ago when in a foreign country I had an intimate friend, an American lady, who had been for a long time resident there, until she had grown accustomed to the social etiquette of the people around her. There came to another town, at no great distance, a young lady from one of our eastern States, and my friend, with whom she was connected by marriage, invited her to visit the beautiful city in which we were living. Mrs. M. (as I will call her) left nothing undone for the entertainment of her young guest; she even got up an excursion, lasting for a week, into the most interesting part of the neighboring country, herself bearing all the expense, and leaving with her guests, as I can testify, high memories for many years to come. Soon after the young lady returned to her friends; and when next I met Mrs. M. I inquired if she had heard from her.

"Oh, no," said my friend, "I have not heard from her. I do not expect to hear. That is American manners." Now we both knew quite well that any young girl of our acquaintance in that country, would, under similar circumstances, have felt it incumbent upon her to write to her kind entertainer as soon as she reached home, informing her of the fact and thanking her for her attention. Our young friend was accustomed to move in good society in America; why did she violate this obvious rule of good manners? Was it not from carelessness, from a feeling that she was not bound to conform to any standard of conduct but her own? Lest some one should say this was but an instance of Yankee rudeness I will give another example which occurred on our Pacific slope. There is no danger of the delinquent seeing this article, so her feelings will not be wounded. A young friend had been visiting me and had quite won all our hearts by her engaging manners. Soon after in a stray newspaper I saw what I supposed to be the announcement of her father's death, as the name, occupation and residence were the same. I wrote at once expressing my sorrowful sympathy. No answer came, but I excused the neglect on the ground of the trial it often proves to write such letters. What was my surprise when about six months after this came a letter from the young lady, saying I had been mistaken, as she was happy to tell me her father was alive and well! You can fancy my feelings, and guess whether or not I responded to the request to "write again soon," with which she ended her letter.

These things are not right. Separated from the old world as we are, and, happily, free from much of the burdensome etiquette which rules there, we should yet feel that we are bound by all the obligations of that true politeness which has been happily described as "Christianity in little things." I fancy that does not consist in treating our neighbor with rudeness or neglect, and yet in responding to his expressions of interest in our affairs, that they are none of his business.—I. H., in Rural Press.

MOLLIE said a naughty word one day, so mamma took the tooth-brush and soap and washed out her mouth. When she had finished, Mollie drew a long breath and said: "My stomach is just as bad as my mouth is."

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through Dewey & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

TWO-WHEELED VEHICLE.—Geo. P. Kimball, S. F. No. 272,557. Dated Feb. 20, 1883. This improvement in two-wheeled vehicles consists in a novel construction of the shafts and in their relation to the axle and body. It consists also in a novel arrangement of the springs and the footboard in relation to the shafts, axle and body. The object is to provide an easy riding vehicle, which, on account of the construction and arrangement of its parts, will be both economical and effective.

DRESSING SAW-TEETH.—Stephen H. Chase, San Jose, Cal. No. 272,530. Dated Feb. 20, 1883. This is a novel device for jointing circular saws and more especially relates to a tool which is adapted to joint or dress the sides of the teeth. The invention consists in certain details of construction. The object is to provide a device for dressing or jointing the sides of the teeth of a circular saw, after they have been swaged, to bring them into line with one another and cause them to cut clean.

TRACE-HOOK.—Calvin P. Wakefield, Cressey, Cal. No. 272,175. Dated Feb. 13, 1883. This invention relates to a new and useful improvement in trace-hooks, and it consists in a metal hook riveted to the trace and provided with a peculiar overlapping guard. The object of this invention is to prevent the other parts of the harness from getting into the hook and becoming entangled.

A NEW DANGER.—Two steamers, one the Lima, of the Pacific Steam Navigation Co., and the other the United States man-of-war Alaska, recently narrowly escaped destruction from falling meteors. Just after sunset on the 12th of December, a meteor plunged into the ocean close by the latter, and exploded with a great noise and a burst of flame just before reaching the water. All on board were terribly frightened. The particulars of the falling of a meteor near the Lima are not related. Of course, the danger from such accidents is no greater now than in years gone by; but, the rapidly increasing number of ocean vessels, and the more general spread of information in regard to this, through newspapers, etc., makes such occurrences more noticeable than formerly. A contemporary, in commenting upon this matter, says: "This is not the first time that meteors have fallen near ships, and there is nothing impossible in the suggestion that vessels may have been sunk by them. Meteoric stones have fallen on land which were heavy enough, and endowed with sufficient velocity, to knock a hole through any ship. Within the last 40 years more than 20 vessels have disappeared at sea. How many of them may possibly have been struck and sunk by one of these flying missiles from the sky, some of which follow in flocks in the tracks of comets, while others are lone wanderers in space until they fall within the earth's attraction, and plunge through her atmosphere with planetary speed?"

ABSORPTION OF HYDROGEN.—It has been shown by W. Hempel that hydrogen is completely absorbed by palladium sponge at 100°, and he has used this as a means of separating hydrogen from a mixture of gases. In order to test the applicability of this property to the estimation of hydrogen evolved in sealed tubes, the author treated zinc with hydrochloric acid in a sealed glass tube containing a palladium spiral. The proportions of acid and zinc were such as to produce a pressure of 25 atmospheres, if no hydrogen were absorbed by the palladium. The absorption was found to be complete. A small portion of the hydrogen had united with the oxygen of the air remaining in the tube. Nearly the calculated amount of hydrogen was obtained from the palladium spiral by heating to 350°. The evolution of the gas was so regular that the author suggests the heating of palladium hydrogen as a means of obtaining chemically pure hydrogen.—Amer. Chem. Journal.

American Steamboats Sweep the World.

There is apparently a large and extended market for American flat river steamers on the shallow navigable rivers of Europe and Asia. In China they have already effected almost a revolution in the water carrying trade of that empire, and we hear that there is a brisk demand for them already on the Volga. The plan adopted in that case by the American builders is to take out the machinery with them, and to build the steamers of timber on the spot. This plan produces a steamer much cheaper than the iron river steamers exported from England, which have been in use there for some time. Not only is their success due to that cause, but more especially owing to the fact that the American built boats only require a draft of four feet, while most of the English steamers require nine feet. Even a draft of five feet bars the navigation through a great portion of the river, and the speed of the wooden American boats is said to be better than that of any of their iron competitors. The light draft of the American boats has opened up a navigable length of some 2,000 to 2,300 miles on the Volga, which will probably induce considerable further orders for the other large rivers of Russia. There should be an equally good market for such steamers on the rivers of the Argentine Republic, which are very wide, but for the most part shallow. We understand, however, that there is a strong prejudice against them, owing to their liability to catch fire—the first two which were run on the Plate having been destroyed by fire. We do not see why America should have a monopoly of such flat bottomed river steamers, and we recommend this to the attention of English ship builders, though, as a nation, we are said to be the last to suit our goods to customers' requirements.—Marine Engineer

A little four and a half year old, who attends the Harmon Seminary Kindergarten in Berkeley, informed her parents last week, that the school was going to celebrate Washington's Birthday. When asked who Washington was, she replied: "Oh, he's some gentleman our teacher knows, 'cause she told us all about him."

Mining and Scientific Press.

THE MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS is the leading mining journal in America, and enjoys a larger circulation among the more intelligent operators and workers in the gold fields of the world.

Established in 1860, it has firmly maintained its position as a reliable, progressive journal. The information given in its columns has saved millions of dollars to the practical miners, metallurgists, mill men, mine and shareholders on the Western side of our continent.

Among its contributors are the ablest and most experienced mining engineers, superintendents and practical miners in this country.

The Press gives a condensed summary of Mining News from the most important mining districts of the country.

New processes and methods of mining are described in its weekly issues. New mining machinery and improvements are frequently illustrated and explained in a manner to be of great value to all interested in mining.

As a scientific and mechanical representative of the Pacific coast it is decidedly popular, and a standard journal with the most thrifty industrial people of the Pacific States and Territories. Its authority is of the highest order, and its usefulness in its special sphere unrivalled.

Every public library, mining engineer, metallurgist, mining operator and intelligent mechanic and manufacturer, will find profit by its reading.

THE PACIFIC RURAL PRESS,

AN ILLUSTRATED

AGRICULTURAL HOME JOURNAL.

Among other Reasons for Subscribing are the Following:

Because it is a permanent, first-class, conscientious, able, and well conducted journal.

Because it is the largest and best agricultural weekly west of the Rocky mountains

That Patrons may be reliably informed on the progress of the Order in this and other fields.

That more farmers' wives and children in their rural homes may be cheered by its weekly visits, laden with its pleasing, yet moral reading, and sound instruction.

That a more extended interchange of views and opinions may be had among farmers, upon all the great questions touching their mutual interests and progress

That the agricultural resources of the Pacific States may be more wisely, speedily and thoroughly developed by an open and free discussion in our columns.

That all the worthy industries of our State may be advanced in connection with that of agriculture, our columns being ever open to the discussion of the merits of all progressive improvements.

That the RURAL, after having been read and pondered over by the home circle, can be filed away for future useful reference, or forwarded to the old Eastern friends of the Atlantic border, in aid of an increasing immigration to our sunny clime.

Subscription rates, $3 per annum when paid in advance. Please invite your friends to subscribe. We will send free sample copies for circulation and further information on subscription, etc., on application.

A REMARKABLE RECORD FOR SAFETY.—It is very easy to make an assertion, but it is not always easy to prove it. This, however, is not the case in the present instance. When it is said that the New York, Penn. & Ohio railroad has a record for safety possessed by few, if any, railroads in the country, the assertion is not made as an idle boast, but can be borne out by substantial proofs. But one passenger has been killed in the history of the road, and that was through no fault of the company. It was caused entirely by the person's own carelessness. With this exception not a single other passenger has been killed or seriously injured. This certainly is a remarkable showing when it is considered that it covers a period of 22 years, and is exhibited by a road that forms a part of one of the great trunk lines between the East and the West, over which a large volume of travel is constantly flowing. This record has not been the result of accident; it has been brought about through the utmost care in every department connected with the construction and operating of the road. The building, keeping up and equipment of the road has always, during the 22 years of its existence, been first rate in every particular. Equal attention has also been paid to the personnel. None but the most competent men are put forward as officers and managers, or engaged as employees. Eternal vigilance has been the price of safety, and it has paid in dollars and cents as well as in the saving of life and limb.

PINKEYE IN CHILDREN.—Several cases have recently been reported in at least two different places in California where a disease has been developed in children's eyes which closely resembles pinkeye in horses, and which thus far has baffled the skill of physicians. Chico is one of these localities.

EMPLOYMENT OF MULES IN COAL MINES.—Upwards of 1,700 mules employed by the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Coal and Iron Co's, in connection with mining operations toil underground daily. At many of the mines the mules do not see the light of day for a year at a time, and very often a mule spends ten years of his life underground. The effect of daylight upon mules that have been so long in darkness is blinding. In many instances this blindness is permanent, the shock of sudden light being too great for the eyes; but it is the general rule that the mule staggers around in blindness for a few days, always, however, finding his way to the feeding bin, and taking true aim with his heels. At the end of the week, eyesight returns; he brays with all the vigor of lung for which his kind is celebrated, elevating his tail as an accompaniment. There are, in round numbers, 2,300 mules employed in all capacities by these companies. Many of them are taken up and down on the cage at the mines daily. In an economic point of view, they are said to be 33% cheaper than horses, but that this is offset by the risk run in employing them.

ELECTRICAL GLASS CUTTING.—At present, large glass cylindrical vessels for scientific and commercial purposes are cut during manufacture by surrounding them with a thin filament drawn out from the molten glass, and then cooling them suddenly by contact with a cold substance. A more sure and perfect method has been devised by Herr Fahdt, of Dresden, who surrounds the glass with a copper wire, connected by binding screws with the two poles of a galvanic battery, and made red-hot by forming contact. The rough edges are then rounded off by turning the object round in a blowpipe flame; and, to prevent any unequal contraction of the parts subjected to this action, a slight annealing is effected in the furnace.—Iron.

Inventors on the Pacific Coast will find it greatly to their advantage to consult this old experienced, first-class Agency. We have able and trustworthy associates and Agents in Washington and the capital cities of the principal nations of the world. In connection with our editorial, scientific and Patent Law Library, and record of original cases in our office, we have other advantages far beyond those which can be offered home inventors by other Agencies. The information accumulated through long and careful practice before the Office, and the frequent examination of Patents already granted, for the purpose of determining the patentability of inventions brought before us, enables us often to give advice which will save inventors the expense of applying for Patents upon inventions which are not new. Circulars of advice sent free on receipt of postage. Address DEWEY & CO., Patent Agents, 252 Market St., S. F.

We occasionally send complimentary sample copies of the WATCHMAN to the various officers and members of the A. O. U. W. We ask as a special favor that those receiving them, and all interested in the success of the various Lodges will lend us a helping hand in increasing our circulation. Nothing contributes more to the successful working of the A. O. U. W. than the circulation of general Fraternity news, and the best way to secure this is through the WATCHMAN, which is an able and faithful advocate. It is to the interest of the A. O. U. W. that the WATCHMAN be placed in the hands of every Workman, and to accomplish this we must rely in a large measure upon the voluntary efforts and subscriptions.

Liberal inducements will be offered to active and reliable members who will canvass for subscriptions. Sample copies will be mailed free on application to Workmen, all of whom are invited to endeavor to assist in extending the circulation of the WATCHMAN.

Let every Workman into whose hands this notice may come, if not already a subscriber, fill out the subscription blank below, enclose two dollars, and send it to us for a year's subscription.

Man.

Our scientists have long been greatly troubled to find a definition of man that will clearly and absolutely discriminate him from all the rest of the animal kingdom. Some writers, like Carlyle or Victor Hugo, who like stunning definitions, have called him the tool-handling animal, the only animal that laughs and cries, wears clothes or cooks its food. We humbly suggest that there are a few qualities usually overlooked, that ought to enter into the generalization of this curious creature, though they may not be very pleasant to contemplate.

For instance, man is the only animal that kills for the sheer love of killing. The tiger or lion kill to satiate hunger, but man will hunt for useless game, and shoot, snare and torture, prompted by the exquisite pleasure of taking life.

Man is the only animal that chews for the pleasure of chewing. The cow chews her cud, but this is in conformity to the law of nutrition, but man chews gum or tobacco as an amusement. We would not be so cynical as to cast any ugly reflection upon this habit, but we claim the liberty of calling attention to the fact that man is the only animal that chews without any regard for the law of nutrition. He chews just for the fun of chewing, to keep his molars in exercise between meals. The power to expectorate, or in the common vernacular to spit, is a part of a wise and beneficent economy of Nature to help him in case he should get a fly in his throat, or happen to be sea-sick, salivated, or have a tooth pulled; but the man who lives in obedience to physical laws will not avail himself of the spitting privilege more than is absolutely necessary. But man, by the help of gum or tobacco, has been enabled to spit all the time, and what was an unpleasant necessity has been elevated into a perpetual delight. So wonderfully has this power of spawling from the mouth been developed that we may seriously call this the age of spittoons. They are to be found everywhere, in the halls of Congress, court-houses, cars, parlors, offices and churches. Man is the only animal that swears. And this bad habit it is said, is peculiar only to the western nations. The poet Cowper tells the story of an Asiatic who heard an English lawyer engaged in conversation, punctuate thickly his sentences with the name of Deity, and concluded he was a religious ### Protection.

Perhaps no better symbol of Protection could be suggested, than that of the figure conceive. The helpless, confiding child, dependent for its very existence on its mother, is shielded by her from all harm and to protect its innocent life she will give up her own. The mildest mannered woman will rise in wrath if the safety of her child is threatened. This is a natural feeling of an individual. Our noble Order adopts "Protection" as one of its three watchwords, symbolic of the ægis which it throws over the helpless widow and orphan when their individual protection is no more. Protection is one of the Order's foundation stones, and all the members lend their personal aid in practically carrying out the precepts suggested by the word.

Insurance.

Every man, it may be said, voluntarily creates his own family. He takes his wife, a young confiding girl, from her father's house, under the solemn promise of providing as pleasant a home for her as his abilities may permit. The result of this union is a family of helpless, dependent children. It is a sacred obligation to see that they are cared for. His life and its earnings, present and future, is their only financial dependence. To them it means bread, clothing, education, and protection from want and pauperism. Now take a man at thirty-five years, earning $1,000 a year, and, all sentiment aside, the actual cash value of his life at fifty to his family would be $15,000. That is what they would lose if he should die. This is what they are constantly in danger of losing; and it is against this contingency he should make provision. If he has anything near that amount, apart from all financial risks, he may be said to possess a ready substitute for the money value of his life. But how few can say this? It is then the duty of the head of the family, from his little earnings to provide against this contingency, as best he can, in some other way. How can this be done? There is but one way possible. The loss must be taken from his family, and distributed over a community organized for that purpose. This is the whole philosophy of co-operative insurance, and any prudent, frugal man teacher and a very holy man. We are seriously inclined to believe that a genuine American can outchew, outspit, and outswear any other nationality of people.

of a mother bearing her child in her arms. Aside from the idea of love and maternity that such a picture represents, there is also the purest idea of Protection that we can among the different fraternal Orders, may secure an ample provision for his family, on the safest and cheapest terms that has ever been devised.

Our Old Oak Tree.

[Written by G. W. McGREW.]

About a thousand years ago,
(It might be hundreds less,
For when we can not know a thing
We only have to guess.)
A tiny acorn rattled down
From some old tree that stood
About a thousand years ago,
The monarch of this wood.

The tiny acorn rattled down,
As soft the south wind blew,
To find a leafy hiding place,
From which this old oak grew.
But how it grew, or why it grew,
So crooked, rough, and low,
It has no tongue, and who can tell
What happened long ago?

While seated 'neath thy shade, old tree,
Upon my rustic chair,
The sea breeze rustling through thy leaves
Lifting my silver hair,
I've wondered what thy past could tell,
If such a thing might be,
To weave a sympathetic cord
Between myself and thee.

Thy low bent trunk, deep scarred and gnarled,
Bears record of the past,
Of crushing harm from other trees,
Or tempests fearful blast,
Scarfing thy beauty to the winds
Like leaves before the gale,
Leaving a living monument
To tell its own sad tale.

Thus robbed of beauty, form and grace,
With sprawling head bent low,
Thy very worthlessness has saved
Thee from the axman's blow.
No woodman ever thought thee harm,
So thou hast held the field;
Not one straight stick of four-foot wood
Thy crooked top would yield.

But naught, 'tis said, was made in vain,
I hope the doctrine true;
Some grains of comfort it might bring
To me as well as you.
Despoiled of beauty, not of life,
A mission thou wast given;
Some humble link in that great chain
Which binds all earth to heaven.

Was it with every passing breeze
To sound His praise abroad,
To point the sluggish heart of man
Through nature up to God?
To welcome spring with buds and bloom,
And summer with her sheaves;
To deck the graves of parting years
With wreaths of russet leaves?

To welcome to thy cooling shade,
Through all the summer days,
The meadow lark, thy constant friend,
With all his merry lays?
To welcome to thy heart of oak,
With gnarly hands outspread,
The living things that God has made,
To shelter, board, and bed?

'Twas but last summer, one fair day,
A wandering swarm of bees
Came swooping down to thy low top
Past groves of finer trees:
In thy low rough unsightly trunk
To find an open door,
Where scores of squirrels had raised their broods
Five hundred years before.

Ah! yes, old tree, a mission thine,
I see it now more clear;
A lesson, too, it brings to me,
I have been slow to hear—
That scrubby trees should be content,
And faulty men as well,
To take what comes, and fill their niche,
And try to do it well.

Los Gatos, Cal., Mar. 17, 1883.

HOW LONG OUGHT A MAN TO LIVE. Thurlow Weed, who died the other day, was 85 years old. That in America is regarded as a very old age. It gave Mr. Weed distinction, as much as anything else, in his city. Comparatively speaking, Mr. Weed was an old man, but, in fact, he came nearer living out the measure of his days than the majority of men. There is no valid reason why, under favorable conditions, a man should not live 100 years. All animal life is found to be constituted with a stock of vitality sufficient to run it five times the period the particular animal requires to mature. For example, the horse matures in about five years, and will be dead in about twenty-five; the dog matures in about two years, and will be dead in about ten—and so on through the list; but a man who matures in about twenty years, and ought, therefore, to live 100, is dead, on an average, at 35. The failure of the rule the case of the man does not prove that the rule is not applicable in his case, but simply that he fails to comply with the conditions of life. The lower animals come nearer complying with the conditions than man. Man wastes his stock of vitality, and is bankrupt before his term is half spent. There is nothing dearer to man, it is said, than his life, and yet there is nothing with which he is so improvident and reckless.—Wheeling Register.

A cynical old bachelor, in a controversy with a witty lady, said, "At all events, madam, you must admit that woman was one step in advance of man, in original sin." "Yes," she replied, "that is so; but man soon exhibited his boasted 'superiority,' and having caught up with woman he has never since labored under a similar disadvantage."

The Lovestyle's Silver Wedding.

[Written by F. H. ANGELO.]

It was a proud day for the Miss Lovestyles when their new house was finished. It was a prouder day when they exchanged the simple cottage which had been their home for so many years for the more pretentious abode, with its frescoed ceilings, wide halls and spacious rooms, but the proudest day of all for the trio of maidens was when they followed each other through the house, and said, with a sigh of relief, "Thank goodness, we are fixed at last. Now we can rest for a while."

A visitor glancing in at the parlors would have noted with delight the artistic fitness of things, little dreaming that the graceful window draperies were the work of the Miss Lovestyles' skillful fingers, that the handsome and unique furniture and ornaments had, in some instances, been fished out of the debris of the attic, procured at auction sales, second-hand stores, and out-of-the-way places; that seemingly worthless articles had been cleansed, polished and upholstered by hands which were remarked for their whiteness and softness in refined society. No one would have dreamt of the bargains which had been struck over remnants of costly material, which showed to the best advantage as lambrequin, screen, or chair covering; how old evening dresses had been turned to account, and scraps of velvet, lace and ribbon had been converted into dainty specimens of fancy work which adorned table, bracket and wall.

The polished floors in the bed-rooms and halls were relieved by tasteful rugs contrived from the better portions of old carpets, or pieces of new, procured at a great sacrifice from large dealers. Packing cases and soap boxes had by dint of a hammer and tacks, blue cambric and dotted muslin, been transformed into dressing-tables and other pretty articles necessary to a lady's toilette. Everything showed what three young women, with more brains than money, could do when they tried, and they felt repaid; although the eldest sister had said, "Thank heaven, we are through, even if it is all a delusion and a snare!"

When the tired lines had smoothed out of their faces, and their bruised fingers so often punctured by needle or tack, and discolored by staining materials, had recovered their whiteness and suppleness, they began to think of other things dear to their hearts. They must give lunches, teas and parties. It would be expected of them now. But although they had an abundance of glass and chinaware, there was a paucity of silver, which was a serious drawback. Heretofore they had depended on the kindness of neighbors for cake-baskets, fruit-dishes and other necessary articles. Now, that their entertainments would be much more frequent, borrowing must be dispensed with.

They knew that their father would be financially embarrassed for some time to come on account of the building expenses, and they had spent all they could in furnishing the house. Still, they could not make a good appearance without silverware. How could they obtain it?

After much debating over the matter, the eldest Miss Lovestyle electrified her sisters by telling them that she knew a way out of their difficulty. "We must give pa and ma a silver wedding," said she, with a decided nod of her head.

"Penelope!" shrieked the second Miss Lovestyle. "How can we, when they have been married thirty years?"

The youngest sister said nothing; she was simply speechless with astonishment. A white lie she did not mind, but such a black one as that suggested by Penelope completely took her breath away.

"My sisters," said Miss Lovestyle, in an airy tone, and with a graceful gesture as though she were clearing away all obstacles, "Do we not live in a world of shams and artifice? Will it be the first time that a silver wedding has been given a few years over date? I think not. If we, as filial daughters, wish to honor our parents in this manner, who can oppose us?"

"But how can it be done?" queried number two, dubiously.

"Nothing easier, my doubting Millicent. We will prepare notes of invitation, so worded that there will not be even the shadow of a fib lurking about the commas or the periods. No allusions to back dates or wedding anniversaries, or anything else that had better remain secret and which only concerns ourselves. Here is one I have drawn out hastily."

The Miss Lovestyles invite you to a Silver Wedding given by them to their dear parents, Thursday evening, February —, 188—.

R. S. V. P. No Presents.

"Nora, is there anything to offend in that?" "Why, what is the use of asking people if they are to give nothing?" asked the third sister, finding her tongue at last.

"I can best answer you in the words of Joey Bagstock, Pauline. 'Strategy, my boy!' You see, we ask for a response. In this way, we know how many to expect. Always catch your fish, my dear, before you prepare to fry them. Now, girls, I want your earnest attention and co-operation whilst I unfold my plans."

While Penelope is explaining her wishes to her sisters, it may not be amiss to describe them more fully.

The eldest was a beautiful blonde, and single, because she was not willing to marry a man of moderate means. She looked like a girl of eighteen, and her attractions were so numerous, that many admirers followed in her train. The other sisters, three and five years her junior, although interesting and handsome young women, were completely thrown in the shade by Penelope's greater wit and beauty; that is, among their gentlemen acquaintances.

The three ladies were favorites in general society, for they could sing, play, dance and talk well; but although they were witty, good natured and sparkling, and the light of every gathering they attended, they were not without their detractors. It was whispered that the Miss Lovestyles never had any birthdays. Some people declared that they were older than they claimed to be. Many traps were set to catch them, but they were always on the alert, and proved that with all their accomplishments they were not without some mathematical ability.

"You were very young when you left school?" some curious friend would say to Penelope.

"Yes, I was seventeen," she would answer, smiling charmingly.

Probably a week or two after, some one in league with the first questioner would remark: "My dear Miss Lovestyle, you are remarkably youthful for a lady who has been in society for several years. May I ask how long it is since you left school?"

"Seven years," answered the beautiful Penelope with apparent unconsciousness.

"I never omit the sign of addition in my mind," she said to her sisters. "Show me the woman, my dears, who likes to discuss her age."

The paternal Lovestyle was a large, portly man, with a broad, mild face. He was very deaf, and would smile upon his daughters, and say, "Ah, yes, yes!" to everything that was said to him, but as they had tongues of their own, which they were fond of using, his silence was golden. They were proud of his good looks, and occasionally employed him as an escort. Mrs. Lovestyle was a meek-faced little woman, who had lost her identity in that of her children years before. She was their patient and willing slave, and was rarely seen in their company, either at home or abroad. She gave one the impression of apologizing for presuming to be related to them.

We will now return to the sisters. Penelope explained her plans in so satisfactory and glowing a manner that Millicent and Pauline gave their cordial sympathy, and invitations to the number of eighty (particular pains being taken to select people of means), were sent. They were overjoyed when the responses returned, and they found that, with a very few exceptions, they were accepted.

"You see, my loves," said Penelope, "what those magical words, no presents, have done for us. We are going to have a crowd, and with tact on our parts, enough silver to start us all up in housekeeping. Strategy must now come to our aid."

Mrs. Downes was the Miss Lovestyle's greatest friend and adviser, and as she was quite a belle at parties, she wished to shine at theirs in a shrimp-colored satin. She was trying to decide what ornaments she would wear, when Miss Lovestyle ran in one day.

"I just stepped in for a moment as I didn't like to pass the house, to tell you how glad we are that you are coming to the silver wedding."

"Of course, I am coming," said Mrs. Downes gleefully. "I am getting the loveliest dress, and Charles has given me one hundred dollars for extras."

Miss Lovestyle was delighted. She knew she would eclipse all others, as she always did (herself excepted.) Mr. Downes was the model of a good husband, so generous!

"Yes, Charles said I might just as well spend the money on myself, as no presents were expected." Here, the lady paused, ashamed that she had betrayed her selfishness, so she continued in a coaxing tone. "But I would have loved to give a present, you are such dear friends. I really felt disappointed over it."

"I knew you did," answered Penelope with becoming artlessness. "And Mrs. Downes, we would not take it amiss from you. My sisters and I were sensitive as we were getting up the party, and we don't believe in the indiscriminate giving and receiving so common at such affairs. But, Ma would not offend you or any other dear friend by refusing to accept a gift."

Miss Lovestyle did not wait to see the effect her words had made. She wisely took her leave; and Mrs. Downes was so angry that she cried as soon as she was alone. She blamed herself for being unguarded, little thinking, at the time, that she had fallen into a net which had been spread for her.

The sisters lost no opportunity of dropping a word in season. Each one had learned her lesson and chosen her victims. Every evening found them together exchanging experiences. Some of their friends had escaped being trapped by asking, as a favor, that they might be allowed to give some substantial expression of their regard. These were the exceptions, and the mention of their names threw the Misses Lovestyle into paroxysms of admiring tenderness. Such friends were "ducks, darlings, and dear little pets." Others, who plainly stated that they were going to the silver wedding because it was a pleasure to find that nothing was expected of them, were "hogs, brutes, and miserly wretches, who were too mean to live!" The greater portion, however, were people who had to be "brought around;" or, to use Penelope's words:

"We must clear the cobwebs from their clouded brains, my confederates. Not with honest, outspoken English, but with the subtle, almost imperceptible touch produced by tact, simplicity, and innate cleverness. In short, we must employ Major Bagstock's weapon—strategy!"

It was employed, and so skillfully, that the one whose brains had been cleared, wondered that she had been so stupid as to allow two words in the corner of an invitation card to so blunt her senses as they had done; and so it chanced that when Mrs. Smith talked over the silver wedding to her friend, Mrs. Jones, it happened strangely enough that they both intended to give presents.

It would take a large volume to recount the hopes and fears, the pinching and contriving of household expenses, the furbishing and renovating of festive costumes, the Misses Lovestyle went through with, preparatory to the event which was to show to the world the interior of their new house. They, their mother, and Tang, the Chinese servant, had beaten eggs, frosted cakes, and prepared fancy dishes until they were nauseated with the sight and smell of sweet things. They had thought of setting tables for the guests; but Penelope, who was "as wise as a serpent," did not favor this, although she admitted that they could make use of some of the expected silverware.

"When people get seated at a table, they never know when to get up again, and we might cook from now until doomsday and not satisfy their wants. They do not eat a third as much when things are passed around. They are afraid of soiling their clothes, and anxious to get rid of their plates."

We need not say this lead from Penelope's experience was heeded and followed to the letter. At last the day dawned which was to bring either joy or disappointment to three ambitious young women, who, as their name implied, loved style. "From early morn till dewy eve" Tang's celestial hoofs were clattering through the hall. The Misses Lovestyle had become so snappish and irritable over their preparations that the almond-eyed follower of Confucius, the personification of dogged meekness, but as the spirits of the damsel arose as each installment of silverware arrived, he became hilarious in his turn, and exclaimed:

"Oh, Misses! Heap pleasant! Cost heap dollars!"

Mrs. Lovestyle rejoiced with her daughters. She felt for once that she could be pardoned for the relationship, for was not every package sent to her address, with compliments?

That night the house was ablaze with light, and the company poured in. Mr. and Mrs. Lovestyle, appropriately attired, stood together at the end of the parlors. Their daughters fluttered about them with filial devotion, while the compliments and hand shakings were going on, and, by their wit and beauty, made ample amends for their mother's temerity and their father's deafness.

But, how tearful and modest in their demeanor were the sisters when the room was thrown open where the silver was displayed! "Every one has been so kind," they said in tremulous voices; "and it was such a surprise to us."

Many of the guests were touched and felt repaid for the money they had spent. But one lady eyed the Misses Lovestyle with a stony stare—it was Mrs. Downes. She wore her shrimp-colored satin, but the foamy lace which was to have accompanied it, had taken the shape of an ice-cream service. She had been brooding over her chagrin until she had allowed certain unpleasant suspicions to lodge themselves in her mind, which were verified when she beheld the glittering mass of silver ware under which the large dining table, figuratively groaned with its load of splendor.

Mrs. Downes thought of her dress as she looked at the guests crowding each other in their attempts at reading the cards which accompanied the gifts, and glancing back at the parlors she saw Mr. Lovestyle wandering about in an aimless way, while his wife was sitting rigidly on the sofa with her hands clasped in her lap, apparently in fear that she might infringe some rule of etiquette if she stirred.

"A very pleasant affair, Mrs. Lovestyle," said Mrs. Downes, seating herself beside the supposed bride of twenty-five years. "Your silver wedding is a decided success. I hope you and Mr. Lovejoy will live to enjoy your golden one."

"Ah, yes, yes," answered the gentleman in blissful ignorance of every word that was spoken.

"I don't know much about such things," said his wife. "Do they have golden weddings?"

"O, yes, indeed, and diamond ones also. Seventy-five years is a little too long to wait for diamonds, I think," said Mrs. Downes, brightly; "Charles and I will celebrate our wooden wedding soon; that is the fifth anniversary, you know."

"Dear, dear!" said Mrs. Lovestyle, thawing out in her guest's easy company. "We never heard tell of such things when we were married, thirty-two years ago."

The daughters, by the way, had not thought it necessary to post their mother, as she was no talker, and so painfully shy that there was more fear of her saying too little than otherwise.

Mrs. Downes had gained a point, but she was too politic to show the interest she felt, and she fanned herself for a time before asking the question which was uppermost in her mind. She did not like to be precipitate, but she saw that others were tired of being pushed and crushed in the dining-room and were on the point of returning to the parlors. So adopting her most admiring tone and manner, she made her venture.

"How radiantly beautiful Penelope is this evening! She looks younger than her sisters. Was she your first child, Mrs. Lovestyle, or have you lost children older than she?"

"Penelope was the first," answered the mother proudly. "We were married a year when she was born."

Mrs. Downes was the gayest of the gay for the rest of the evening, and it was noticed that every group she approached seemed infected by her spirits by the way they laughed. "So you were sold, too," she would whisper to some particular friend. "It pays to put 'no presents' on the invitations; doesn't it? Ha, ha, ha!"

The jokes went the rounds, until such expressions as these were common:

"Better late than never, you know!"

"A glorious, good sell! It ought to have been kept until the first of April."

"If Miss Lovestyle will sing 'Backward, Turn Backward, O Time, in thy flight,' it will be in order."

"Well, we have found out her age at last."

"How rich they must be in their friends!" Penelope and her sisters were beaming with happiness. "Every one is so jolly," they said to each other, but they could not understand why the mirth languished at their approach. The eldest Miss Lovestyle was able to solve the problem when Mrs. Downes, who was among the last to depart, bade her adieu.

"Good bye, my darling. When you send out your wedding cards don't omit 'No Presents.' Those words have proven a most effectual 'Open sesame' in your case. And, dearest, do not wait for a Croesus; every year counts after a woman passes thirty. Adios."

The finale of the silver wedding was a violent fit of hysterics on Penelope's part. The next day Mrs. Downes' present was returned, and Miss Lovestyle discoursed plaintively to her sister on the hollowness of the world, and the deceitfulness of human friendship.

Household Hints.

JAM FROM TURNIPS AND TAR.—According to the correspondent of a trade journal, it is a mistake to suppose that fruit is absolutely necessary to the manufacture of preserves. He describes a visit to a large jam-producing factory, in which he found that the work was being bravely carried on without the aid of fruit at all. Jams of various kinds were being produced before his eyes—currant, plum, strawberry, apricot, raspberry, and gooseberry. Yet neither currant, plum, strawberry, apricot, raspberry, nor gooseberry was in the building. Turnips served the purpose of the fruit. The flavoring matter was extracted from coal tar, and the resemblance to raspberry and strawberry jam was further produced by mixing the boiling compound with small seeds of some cheap innocuous herb. A common form of sugar is used, and this is the only honest ingredient of the mess. These preserves are offered as made from "this season's fruit."

LEMON PIE.—Juice and grated rind of one lemon; one cup of sugar, one cup of hot water, put on the stove to heat, or put in a tin quart basin in boiling water. Beat the yolks of two eggs with two dessert spoonfuls of corn starch, add this to the water and lemons, let it cook till thick. Cover a pieplate with paste, and bake it; pour in the above mixture. Beat the whites of the two eggs stiff, add a little powdered sugar. Spread it over the top and brown in a hot oven.

SLICED TURNIPS.—When, as is so often the case, it is found impossible to mash turnips so that they are free from lumps and are smooth, do not attempt to serve them in this way; it is much better to acknowledge defeat and send them to the table in slices if the turnips are large, and in halves or quarters if they are small. Put a lump of butter and a little pepper and salt on each piece.

BREAKFAST DISH.—A breakfast dish which is welcome on many tables is made by shaving very thin a piece of frozen beef; heat a little butter in a frying-pan, and when hot put the beef in; it will cook in five minutes; season with salt and pepper, and serve while hot. To vary it you may add one or two beaten eggs to it a minute or two before taking it from the fire.

APPLE-CUSTARD PIE.—Take one pint of sweet milk and one pint of apple sauce; beat this sauce till it is smooth and entirely free from lumps, then stir in the milk; sweeten this well—a good full cup of sugar will be needed, and if the apples are tart more will be required; to this add three well beaten eggs, flavor with lemon and bake with under crust only.

CABBAGE FOR SALADS.—When you cannot obtain celery for salad—and this is sometimes the case—cabbage may be used in place of it, with extract of celery for flavoring, or celery salt may be used; choose the firm, white part of the cabbage, and chop it fine.

Our Boys and Girls.

An Acrostic.

[Written by HARRY L.]

Pray let me propound a riddle,
All you children guess!
Can you tell me what's the paper
I proclaim the best,
For the good it does the people
In the far, far west?
Coming to us every Friday,

Rich with good advice;
Useful to the farmer, housewife;
Read by girls so nice,
And, sometimes, the farmers' boys
Like to read it twice.

Pray, don't be so slow about it!
Really, you must guess
Ere I tell you in big letters.
See! I can't do less!
So the rhyme will be completed.

Millie's Carpets.

Everybody else in the house was fast asleep, but Millie, our four-year-old darling was keeping awake as hard as she could, so that she might see Jack Frost when he came tapping at the window, as Aunt Josie said he always did on a very cold night like this. The little pink toes were nestled deep down in the blanket, and the yellow curls were tossing about as Millie twisted and turned to keep herself awake. She said "Jack and Jill" and the "Five Pond Lilies" over and over again, and at last she thought she would "make carpets," as she had often done before with sister Florie. Florie was fast asleep now, and Millie must make carpets alone. So she shut her eyes tight, pressed her little fat fingers against her eyelids, plunged her forehead into the pillow, and looked to see what would come. First all was dark, and her eyes felt as if they were running away from her; but pretty soon a bright circle of light came, until it seemed to fill the whole world. Inside this big circle were lots of bright-colored little circles, like round mats on the bright carpet. Did you ever see a kaleidoscope? Well, it was something like that, only the carpets were prettier, and did not last so long. Millie only had time to say, "Oh, how pretty!" before this carpet was gone, and another had come, and so on. To-night the carpets were prettier than ever, and she was so absorbed that she had forgotten all about Jack Frost, when something happened that had never happened before in making carpets. The carpet was now bright green, covered with white dots, and suddenly, right in the middle, something began to grow upward. It did not come from the outside, but suddenly popped up right through the middle of the carpet, and began to grow and grow, until, in about three seconds, it was a fine tree, all covered with pink and white blossoms. And now, on the very top of the tree, appeared a little scarlet and black thing, that tossed its head and opened its mouth, as if it would like to swallow the world.

"Oh, oh!" whispered the little girl, "It is a birdie, a booful birdie!" So it was, and singing, too, at the top of its voice, though it was so far away that Millie could only see it sing. But this was only the first of many wonders. Before the birdie had ceased his song, there came running toward the tree a little brown boy and a little pink girl, carrying a bright yellow pail between them. They set the pail down under the tree and began to talk and play together, as Millie knew by their looks and motions. But she could not hear a word, they were too far away, so very far away. The little boy wore a long, brown bib apron, and the little girl a pink-checked frock; and pretty soon the boy took two apples and a doughnut from his pocket, and the girl unrolled a big piece of paper, and found two sticks of candy and a seed cake. They sat down, she on the big water pail and he on the green grass, and ate up every bit. Then they brushed off the crumbs, and, hand in hand, the boy carrying the pail alone this time, they skipped away, off the carpet, out of sight. Where did they go? Millie looked, and looked, but they were gone, and had left nothing behind them but the brown bib apron, which the little boy had dropped when he wiped his sticky face and hands and then had forgotten all about it.

All this time the carpet was changing, much much faster than I can tell. The light green had become dark green, mixed with brown; the pink and white blossoms had fallen from the tree. The bright bird, looking down through the branches, had spied the brown bib, and, flying down, had caught it in his bill, and flown with it up into the topmost branches. Then all at once there were the little boy and girl again, this time bearing a basket of flowers. Millie knew them by their sweet faces, although the pink frock was changed to a long pink gown, and, in place of the brown bib, there was a dark brown coat. She thought they must have come back for the brown bib, and she spoke right out and said:

"Look up in the tree!"

But they did not hear, they were so far away. And the birdie in the tree had made a nest of the brown bib, and it was full of speckled eggs! Slowly the boy and girl walked away together out of sight, and the green carpet changed to brown, and the leaves on the tree grew red and yellow, and began to fall. Then the carpet grew browner; the branches of the tree were bare, and the brown nest looked lonely in the topmost branch. White specks fell over everything, until the carpet became a beautiful white, fluffy mass, out of which the tree stood tall and dark. The brown nest was full of snow; and Millie felt like crying when she saw how cold and lonely it looked, when suddenly a bright light shone over the carpet, and made it sparkle like a carpet of diamonds, and a host of people came running and dancing over it, toward the old tree. Millie saw among them a pink hood and a pair of brown mittens, and then she knew her own boy and girl, though they were muffled in furs and shawls, and their pail was the color of the carpet. Then she saw the rest of the people gather round these two, and hug and kiss them, until they were tired, from very fun and laughter. The carpet of snow seemed to laugh, too, as it sparkled in the light. Suddenly there was a noise overhead, and the brown nest fell to the ground, at the feet of the lady, and the man picked it up and looked at it, and then the lady laughed, and Millie seemed to hear him say, as he held it up to show them all:

"Here is that brown bib apron I lost so long ago! Don't you remember, mother, when we were children?" And they all gathered around, and Mollie wished she could hear what they said. But she couldn't, they were so far away. So she watched them until they went away, and the light went away, too, and she was left alone with the white carpet and the tree. Not even the nest was there now. She grew tired of watching, the carpet did not change any more, and at last she raised her head and rubbed her eyes. It was morning? She had not seen Jack Frost after all, for he had come while she was watching, and had painted his carpets on the window panes. She wanted to cry, but she remembered the beautiful vision she had seen, and then she laughed instead, and running into mamma's room, she cried:

"O, mamma, I did see fairyland! But mamma, it was so far away!"

Health Column.

How to Sleep.

Health and comfort depend very much on attention to matters that to some seem very trivial. We have sometimes heard persons complain that they did not sleep well; that they were troubled with horrible dreams, and arose in the morning weary and nervous. Inquiries as to diet, exercise and other essentials of health have often failed to reveal anything that could account for these unfavorable conditions.

It is not well in these cases to limit our investigations to the routine of a day; but we should inquire at what hour the patient goes to bed, what he thinks about usually, and most particular what position he places himself in to invite sleep? If he lies on the back with his hands over his head, there will be a half-conscious sense of compression of the chest, with difficult breathing, to relieve which he opens his mouth. The air coming in contact with the throat causes dryness, and then snoring will begin. In the meantime the pressure of the viscera on the large artery, whose course is along the inner portion of the backbone, impedes the circulation of the blood, producing discomfort which manifests itself in horrid dreams. Thus the whole night is passed in a disturbed sleep, and perhaps many nights pass without one of refreshing sleep. The most unwise course under such circumstances would be to resort to the use of opium, or any other drug. The ranks of the victims of this unfortunate habit are recruited mainly from such cases as we have described. It is wonderful what control an individual can get over himself if he tries. There is no reason why a person cannot lie upon his side instead of the back, and keep his hands and arms down; then he will not open his mouth; then his throat will not become dry, neither will he snore or have bad dreams. But often he can't help thinking about his business, and his thoughts will run on for hours. This is also a habit that may be broken up. Have the will to put aside your thoughts, and in time you will have the power to do so.

We do not say that there are not other causes that habitually interfere with sound sleep, but we believe there is a remedy for each difficulty, which may be found by seeking for it.—Herald of Health.

CONSUMPTION.—Consumption has hitherto been regarded as a disease of the lungs, which cannot be reached directly except by inhalation, and the value of that form of medication is problematical. A new theory of the disease, called the Salisbury theory, makes it one of unhealthy alimentation. According to this view, it is the fermenting of food in the stomach, which furnishes to the circulation noxious material that affects the lungs on reaching those organs. Granting the truth of the theory, we shall have to consider consumption as curable. All that needs to be done is to use only such food as will not ferment in the stomach, and to clean out the organ occasionally by a judicious use of warm water, with simple tonics before meals to aid the digestive process. A weak solution of ferric per sulphate is recommended for inhalation to check hemorrhage in a severe stage of the disease. The idea is worthy the attention of the many who are disposed to be in the initial stages of consumption.

Worth Knowing.

Useful Facts in Hydraulics.

Doubling the diameter of a pipe increases the capacity four times.

The ordinary speed to run a pump is 100 feet of piston per minute.

To find the area of a piston, square the diameter and multiply by .7854.

Each nominal horse power of boilers requires one cubic foot of water per hour.

A gallon of water (U. S. standard) weighs eight and one third pounds, and contains 231 cubic inches.

A cubic foot of water weighs 62½ pounds, and contains 1,728 cubic inches, or seven and one half gallons.

Circular apertures are most effective for discharging water, since they have less frictional surface for the same area.

The capacity of pipes is as the square of their diameters; thus, doubling the diameter of a pipe increases its capacity four times.

Hydraulics treats of fluids in motion, and especially of water, the machinery and works for raising and conducting it, its action in canals, races and rivers, its adaptation to water wheels as prime movers, etc.

The height of a column of fresh water, equal to a pressure of one pound per square inch, is 2.31 feet. (In usual computation this is taken at two feet, thus allowing for ordinary friction.)

To find the velocity in feet per minute necessary to discharge a given volume of water in a given time, multiply the number of cubic feet of water by 144, and divide the product by the area of the pipe in inches.

To find the pressure in pounds per square inch of a column of water, multiply the height of the column in feet by .424. (Approximately every foot of elevation is considered equal to one-half pound pressure per square inch.)

To find the diameter of a pump cylinder to move a given quantity of water per minute (100 feet of piston being the speed), divide the number of gallons by four, then extract the square root, and the result will be the diameter in inches.

The time occupied in discharging equal quantities of water under equal heads, through pipes of equal lengths, will be different for varying forms, and proportionally as follows: For a straight line, 90; for a true curve, 100, and for a right angle, 140.

To find the horse power necessary to elevate water to a given height, multiply the total weight of column of water in pounds by the velocity per minute in feet, and divide the product by 33,000 (an allowance of 25 per cent. should be added for friction, etc.).

To find the area of a required pipe, the volume and velocity of water being given, multiply the number of cubic feet of water by 144, and divide the product by the velocity in feet per minute. The area being found, it is easy to get the diameter of pipe necessary.

To find the quantity of water elevated in one minute, running at 100 feet of piston per minute: Square the diameter of water cylinder in inches and multiply by four. Example: The capacity of a five-inch cylinder is desired. The square of the diameter (five inches) is 25, which, multiplied by four, gives 100, which is the number of gallons per minute (approximately.)

The best form of aperture, for giving the greatest flow of water, is a conical aperture, whose greater base is the aperture, the height or length of the action of cone being half the diameter of aperture, and the area of the small opening to the area of the large opening is 10 to 16; there will be no contraction of the vein, and consequently the greatest attainable discharge will be the result.

Water in falling is actuated by the same law as other falling bodies; passing through one foot in one fourth of a second, four feet in one half second, nine feet in three fourths of a second, and so on; hence its velocity flowing through an aperture in the side of a reservoir, bulkhead or any vessel, is the same as that of a heavy body falling freely from a height equal to the distance between the middle of the aperture or hole to the surface of water below.

THE MOST DELICATE SCALES.—What is claimed to be the most delicate pair of scales in the world, according to the account given in the scientific papers, the beam is made of rye straw, and together with the pans, which are made of aluminum, weigh only fifteen grains. In the most delicate scale heretofore made the beam and pan weighed 68 grains—the beam being made of aluminum—and the instrument was capable of weighing to the one-thousandth of a grain. This new scale, however, weighs to the one-tenth-thousandth of a grain. A piece of hair one inch long, on being weighed with this wonderful apparatus, was found to represent the almost infinitesimal quantity of one-thousandth of a grain.

THE NEW NAIL MAKING.—We have already, in these columns, made quite full reference to the proposition of the nail makers in Wheeling and Pittsburgh to hereafter employ mild Bessemer steel instead of puddled iron in the manufacture of nails. It is now said that Bessemer steel nails, to do the same work, will not weigh much more than half as much as those made of iron, and furthermore, that a Pittsburgh mechanic has invented a machine that will cut them more than twice as fast as the machines heretofore in use.

Lodge Locals.

Recorders are invited to correspond. Lodges may also find suitable reading here for "Good of the Order."

OUR CITY LODGES.

Bay View, No. 150, South San Francisco.

No. 159 has an interesting meeting each Friday evening. Master Workman Brown is an affable and courteous presiding officer. Three propositions were entertained and candidates initiated during last month. Notwithstanding that the field of Bay View Lodge is limited and is fully occupied by all the other beneficial and relief societies, it continues to advance in membership and will soon reach the 100 mark. It now has on its roll about 80. Bro. Shaw represents No. 159 at this session of the Grand Lodge.

Golden Gate, No. 8.

Golden Gate was the second Lodge organized in the city, and for a time met in the Western Addition, but many of its members desiring to move down town, it was finally decided by a close vote to make the change. It has ever since held its meetings down town, for a long time in Red Men's building, Post street, and since the erection of Shields building, No. 32 O'Farrell street, it has occupied Fraternity Hall, every Thursday evening. It has a solid membership, and notwithstanding its early trials and divisions, is one of the most harmonious and pleasant Lodges in San Francisco. Shortly after moving down town, Fidelity Lodge, No. 136, the second Lodge in the city in point of numbers, was organized by members of Golden Gate. At the time of the change of place of meeting, a number of the members residing in the Western Addition, augmented by a few members of San Francisco Lodge, No. 4, also residing in the locality, withdrew and organized Hercules, No. 53, now a prosperous and growing Lodge. The present Grand Guide is a member of Golden Gate and is always found at its meetings. The officers for the present term are punctual and regular and perform the work creditably to themselves and the Lodge.

Harmony, No. 9.

This old pioneer meets in Washington Hall, 35 Eddy street, and, as a rule, their meetings are well attended. Their membership is now approaching the 300 mark, which it is safe to say will be accomplished this year. This lodge pays sick benefits at the rate of $7.00 per week, and frequently makes donations to distressed and needy brothers. On Saturday evening, March 23, there being no work on hand, an impromptu entertainment was gotten up, consisting of song, reading, recitation and short speeches, that made the evening quite enjoyable. In acts and deeds, Old Harmony is second to no lodge in this jurisdiction.

Magnolia, No. 41.

The affairs of this Lodge have been wisely and carefully managed, and it may be regarded as one of the most prosperous and independent in the jurisdiction. It has from the beginning paid sick benefits of $10 per week, and $50 funeral expenses on the death of a brother. It has paid $600 during the past six months in sick benefits, and has $4,000 to the account of this fund on deposit. During the past six months it has also paid two assessments from the general fund. At a meeting held on the 19th of March a resolution was introduced to amend this resolution to read that no money shall be drawn from the general fund of this body to pay assessments except by a two-third vote, after a resolution to that effect has laid over one week. This resolution came up for consideration Monday evening, 26th, and was voted down, yeas 16, noes 32. This Lodge has 245 members, and initiations occur at every meeting. The Master Workman degree was conferred on two at the last meeting, and three applications received. Master Workman J. Choyinski understands the art of rendering the work in an impressive manner. This Lodge is chiefly composed of young men full of fire and enthusiasm.

San Francisco, No. 4.

This Lodge passed its sixth birthday on the 24th of January last. Although the pioneer in the city, for a long time it did not seem to advance in membership, consequently no doubt, upon the withdrawals from time to time of members to form the nucleus of new Lodges. During the present term, under Master Workman Masbacker, it is growing in popularity. Some of its old members have withdrawn from their subsequent association and returned to the first love. It now has a membership of nearly 200, and in all probability will have 250 before the annual session of the Grand Lodge in 1884. Recorder English is one of the oldest members of the Order in California, having been a member in Indiana, and joining No. 4, on card in 1877. He has been Recorder since August, 1878.

Sts. John No. 73.

This steady-going and conservative Lodge has now a membership of 160, and is in a prosperous condition, although their meetings are not very large, they are always very pleasant and happy.

Triumph, No. 180.

We are pleased to note the continued interest taken by the members of this Lodge in the Order and particularly in their own Lodge. Triumph in the past has, perhaps, shown as much, if not a more charitable spirit, than any other Lodge in the Order. We are constantly hearing of some good deed done by it. The officers are punctual and prompt in their duties. We wish Triumph, No. 180, continued success and prosperity.

Unity, No. 27.

As an evidence of the prosperity of this Lodge on their last meeting night the M. W. degree was conferred on five candidates in a manner that reflected credit on the officers. There was a large attendance of their own members and several visiting members, among whom was Deputy Danforth.

Valley, No. 30.

This Lodge has now 946 members on its roll in good standing, and is steadily growing. It has lost, since its organization, sixteen members by death, and sixty-nine by suspension. Notwithstanding this large membership, this Lodge has always enjoyed the greatest harmony, the debates and interchange of views being conducted with fraternal courtesy. At their last meeting the degree of M. W. was conferred on three candidates, five applications received. It was a very pleasant and interesting meeting, at the close of which, Bros. Loud, Deputy G. M. W.; B. Galland, P. M. W., of Gold Hill, Nevada; E. Black, P. M. W., of Tombstone; Broderick, P. M. W.; J. L. Tharp, Mysell and others, made short, humorous and interesting speeches that filled up the time while the veteran financier, Camp, was making up the assessment roll for 950 Workmen. It is confidently believed that the 1,000 mark will be reached this term.

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

California, No. 1.

There was an unusually large attendance at the meeting of this Lodge at their hall, corner of Seventh and Willow streets, West Oakland, Thursday 22d inst. A number of visiting brothers were present. The Master Workman Degree was conferred upon two brothers by the Master Workman, Joseph Hollywood, in his usual elegant manner. He knows the art of making the work impressive and instructive, an art that should be more fully studied. Past Master Henry Davis of California Lodge, who expected to start in a few days for Oregon, made a very touching fraternal address, in bidding the brothers "good-by." May his lot be cast in a pleasant place. The Overseer of Pacific Lodge, No. 7, Brother Gawkrudgers gave an original recitation that was well received. The evening was profitably and pleasurably spent by all present. California Lodge, is the parent of the Order in this State, and has always been a very exemplary one, thrifty, zealous, and thoroughly realizing the importance of cherishing the fraternal feeling.

Occidental, No. 6.

Friday evening, March 16, this Lodge met at their room, corner of Chester and Seventh streets, quite a large number present. After the close of the usual work, a private musical, literary and social entertainment was given for the enjoyment of the members and their families. A select programme was rendered consisting of songs, recitations, etc. The Master Workman, Brother Munce, made an address, which was given in his original style, touching upon all the benefits of A. O. U. W. intermingling them with many local hits and fraternal facts, in regard to Occidental Lodge, and that the lodge was just seven years old that night, and it had a membership of 200. It was a real family gathering, and any brother who has ever attended one of No. 6's entertainments knows that all had a good time.

Pacific, No. 7.

Thursday evening, March 22d, this Lodge met at their hall corner of Twelfth and Franklin streets, a large number of visitors present, among whom were Past Masters Hollywood of California, No. 1; John Munce of Occidental, No. 6; Gay of Keystone, No. 64; and C. E. Allen, District Deputy of District, No. 2. The Master Workman Degree was conferred by Master Workman York in a very creditable manner, after which the District Deputy very eloquently exemplified the secret work. Every one was glad to be present. Under the head of Good of the Order the Master called on the following Past Masters who severally responded in neat and instructive addresses: Munce, Gay, Easterland, Alden, Britton and others. Brother Britton also favored the Lodge with a song, and the organist, Professor N. L. Lenior, entertained the Brothers with some choice selections of music. It was a happy event and all went home well pleased with their visit to Pacific, No. 7.

EL DORADO COUNTY.

Grizzly Flat, No. 224.

On Saturday, 17th of March, District Deputy Grand Master Workman, Seneca Davis, accompanied by Medical Examiner E. W. Meglone and Past Masters Marsh, Wonderly and Selkirk of El Dorado Lodge, No. 118, visited Grizzly Flat for the purpose of instituting there a Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. The Lodge started with eighteen members, as follows: John H. Fuller, George W. Nail, S. P. Hoskin, W. B. Baker, Silas Vanlesser, Daniel Hansen, L. H. Smith, Frederick James, Antone Martin, Richard Hall, Michael Martin, H. H. McClellan, N. Avansino, W. P. Coleman, J. A. White, George Huff, S. W. Modie, and W. F. West, of whom the Medical Examiner remarked: "It is by far the finest body of men I have ever examined." It was named Grizzly Flat Lodge, No. 224. The following officers were chosen for the current term: Past Master, H. H. McClellan; Master Workman, John H. Fuller; Foreman, G. W. Neal; Overseer, G. W. Huff; Recorder, L. H. Smith; Financier, J. A. White; Receiver, S. P. Hoskin; Guide, W. C. Baker; Inside Watchman, S. W. Modie; Outside Watchman, Michael Martin; Trustees, Antone Martin, N. Avansino, and J. A. White; Medical Examiner, Dr. M. W. Young; Representative to Grand Lodge, H. H. McClellan. These officers were selected with great care, and it is predicted that this Lodge, notwithstanding its ferocious name, will before the end of the term be second to none in the country. At the close of the session, which lasted until after midnight, all hands were invited to adjourn to the dining hall, where mine host, Hoskin, on the order of Past Master McClellan, had prepared a fine supper, and at about one o'clock all departed for their respective quarters, thoroughly satisfied with the night's work and entertainment.

FRESNO COUNTY.

Valley View, No. 208.

Our correspondent at Selma, in a letter to the WATCHMAN, says: This Lodge has had eight applications for membership during the past year. The Lodge is in good working order, having recovered from the effects of the fire which destroyed their hall, furniture, regalia, and everything. Brother H. Bariean, our Master Workman, deserves much credit for his enterprise in erecting the present hall. We had no election of officers in December, as the Lodge only meets on the first and fourth Saturday nights of the month. The old officers, who hold offices now, are H. Bariean, M. W.; S. L. Hoyne, P. M. W.; E. H. Tucker, Recorder; G. B. Sargent, Foreman; J. T. Wood, Overseer; Robert Balding, Financier; L. Cohen, Receiver; E. Henderson, Guide; A. N. Judd, O. W., and T. Elder, I. W. S. L. Hoyne, the present Past Master, was elected delegate to the Grand Lodge, but owing to important duty at home, asked leave to resign, as it was impossible for him to attend. Bro. Geo. B. Sargent, a P. M. W., was then placed in nomination, but he also was unable to attend. The Lodge then chose Bro. E. H. Tucker, who has so faithfully filled the office of Recorder, as a representative. Brother Tucker has not filled the office of M. W., but he probably will in the not distant future. Valley View Lodge, No. 208, is prosperous, has first class material for members, is careful about whom it admits to membership, and is a source of pride to its members. Yours truly,

S. L. HOYNE, P. M. W.

MENDOCINO COUNTY.

Ukiah, No. 33.

The Workmen of this Lodge held another one of their pleasant literary entertainments Thursday evening, March 15th, in Ukiah. Brother H. Price presided in an able and dignified manner. The chief attraction of the evening was the address of Bro. E. W. King, a successful physician of that city, on "The duty of Parents." It was published in the Mendocino Dispatch and Democrat, in the issue of March 23d, and should be read by every parent, and every one contemplating assuming them arital relation. Among the many excellent things we have space only for the following: "People marry not intelligently, as a rule, but as a matter of convenience, fancy or sentiment. No thought is given to the consequences which follow the union of the sexes. Ignorance upon the subject of the transmission of disease; of traits of character; of tendencies to crime, to intemperance, to insanity, to peculiar mental conditions, is a marked feature of the contracting parties who are directly interested. Like the infatuated insect that sees the lighted taper, they feel no fear, because they know no danger. Frequently experience is bought at too great a price. Knowledge comes too late to be of value. It is too often the case that the parents are unfortunately situated and the duties incumbent on the mother are very arduous and perplexing. Each addition to the family adds materially to the difficulty of the situation. Food, shelter, clothing and fuel must be had, and but little time is given to the consideration of those questions involved in the mental and moral training of the offspring which seems less important because less urgent." Bros. Ambrose and Woodward read two very excellent pieces, affording much pleasure. Such public entertainments, given without charge are a source of great pleasure and benefits to the members, and must redound to the permanent good of the Order. Ukiah Lodge has resolved to celebrate its anniversary by holding a basket picnic in the woods, on the 17th of May. This Lodge is prosperous and harmonious.

SANTA CLARA COUNTY.

Enterprise, No. 17.

This Lodge was organized January 14, 1878, with 116 charter members. It has initiated 320 members and now has 270 in good standing. Five have been removed by death, seventeen by suspension, and twenty-eight have taken their cards and joined elsewhere. This Lodge has paid four assessments out of the general fund. Judson Price is the present M. W. The delegates to the Grand Lodge are S. B. Caldwell, J. W. Lowry, George Lendrum, J. P. Hall, and Geo. Featherston, who has faithfully served the Lodge since its formation as Recorder. One of the most pleasant and interesting features attendant upon the institution of this Lodge, was the spirit of friendly emulation it excited. It was the first Lodge instituted with so large a number of charter members. The example was electrical, and Valley Lodge, No. 30, soon started with 211 charter members. This number was believed to be unapproachable, but Oak Leaf Lodge, No. 35, with enthusiastic energy rolled up her charter list to 227.

Mt. Hamilton, No. 43.

This Lodge was instituted August 1, 1878, with 96 charter members, and has at present a membership of 233 in good standing. James Kendall is the present M. W., and gives excellent satisfaction. The delegates to the Grand Lodge are W. C. Vinter, Wm. Offerman, A. B. Hamilton and J. B. Church, one of the Grand Trustees. No finer body of men morally, mentally and physically than compose these two San Jose Lodges, have ever been found associated together in a fraternal Order. Their relations have been friendly and harmonious, provoking each other to good works by a generous rivalry. Both Lodges contemplate a grand excursion to Monterey sometime in May. We hope some good brother will feel the spirit move him to give the WATCHMAN a full account of the pleasant affair.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY.

San Diego, No. 160.

This Lodge, March 15th, gave a complimentary reception and banquet to Grand Master Workman, William H. Barnes and the Pacific Coast Press Association. We learn from the Weekly Union that the party were met at Fall Brook, by Judge J. P. Jones, Master of the Lodge of A. O. U. W. of this city, under whose auspices this reception had been arranged, and arrived here at 7 P. M. After supper at the Horton House, they proceeded to Odd Fellows Hall. The spacious rooms were crowded. Judge Jones introduced Grand Master Workman Wm. H. Barnes, who delivered an eloquent address. A quartette, consisting of Miss Lilla Marston, Mrs. H. A. Chase, Mr. J. H. Carter, and Mr. C. A. Chase, gave a fine song. Mr. Waldo Chase presided at the piano. Grand Master Barnes gave some humorous songs with pleasant accompaniment, until the hour for adjournment, when the party repaired at once to Horton's Hall, where the banquet was spread. After ample justice had been done to the good things provided by caterer Lewis, Judge Jones called the assembly to order, and announced the toasts of the evening. The first toast, "Our Guests," was responded to in a happy vein by Mr. Saunders, of the Woodland Democrat; "Southern Califor-

Official Villainy.

However much we may cheer our hearts and fortify our convictions with the amiable optimism, that everything in nature is ordered for the best, and that in the struggle of life the fittest wins, and that the fittest is always the best and ought to win, we must still confess that our public morality is shamefully low. Compared with what man once was, it may be tolerated, but with what his condition is, in the light of our present civilization, it is simply disgraceful. The fact that there is one eastern city that owes a debt of $120,000,000, of which it is safe to say that at least one half has been stolen by its municipal officers, may be regarded as a specimen page from a large history. Over our national politics, Congressional and State legislation, over public contracts, the handling of public funds, and all fiduciary interests, there hangs a dark cloud of suspicion. So prevalent has official villainy become, that some one made the remark the other day, "If you see a man running across a field, arrest him on the spot, for the chances are that he is a defaulter, or has stolen something."

And this malfeasance and corruption in office is not traceable to the domination of any set of political ideas; for human nature is all cut off the same piece, all blood comes from one puddle, and the average man, whatever may be his political affiliations, will, under the same pressure of circumstances, do the same thing.

One painful fact, explanatory of this state of things, is the almost universal apathy of the masses to the moral character of their public functionaries; indeed, it has passed into a sort of sneaking proverb, that men under congressional or legislative formalities, in caucuses, handling the ropes of an election or dispensing public patronage, may do for themselves, their friends, their party, what, in common business relations and social interchanges, would be denounced as indecent and dishonorable. And what is the consequence? Whisky rings, port trader frauds, star route thieves; all sorts of thieves, torts and laches in office.

The people of Tennessee deliberately vote to reduce their taxes by repudiating the State debt. Is it strange their State Treasurer was tempted to steal the public funds? It has become a recognized rule, among all successful aspirants for office, that the political hacks, the whippers-in, the blowers and strikers must have their reward. Is it strange we so frequently hear of mismanagement and defalcation? It is the way such plausible villains as Moro P. Kay and John S. Gray usually get into official positions. We can expect to see an improvement in political morality only so far as the mass of the people rise above all party feeling, all traditional prejudice, all local and selfish interests, and shake themselves free of all cliques, rings and drill clubs, and join in a generous rivalry to see which side or party can excel in nominating the best men for office, men with the finest brain and culture, and well-known substantial habits of honor and integrity.

Another cause of this laxity in political morality comes from the neglect of courts and juries to rigidly apply the law, and the too great leniency of executives in exercising the pardoning power, especially if the criminal has great political or social influence. The State cannot wait for religion or culture to make men good and honest, for the beautiful results of religion and culture ripen slowly, and the State has no time to lose. Rome did not wait for Cataline to get religion. She banished him. Washington did not wait for England to learn justice toward the colonies. He gave battle at every sunrise. Lincoln did not wait for the evolving forces to soften the heart of the slave master. He issued his proclamation. Law is the first great support of the land, and, possessing the intelligence to enact good laws, we lack the moral stamina to sternly and impartially enforce them. Law is the schoolmaster to train the people toward civilization. Had New York punished rigorously the little beginnings of fraud fifty years ago, it would have been a fiery emblazonment over the doorway to office, warning every man who would enter, that the way of the transgressor is hard.

Such men as Tweed, Hall, Duncan and Dorsey, and the host of wire-pullers, time-servers and political hucksters, who have their consciences for sale, know nothing of right as an abstract principle, as a law of duty whose throne is the bosom of Deity. The statute book is the only guide they recognize, and when it is inadequate or not likely to be enforced, then the school master is asleep, the schoolhouse is closed, and lawlessness and crime have the State for a playground. Shakespeare says: "We must not make a scarecrow of the law, setting it up to fear the birds of prey, and letting it keep one shape, till custom makes it their perch and not their terror."

And what is our Penal Code, in many criminal courts, but a scarecrow that may frighten the poor and timid, but only excites the scorn and contempt of the bold and daring. The chances of escape for wealthy or influential criminals, through the delays of the law, defective pleadings, the conflict of authorities, tortuous construction, the technicalities of evidence, spiriting away or suborning of witnesses, and packing juries, have become so great that the punishment of Tweed stands out in forensic history as a solitary monument. And when such absconding defaulters as Gray are caught and convicted they are rarely ever punished in such a way as to make crime odious, and deter others from committing similar offenses.

Fruit Juices.

There is often a decided objection to the use of our coarsest fruits, especially in sickness, or when the stomach or bowels may be in a sensitive state, on account of the irritation of the angular and sharp seeds, and peel or skin. Like the hull of the wheat—or hulls, as there are five different layers, which should be renant, may prove of great value without sugar, for that is a "heater." These tend to reduce feverishness, though, if too acid, they may irritate the stomach, producing the canker.

The fresh juice of an apple—not fermented juice, or cider—is very appropriate and useful, the apple containing more nourishment than the potato. These juices may be used with great propriety when the appetite seems waning, or when but little food is indicated, for nourishment is obtained without labor.—Golden Rule.

A SCIENTIST ON TIGHT LACING.—Richard A. Proctor, the astronomer, once tried the experiment of wearing a corset, and thus describes the result: "When the subject of corset wearing was under discussion in the pages of the English Mechanic, I was struck," he says, "with the apparent weight of evidence in favor of tight lacing. I was in particular struck by the evidence of some as to its use in reducing corpulence. I was corpulent. I also was disposed, as I am still, to take an interest in scientific experiment. I thought I would give this matter a fair trial. I read all the instructions, carefully followed them, and varied the time of applying pressure with that 'perfectly stiff busk' about which correspondents were so enthusiastic. I was foolish enough to try the thing for a matter of four weeks. Then I laughed at myself as a hopeless idiot, and determined to give up the attempt to reduce by artificial means that superabundance of fat on

The Mission of Labor.

Labor, like everything else, has an end in view. The first aim is to make a living. Man is a feeding animal, and that want is the spur that quickens his latent energies. Hunger drives the savage to hunting, fishing, grubbing for roots, or planting a patch of corn or potatoes. Unclement weather compels him to clean out a cave or hollow log, thatch a hut, and seek some rough material, a skin or blanket for clothing. Civilization began in want. It was born of a sensation, and received its first impulse from the thrill of a nerve. Carlyle poured his fiercest scorn on the philosophy of utility, which he called the "gospel of dirt," and the German philosophers satirize it as a "bread and butter science," all alike and forgetting or ignoring the fact, that their best thoughts have been transmitted in the mysterious alchemy of the brain from pork, beef, potatoes and bread.

But labor has a higher aim than merely to feed and clothe the body, and pick bed and board out of nature, and that is, to improve, idealize and perfect our work. With varied talents, and through diversified agencies, each one is called to work out his mission as a sculptor, architect, author, editor, singer, lawyer, doctor, preacher, farmer, or laborer at some trade or handicraft. But it is a duty that each one owes to himself and humanity, to do thoroughly whatever falls to his lot. It is a manly ambition to make the most of our calling, be it to shape wheel or horseshoe, drive a stage, sew a welt, or twist a whip cracker. Ambition to excel is the spring of all progress in the practical arts and inventions. It is the healthy spirit of emulation that gives us such wonderful improvements in machinery, model farming, fruit raising, live breeds of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, and poultry.

But there is a still higher aim in labor than merely to earn our daily bread, and excel in our special calling and wear the red and blue ribbon at our agricultural fairs. It should ennoble the worker, enrich his mind, sharpen his perceptions, store his memory, regale his imagination, elevate his aims, in short, make him a fuller, riper, better man. The world is a school. Every calling is to some extent a teacher in this school, and if the farmer, mechanic or tradesman does not make his special vocation contribute to his intellectual force and manhood, it is largely a failure. Every form of business has almost illimitable relations, runs into all sorts of complexities. Take farming, for instance; the farmer, in order to thoroughly master his vocation, should know something of chemistry, in its relation to the soil; the various breeds of horses, cattle, sheep and hogs; their diseases, and the best modes of prevention and cure, and a hundred other things in relation to the farm, garden, orchard or vineyard. Every corner grocery is an epitome of the world. The products of all the zones and climates may be found in the smallest establishment—sugar, coffee, tea, salt, fish, etc. Every article opens into an immense avenue of information to any one who would feel intelligently at home in his business. Any one can learn to raise wheat, barley, apples, strawberries, how to fit a boot, cut a coat, shape a hat, weigh drugs and groceries on scales, and pace through the drudgery and routine of each day's work, but only the man who is thoroughly master of his business in all details and relations will feel that sense of manliness and independence, that consciousness of knowledge and power that is always an un-failing source of pleasure and enjoyment.

REPORTS come from Mexico of the discovery, near La Paz, of the largest pearl the world has ever seen. It is of light color and of oval form, one inch in length and three quarters of an inch thick at its shortest diameter, and of surpassing luster. No doubt the oyster was glad to be put out of its misery, for its tenant was too big to be accommodated, and too strong to be dispossessed. For a long time the poor bivalve had been unable to close its habitation. The owner of the pearl says that an offer of a sum less than $50,000 for his treasure would be treated with perfect contempt.

LORD EDMUND FITZMAURICE stated in the Commons that no demand for mediation in the trouble between France and Madagascar has been made, and that the government had no intention to increase the number of British ships in Madagascar waters.

A SCENE ON THE RIVER RHINE moved, in most if not all cases, from the flour—these seeds and rinds are often sources of irritation to the sensitive coats of the stomach, causing many forms of disease, particularly in the hot weather. It is exceedingly fortunate that these juices do not require digestion like the solids; but, like water, enter the system unchanged, there to be assimilated, of course, affording nutrition, with no use of the digestive apparatus, or but slight effort, that of absorption. (If desirable these juices may be prepared at this season, thoroughly scalded, canned like fruit, kept from the air and in a cool place, and used in the following spring, when such are exceedingly valuable, especially for those having debilitated digestion.)

It is very plain that if they demand no digestion, still containing all of the nourishment of the berry, securing rest for the stomach, the dyspeptic, etc., may well use this juice as a substitute for solids, for such a part of the time as will allow rest, time for the digestive organs to recuperate and become sufficiently strong to perform their usual amount of labor.

I will here remark that their use all the time, instead of at the last meal, or when the appetite may be particularly imperfect, would tend to debilitate the stomach, since, like all unused organs, the time would come when it would lose the power of action. As a general principle, the substitution of these for solids for one or two meals at most, using the simplest form of solids, as the raw egg or boiled rice, would be as much as would be advisable, save in extreme cases, when such nourishment for a week or less would be a choice of evils.

Milk should not be regarded as of this class, since it is solidified before digestion. It is not a proper drink between meals, since it requires digestion like solids. When there is much feverishness, with some appetite, the more acid juices, like that of the strawberry or the curwhich only starvation and much exercise, or the air of America, has ever had any real reducing influence. But I was reckoning without my host. As the Chinese lady suffers, I am told, when her feet-bindings are taken off, and as the flat-head baby howls when his head-boards are removed, so for a while was it with me. I found myself manifestly better in stays. I laughed at myself no longer. I was too angry with myself to laugh. I would as soon have condemned myself to using crutches all the time as to wearing always a busk. But for my one month of folly I had to endure three months of discomfort. At the end of about that time I was my own man again."

TO REMOVE GLASS STOPPERS. When, says Dr. Squib, the fixed stopper of a glass bottle resists all management—such as warming the neck with a cloth wet with warm water, by tapping and by the wrench, or by all these in combination—there is another means which will almost always succeed. Let the bottle be inverted, so as to stand on the stopper in a vessel of water so filled that the water reaches up to the shoulder of the bottle, but not to the label. Two or three nights of this treatment may be required sometimes before the stopper will yield.

THE RUBBER PLANT IN MEXICO. Mexico is making a study of the culture of the rubber plant. The hardiness of the plant is said to be such that its culture is exceedingly simple and inexpensive, where the climate and soil are suitable. In much of the Mexican coast region the only expense is the weeding required when the plants are young, to give them a chance to grow and strengthen.

THE new two-cent stamp will bear the profile of Washington.

PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN.

Issued on the 1st and 15th of each month.
AT N 252 MARKET STREET, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Take Elevator No. 12 Front Street.

Favorable to Advertisers

By consolidating the large subscription lists of the Pacific Workman with the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN our advertisers gain an unusually great advantage. We doubt if any one weekly newspaper has ever been circulated to as many different readers on this coast, as have been served heretofore by the Workman and WATCHMAN together. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns cities of the coast.

We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

OFFICIAL RECOMMENDATION.

Resolutions adopted by Grand Lodge of Cal., Feb. 3, 1881
WHEREAS, the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, the pioneer A. O. U. W. advocate on this coast, without official aid, has long rendered able and valuable services for the good of our glorious organization, we earnestly recommend that our Lodges and the brethren individually patronize the WATCHMAN as liberally as circumstances will justify

A Vision.

Mr. Edward Atkinson recently indulged in a rose-colored vision, substantially to this effect: If we can send thought and sound over a wire, and if we can attach to the same post, a wire by which to transmit electric power so that every house may have a time-keeper regulated by an astronomical clock at Washington, and every farmer may keep a small thunder storm on tap in his barn to cut his fodder, churn his butter, split the kindling wood, and do all the heavy work and choring about the premises; in short, if we are to accomplish what is now actually being done in France, that is, operate an electrical machine by a small water power on the farm, and run the plows, harrows, harvesters, and thrashers by electricity—if these things begin to be apparent, that are so bewildering that one gets so considerably mixed up in attempting to describe them that he is not sure what relation his parts of speech bear to each other, why then, perhaps, the millenium of the economist is nearer at hand than it had been supposed—"the time when intelligence and integrity, and a very moderate amount of labor, will insure so good a subsistence that it will not pay to be rich." It ought to make one feel good to know that there are about fifty millions of people in this country, the majority of whom may live to see the dawn of a day when they will all be so well off and happy that it will "not pay to be rich."

WE are pained to learn that Bro. Wm. Helmeth, of Valley, No. 30, met with a severe accident, causing a broken limb. He is improving slowly, and we hope he will be out soon.

Early History and Trials of the Order in San Francisco.

The early history of the Order in this city will prove interesting to the many members who have joined it since 1878.

The first attempt to organize a Lodge was made during the early part of 1876, by W. F. Overstreet and J. A. Calhoun, who as members of another society made frequent visits to Oakland, and from friends who were members of the A. O. U. W., learned of its beneficent features. They did not meet with very encouraging success and abandoned the project for a time.

During the summer and fall of 1876, Bro. E. Lewis, now Senior P. M. W., of Golden Gate, No. 8, and who had joined the Order in Louisville, Ky., had taken up his residence in this city heard of the establishment of the Order in Oakland, went over and saw Deputy Supreme Master Workman Pratt, and began the task of organizing a Lodge—and a task he indeed found it to be. He was successful, however. Bros. Overstreet and Calhoun hearing of the contemplated organization through Dr. Bak, the examining physician, applied for admission to the charter and were accepted. The organization was perfected on the 24th day of January, 1877, with a charter list of twenty, of whom nineteen were present at the institution in the then Anthony's Hall, on Bush street, above Kearny. The Lodge was called San Francisco, and numbered four. The new Lodge held its meetings weekly, but found it very hard to get candidates.

The Workingmen's party movement was then in its incipency. Denis Kearney was speaking to his crowds on the street corners, and when the members of the Lodge would speak to their most intimate friends and urge upon them to join, they would laugh at them and say: "Not much. Do you think we want to belong to that Kearney crowd of Workingmen?" When a disclaimer was put in by the brother, and a copy of the Supreme Lodge Constitution presented, the friend would invariably turn to the preface—"Objects of the Order"—and after reading the articles as formulated by the Supreme Lodge in 1874, would say, "That is the platform of the Workingmen's party."

The following are the objects referred to above. A perusal of them will show that one not a member might easily confound the two organizations:

As American citizens, without reference to nationality, political opinions or religious belief, but believing in the existence of a God, the Creator and Preserver of the Universe, we are proud of our national existence, our universal liberty, our perfect equality and our mutual dependence. In this we recognize the eternal truth, that the interests of capital and labor are identical, and alike demand equal consideration and protection. Our object shall therefore be:

First—To embrace and give equal protection to all classes and kinds of labor, mental or physical, striving earnestly to improve the moral, intellectual and social qualities of our members, endeavoring by wholesome precepts, fraternal admonitions and substantial aid, to inspire a due appreciation of the great realities and responsibilities of life.

Second—To do all in our power to break down and destroy those social barriers now existing between labor and capital, by endeavoring to elevate labor to that high social position it was designed to occupy, by the Great Architect of the Universe.

Third—To place upon a common level employer and employee, and by uniting both in one sacred bond of brotherhood, educating each to that degree of intelligence worthy of his position in life, destroy the relative position of master and servant, each feeling a common interest in the other's welfare, and willing to adjust all difficulties in a manner worthy of the enlightenment of a free country and a civilized age.

Fourth—To examine and discuss all laws and usages, National, State or Municipal, that may tend to create monopolies, or be detrimental to the industry of the country.

The Supreme Lodge at a subsequent session modified the "Objects," etc., eliminating everything that might be construed to have any connection with politics.

Notwithstanding the difficulties which beset it the new Lodge increased in membership, and Bro. Lewis with Bro. Pratt's assistance engaged in the organization of another Lodge, to be located out in the Western Addition. Meetings were held at the residence of Dr. J. W. Blake, and Bro. E. Lewis on Geary street, near Steiner, and at the residence of our late Bro. Ignatz Wisler on Buchanan street, near Post, where the Lodge was finally instituted and met for several months, until Hamilton Hall, corner of Steiner and Geary streets was built expressly for it by Bro. John Martins. This was Golden Gate, No. 8. Bro. Lewis became its first P. M. W. From this Lodge sprang Hercules, No. 53, and Fidelity, No. 136—two of our best city Lodges, as is also the mother Lodge.

While Golden Gate was being organized another charter list was in circulation in the city, and was in the hands of our late Bro. W. T. Bradbury, M. D. It was a question for a time which would be ready first, but Bro. Lewis secured the second place. This third Lodge was organized about two weeks subsequent to Golden Gate in Huddy's Hall, 911 Market street. It was named Harmony, and numbered nine, and now numbers nearly 300 members with a considerable bank account. From this Lodge grew Spartan, No. 36, and Myrtle, No. 42, both flourishing Lodges.

After this came the organization of Berkeley, No. 10, at Berkeley, and the organization of the Grand Lodge on Nov. 13, 1877. Subsequent to the first session of the Grand Lodge came the organization in this city of Yerba Buena, No. 14; Bernal, No. 19; Unity, No. 27; and Valley, No. 30, the first three were on independent charter lists in charge of Bro. M. H. Smith, then Grand Guide and District Deputy, but Valley Lodge was gotten up principally by Bros. Dan. McLeod, and James J. Hayes, of San Francisco, No. 4.

After the organization of the Grand Lodge, the success of the Order was established, and yet there was the same trouble of confounding it with the Workingmen's party of California by many people. The press of the city, through its ignorance of the principles of the Order, and notwithstanding the efforts of members of the Order to disabuse it of the impression that it was connected with politics, would get the "ing" in the center of "Workman" in reports of Lodge entertainments and notices of elections in spite of all precautions, and it is not a year since one of the leading city papers printed the name in that way.

A Representative Journal.

We earnestly endeavor to produce a journal that will be a credit to the noble Order it represents, and it is with some pride that we call the attention of our readers to this number of the WATCHMAN. We flatter ourselves that we are producing a fraternal journal unexcelled in typographical appearance and contents. There is not only good, solid literary food for members of the Order, but interesting matter for the home circle, and information of value to the general reader. We have arranged, also, statistical matter of great use, in a compact and easily comprehended style. The editorials are of a practical nature, and worthy of careful perusal. The illustrations are attractive and well executed, such as no fraternal paper in the land affords its readers. Taken altogether, the WATCHMAN is a first-class paper. Our readers are so used to this, however, that they are apt to forget how good a one they are getting, so the editors and publishers, modest though they be, think it necessary occasionally to call attention to the excellence of the publication. The value of a journal discreetly edited and ably conducted, for any Order, is inestimably greater than that of any number of feebly or indifferently produced journals.

DEP. BROWNLEE instituted Alturas Lodge, No. 222, on March 15th, with 17 charter members, all leading citizens of Modoc county. The following are the officers: N. B. Rine, P. M. W.; A. B. Estee, M. W.; D. F. Mills, F.; H. B. Payne, O.; T. B. Reese, Rdr.; Joe Marks, Rvr.; N. Fitzgerald, Fin.; S. S. Bailey, G.; D. C. Slader, I. W.; A. Gagnon, O. W.

Grand Chosen Army of Workmen.

Massed into one page of the present issue, are the names of NEARLY THREE THOUSAND A. O. U. W. STANDARD BEARERS, comprising the chosen officers of all the Subordinate Lodges of California and Nevada, so far as we have been able to obtain them by reports to this office and the Grand Recorder.

We purpose to send (post paid) to all these officers in the interior, an extra copy of this issue, which we wish them to use to the best advantage possible for the "good of the Order," and increased subscription to the WATCHMAN.

All officers hold important and influential positions, and if any are not already patrons of this paper, we feel justified, by the testimony of officers who have read it, in honestly believing that every officeholder, who is able to subscribe and read it, would be both pleased and profited by so doing. It will certainly prove a real help to officers, as well as members, in discharging their duties and promoting intelligently the highest interests of the Order.

Any officer failing to receive this number of the WATCHMAN, (as a subscriber or otherwise) can have one or more copies mailed free to any address they may choose to send us.

It is by the improved process of the S. F. Photo-Engraving Co. that we are enabled to reproduce in so condensed and novel a form so many names of A. O. U. W. officers. We trust the extra trouble and expense incurred in this and other extra features of this issue will be duly appreciated by all who feel a pride in the excellencies and welfare of our Order.

AMONG all the agencies devised to disseminate knowledge, incite to effort, and inspire laudable rivalry, none is so cheap, direct and effective as a journal devoted to a special association, or kindred group of associations whose interests it seeks to advance. The constant reading of what the members of other Lodges, Councils or Courts are doing, stirs each one to greater activity in keeping alive the fire upon his own altar. It is akin to the beautiful and praiseworthy emulation which exists among the churches.

No obstinate, pugnacious, cross-grained sort of man should ever join a fraternal Order. He will mar the genial intercourse, the courtesy and harmony which should ever characterize every well regulated Lodge. Such a man is never happy only when finding fault, indulging in a wordy contest, giving and receiving hard blows. It was once said Bro. B. is so argumentative that he would dispute with a guide-post about the distance to the next town, and argue with a tombstone as to the correctness of the epitaph inscribed upon it.

THE House of Commons refuses to let Bradlaugh have his seat because he belongs to the Devil. It has recently voted down the bill to give clergymen a seat because they belong to the Almighty. Now this is a queer state of things. The iconoclast who would pull down the Church, and the theologues who would prop it up, are both put into the same boat and sent adrift.

ENTITLED TO SEATS.—We suppose that all P. M. W. remember the fact that they are entitled to sit in the Grand Lodge. They have no vote, of course, but may be present and witness the session. All Past Master Workmen, who are not representatives, are entitled to receive the P. M. W. degree at the Grand Lodge session, on presenting a certificate from the M. W. and R. of their Lodge, under seal. Many will need to be reminded, also, that Financiers, Recorders and Receivers of subordinate Lodges, who have served three years, are entitled to the degree.

THE law of the harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act, and you reap a habit; sow a habit and you reap a character; sow a character and you reap a destiny.

The Inception and Progress of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

It is an old saying that truth lies at the bottom of a well, and is only found by those who inadvertently stumble into it. A weary mountain climber catches hold of a shrub to pull himself up a steep ascent, and curses his bad fate when it gives way, but there are glittering golden particles among the roots of that shrub, and the wonderful mines of Potosi are found. A poor Indian sick and wasted with malarial fever, crept to a spring on the slope of the Cordilleras in which lay the branches of a bitterwood, and slaked his thirst and was cured, and hence the discovery of the value of Peruvian bark as a febrifuge. Thus comes to pass the vision of Virgil, who heard a voice in the ground, when he pulled up a bush to burn upon the altar. A philosopher quits his closet in weariness and disgust, and tries to drown his cares and cool his heated brain in a bath, and the thought occurring to him that his body displaced a volume of water equal to its bulk, he suddenly caught sight of an important law which long study had failed to detect. A swinging lamp told the secret of the pendulum. History will never grow weary reporting how a falling apple in Lord Oglethorpe's orchard threw open to the eyes of Newton, the gates of the universe; a simmering tea-kettle disclosed to Watt the giant energies of the steam-engine, or the accidental touching of a frog's leg with the pole of a battery revealed the mysterious force of animal magnetism.

The truth is shy and hard to find; never reveals its charms to the inquisitive gaze. And yet it always comes at the right time, and to the right man, comes as a flash in the night, as a voice on the silent air. The Protestant clergy seem never to grow weary telling how a poor student carelessly takes down a dingy old book from the library, and a thought dropped out of it which blazed into the Reformation. In like manner, we shall never grow tired admiring the vitality and potency of an Order that has within fifteen years spread from the St. Lawrence to the Gulf, and enlisted under its banner an army of volunteers 116,232 strong, that carries $232,476,000, of an endowment upon the lives of its members, and has paid over $7,000,000 to the families and heirs of deceased brothers. And, yet, the idea that men could join in an organization for such a purpose, with no capital but their mutual promises, no law but their word of honor, no incentive to hold them together stronger than a sentiment growing as a flower upon their graves, was a spontaneous coruscation of thought, a live coal from the altar of inspiration, comparatively new and original among the social forces of the age. The first attempt to give this idea occurred October 27, 1868, in the city of Meadville, Pa., and is known as Jefferson Lodge, No. 1. It happened in the following way: Mr. J. J. Upchurch, a plain, unlettered man, simple-hearted, but gifted with a strong will and good executive powers, had been persuaded to join an organization in Meadville, called "The League of Friendship, Mechanical Order of the Sun," which for some reason lacked vitality, languished a few months, and was formally disbanded. After taking the vote of dissolution a goodly number of the members lingered about the hall, chatted over the many pleasant hours they had spent together, and seemed reluctant to quit the place.

Mr. Upchurch had belonged to several Trades Unions, and became disgusted with all of them. Their intense selfishness made them willing to sacrifice every other interest to build up their special guilds. There seemed to be no sense of fairness towards employers, and ill-feeling was cherished and strikes organized without reason and justice. He brooded over this unhappy state of things for years, until he became so discouraged that he was inclined to abandon everything of the kind, as rotten and unworthy to live; when the thought occurred to him that it was possible to organize an Order that would succeed, based upon a broader and more liberal principle. The idea gradually assumed shape, but had to be laid away for a couple of years, as he saw no opportunity to use it. The thought struck him, now is a good time to launch it. He said, why not found a new Order, and hurriedly outlined his scheme. The suggestion was electrical, and a majority agreed to meet on Wednesday evening of the coming week, and hear the plan more fully developed, and discuss its feasibility. The result was that Mr. Upchurch was requested to frame a constitution and ritual, which were adopted at the time aforesaid, and fourteen members paid one dollar each and took the obligation. As Mr. Upchurch was at that time in the employ of the Atlantic and Great Western Railway Company, nearly all the members were his fellow workmen. The chief object they had in view was to prevent strikes, promote the common interests of capital and labor, the employers and cede withdrew from the association. Mr. Upchurch in a letter to a friend, speaking of this little jar says: "Things looked gloomy. I had no other thought than that it would fail in the start. However I was determined to do my duty, and went to the hall on our second meeting night, November 3d. I was pleased to find seven of the fourteen members still determined to push the good work forward." During the year 1869, still more serious troubles arose among the members of Jefferson Lodge, No. 1, which culminated in a rupture, and the formation of two separate branches, one under the leadership of J. J. Upchurch and the other of W. W. Walker. So bitter was the feeling of distrust and antagonism, that not only was the prosperity, but the very existence of the Order, in danger of annihilation. This quarrel resulted in the formation of two Grand Lodges in Pennsylvania, and the history of the Order for five years is one of struggle, trial and internal dissension. Confidence was seriously shaken, and several Lodges ceased to work. After five years put in three measures of meal had leavened the whole lump. The Order, like the one that came out of Egypt had spread over the land, its branches laden with rich clusters, and thousands of grateful hearts basking in its shade.

But the steady, tranquil flow and expansion of this fertilizing stream was again seriously interrupted. In 1878 the yellow fever swept over several of the Southern States, and a cry of help came from the stricken brotherhood. We inscribed charity upon our banner. We sung charity in our Lodges. We talked charity on the streets. Here was a chance to exemplify the beautiful virtue, and show the world it was something more than a vapid word or an empty sentiment in the hearts of all true Workmen. The Supreme Master Workman called for a contribution of three dollars from each member of the Order throughout the Union, to meet the deficiency consequent upon the inability of the suffering jurisdiction to pay their death losses. The Howard Association was already on the field. Hundreds of noble men and tender-hearted women under its benevolent auspices, at the risk of life and health, had gone as nurses, physicians, and almoners of charity to the fever-smitten cities of the South. Surely no loyal Workman will hold back. It was only a request, a charitable, humane request, for the Supreme Lodge has not claimed the constitutional right to levy contributions under such circumstances, until after the passage of the Relief Law in 1880, but the jurisdiction of Iowa strangely hesitated, higgled, and finally refused to respond to the reasonable request, and seceded from the jurisdiction of the Supreme Lodge. But there were a few faithful souls who have nobly redeemed their State, by establishing a loyal Grand Lodge that is rapidly gathering in the flower and strength of its manhood. The recent effort of a few conspirators in New York to create a schism, was so peremptorily voted down by the recent Grand Lodge, that we may safely assume that all factions and rebellious schemes to disturb the unity, beauty, and symmetry of our structure are forever laid to rest, and we have now the assured hope of its unabated growth and prosperity through all the coming years. Like a mountain spring

"I will murmur on a thousand years
And flow as now it flows."

California Bee Ranches.

The engraving shows a bee ranch in Ventura county, and presents many features common to the bee farms of Southern California. They are generally little nooks of land near the mountains, which give acres of natural bloom, from which the bees gather their stores. They are quiet retreats, where solitude is rarely broken, save by the monotone of the busy insects or the ripple of the mountain stream which flows by the apiary. The picture shows the arrangements common to the practice of bee-keeping on these farms, of which there are hundreds in the counties of San Diego, San Bernardino, Los Angeles, Ventura and Santa Barbara. In a good year, when sufficient rain brings a full growth of the natural bee forage plants, the gathering of honey surpasses bee work in any other county where bees are kept, and brings abundance of money to the patient apiarian.

To Readers.

Will you really sustain our enterprise? Have you seen a better sheet issued for any fraternal society than the WATCHMAN? Are you willing to support an able journal? Will you ask your lodge to countenance the WATCHMAN by official patronage? Will you invite brothers less acquainted with its merits to subscribe? The publication of such first-class issues is expensive. We need the patronage of every intelligent and able Workman.

employees, by bringing them together in the same organization, upon the same fraternal level, where a more intimate acquaintance would beget reciprocal feeling. The importance of insurance, now the prominent feature, was then regarded as merely incidental, and of secondary interest. In this manner was laid the first stone of our magnificent structure. The idea was crude, but it contained the germinal principle of life and growth, strength and endurance.

But the growth and expansion of this benignant principle, has not been without serious disturbance. It seems to be a law that every thing good has to pass through a fiery ordeal, of probation. Trouble began early. There was a clause in the constitution stating that all white male persons over twenty-one years were eligible to membership. The very first morning after the organization a number of members came to Mr. Upchurch, and asked to have that clause struck out, and on his refusal to ac-struggle the combined membership of all the subordinate Lodges did not exceed 1,200. In 1873 a rainbow appeared on the cloud. A better feeling prevailed, and in January, the two Grand Lodges were united in one. The Grand Lodges of Ohio, Kentucky, and Pennsylvania elected representatives, who met in Cincinnati on the 11th of February, 1873, and organized the Supreme Lodge of the Order. The laws and ritual were revised and a more comprehensive policy inaugurated. From that date the real history of the Order begins. The foundation was solid and sure, and so great was its growth in public favor, that at the second meeting of the Supreme Lodge, six Grand Lodges were represented. The years 1875-76, 77, 78, were exceedingly fruitful years, swelling the membership up to 70,000, eighteen Grand Lodges established in the United States and Canada, disbursements reaching nearly $100,000 each month, and carrying an insured liability of $140,000,000. ### Development and Structure.

If there is anything in the Darwinian theory of development and the survival of the fittest, the A. O. U. W. may reasonably lay claim to prospective longevity and prosperity. Its formation was peculiar, and on a plan directly opposed to that usually pursued in the formation of such organizations. It began at the bottom. First was the individual member, Father Upchurch; then more members; then a subordinate Lodge; then Grand Lodges; then the Supreme Lodge. And then the last was first and the first was last. On the organization of Jefferson Lodge, No. 1, in Meadville, Pa., which event occurred Oct. 26, 1868, a constitution and ritual were submitted. Of the former we cannot say whether it was adopted exactly in the shape submitted, but as adopted it provided that when seven subordinate Lodges should be formed then such Lodges should choose representatives to form a Grand Lodge. It also provided for the creation of an "Insurance Department" for the benefit of the members. The business of managing the organization of subordinate Lodges awaiting the organization of the first seven subordinate Lodges was put into the hands of an Executive Committee with power to act. When seven subordinate Lodges were accordingly formed, a convention met and organized a Grand Lodge and evolved a system of insurance from which has developed the more perfect beneficiary law which now governs the immense benefactions of the Order.

It would be interesting to trace the advancement, step by step, made by the A. O. U. W. on the way towards perfection. The road was a trackless one. No pioneer had blazed the way through the wilderness ahead. Progress was necessarily slow, perplexing, and tedious. Many who set out in the beginning became discouraged and turned back in disgust. When the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania was organized it was provided that when three Grand Lodges should be organized, representatives should be elected by the respective bodies to form a Supreme Lodge, but meanwhile the Grand Lodge officers of that jurisdiction should exercise the powers of the Supreme Lodge. This was done, and in the fullness of time the Grand Lodge of Ohio was formed, then the Grand Lodge of Kentucky, and then the Supreme Lodge. It was not the policy of the pioneers of the Order to hurry matters along. They preferred to feel the ground they stood upon as they went along, proving all things by experience, and thrusting aside everything that proved unsatisfactory.

Starting from the people, so to speak, it was but natural that the Order should have been thoroughly imbued with the idea of making its government thoroughly republican in form. It was made more—almost democratic in the extreme sense of the word, giving to the individual parts so much liberty that the bond of unity as a whole was well nigh destroyed. The individual parts in some instances came to regard themselves of more importance than the whole, and hence we witnessed the remarkable spectacle of the tail attempting to wag the dog, to use a homely but happy simile. A few steps had to be retraced to remedy this defect. But the work was done with that promptitude that has always characterized the Order, so that now it seems as if little could be done in the way of perfecting its governmental system.

The beneficiary system of the A. O. U. W. is peculiar to itself, and we believe, far better than that of any other that has yet been devised. It is quite as just, more methodical than any other. It is worked with more ease, celerity and satisfaction than any other. It affords also greater security against the improper use of its funds, and also against the perpetration of frauds on the Order. Its distinguishing points may be thus stated:

1st. All assessments on the membership are levied on the first of the month and at no other time, and the business of the month is closed with the month, in order to be ready for the next. The advantages of this are many, as can be readily seen. At no time in the month can members in general pay their assessments so easily as about the first, and when they are paid they know that no more will be required for that month. Then there is no overlapping, and little danger of forgetting the date of delinquency.

2d. All members are assessed equally without regard to age at admission. This to many seems unjust to the younger members, but the death roll shows it more equitable than any graded scheme yet devised.

3d. Any jurisdiction with more than 2,000 members can, on petition to the Supreme Lodge, be set apart as a separate or distinct jurisdiction, to collect and disburse its own beneficiary fund, subject to nothing beyond except a pro rata contribution to assist some unfortunate jurisdiction that may by chance be burdened with a load that might endanger its life. To determine when such contribution shall be levied each jurisdiction is required to first pay a stated number of assessments of its own before it may be entitled to call for help from the rest. If assistance be called and given, its maximum rate of assessments must continue to be levied on its membership till it returns the money contributed, if three years suffice, if not, then the balance of the debt is forgiven.

On the other hand, if a separate jurisdiction falls below 2,000 members, the Supreme Lodge takes her and her financial obligations back to the paternal fold. Ohio and Kentucky, both at one time separate jurisdictions, have thus returned to the Supreme jurisdiction. Two jurisdictions have invoked the benefits of the Relief Law, so called—Indiana and the Supreme Lodge. The money contributed will probably in a great measure be returned to the contributors. But if not, it will have gone into the homes of the widow and the fatherless to make glad the waste places.

It will thus be seen that in form of government and plan of construction and action there is a striking similarity between the A. O. U. W. and our Nation. It is formed of parts, each of which is in a great measure complete in itself, yet all bound together by common laws for the common interest in order to secure a great fraternal unity.

Who Comes There?

The Knights Templar now occupy a considerable part of the public attention. They are organizing drill corps all over the country, and will soon appear on our streets, richly caparisoned with swords, belts, baldrics and chapeaux, making an imposing array; and every window and balcony, and all the space upon the sidewalk will be crowded with eager spectators. The soldier as he marches under the flag, keeping step and time to martial airs, feels the beat of the nation's heart tingle along every nerve; but what account can these valiant-looking Sir Knights give of all their pomp and pageantry?

The origin of Masonry is shrouded in the haze and twilight of antiquity. Whether it originated in the mysteries of Isis and Osiris in Egypt, or of Eleusis in Greece, or had some relation with the sun and star mythology of Persia, as many think, or originated at the building of King Solomon's Temple, as our best Masonic archaeologists believe, is a matter really of very little consequence. All admit that it is the most ancient fraternal Order in the world, the trunk-principle, the mighty tree; under whose boughs all other secret Orders have sprouted, and drawn their vitality and inspiration. The early Masons were a peaceful class, fond of science and occult studies. Possessing considerable knowledge of the laws of proportion, harmony, symmetry and beauty, and bound together by mystic words and signs they went forth from some central school or lodge, to build the palaces of Kings and the fanes of religion. Their symbols have been found under the obelisks at Alexandria, on the ruins of Karnac, and their cabalistic marks may still be seen on the magnificent cathedrals, the spacious arches, and pilasters of mediæval Europe.

But no dark cloud of myth or tradition hangs around the origin of the Order of Knights Templar. We know its date, and the path it has come. It was the child of war, born sword in hand, and cradled on a shield. Its history begins with the crusades, those tornadoes of religious and military enthusiasm which blew at intervals across Europe for three centuries. At the breaking out of those wars, the sons of noblemen, stimulated by piety, love of glory or adventure, wild, restless spirits who loved martial sports and the bustle and excitement of camp-life, offered their services, and were taken into the pay of the great barons and chieftains. The prowess, the daring and renown of these valiant Knights, have been celebrated in romance, art, poetry and song. Among the numerous Orders that sprung from this form of Knighthood, the Hospitalers and Templars are the best known, and the most distinguished. The Hospitalers, or Brothers of St. John of Jerusalem, or Knights of Malta as they were subsequently called, were instituted in 1040 for the purpose of nursing the sick and wounded crusaders, and consoling the dying. It was the first Sanitary Commission that ever followed the burnt path of war. After being driven out of the Holy Land, they first occupied the island of Rhodes, and then Malta, whence they were expelled by Napoleon Bonaparte, in 1798.

The Order of Templars was founded in 1118. Nine French gentlemen, pious and valiant Knights, bound themselves under solemn vows of charity, poverty, and obedience, and to employ their swords in defense of poor pilgrims on their way to the Holy Sepulcher. Their rigid austerity, their valor and enthusiasm soon attracted the attention of their King, Baldwin II., who gave them an apartment in his palace, near the supposed site of King Solomon's Temple. Hence they became known as Knights of the Temple or Templars. The rules of the Order were prepared by the Council of Troyes, and ratified by the Pope. They were commanded to wear white mantles in order to distinguish them from the Hospitalers. The Red Cross was also prescribed by this Council as a badge of distinction, and was worn over the heart. For many years the Templars lived in great poverty, fed and clothed by charity, and giving all they could spare to the poor pilgrims who had been spoiled by the enemy. So poor were they that two often rode the same horse, and a rough, cheap dagger was all they could offer as a ransom for a captured brother. They were very pious, in accordance with the gloomy asceticism of the day, that believed the Devil was in everything bright, beautiful, and enjoyable, and could only be driven out of human nature by a watery diet, horrid smells and a bad air. The motto upon their banners, "Not unto us, Oh, Lord, not unto us, but to Thy name give the glory," was no empty declaration of self-abnegation. They ate in silence. It was unbecoming a good Knight to indulge in boasting or frivolous conversation. The Evil One was concealed in a laugh or joke, and to kiss even a mother or sister was considered as dangerous to the purity of the heart and desires, as the touch of frost on flowers.

But this rigid, monkish austerity did not last long. The Count of Anjou made a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and became so deeply impressed with the piety and valor of the Order that he joined it; and his example was soon followed by other pious and chivalrous princes. The Order rapidly became the most popular and powerful in Europe. The spoliation of the heathen, and the donation of kings and noblemen made it extremely rich; and the vow of poverty was forgotten. The Templar never lost his courage, but the stout arm which had flashed the sword where the battle raged the fiercest against the Saracen, in luxury and ease, had lost its cunning; and when the Great Saladin mustered his hosts to recover Jerusalem, he won an easy victory at the battle of Hittin. When the crusaders were finally driven out of Palestine, the Templars were the last to yield. They threw themselves into the strong fortress of St. Jean d'Acre, and there fought their last battle for the possession of the Holy Sepulcher, only eight or ten escaping the terrible carnage. The shattered remains of the Order fled to Cyprus, and elected Jacques De Molay, Grand Master, and for a season prosperity smiled upon them, and they again became rich and powerful. But their wealth became an object of envy to Philip IV., King of France, and he persuaded Pope Clement V., a servile minion he had elevated to the Papal See, to suppress them. They were accused of the abominable heresy of Ophidic, Gnostic, and even Mohammedan practices; especially the worship of the Baphomet, a human figure carved out of stone, with two heads, male and female, and entwined with serpents and astrological devices. De Molay was enticed to Paris, and treacherously seized and burned alive. A large number of his followers suffered the same fate. Fifty-four Templars were burned in Paris the same day. With the death of Molay, it was supposed the Order had perished, but he, in anticipation of danger, had appointed John Mark Samienius his successor; and the chain of succession of Grand Masters from him, has never been broken.

The Encampment of Baldwin, established at Bristol, by Richard I., on his return from the Holy Land, preserved the ancient costumes and ceremonies; and this, in connection with one at York, and another at Bath, constitute the original Encampments, from which all the British and American Commanderies now in existence have derived their authority.

The Templars, broken up as a military Order, no longer permitted to poise the lance or join the tourney, or hold public meetings, met in secret places, in caves and glens, and the somber depths of the forest, and agreed to make war upon vice in all its ugly shapes, using their ancient weapons of bloody strife, as the symbols and emblems of a spiritual warfare. The Knight, wearing the cross, wielding his sword in defense of innocent maidens, destitute widows, helpless orphans, and the Christian religion, may come into sweet fellowship with the spirit of the Crucified One, which has been aptly called an "enthusiasm for humanity." As long as the soul lives in the body, it carries about a burning taper that may easily be blown out. The heart should ever be clad in penitential garb, for what is life but a pilgrimage, and are we not all looking anxiously forward to that asylum, that house not made with hands eternal in the heavens. And that must be a very cold, apathetic nature that can stand around the Knightly triangle and join in the ascension hymn, and not feel that life is more than a thought or memory, more than a blossom on the stem of organization; that the soul has powers which sweep beyond the world of time and sense, and carries within it the earnest of a grander destiny.—Fraternal Record.

BRO. GEO. JORDAN, successor to the well known house of Dewey & Jordan, 433 Montgomery street, has long maintained a high reputation as a dealer in Watches, Jewelry and Silverware. A characteristic feature of this house has been to keep first class goods, and sell them on their merits, at a fair valuation. Fine jewelry made to order, and complicated watches repaired. A practical experience of twenty-seven years, and square dealing has given this house a leading position in their line.

THE extensive Agricultural Warehouse and Manufactory of our enterprising Bro., Byron Jackson, Nos. 625 and 631 Sixth St., is well worth a visit. The Jackson Vineyard Harrow, made to rotate either way, has become a State institution that is generally used in all vineyards. The large number of valuable inventions and labor saving machines owned and manufactured by Bro. Jackson has made his name a household word as an inventor of machinery for harvesting our large grain crops.

HON. BONHAM GALLAND, P. M. W., of Gold Hill, No. 2, Nevada, has made our city temporarily his residence. His present business is to introduce the Cabinet Bath, for which he has lately received letters patent. From the favor in which it is received, we believe he has struck a bonanza, and will receive the grateful thanks of thousands for this valuable invention and sanitarium.

BRO. GEO. A. DEAN, of the Pacific Straw Works, No. 16 Fourth street, is prepared to furnish the latest style hat and bonnet frames. Feathers cleaned, curled, dyed; and straw and felt cleaned like new. Parties wanting the latest styles would do well to call on the enterprising proprietor of the Pacific Straw Works.

THE Indianapolis Chair Manufacturing Company, 160 New Montgomery street, of which Bro. F. Rentchler is one of the leading members of the firm, are sending out immense quantities of Furniture and Novelties and new inventions in their line, and at surprisingly low prices.

BROS. FRANK P. LATSON & Co., No. 28 New Montgomery street, under Palace Hotel, as importers and wholesale and retail dealers in Hardware and Builders' Materials. Bronzed Goods, Burglar-proof Locks, Carpenter Tools and Cutlery, have one of the best stocks in variety and quality in this city.

Institution of Subordinate Lodges.

It may be safely stated, without fear of contradiction, that the growth and progress of the Ancient Order of United Workmen is unparalleled in the history of fraternal associations; and probably nowhere has this growth been more rapid and permanent than in California. In 1875 Mr. H. G. Pratt came to the Pacific coast holding a commission as District Deputy Supreme Master Workman, to institute Lodges. The field seemed an inviting one, and with characteristic energy he entered upon his work, and finally had the pleasure of ushering California Lodge into existence, with fourteen charter members. This was the grain of mustard seed in a goodly soil, that has grown within eight years in this State into a membership of 15,300, in good standing, carries an insured liability of $30,000,000, and has paid over $697,698 in assessments. The growth of the Order was unexpectedly slow at first, and the little pioneer band that weekly gathered around their altar in West Oakland, will never forget the first year's trials and discouragements. The press suspected it was a political organization, and for a long time persisted in misrepresenting it; and, then, it took time, patience and unabated energy to convince the people that its sole aim was to promote the moral, intellectual and material welfare of the members, and protect their families from want, when the strong arm of the household was dust. They surmised that it concealed motives of selfish gain, in the interest of a few managers, cloaked by euphemistic words and expressions. But the day of struggle has passed, the Order is now immutably established, and the history of its good works girdles, like a glistening zodiac, the entire land. The following statistical statement of the formation of subordinate Lodges, cannot fail to interest the readers of the WATCHMAN, as the best possible exemplification that can be given of the growth and progress of the Order in this State.

We give the date of organization of Lodges, and by whom instituted as far as could be ascertained. The location and postoffice address of each Lodge may be found by referring to the A. O. U. W. Directory on another page:

Cullings.

The A. O. U. W. is founded on the principles of freedom and equality. It teaches those who enter within its portals that all must meet upon a level, and that it is the internal and not the external qualifications that merit distinction, and that through true worth, all may share its power, its honor and its distinction.

The great point of advantage in our Order over life insurance companies is, that the indemnity we afford is furnished at cost. We have no high priced officers who make colossal fortunes out of their connection with us, nor do we subsidize an army of agents and solicitors. Our plan is simple, our security undoubted.

Associations for the insurance of life are to be ranked among the very noblest institutions of civilized society; and their usefulness can be attested by thousands of happy and independent families, rescued by their means from bitterness of poverty and the degradation of charity.—Ex.

We are more than ever impressed, says the Overseer, with the belief that the Grand Jurisdiction of Missouri should have 15,000 members before the Grand Lodge meets again. If all will work faithfully there is no doubt but what this result can be accomplished.

The second number of the Iowa Workman, the organ of the seceders, shows a deterioration as compared with the one before it. It is hard work to conduct a journal founded for the encouragement of error and injustice.

The New York Independent in all its attacks upon co-operatives, has never said a word against the A. O. U. W. or its system of doing business. The facts are they cannot say anything against us.

The Grand Lodge of Indiana has paid the Supreme Lodge $1,000 to apply on the old yellow fever debt, leaving a balance of $780 due the Supreme Lodge from Indiana. The original debt was over $3,000.

A rejected candidate cannot join another Lodge within six months. Nor can he join another Lodge at any time without the consent of the Lodge in which he was rejected.

A policy of life insurance is always an evidence of prudent forethought: no man with a dependent family is free from reproach if not assured.—Lord Lyndhurst.

Never waste any regrets over any one who allows himself to become suspended, but at once endeavor to seek out some good man to take his place.

One characteristic of our Order must commend itself especially to all, and that is the promptness with which death losses are paid.

Modern Guilds.

In the early days there were colleges of the Roman artisans, whence the Anglo-Saxon guilds which appear to have been either mutual relief societies or associations to meet the expense of the frank-pledge system. Religious guilds were also organized at early dates. The laws of Athelstane mention trade guilds as early as 939. Mercantile guilds followed soon after. They were unions of master craftsmen who carried on business for themselves. As the guilds grew in importance they were frequently united in one general guild or corporation. Similar systems of guilds existed throughout Europe.

These were all organized by special classes for mutual protection. In those days it was necessary of course for them to meet at their halls, and their leaders then told them by word of mouth all that was of interest to the guild. In this way each class was kept posted in what it should know, but the individual had to take some personal trouble to gain the knowledge.

These guilds no longer exist except as represented by trades unions, formed for entirely different purposes. But citizens band themselves together for mutual improvement, progress, and relief, and form organizations which aid in cementing together the different elements of society. These organizations, varying only in detail as to their objects, have spread and increased with wonderful rapidity within the past few years, and still the good work goes on.

It is a peculiarity of modern civilization that the different branches which, as a whole, form what we call "Society," require, for their progress, aid and protection, journals published in their special interest. The railroad men, miners, farmers, mechanics, engineers, grocers, etc., all have their special journals, devoted to their interests. It is no longer necessary to communicate by word of mouth the business in hand. The individual need not trouble himself as of yore. All that he should know his special journal takes care to tell him. Therefore the guilds of these branches are no longer necessary, and the miner, farmer, grocer, and mechanic, all join together for benevolent and charitable purposes, and with a common object in view, form the societies now so well known throughout the land.

And here, again, must journalism come to the aid of society. These Orders must be represented before the public, and the individual members must be kept informed of all that happens or is about to happen to interest them. The names of those in authority, the dates and hours of meeting, social events, results of different workings, amendments and changes, resulting benefits, and all that appertains to the Order appears in the columns.

The WATCHMAN fills its place in so guarding the interests of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Its mission is that of an instructor and historian. It devotes its columns to the "Good of the Order" in every way and, in the manner we have indicated, relieves the individuals of much personal inconvenience. The publishers feel the responsibility resting upon them in this regard, and intend that the paper shall be worthy of the grand old Order it represents, and shall in every way fulfill its mission properly. It only needs the moral and pecuniary support of those in whose interest it is published, and this encouragement all who are able should offer.

BRO. J. MEREDETH DAVIES, P. M. W., of the Jurisdiction of Iowa, representing the loyal portion thereof, has become a member of St. John, No. 73. At their last meeting he signed the roster of membership, which was the occasion of quite a jollification. Bro. Davies has been a Workman for thirteen years, and has always taken prominent and active positions in our Order.

From our issue of March 15th.
Important to Workmen.

The WATCHMAN of April 1st will be worthy of preservation by all members of the Order. The double edition, consisting of 24 pages—some eight pages more of reading matter than usual—well filled with Order news, ought to satisfy the most fastidious that the standard journal of the A. O. U. W. on this coast fulfills its promises of progress and excellence.

To publish a journal of this character, handsomely illustrated and of exceptionally fine typographical appearance, ably edited, with full reports of topics of interest, is no easy or inexpensive task. It is not too much to claim that the WATCHMAN is, in these respects, ahead of any journal published in the interest of a secret beneficial order in the United States.

The edition of April 1st will be special in its nature. Among other things will be given a

Which meets in this city on Monday, April 3d, and the names and numbers of their respective Lodges. A condensed

History of the A. O. U. W.

Since its inception will also appear, with a brief but comprehensive record of the Order on this coast; full "Lodge Locals," general order news, and editorials on timely topics. The illustrations will be varied, attractive and up to the WATCHMAN'S usual standard.

A Special Enterprise.

The full list of officers for the present term of all subordinate Lodges of the A. O. U. W. in California (numbering 223 Lodges)—as heretofore published in our usual sized type—will be photographed down and engraved in miniature form, thus grouping in one page of the WATCHMAN the names of 2,500 officers and leading Workmen of our progressive Order in one solid body.

In addition to our regular large circulation we shall mail postpaid over 3,000 extra complimentary copies of our double sheet to the names of these subordinate Lodge officers, District Deputies, Grand Officers, etc., on this coast, making an immense distribution among a very select class of thrifty, enterprising, business, professional and industrial people.

Samples will also be liberally furnished to visiting brothers at the Grand Lodge. The many thousands of complimentary copies heretofore circulated of our carefully prepared and handsomely printed sheet have surely materially advanced the cause.

We feel no hesitation in asking all Workmen to lend their individual aid in furthering the progress of the WATCHMAN, feeling that in so doing they also materially aid the order. No such journal as the WATCHMAN can be published without substantial pecuniary assistance. In each subordinate Lodge there should be a large proportion of subscribers.

It is suggested that members of Lodges who are not already subscribers, but who wish to become so, give their subscription money to their Representatives to the Grand Lodge. We do not think any of the representatives will decline to take this small trouble. It will afford an excellent opportunity for many to subscribe for the official organ of the order. We shall have a representative of the paper at the meetings, so no unnecessary trouble will be entailed on those who bring subscriptions for others.

If the Master Workmen or Records of the Subordinate Lodges who receive this notice, will, in fraternal kindness and justice, bring this matter to the attention of their members, under "Good of the Order," we shall feel under obligation. We are confident that there are many Workmen who would subscribe for the paper devoted specially to their interests, if the matter was brought properly before them. We hope this appeal will be received in the proper spirit, and be productive of immediate results, since the better support we have, the better can we advance the interests of our noble order.

Orange Orchard Scene.

California is becoming as noted abroad for its oranges as for its production of gold or wheat. There are more people who come here that are inquisitive in the matter of seeing oranges than there are about wheat fields or gold mines. In fact, all of our visitors want to see orange groves. There is a tropical idea about it that makes the residents of northern regions desire to roam through an orange grove and see the golden fruit. Los Angeles is, perhaps, best known for its oranges, but San Bernardino, through Riverside and other settlements, is becoming more broadly recognized. We give an engraving showing a scene in a San Bernardino orange orchard, which illustrates the common features.

A Prospecting Trip.

There are very few old Californians who do not know something about the pleasures and pains of a miner's life. Perhaps there are fewer episodes more hopeful and pleasant than the beginning of a prospecting trip. Our artist has faithfully depicted one of these scenes. The prospectors are having the usual hard job with the animals, which is the lot of green hands. Prospectors nearly always have hard work, and many of them have "hard luck." Still all of us, who have gone through the experience, have pleasant remembrances of the freedom of the prospector's life and its vicissitudes.

Lodges and Societies who are in want of Lodge Furniture, Equipment or Properties, should call on Bro. Geo. H. Fuller, No. 16 New Montgomery street, opposite Palace Hotel, and get prices. He makes a specialty of this business and is the leading house in this city.

THE Tennessee House of Representatives passed a bill Saturday making it a felony to keep a gaming house or establishment of games of chance, such as faro, roulette, monte, etc. The bill will probably pass the Senate.

Letter from Illinois.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Enclosed please find P. O. order for $2 for a renewal of my subscription for your most excellent journal. I would not be without it for twice its cost, and if more of the members would take it the Order would receive a corresponding impetus for good. The Order in this State is "Booming," having accepted during the year ending Feb. 1, 1883, 2,695 members, at an average age of 34 years 1 month and 23 days, and had but 12 assessments. Our great success, we think, lies in the fact that all are enthusiastic and that our State Medical Examiner is guarding the portals care-

Other Jurisdictions.

The Grand Lodge, of Kansas, held a three days session at Topeka, Kan., commencing on the 6th of last month. The reports of Grand Master Workman Sheen, and Grand Recorder Forde, show a marked increase in membership since the last session, and a good financial condition. Some important changes in the law were made, and a proposition favoring graded assessments was most unanimously defeated; lack of space prevents our publishing the proceedings. The officers for the next term are as follows: Grand Master Workman, M. Ezekiel; Grand Foreman, P. L. Donnelly; Grand Overseer, B. L. Brush; Grand Recorder, E. M. Forde; Grand Receiver, G. W. Katzung; Grand Guide, L. A. Mulholland; Grand Watchman, H. A. Warner; Grand Trustee, W. H. Mead; Grand Medical Director, H. Humfreville. Adjourned to meet in Topeka, in February, 1884.

The Fraternal Censor of March 15th, has what is considered a good portrait of William G. Raines, the newly elected Grand Master Workman of the A. O. U. W., of the State of New York. The Censor says: "That he is a large-hearted, splendid fellow, and personally as popular as professionally he is successful. He has a lovely home, blessed by the presence of four charming children, his wife being an estimable lady whose maiden name was Miss Ada E. Varney. He will no doubt make an efficient and successful executive officer of the great Order to whose head he has been elevated, it being generally remarked at the late convention that he presided with signal ability, fairness and good judgment."

The Grand Lodge of Minnesota and Dakota commenced at St. Paul, on the 6th ult., the session lasted three days and was characterized by harmony. The following are the newly elected Grand officers: Grand Master Workman, C. H. Roberts, of Rochester; Grand Foreman, D. E. Vance, of Winona; Grand Overseer, E. H. Stevens, of St. Paul; Grand Recorder, Wm. Cheney, of Minneapolis; Grand Receiver, J. J. McCarty, of St. Paul; Grand Guide, W. S. Branch, of Dakota; Grand Watchman, H. F. Burch, of Wadena; Grand Medical Director, Talbot Jones, M. D., of St. Paul; Representatives to the Grand Lodge, A. L. Levi, J. M. Nye, T. H. Pressnell.

The following is a correct list of officers elected and committees appointed at the Fourth Annual Session of the Grand Lodge of Texas, held at the city of Houston, Feb. 13, 14 and 15, 1883: W. S. Robson, G. M. W.; LaGrange, J. K. Ashby, G. F.; Fort Worth, J. H. Shepherd, G. O.; Shreveport, La. W. P. Cole, G. Record; Hempstead, J. H. Taylor, G. R.; Marshal, W. Holt, G. G.; San Antonio, J. R. Cummings, G. W.; Austin, P. S. Wren, G. T.; Galveston, C. C. Burke, State Medical Director; Texarkana.

The Grand Master of Illinois, reported 29 new Lodges instituted during the past year; also an increase of 2,500 members at the average age of 36 years and ten months. There are 236 Lodges in the State, with a membership of 11,809. Our membership is larger—by about 2,500—than last year, and yet our death losses have decreased 35 per cent. and our assessments have three less than those of last year.

It is a fact that in twenty-seven years forty-five old line companies collected the enormous sum of $877,577,307, and paid out for death losses during the same period only $213,326,566; and that sixty-five such companies have been swept out of existence since 1864, taking with them $101,420,235 of the people's money, and leaving behind them 276,182 broken promises.—U. B. Journal.

Of the 113 rejections in New York last year, 19 were on account of the general physical condition of the applicant, 31 because of family history showing a tendency to consumption, 14 on account of hemorrhage of lungs, and 49 for other reasons. Only six rejections were on account of intemperance. In New York, as elsewhere, the greatest risk is in taking in consumptive applicants.

There is to be a grand reunion of all the A. O. U. W. Lodges of Illinois, held in Chicago, next June, in which the Select Knights, will participate, and a handsome banner, costing $300, will be awarded to the best drilled Legion. The A. O. U. W. numbers over 12,000 in Illinois.

The Grand Lodge for the Province of Ontario has 6,084 members in good standing. The session of the last Grand Lodge cost for mileage and per diem over $2 200.

The Ohio A. O. U. W. Journal, of March 17th, has a fine portrait and brief biographical sketch of Supreme Recorder, Brother Sackett.

A. R. HENDRICKS.

Grand Overseer G. L. of Ills. Sterling, Ill., March 6, 1883.

RECEPTION OF THE GRAND MASTER AT LOS ANGELES.—The Weekly Mirror says: "The reception Saturday evening, March 17th, to W. H. Barnes, Grand Master Workmen of the A. O. U. W., by the fraternal societies and citizens of Los Angeles, was the most pleasant, as it was the most entertaining, of any occasion of the kind known in Los Angeles. Masonic Hall was well filled with fraternal citizens, a large number of ladies being also present. The feature of the evening was Mr. Barnes' speech. He reviewed in brief the history of the many fraternal societies of the United States; dwelt upon the benefits of such organization and displayed his master mind in his array of facts and figures relative to the several fraternal societies. He illuminated his remarks with flashes of wit, and drew from his store of anecdote to the great delight and entertainment of his appreciative audience. Scarcely twice in a lifetime will one hear an address so fitting such an occasion, so full of instruction, so pointed and convincing as to the merits of the Order of which he is the head. Mr. Barnes is a man of great magnetism, whose every sentence is full of meaning and worthy of attention. At a late hour the assembly broke up, all feeling that a happy and enjoyable evening had been spent."

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through Dewey & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

WATER-WHEEL BUCKET.—Charles D. Smith, Amador City. No. 272,592. Dated Feb. 20, 1883. This invention relates to a new and useful bucket for water wheels of that class which have their rims formed with, or have bolted or secured thereto, flanges or buckets, which receive the impact or force of a stream of water under pressure. The invention consists of a hollow or chambered bucket, provided with a central opening to receive the water, and separate and distinct discharge opening at the ends through which to discharge it outside of the plane of revolution of the wheel. The object of the invention is to utilize the entire body or stream of water by so receiving and directing it as to avoid all splash, and cause it to exert its force to the best advantage. The object may be better seen by a brief reference to the points to be observed in the construction of wheels of this class. In the formation of these buckets or flanges, two main points have heretofore been considered. The first is the impact of the stream, and the second is discharge. A good surface may be presented to the water, but the bucket may be so constructed as to hinder its discharge, which, by not being readily freed, retards the progress of the wheel. In like manner, the buckets may free themselves easily, but may not receive the stream to the best advantage. To these two points a third may be added—namely, the splash. No matter how readily the buckets may free themselves, there must be more or less splash on account of the force with which the water is directed upon them, and this splash not only takes away from the resulting or continued force of the water, but is an actual hindrance to evolution. In the construction of this bucket, this inventor claims that he gains all the advantages described in receiving and discharging the water and avoiding all splash.

SAW MILL CARRIAGE.—Casper Schoch, Truckee, Placer Co. No. 274,227. Dated March 20, 1883. This invention relates to new and useful improvements in traveling carriages, and automatic block-sets for saw mills. The improvements consist generally in a novel means for reciprocating the carriage and regulating at pleasure the length of its travel, and in a novel means for setting over after each cut the block or timber for a new cut. More especially the invention consists in a double rack upon the carriage, an adjustable spur gear adapted alternately to enlarge either directly or indirectly with each of said racks to advance or return them, a trip lever to which said spur gear is attached, and suitable catches engaging therewith, and stops to trip the catches, whereby, at the end of each stroke, the trip lever is vibrated to throw its spur gear in and out of engagement with the racks; further, in a pawl and ratchet mechanism operated by a swinging arm engaged indirectly by a weighted lever, and moved by its fall when released at the end of the return stroke of the carriage, whereby the block or timber holder is set over for a new cut; further, in the adjustability of certain of the catches and stops, whereby the stroke of the carriage may be lengthened or shortened. The object in this invention is to provide a ready and effective means for automatically reciprocating the carriage and setting over the block, and to dispense with the weight which is ordinarily used to return the carriage.

PORTABLE TANK AND PUMP.—Nicholas Vize-lich, Stockton, Cal. No. 274,060. Dated March 13, 1883. This is a combined portable tank and pump. It consists in a tank of peculiar construction, mounted on low wheels and having combined with it, and inserted within it, force pumps at each end, the whole machine being adapted to be drawn from place to place. Under the tank is a small furnace. One of the most important uses of this device, and that to which it is more particularly intended to be applied, is an insect destroyer and exterminator. It can be filled with the compound necessary to sprinkle the plants and trees, and be wheeled among them with ease and the liquid thrown upon them. The furnace and upright flue may be made to keep the contents warm. If the liquid be of such a nature as to injure the plants if left upon them, some of the compartments may be filled with it and some with pure water, which latter may be used to wash off the plants. If the device is used in cold weather, the liquids may be warmed, and when the trees are sprinkled with it the insects may be induced to come out, when they may be destroyed.

TWO-WHEELED VEHICLES.—Geo. W. Dalton, Tomales, Marin Co., Cal., assignor of two thirds to L. Guldayer and M. L. Murphy, of the same place. No. 274,183. Dated March 20, 1883. This invention is intended to overcome or prevent the unpleasant motion which is usually transmitted to the seat of two-wheeled vehicles by the joggling motion of the horse. There are certain details of construction to provide a vehicle which will be easy on both horse and driver. The axle and shafts are connected together by coiled springs, coiled in opposite direction. The body is made to hang down as low below the pivoted line as possible, giving it stability by force of gravity. This is done by clipping the side spring below the axle, by regulating the length of the iron shafts on which the body is hung to the ends of the spring bars, and by making a recess in the bottom of the body. The body has such stability in this position by force of gravity that the side springs, the front and rear springs, the shackles and the double coil springs, connecting each shaft with the axle, yield sufficiently to save the body, and prevent it from receiving any of the unpleasant motion it is desired to avoid. The shafts when connected with the axle by the coil springs, do not by their up and down motion cause the axle to rock as they would if they were immovably fastened to the axle; and the body is so connected with the axle by intermediate devices that by reason of the character of such devices, by reason of the position of the body, and by reason of the coil springs connecting shafts to axle, the up and down motion of the shafts is not communicated to the body.

TWO-WHEELED VEHICLE.—Henry D. Page and Wm. E. Raynor, San Bernardino, Cal. No. 274,217. Dated March 20, 1883. The essential feature of this invention is that the shafts or thills, instead of being one single, rigid piece throughout their length, are severed at a point forward of the wheels, and near, or even beyond, where the front part or edge of the foot rest should naturally come. The severed ends of the shaft overlap some little distance, and are connected by a hinge or knuckle joint formed in any suitable manner. The effect of this divided and hinged shaft is said to prevent the action of the forward part from being transmitted to the after part and thence through the axle to the body.

STEAM COOKER.—Anna Sherman, Alameda. No. 273,901. Dated March 13, 1883. This vessel for cooking purposes is especially adapted to be used in connection with a tea-kettle for producing the necessary heat. It consists of one or more containing vessels, fitted vertically, and having a central tube projecting from the bottom, and also extending up into the vessel, so as to form an annular chamber around the tube within the vessel. Around the lower part of the tube is a flange, which supports the device, and forms a cover for the kettle below. Perforated gratings are fitted to the annular space, and bridges across the top of the tube serve to support other vessels within the outer one.

RAILROAD SWITCH.—Wm. McCall, S. F. No. 273,865. Dated March 13, 1883. This invention relates to certain improvements on the construction and operation of street railroad switches. It consists in the formation of the switch rail, or an attachment to it, by which the passage of the car is made to change the position of the rail, so that a car will be directed upon either branch of the track. There is a double inclined, arrow-headed plate secured to the bottom of the rail at the point and running in a recess or channel, so that its inclined sides may be acted upon by an arrow from the passing car to force it to either side, and thus direct the car to the desired line of rails.

GAS MACHINE.—Garritt P. Judd, assignor to Henry Phillips, S. F. No. 273,852. Dated March 13, 1883. This invention relates to certain improvements in that class of apparatus in which gas is produced from naphtha, gasoline, and similar substances for heating or lighting. It consists in certain novel combinations of parts. The object is to thoroughly saturate the air in passing through the machine, with the vapor of the naphtha or gasoline, and then to remove the surplus liquid, so the resultant gas will burn readily. Foraminous chambers are placed in a receiver, and the air passes through them to the discharge pipe.

If Prof. Kolbe is to be believed, an atmosphere of carbonic acid gas will preserve beef sound and in flavor for some weeks, but mutton treated in the same way turns offensive in the short space of eight days.

Tramps.

With the warm days and beautiful weather, comes the old complaint from all parts of the country of annoyance from tramps, and a revival of the question, what shall we do to check this stream of able-bodied vagrants and bums. The tramp is a very old stager in the world, and his footsteps may be traced along the ages from the vigorous laws enacted against his vagabond habits and ways; and old statutes, as far back as the fourteenth century, denominates them "able-bodied, sturdy and valiant beggars," and prohibited any one of this class begging of the town where he had last resided for three years, as this would diminish the number of impostors by limiting their tale of woe to ears that could know how true or false it was. A statute of Henry VIII whipped the "sturdy and valiant beggar" for the first offense, cut off the tip of the right ear for the second, and for the third transgression he was liable to be indicted for wandering, loitering and idleness, and put to death as an enemy of his country. During the reign of Elizabeth, the penalty was reduced to a long service in the galleys, or banishment on pain of death if they returned. We give these citations from an old statute merely to show how formidable the question of trampdom looked in an early day to all friends of good government.

What should be the attitude of the State or municipal legislation upon this subject, may require the long and patient study of our wisest minds to reply. An old code in a harsher age may whip, maim, burn and banish the vagrant, but our milder and more humane civilization, should be as eager to save the idle and reform the vagabond, as it is to educate the ignorant and reclaim the thief and drunkard.

But one thing is clear, that feeding the able-bodied tramp at the back door of our homes, or preparing free lunches and soup houses for the idle classes of our cities, or giving them money, is no part of a wise and judicious system of benevolence; unless a pestilence or a fire, flood or earthquake creates a temporary demand for that form of beneficence. Idleness and trampdom breed vice and crime, and whoever out of a soft-hearted charity feeds this class helps to foster a greater evil.

It is also clear that it is the first duty of the government to protect the good and industrious citizen from this army of idlers, strolling vagrants, and lazy, dirty loafers who now infest the land, and render home an unsafe place for life, virtue or property. The home in the country is no longer the castle where the mother and children feel safe when alone, but has become a place where the sight of a rough lout along the road, or hanging around the premises, creates a boding fear, and fills the night with terror. He must be fed and lodged, not from a feeling of tender charity, but from the timid apprehension that if turned away he may burn the house, barn or grain stack, or in some other violent way seek revenge for the non-payment of the tax he levies. Now, a proper regard for the social welfare and civilization will love and protect their homes more than it will the personal liberty of the tramp; and hence, out of regard for the public good, and also for the welfare of the vagabond, will desire some means of promptly putting a stop to his prowling and wandering about the country, or burrowing in the city, and compel him to learn the pursuits and habits of industry. A philanthropy which feeds these swarms of idlers and vagrants, bums and old sots, and which forgets the sacredness of all the homes in the country and towns and cities, is not a charity worthy of the least respect. It may quote its usual platitudes about casting bread upon the waters, harboring angels in disguise, and the like, but it is merely a form of charity that hatches serpents' eggs, and that may turn into rapine and murder.

Then we owe a duty to the morals of the present and future. Each adult beggar may be training a family in vice. This is especially true of the idle and mendicant classes about our large towns and cities, who often send their children in rags and dirt, with well-practiced lies upon their lips, and the charity which helps to feed these paupers helps to increase the statistics of vice and crime with the advancing population. In Italy and Spain, where the rich and well-to-do have been in the habit of scattering coin among the lazzaroni for centuries, the streets and roads swarm with beings who never think of doing a day's work. Tramps begot tramps, and out of the realm of trampdom comes a harvest every year of lazy loafers, drunkards, pimps, bawds, hoodlums and criminals.

There can be no doubt that the chief cause of trampdom is laziness. Man seems naturally averse to work. Industry, like learning or a taste for the beautiful, is an acquired virtue. It is a cultivated plant, and not a weed. All savage people are lazy. They will not stir themselves, only to get a little food, and, once gorged, seek sleep and idleness. And hence, as the streams of beggars and tramps flow from the swamps and bogs of indolence, stupor, shiftless habits and lack of ambition, it has been suggested that it might be at least a partial remedy to provide in every city and county, or a group of counties, a farm, and shops for all kinds of work, where the idle could find employment at reasonable wages, and where the tramping vagabond should be compelled to labor for his own support, and perhaps acquire habits of industry. There may be no feasibility in the suggestion, but there can be no doubt about the fact that such beggars and bums as we have described are public nuisances, and should in some way be removed from society. A century which has brought so much light into the world ought not to be baffled by this problem, and let this evil grow till it curses our land like some of the fairest portions of Europe.

Mothers and Daughters.

Said one dark-eyed woman to her neighbor, in the public conveyance which accommodated a throng of passengers:

"She had completely effaced herself for her daughter. Everything is done to accommodate Helen and Julia, and Mrs. — is superseded. It don't seem just right to me that a mother should be kept altogether in the background."

"Oh," said the sweet-looking lady to whom this was addressed, "self-denial is easy to mothers. What is a mother's life any way but a sacrifice all through?"

I agree with the first speaker. It don't seem right to me that the Helens and Julias, bright, beautiful, bewitching though they may be, should step to the front in selfish absorption and monopolize the best things, while "mother," a pale, colorless, worn-out figure, is wearing old dresses, reading old books, or none at all, seeing few friends, and living a humdrum life of routine, chiefly enlivened by conflicts with Bridget's stupidity and Noah's impertinence. Indeed, it is not right, and Helen and Julia, flashing like butterflies in the sunny morning of youth, would be the last to enjoy their warm and cosy home if they felt that they were responsible for the monotony of their mother's existence. Mother is herself the person most to blame. For self-denial is easy indeed to a real mother. From the hour when her nature first overbrimmed with the tidal rapture which sweeps full-blooded into the heart that cradles a babe, through the weary, watching hours of teething and whooping-cough, mumps and measles, on through school days, and vacation days and courting days, the mother's life is poured out and given incessantly for her children. So it should be in a sense. In every child the mother renews her youth, and each son and daughter is an addition to the home wealth.

But some of you mothers, to whom I am talking, carry your self-sacrifice so far that you forget that you have any life of your own, for which you are responsible to God. You spend your strength so freely and so recklessly during the years of children's childhood that you have no elasticity, no resources, no health left to spare by the time they are grown up. You so devote your skill and talents to the material side of the house that you have no time to keep up with the current of the world's thought, or to grow up intellectually with your young people. Many a good woman suffers her religious life to droop and languish because in her thoughtless giving up of every moment of time and of every remnant of nervous force to the daily demands of her household, she has absolutely no opportunity left for sitting at the Master's feet. Society is not, in our cities, given up so wholly to the young as it was a few years ago. In fact, there can be no social success where only the crudity of early youth appears on the scene. Older people who bring to the front the tact, the experience, and the knowledge which they have gained through the years, must mingle in the social gathering if it is to be witty, brilliant and attractive. The mothers must be in the van, and the daughters, as befits their age, a little in the sheltering shadow if we are to have the ideal social life growing out of the ideal home life.

I am very fond of the Helens and Julias. I like their sparkle, their vivacity, their esprit, but I do not like their want of consideration for mother, if she is, perhaps, a little old fashioned, a little tired, a little diffident and frightened in the blaze of their splendor. True and tenderly-loving daughters will never be contented to let mothers efface themselves, even though self-denial be an easy maternal duty.

THE EFFECTS OF OIL UPON WAVES. In reply to an objection of Admiral Bourgeois that the actual effect of oil upon waves should be fully tested before it is submitted to theoretical analysis, M. G. Vander Mensbrugge replies, that he has shown from incontestable facts that the wind produces upon the superficial layer of the sea, a horizontal motion of translation, which being sufficiently prolonged can communicate to the deeper layers, and can propagate to a great distance, very decided undulations. He has confined himself to a discussion of two cases; in the first, where the calm sea is covered with a thin layer of oil and is then submitted to the action of the wind; in the second, where the waves break. In the first case the formation of great waves is rendered impossible by the presence of the layer of oil. In the second, a simple calculation shows that the layer of oil exerts a great resistance at the base of the breaker, and thus compels it to extend itself and to subside very rapidly without producing severe wave shocks.—Comptes Rendus.

VEGETATION AT THE POLES.—The retreat of vegetation from the polar regions is attributed by M. M. Rey de Morando to the gradual decrease of the diameter of the sun. He thinks that the greater center of our system was once large enough to send its rays at the same time over both poles.

Supreme Lodge History.

The Supreme Lodge, A. O. U. W., has held ten annual sessions in different cities of the United States, namely, Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Indianapolis, Covington, Chicago, St. Louis, Nashville, Boston, Detroit, and Cincinnati.

The first session was held at Cincinnati, Feb. 11, 1873, three States only being represented—Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Kentucky, with four representatives each.

The Lodge was called to order at 10:30 A. M., and W. W. Walker, of Pennsylvania, was elected the first Supreme Master Workman, and W. H. Comstock, of Pennsylvania, Supreme Past Master Workman. The session lasted five days.

The second session of the Supreme Lodge was held at Pittsburg, March 10, 1874, W. W. Walker, S. M. W., presiding, and lasted five days. At this session six States were represented, with about twenty-seven duly elected representatives, and sixteen Past Grand Master Workmen. The following were the States represented: Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Iowa, New York.

The third session convened at Indianapolis, Indiana, March 16, 1873, with R. D. Handy, of Kentucky, Supreme Master Workman, and continued five days. Six States were represented at this convention, the same as before mentioned.

The fourth session took place at Covington, Ky., March 21, 1876, J. M. McNair, of Pennsylvania, having been elected Supreme Master Workman at the last session. Six States were again represented, Indiana having been suspended and Illinois admitted.

The fifth annual session was held in Chicago, from March 20th to 28th, 1877, C. Shryock, of Kentucky, succeeding in the office of S. M. W. At this session ten States were represented.

The sixth annual session took place at St. Louis, Mo., March 19, 1878, and lasted six days, thirteen States being represented. Samuel B. Myers, of Pa., S. M. W. At this session the total membership reported was 35,886.

The seventh session was held in Nashville, Tenn., March 18th to 27th, 1879, M. W. Sackett, Pa., holding the office of Supreme Master Workman. At this session eighteen States were represented. Total membership as reported, 62,493.

The eighth annual meeting of the Supreme Lodge convened at Boston, Mass., March 16, 1880, and lasted eight days, John Frizzell, of Tennessee, having been chosen S. M. W. at the last session. At this session were represented twenty States, including Ontario, Canada. Total membership reported, 78,414.

The ninth and last annual session of the Supreme Lodge took place in Detroit, Michigan, June 7th to 14th, 1881. S. M. W., Roderick Rose, of Iowa. At this session twenty-one States were represented by sixty-one representatives and a large number of P. G. M. W. The total membership was reported at 94,222. Death losses for the year had been paid to the amount of $1,305,887.

The tenth session of the Supreme Lodge convened at Cincinnati, Ohio, June 6, 1882. Twenty-one Grand Lodges, including that of Iowa and the Grand Lodge of Ontario, were reported entitled to representation by sixty-three representatives, not all of whom were present, however.

The following efficient officers were re-elected, namely: Wm. H. Baxter, Detroit, Mich., S. M. W.; M. W. Fish, East Oakland, Cal., S. F.; Theo. O. Case, New York, S. O.; M. W. Sackett, Meadville, Penn., S. R.; S. S. Davis, Cincinnati, O., S. Rv.; R. H. Flanders, Georgia, S. G.; R. M. M. Pat-ten, Ontario, S. W.; J. D. Vincil, Missouri, S. T.

The next session will be held June 5, 1883, at Buffalo, N. Y.

The Grand Master of Texas says: "It is a notorious fact that in beer-drinking districts our death losses come heaviest."

Local Items.

It is reported that a Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen will soon be organized at Elko, and another at Tuscarora, Nevada, probably. The Order is increasing rapidly east as well as west of the Rocky Mountains.

Ashler Lodge, Alameda, A. O. U. W., is organizing a glee club. Apropos—for a more gleeful corps of bright and musical gentlemen it would be hard to find in any community.

Quite an interesting meeting of the A. O. U. W., was held in Jackson, Amador county, last Thursday evening, March 22d, there being quite a number present from Amador, Ione, Sutter Creek, and Volcano, including the Grand Representatives from those Lodges. The meeting wound up as usual, with a "big eat," which was apparently highly relished by all hands.

San Fernando Lodge, No. 214, gave a grand anniversary ball at San Fernando, March 30th. The boys had a good time, danced all night and went home with the girls in the morning.

The San Joaquin Valley Argus of March 24th, says: The Cumberland Presbyterian Church, (Merced), was a scene of gaiety, merriment and boisterous mirth on Monday evening last, on the occasion of the lecture of W. H. Barnes, Esq., representative of the Call and Grand Master of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Mr. Barnes is one of the most entertaining and pleasing speakers on the Pacific Coast. His lecture here held the undivided attention of a large and highly intelligent audience for over an hour.

The A. O. U. W. of Centerville, gave a ball last Wednesday evening.

The Manufacture of Fireworks.

A visitor to one of those case making sheds, in which a good fire may be roaring in an open fireplace, will perhaps be rather startled to notice a number of barrels and jars. The receptacles represent the most modern development of the pyrotechnic art. Dip into this barrel and bring out a little of its contents on the point of a knife and hold it in the dark part of that gas flame. It is arsenite of copper and sal ammoniac, and instantly the light of noon-day is overpowered with blue glare. We make another dip and bring out a little chlorate of baryta, and a dazzling outburst of green is the result when placed in the flame. Here is a barrel of sal ammoniac which is combined with color giving substances to give depth and intensity. Another receptacle holds chlorate of potash, a source of oxygen gas, without a good supply of which fireworks can not be expected to be very bright. Some of the coloring substances are very perilous. If, for instance, a little of a compound of nitrate of strontia and sulphur and potash—the source of the most vivid red color known to chemists—should be left after a display, it is always either fired or buried. It is too dangerous to attempt to store. Fifty years ago colored fireworks were unknown, or nearly so.

The most delicate and interesting feature of modern firework making is the charging of Roman candles. The public like to see these balls thrown out with exactly an equal force so as to play within the same sphere. To secure this, very careful adjustment is necessary. The fiery balls of color are little lumps of composition filled into the case, and separated from each other by a layer of "dark fire," a little charge of gunpowder being just underneath. If all the charges were alike, every ball would be thrown out a little farther than its predecessor. To obviate this, the charge is increased as the tube is filled up. The workman, therefore, has before him a series of little scoops of different sizes for measuring the powder, the smallest being used for the first ball, and the largest one for the ball at the mouth of the tube.

Of all fireworks, the rocket is the most beautiful, and certainly is the most curious in structure. Some of them are said to rise to a height of more than a third of a mile, and this flight is secured by running in very tightly into the rocket case a composition which burns fiercely, and generates very rapidly when once lighted, but has only a very small vent for its fury at the lower end of the case. The gas inside rushes out with such violence that the rocket is driven upwards by it, the tail consisting of the sparks of the fire burning within.—American Inventor.

AN UNALTERABLE FACE.—There is said to be a man in Bellevue Hospital, New York, with a face that never alters its expression in the slightest degree. Something is the matter with the nerves and muscles so that they do not work at all. Not the faintest smile nor the suggestion of a frown ever varies the stolid monotony of his countenance. The features are regular and rather handsome, there being no distortion, or any outward evidence of the affection other than the strange immobility. His name is Henry Stube, but he is called "Masky," because his face is like a mask, behind which he laughs and weeps unseen. He has worn this mask of his for two years. He acquired it after a neuralgic cold. He is being treated with electricity chiefly, and the physicians think he will recover. In the meantime he parts his lips with his fingers for the introduction of food and water, and when he sleeps his eyelids are held shut by a slight bandage. His imperfect talking is done without moving his lips, and when he speaks or listens the impassiveness of his face looks singular, indeed. There is something uncanny about it, and, after the idea has once got into your mind, you can hardly regard this face as anything else than a mask.

ment disclosed by the patent, only in slight changes in construction and arrangements of parts, such a patent is valueless to the owner, as it fails to afford him that exclusive and complete protection guaranteed by the Patent Law. Hence it is that the greatest care, skill and perseverance are required, and that the applicant must be successful in the first instance, and, second, in prosecuting the application before the Patent Office, and maintaining the rights of the inventor to claims as broad and sweeping as the invention will warrant. This latter is no easy task. The Examiners of the Patent Office are men of the highest order of ability, and are in the interests of the public. It is their sworn duty to exercise the greatest care and watchfulness, that patentees do not secure claims of greater scope than they are justly entitled to. It is not unusual that the Examiner will reject an invention, although the inventor is convinced that his invention is new, and that just what scope should be accredited an invention. Therefore the Examiners act under honest convictions in cases where they refuse an inventor his just rights, yet it is the duty of the attorney to take the claims of his client, if he is convinced that they are just, and to present proper evidence which requires the display of tact, firmness and ability; and when the Examiner is made to see that the inventor is honestly and fairly entitled to the claims which have been rejected, he will not that invariably recede from his former action, and allow the case.

Patents Are Virtually Contracts

Between inventors and the public. The consideration flowing from both parties to the contract is expressly fixed by statute. The Government requires the following consideration in every case: First, that an applicant for a patent shall disclose a new and useful improvement, of which he is the first and original inventor. Second, that the invention has not been patented, or published in a printed publication, prior to the date of his invention. Third, that the invention has not been in public use, or on sale, more than two years prior to his application for a patent. Fourth, that the invention shall be properly described and claimed in the specification forming a part of the patent. Provided, an inventor complies strictly with these conditions, the Government guarantees that the inventor shall have the exclusive right to make, use and sell the thing invented for the term of 17 years.

The Patent Law provides that in case a patent, which is the evidence of the contract, is not executed in compliance with the requirements of the law, it may be annulled and rendered void. Hence, it is of the greatest importance to every inventor that his patent or contract be made fully and accurately drawn, described and claimed, and that he obtain complete protection for his invention during the life of his patent.

Advantages to Inventors on the Pacific Coast.

An inventor should first ascertain whether or not his improvement has been patented to another. This requires an exhaustive search among all the patents in the class to which the invention relates. This question can often be answered gratuitously by immediate reply on receiving full information concerning the invention, in return for a long letter from the inventor as patent agent, inventor and editor. I publish lists of first-class scientific and industrial journals during the past 2 years and over. When the question of priority of invention is not so readily to be determined, it is generally best to make what is termed a "preliminary examination," i.e., search the literature of the country, and especially the literature of the class to which the invention relates, and referring to my extensive patent library, containing compilations of special classes of American and foreign inventions, mechanical dictionaries, scientific encyclopedias, files of scientific and mechanical newspapers, and an immense number of lists of inventors, and of the names of the Pacific coast, carefully filed by this office since 1860.

If, by this "preliminary examination," the improvement found to have been previously invented, our client will receive for the small fee of $10 the use of the "Patent Office," and the inventor will definitely liberally be compensated as has been anticipated, thereby saving him further expense and perhaps much time, useless delay, anxiety, etc.

To avoid all unnecessary delay, however, in securing a patent at the first instance, the inventor should submit a full and complete model, drawing, or sketch, with a plain, full and comprehensive description of their invention (stating distinctly what the particular points of improvement are), with $15 as a first installment of fees. If the important points of the patent are not stated, the inventor will be necessary to prepare for an application for a patent will be prepared immediately, and forwarded to the inventor for his signature. When the inventor receives the application and finds it duly prepared, he will car fully sign and return it to the Patent Office, and the inventor will receive a receipt or receipt for our own fee. The case will then be promptly filed by us in the Patent Office, and vigorously prosecuted to secure the best patent possible. This course is the most expeditious and satisfactory, and the inventor will receive the copyright in the invention to the preliminary steps to be taken. When the patent is allowed the inventor will be duly notified, and on sending the final Government fee of $20 to us, we will order the issue of the patent, and forward the same as soon as it is secured from the

The payments are thus divided and made easy. We make no pretence of doing cheap work, in order to entice customers; and we afterwards make a dilatory charge to bring the bill up to a fair compensation. We do not overcharge, but we do not give a cent up as long as there is a chance to obtain a patent. The Agency charge is from $25 to $50, or sometimes more. If the invention is intricate or complicated or requires much labor. Drawings cost from $5 upward, according to their number and the time employed in making them. If a model is required, the cost of the model and its construction must be added. The total cost, in addition to Government fees, rarely exceeds $50, and for this we do all we can without appealing the case.

When the invention consists of a new article of manufacture, or a new composition, or a new use of the separate ingredients, or a new combination of the ingredients, and any of the manufactured article itself must be furnished

Models and Drawings.

Models are now seldom required by the Commissioner of Patents, and generally only in intricate cases. Perfect drawings of practical working machines are considered more satisfactory to the Patent Office than the old and more cumbersome system of storing up an immense bulk of almost numberless models.

Drawings or sketches sufficient to illustrate clearly the invention, with a sufficient description to enable us to make a full set of perfect drawings for the Patent Office is all that we require. A model will answer our purpose as well, however, in cases where the inventor can more easily furnish it for our use.

The value, as even the validity of a patent often depends on the character, clearness and sufficiency of its drawings. There are thousands of existing patents in which the improvements are but partially or very poorly illustrated in the drawings. When an attempt is made to dispose of such patents, the vagueness and defects of the drawings often prejudice capitalists and manufacturers against the invention, while in reality it may be of great value, and would meet with ready sale and attention were it fully portrayed by clear and skillfully executed drawings. Again, many patents of this character are hoarded by inventors, and and ambiguity of the drawings enable the opposing expert to mystify the judges as to the construction or combination of parts intended to be covered by the patent. In all cases prepared by us, the drawings are made under our personal supervision, by skilled draftsmen in our constant employ, and every precaution is taken that the invention is fully and clearly shown by different views, so that the improvement will be readily understood by the Examiners in the Patent Office, and comprehended by the public when the patent is granted.

In the Patent Office

The application is assigned to the Examiner having charge of the class to which the invention relates. The case must then take its turn with others in the order of filing, and in due time is carefully examined to test the novelty of the invention. If the Examiner fails to find any thing that anticipates the invention, a patent is immediately allowed, provided the specification and claims are drafted in proper form. Should the Examiner find a prior patent which, in his opin-tion, anticipate one or more of the claims in the application, a letter of rejection is sent to the attorney in charge of the case; and if the attorney collides with the views of the Examiner, the claims rejected are erased. In preparing applications for patents, an attorney should be careful to familiarize himself with the class of inventions to which the application pertains, so that the specific nature and claims may be drafted as nearly perfect in the first instance as is possible. This course saves much time in prosecuting the application to a patent.

When claimers improperly rejected or patents which do not anticipate the spirit or wording of the claims, proper steps are immediately taken to convince the Examers of their error. This is done, in most part, by personal arguments, as the differences in construction, operation, function, and results are more readily discovered and appreciated by an oral presentation of the facts than can possibly be done by relying solely on written arguments. In order that the Patent Office record of the patent shall be complete, an oral argument is generally supplemented by a manuscript brief, that others

In examining a piece as any future time, may clearly comprehend the position taken by the Examiner and attorney in prosecuting the case to patent.

In addition to our own personal attention to the interests of our clients here we have, for over 12 years past, had constantly in association with us in Washington, one of the soundest legal counselors and ablest of practitioners in patent business in this country, who carefully attends in person to our business at the Patent Office and has attained success in a most marked degree.

Perfect claims

As Dewey & Co. have been in the patent soliciting business on this coast now for so many years, the firm's name is a well-known one. Another reason for its popularity is that a great proportion of the Pacific coast patents issued by the Government have been procured through their agency. They are, therefore, well and thoroughly posted on the needs of the progressive industrial classes of this coast. They are the best posted firm on what has been done in all branches of industry, and are able to judge of what is new and patentable. In this they have a great advantage, which is of practical dollar and cent value to their clients. That is this understood and appreciated is evidenced by the number of patents issued through their SCIENTIFIC PRESS Patent Agency (S. F.) from week to week and year to year.

The value and force of a patent are dependent on its claims. A patent may disclose to the public the most important and valuable invention, and yet the claim be of such meager scope that the patent is actually worthless. When the claims of a patent are so loosely drafted that infringers can flood the market with improvements, differing from the invention

Correspondence.

Brother I. E. Alexander, P. M. W. of Spartan Lodge, No. 36, was appointed a committee of one by said Lodge, to ascertain from Archbishop Alemany, whether the members of the Order would be permitted to wear their badges in attending the funeral of a Catholic brother. We have been furnished for insertion in the WATCHMAN the Bishop's reply:

ST. MARY'S CATHEDRAL,
628 CALIFORNIA ST.,
San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 22, 1883.

Mr. I. E. Alexander—DEAR SIR:—Having taken counsel with those with whom I advise on matters of importance, it seems to me that I can hardly sanction as yet, the wearing of regalia by the members of the A. O. U. W. when attending the funeral of a deceased brother in a Catholic Church. As the Order itself is new, and we are not perfectly acquainted with it, this seems the only proper course to follow—lest a permission granted might have to be withdrawn in the future, which would be unpleasant.

Thanking you for your kindness, I beg to remain, very respectfully,
Your humble servant,

J. S. ALEMANY, Abp.,
Per Sec'y.

A. O. U. W. Financier's Cash Book and Itemized S. A. Report Book.

A Combination of Receiver's Receipts to Financiers, Financier's S. A. Reports to Lodges and Reports of Auditing Committee

(Compiled, Copyrighted and for sale by C. P. Hitch, Paris, Illinois.)

The above two books constitute a complete set for the use of Financiers of the A. O. U. W., and are so necessary for the proper time and labor-saving methodical transaction of Lodge business that every Financier should use them. Lodges, one and all, who have adopted the use of these books are unanimously of the opinion that these most valuable books should be used by every Lodge, in order to make A. O. U. W. bookkeeping uniform throughout the Order. The following Lodges in California are now using these books exclusively:

Lodges Nos. 4, 5, 16, 22, 24, 26, 33, 51, 52, 57, 64, 66, 78, 87, 89, 93, 96, 106, 108, 112, 118, 124, 134, 135, 143, 144, 158, 172, 175, 182, 183, 193, 194, 198, 202, 204, 205, 206, 207, 211, 214 and 219.

Sample sheets of the books have been sent to every Lodge some time since, and Lodges not having the books should, in their own interest, at once procure them. A complete set will be sent to every Lodge for the very low price of $5. Expressage prepaid by ordering of C. P. Hitch, Grand Recorder, Paris, Illinois.

I most heartily recommend the adoption of the above books, and trust that every Lodge in this Jurisdiction will avail themselves of this new and most simple system of keeping their accounts. The "CASH BOOK" will last a Lodge of 100 members six to eight years, and the "S. A. REPORT BOOK" will last Lodges meeting weekly 10 years, and those meeting semi-monthly 20 years.

There is always a little temptation to exaggerate the importance of the special idea or pursuit one represents. The editor of a paper devoted to the interests of the farmer, miner, mechanic, teacher, physician, or scientist, is apt to become so thoroughly baptized with the spirit of its importance as to make it the central idea of our civilization, and hang all others upon it. This heated zeal is natural, does no harm, and, in the long run, rights itself. No doubt all our professional and industrial pursuits are of very nearly equal importance. Each is a gem in the crown of our civilization, and helps to make its composite beauty and brilliancy. The farmer gives the nation bread; the miner digs their money from the bowels of the mountains. Without the mechanic and merchant, the wheels of trade and commerce would rust on the rail, and rot at the wharves. The teacher helps to shape the brain of the coming generation; the physician pilots us through the breakers of disease, and looks after the sanitary condition of the community, and the scientist carries forward the ark of discovery towards the promised land of truth. But our Order, composed of members of all trades, pursuits, and professions, is the brightest star of the group—

Comes as a gentle shape of religion when all other agencies can no longer help. Its beauty is seen, like the rainbow, only when painted on the dark cloud of sickness, sorrow, and death. It embosoms an idea that, like a plant hidden under snow, which, during the ordinary days of life is not seen, but when the strong arm drops lifeless, the manly heart is still, and women and children are wrapt in the profound solitude of silence and grief, then the hidden plant awakens and puts forth its leaves, as if the season of human need, suffering and bereavement were its natural springtime.

A Warning.

A sad case of carelessness and neglect in connection with our Order recently came to our notice. We chronicle it as a warning. A brother Workman who had been a member four years, feeling that the assessments were a little heavy, declined to pay them. His wife, realizing the necessity of such a wise provision, paid them for a short time, and then allowed her husband to be suspended. After the lapse of five months he was taken ill, and sought to be restored to membership, but it was too late. He could not pass the medical examination. His sickness proved fatal, and his family was deprived of $2,000, which they greatly needed.

BRO. J. MEREDITH DAVIES, General Agent for the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, has been a resident of our city for three years. He is known as a prominent and honored member of the leading fraternal societies, and by his general manner, politeness, integrity, and honest dealing with the traveling public, has become a great favorite. Parties desiring information or a trip east will be correctly equipped by applying to J. Meredith Davies, No. 2 New Montgomery, Palace Hotel.—Com.

A New Sweet Compound.

C. Fahlberg, in a paper read before the Franklin Institute, Jan. 17th, furnishes some interesting particulars in relation to his discovery of a certain sweet compound in the hydrocarbon of the coal tar group. He describes the sweetness as being very intense. As soon as he made the discovery he proceeded at once to determine whether it was poisonous to take it in larger quantities or not. At first a cat and then a dog were subjected to experiment, but they remaining alive and apparently not in the slightest degree affected by it, the discoverer decided to take several grammes of it himself. The result was not the slightest inconvenience experienced from it. A chemical test of the urine, made the next morning, showed that almost the entire quantity taken could be thus recovered.

The compound obtained, and which contained the sweet principle forms salts with any carbonate of the alkalies, alkaline, earths or metals, and all of which taste sweet. It is, however, not an acid, but belongs to a class of bodies to which the name "Sulphines" has been given; the compound in question being benzoic sulphide. It is very readily soluble in alcohol, more so than in cold water, in which it only dissolves readily when it is hot. The discoverer says:—"I am making the attempt now to prepare it in larger quantities and by cheaper methods, and have no doubt that it will find extensive use in medicine and for technical purposes. One experiment made was to sweeten glucose, which, as you all know, tastes only faintly sweet, and the result was a complete success. As soon as I shall have found the method by which to prepare it on a manufacturing scale I shall come before you again, and as I trust and hope, with larger samples than now, ready to give answer to all questions in regard to its price, application, etc."

Whittier's Opinion of a Boiled Dinner.

The old-fashioned New England beverage, cider, was mentioned, and Mr. Whittier stated that he at once derived much benefit when unwell, "when nothing tasted good," from the use of cider. Huntington suggested that without cider we should not have vinegar. "Well," said Whittier, "vinegar is not of much use, after all." "Except," replied Huntington, "to eat on cabbage and cucumbers." "Neither of which are fit to be eaten," remarked the poet, "I think it would be a good idea to start a prohibition party on those two articles. As for cabbage, it is not fit to be eaten; if you cook it in the house, you have got to burn your house down afterwards to get rid of the smell; it is certainly the most diabolical smell that was ever invented," said Whittier, who was sitting near the open stove grate, upon the top of which he had deposited his tall hat, folded his hands and laughed a hearty, silent laugh. "What do you think of onions, Mr. Whittier?" asked I. "Well," he replied, "onions are not quite so bad, for you can get rid of the smell of those in three or four days." "Then," said Huntington, "you would not approve of the old-fashioned 'boiled dinner?'" "No! I think that is a detestable dish. I remember that my father used to have it, in which cabbage, onions, beets, potatoes, turnips and carrots, were all boiled up together, and turned out into a great dish all in a heap, with a great greasy piece of meat in the middle. I think that is the reason why the present generation is not so strong as the former. It is owing to the way the parents live, eating so much pork and potatoes. Our last war showed that. The farmers were not nearly as strong as the men recruited in the cities—Portland, Portsmouth, and Boston." "But the people in the cities do not have the free air we get in the country," said Huntington. "I know that," replied Whittier; "but they live better, and that makes a great difference." Harper's Magazine.

A TRIBUTE TO DR. DRAPER.—Mr. Richard A. Proctor pays, in Knowledge, the following tribute to Dr. Henry Draper: "We hear with extreme regret of the death of Dr. Henry Draper, Professor of Physiology at the University of New York. It has followed very soon after the death of his father. In Dr. Henry Draper science loses an honest and zealous worker, one who has devoted time without promise of reward to his scientific work; nay, has expended more money in his free gift of labor to science than some advocates of the Endowment of Research have begged for. The discovery that oxygen, and probably nitrogen, exists in the atmosphere of the sun is due to Dr. Draper, and would of itself suffice to keep his memory green. Scarcely less important, however, was his success in photographing the spectra of stars and planets, of Wells's comet, and the great Orion nebula. The zeal and devotion with which he discussed the photographic methods available for observing the transit of Venus in 1874 were fully recognized by his fellow workers in science, and even, wonderful to relate, by the government."

The distillers of grapes and wine in the Los Angeles Internal Revenue District are 38 in number. Of this amount, 15 have closed up business for the season, and 23 are still going, but are nearly ready to close up.

N. K. S. mothers gain strength by using Brown's Iron Bitters. It acts like a charm in restoring to health and strength overstrained nature.

STRENGTH

to vigorously push a business, strength to study a profession, strength to regulate a household, strength to do a day's labor without physical pain. All this represents what is wanted, in the often heard expression, "Oh! I wish I had the strength!" If you are broken down, have not energy, or feel as if life was hardly worth living, you can be relieved and restored to robust health and strength by taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, which is a true tonic—a medicine universally recommended for all wasting diseases.

501 N. Fremont St., Baltimore

During the war I was injured in the stomach by a piece of a shell, and have suffered from it ever since. About four years ago it brought on paralysis, which kept me in bed six months, and the best doctors in the city said I could not live. I suffered fearfully from indigestion, and for over two years could not eat solid food and for a large portion of the time was unable to retain even liquid nourishment. I tried Brown's Iron Bitters and now after taking two bottles I am able to get up and go around and am rapidly improving. G. DECKER.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is a complete and sure remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Malaria, Weakness and all diseases requiring a true, reliable, non-alcoholic tonic. It enriches the blood, gives new life to the muscles and tone to the nerves.

Dewey &amp; Co., American and Foreign Patent Agents.

PATENTS obtained promptly; Caveats filed expeditiously; Patent Reissues taken out Assignments made and recorded in legal form; Copies of Patents and Assignments procured; Examinations of Patents made here and at Washington; Examinations made of Assignments recorded in Washington; Examinations ordered and reported by Telegraph; Rejected cases taken up and Patents obtained; Interferences Prosecuted; Opinions rendered regarding the validity of Patents and Assignments; Every legitimate branch of Patent Agency Business promptly and thoroughly conducted.

Our intimate knowledge of the various inventions of this coast, and long practice in patent business, enable us to abundantly satisfy our patrons; and our success and business are constantly increasing.

The shrewdest and most experienced Inventors are found among our most steadfast friends and patrons, who fully appreciate our advantages in bringing valuable inventions to the notice of the public through the columns of our widely circulated, first-class journals—thereby facilitating their introduction, sale and popularity.

Foreign Patents.

In addition to American Patents, we secure, with the assistance of co-operative agents, claims in all foreign countries which grant Patents, including Great Britain, France, Belgium, Prussia, Austria, Baden, Peru, Russia, Spain, British India, Saxony, British Columbia, Canada, Norway, Sweden, Mexico, Victoria, Brazil, Bavaria, Holland, Denmark, Italy, Portugal, Cuba, Roman States, Wurtemberg, New Zealand, New South Wales, Queensland, Tasmania, Brazil, New Granada, Chile, Argentine Republic, AND EVERY COUNTRY IN THE WORLD where Patents are obtainable.

No models are required in European countries, but the drawings and specifications should be prepared with thoroughness, by able persons who are familiar with the requirements and changes of foreign patent laws—agents who are reliable and permanently established.

Our schedule price for obtaining foreign patents, in all cases, will always be as low, and in some instances lower, than those of any other responsible agency.

We can and do get foreign patents for inventors in the Pacific States from two to six months (according to the location of the country) SOONER than any other agents.

The principal portion of the patent business of this coast has been done, and is still being done, through our agency. We are familiar with, and have full records, of all former cases, and can more correctly judge of the value and patentability of inventions discovered here than any other agents.

Situated so remote from the seat of government, delays are even more dangerous to the inventors of the Pacific Coast than to applicants in the Eastern States. Valuable patents may be lost by extra time consumed in transmitting specifications from Eastern agencies back to this coast for the signature of the inventor.

Confidential.

We take great pains to preserve secrecy in all confidential matters, and applicants for patents can rest assured that their communications and business transactions will be held strictly confidential by us. Circulars free

Home Counsel.

Our long experience in obtaining patents for Inventors on this Coast has familiarized us with the character of most of the inventions already patented; hence we are frequently able to save our patrons the cost of a fruitless application by pointing to them the same thing already covered by a patent. We are always free to advise applicants of any knowledge we have of previous applicants which will interfere with their obtaining a patent.

We invite the acquaintance of all parties connected with inventions and patent right business, believing that the mutual conference of legitimate business and professional men is mutual gain. Parties in doubt in regard to their rights as assignees of patents or purchasers of patented articles, can often receive advice of importance to them from a short call at our office.

Remittances of money, made by individual inventors to the Government, sometimes miscarry, and it has repeatedly happened that applicants have not only lost their money, but their inventions also, from this cause and consequent delay. We hold ourselves responsible for all fees entrusted to our agency.

Engravings.

We have superior artists in our employ, and all facilities for producing fine and satisfactory illustrations of inventions and machinery, for newspaper, book, circular and other printed illustrations, and are always ready to assist patrons in bringing their valuable discoveries into practical and profitable use.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has not been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we will split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

Our Agents

OUR FRIENDS can do much in aid of our paper and the cause of practical knowledge and science, by assisting Agents in their labors of canvassing, by lending their influence and encouraging favors. We intend to send none but worthy men

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this, the oldest of the beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

Don't Fail to Write.

Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time they intend to pay for it, let them not fail to write us direct to stop it. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some irresponsible party requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

Agents Now Wanted.

Extra Inducements will be offered for a few active canvassers, who will give their whole attention (for a while at least) to our business. Apply soon, or address this office, giving address, age, experience and reference.

Don't Forget the Stamp.—Always take a last look at a letter before posting to see that the stamp is in place. Recently one of our agents in Los Angeles county found a letter containing $3 for one year's subscription to our paper, held for postage which the writer no doubt thought he had duly stamped, and but for the incidental finding of it by our agent, would of course have supposed we had received the money at the proper time. Let all subscribers when remitting or ordering their paper, stop to be sure they duly stamp their letters.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the 8th and 23d of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
INDEPENDENT ORDER CHOSEN FRIENDS
ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST,
AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS,
IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN,
KNIGHTS OF HONOR.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and choicely selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

Pleasantries.

The Boston Commonwealth quotes Ben Butler as saying in justification of his continuing to attend to his law practice: Gov. Talbot didn't stop his woolen mills when Governor; why, then, should I stop my jaw mill when I am Governor?"

An Irishman, hearing of a friend having a stone coffin made for himself, exclaimed: "Be me sowl, an' that's a good idea! Shure, and a stone coffin 'ud last a man his lifetime!"

Elizabeth Cady Stanton advises billiards for girls of the period. If a girl handles a billiard cue as dexterously as she throws a stone, the man four feet to the left of her is likely to have an eye poked out.

A young lady was showing an elderly woman a beautiful cluster diamond ring, a present, when the old lady dropped her spectacles to the end of her nose, and exclaimed: "Lor' sakes! I thought it was a seed wart!"

A CLOSE student of nature says that when you see a young man and woman walking down the street leaning against each other, like a pair of badly matched oxen, it is a pretty good sign that they are bent on consolidation.

A LAWYER recently lost a bride in a peculiar way. He appeared at the wedding, but, on being called to the ceremony, from sheer force of habit protested that he was not ready to proceed and demanded delay. And so the bride got mad and shipped him.

"If you would be truly happy, my dear," said one New York lady to another, "you will have neither eyes nor ears when your husband comes home late from the club." "Yes, I know," answered the other wearily, "but what am I to do with my nose?"

The best thing in bonnets continues to be as in the past—a pretty face.

We are reminded by a correspondent that the most absent minded man on record was not the one who put his umbrella to bed and went and stood behind the door; but he who wound up the cat and put the clock out of doors.

A large nose is a sign of character. If it has a turkey-red finish or a big knob on one side, it is a sign that character has gone on a protracted vacation.

The Burlington (Iowa) Hawkeye says: Some of the Jackson county Iowans were going to mob the fish commissioners because it was reported, on the first of this month, that these honorable gentlemen had received a large invoice of live codfish with which to stock the Maquoketa river. "By jocks?" declared the excited Jackson county people, "the river will be so bad binged salt that nobody can use a drop of it, fillin' it up with codfish." And they are watching the banks of the stream with shotguns.

The A. O. U. W. in California.

[By W. F. OVERSTREET.]

'Twas in the town of West Oakland in the year '75. The people of Athens were truly alive; One H. G. Pratt, of Pennsylvania, came, To make A. O. U. W. lodges, and to establish a name. He first instituted California, No. 1. But with this launch old pioneer his work had just begun. He was not long in thinking what next to do, But straightway went to Broadway, and established No. 2; Brooklyn No. 3 next knocked at Fraternity's door. She was at once admitted, but clouds began to lower. Then there came a long and painful pause; But Brother Pratt could not divine the cause; But once again, with more courage than before, With a score of stalwart fellows instituted No. 4. Eager husbands, sons and brothers, by this time began to arrive. And the good old man to Alameda went to establish No. 5. Wives, mothers, sisters now began "to see it;" they were in a fix, And gave the old gentleman little rest until he established No. 6. Next came Pacific of Oakland, and then No. 8, Which was organized in "Frisco, and christened Golden Gate. No. 9, old Harmony, was next in the van; Then hurried he to the "seat of learning" and made No. 10. There were now of lodges, quite enough To establish a Grand Lodge, and of the right stuff; So at West Oakland a convention was held. To declare their intention and form a new guild. The good work being over, cheers rang out from Kohler's hall. The Brothers now on the good work intent, To the establishing of new lodges their efforts bent. The Grand Lodge now established, the work fairly begun, Temple, No. 11, may be called the first gun. Then followed San Leandro and Fortune 13, And old Yerba Buena, and "I have found it," 15, With Protection at Santa Clara, And Enterprise at San Jose; Soon followed Hayward's at Alameda, And old Bernal at the Bay. No. 20, Sausalito, just now made up the score; Sacramento then opened the A. O. U. W. door, And to-day our Lodges number two hundred and twenty-four. San Francisco, April 2, 1883.

The Workmen Guarantee Fund.

The following information taken from the last annual report of the President of the Workmen Guarantee Fund Association, will be read with interest by all the patrons of the WATCHMAN:

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Jan. 6, 1883. To the Members of the Workmen Guarantee Fund Association: BROTHEREN: Another year has brought us again to the annual meeting of our Association. Though many obstacles have obstructed our pathway, and the unforeseen has constantly presented itself at every turn of the road, yet these hindrances have all been surmounted, and to-day your stewards present to you an account of their stewardship, which cannot be otherwise than gratifying to all who have a hearty interest in the welfare and growth of our organization.

The aim of the Association at its inception was to provide a channel through which any member of the A. O. U. W. could secure to his wife and children, at his death, the sum of $1,000 in addition to the amount already stipulated in the beneficiary certificate issued by the Grand Lodge, without incurring the expense of joining a foreign institution, or dividing his interest and time with kindred societies. In other words, we sought to found an institution which should afford the wished for insurance, and at the same time act as a welded chain, binding together the hearts and interests of all Brother Workmen wherever its influences should extend. This object we have ever kept in mind. Wherever our worthy Secretary has gone, whether among the brethren in their several places of business or as a visitor in their lodge rooms, he has always, and with convincing logic, held up to them the advantages of the Guarantee Fund as a fraternal bond. This has been the watch-cry of every agent and member of the Association; and such, I trust, it will ever be. We stand upon the rock of Workmanship, seeking to supplement and not supplant her charities. Our existence will, we trust, be concurrent with her own, and when, if in God's providence that time shall ever come, the great heart of the A. O. U. W. shall cease to beat, may this her child lie down to rest in the same tomb; till then, we have much to do.

During the short period of our existence, less than three years, we have accumulated a membership of 1,502. During this time we have had but 22 deaths, or an average of 7.14 per year, and have paid to widows and orphans $17,081. Many of these deaths occurred before our Association had upon its books 1,000 members in good standing—hence the fractional item of $81. For more than a year past, however, our numbers have exceeded 1,000, and each beneficiary has received the full sum of $1,000.

During the year just closed we have added 364 names to our roll, besides filling the ranks of those who have died or been suspended. Agents have been appointed in many new localities throughout the State of California, and the work extended to Oregon, Washington Territory and Arizona.

Of the $17,081 heretofore mentioned as paid out to widows and orphans, $11,000 was dispensed during the twelve months just ended.

Thus it will be seen that while our numbers are not large, yet they are steadily increasing from material drawn from localities widely separated over the coast; and that the selection of material has been made with care, is fully demonstrated by the low death rate thus far reported.

Referring to the Secretary's report, I notice that the expense of carrying on the Association has been, during the year just ended, $4,255.35. Of this sum $1,450.50 never has been in the hands of the Secretary or Treasurer, but was retained by our agents out of membership fees received by them as agreed compensation for their services, thus reducing the expense of management to $2,798.85, or $1.86 per member now in good standing, which, as compared with any fraternal Association in America, cannot be equaled in economy. In our own Ancient Order of United Workmen the expense of Grand Lodge management during the year 1881, was $1.07 per member, to which, if we add the subordinate Lodge expense of say $6 per year, and we shall have $7.07, or $1.53 per member per $1,000 insurance; and other kindred organizations will present like showings.

It will thus appear that our work has been done well; our expenses have been economical, and the Association enters upon the fourth year of its existence with brighter promises of usefulness and success than ever before. Some three months ago the Board of Directors, desiring a more accurate knowledge of the financial affairs of the Association than they could possibly obtain in the time they were able to devote to its oversight, employed a competent expert to go into an exhaustive examination of all its accounts from the date of incorporation. This work has been done, and the report, which is on file in the Secretary's office, assures us that every transaction, both on the part of the Secretary and Treasurer, is straight; that every dollar paid by our members, both in the General Fund and Guarantee Fund, has been properly and judiciously expended, and the proper balance is now in bank. This same expert has since gone over the Annual Reports of the Secretary and Treasurer presented to you to-night, and he states to me that he finds every figure correct, and the books of both officers in good condition and properly kept.

With this presentation of facts I feel it my duty and pleasure to commend these officers for their integrity and faithfulness, and bespeak for them both your highest approbation. To the Secretary especially, Bro. E. M. Reading, we are indebted for the present flourishing condition of affairs. It was his foresight that led to the formation of the organization, and through his tireless zeal and fostering care it has grown to its present proportions. Down to old age may he enjoy a full meed of the gratitude and praise which daily is bestowed upon the Workmen Guarantee Fund Association of California.

In conclusion, let me congratulate each and every member, both present and absent, upon the work that has been done and the prospects that lie before us, and may God grant that in the days that are to come this growing child of the A. O. U. W. may be instrumental in relieving many of the sorrows and cares of the widows and orphans of our great fraternity. Respectfully submitted,

WILLIAM S. JORDAN,
President.

Reports of the Secretary and Finance Committee neatly printed with the above in pamphlet form can be had by applying to E. M. Reading, Secretary of the Association, St. Ann's building, San Francisco.

WE have the pretty legend that the hyacinth first sprang from the blood of a beautiful youth who had been accidentally killed. There comes a day when the sweet flower of protection, watered by the tears and sympathies of a whole brotherhood will grow upon our graves, and make fragrant all our homes.

BRO. SOL. SHIPPER, of Multnomah, 48, Portland, Oregon, has associated in business with Mr. J. Swartz as merchant tailors, and opened an immense establishment in their line at 733 Market, opposite Dupont, with a full line of the best foreign and domestic goods. Bro. Shipper is well known as a practical and skillful cutter, having had an experience of 18 years, of which eight years was in San Jose, and five years in Portland, Oregon.

BRO. W. C. PRICE, wholesale shipping and commission merchant and purchasing agent, 320 Washington street, is one of our leading and reliable business men. Business entrusted to his care will be intelligently and faithfully attended to.

HORSE MARKET.—Bro. H. Froemberg has an extensive institution at New Montgomery street, opposite the Palace hotel, for the sale of horses, buggies, wagons, phaetons, harness, etc. On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, at eleven o'clock, each week, there are auction sales conducted by Mr. S. C. Bowley, auctioneer. This is a reliable square dealing, and the leading place in this city.

BRO. H. T. PLONTEAUX, D. D. S., of Oakland, has opened fine dental parlors at the northwest corner of Geary and Dupont streets, S. F. He enjoys the reputation of being one of the most scientific and skillful dentists on the Pacific coast.

BRO. W. T. Y. ECHENCK, of No. 36 California St., is agent for the Eureka Fire-Hose Company of New York, who are patentees and manufacturers of the celebrated "Eureka," "Paragon" and "Red Cross" Fire and Garden Hose, which is a seamless cotton, circular-woven hose of single, double or triple ply, prepared absolutely mildew-proof and lined with the finest Para rubber. The single ply stands more than double the pressure of the best, newly-made, four-ply rubber hose, and it weighs less than half as much. It does not deteriorate with age, and can be laid away for years and the strength remain unimpaired; and when suddenly called into use, as in case of fire, it will be found to be reliable. It is not injured by exposure to the sun, and is therefore very much superior to rubber for use in hot countries. The fire departments of the Eastern States and Canada use it now almost entirely, and it is fast growing in favor on this Coast. New York alone has 68,000 feet of Cotton Fire Hose, as per last report of June, 1882; Boston had 30,000 feet; Philadelphia bought 18,000 feet of the "Eureka" brand last year, and Chief Engineer Cantlin has now asked for 15,000 feet more. It has many qualities which make it easier and safer to handle, and where the firemen once use it they want no other. A number of the towns have been furnished on this Coast, and Alameda has just received a second order of 1,000 feet of the "Paragon" brand. The Garden Hose has no equal, and as a fire hose for manufactories, hotels, etc. it is thoroughly reliable and requires no attention whatever. Those interested would do well to call and take a look at it.

Come over to San Leandro and see Me!

In connection with MESSRS. TRUMAN, ISHAM & Co., of 511 Market Street, I am operating AGRICULTURAL WORKS at San Leandro, an establishment that has capacities and facilities for good and rapid work, equal to anything of its size in the United States. It covers an entire block (300 feet square), and comprises a Foundry, Blacksmith Shop, Plow Shop, Grinding Shop, Machine Shop, Planing Mill, Setting-up Shop, Paint Shop, etc., etc., each department being equipped with the latest and best machinery and appliances.

We are making at present, among others, the following articles, and anybody in want of anything enumerated is invited to visit me at the works or correspond by letter:

SAN LEANDRO VILLAGE CARTS,

The most comfortable, easy riding and handsome vehicle on two wheels. Warranted to be absolutely free from the bobbing or nodding motion, and to always remain level whether a large or small horse is used. We make a great variety of styles, and as we are turning them out constantly, we can make them with any desired peculiarity at slight additional cost.

PETALUMA OR PRICE HAY PRESSES,

Well known as the fastest and best Baling Presses in the world. If one is wanted with any changes for particular work, come and tell me or write me just what is desired. I am making these machines better this season than ever before, all the timbers being the best Eastern Oak and the iron work extra heavy. Those made this season also have tapering chain drums, which give considerable additional power.

THE IMPROVED EAGLE PRESS.

Only eight feet high; price $250 only; good for twelve to fifteen tons per day.

HOP PRESSES,

Ranging in price from $250 to $300. The best ones are deep enough to receive a bale without tramping, and the box is perfectly tight, so that none of the flowers escape.

Parties in want of Hop Presses are earnestly advised to consult with me, as I have had much experience in the construction of these machines, and feel confident of meeting the requirements of Hop Growers in all respects, either for horse or hand power machines.

We are also Making

THE LATEST ELECTRICAL DISCOVERY.—The Rev. Mr. Gilbert, during an address at Christ church the other night, remarks the Otago Times, while speaking of the telephone, asked his audience if they would be astonished if he were to tell them that it was now proved to be possible to convey by means of electricity vibrations of light—to not only speak with your distant friend, but actually to see him. The electroscope—the name of the instrument which enabled us to do this—was the very latest scientific discovery, and to Dr. Gnidrah, of Victoria, belonged the proud distinction. The trial of this wonderful instrument took place at Melbourne on the 31st of October last in the presence of some 40 scientific and public men, and was a great success. Sitting in a dark room, they saw projected on a large disk of white burnished metal the race course at Flemington with its myriad hosts of active beings.
Each minute detail stood out with perfect fidelity to the original, and as they looked at the wonderful picture through binocular glasses, it was difficult to imagine that they were not actually on the course itself and moving among those whose actions they could so completely scan.

EXPLOSIVE MIXTURES. Explosive mixtures are sometimes prescribed by doctors not well informed in materia medica. Chlorate of potash, permanganate of potash, and glycerine are some of them. A pomade of chloride of lime, sulphur, and other substances, will detonate when rubbed in a mortar. Hypophosphite of lime or soda, when triturated alone, sometimes explodes. Pills of oxide of silver are apt to decompose with a tremendous explosion. Tincture of iodine and ammonia form the iodide of nitrogen, a violently explosive substance, which, agitated with water, is nearly certain to deto-nate. Chlorate of potash and tannin are likely to act in the same way. A dentifrice containing chlorate of potash and catechu has been known to explode in the mouth.

PINKEYE IN CHILDREN. Several cases have recently been reported in at least two different places in California where a disease has been developed in children's eyes which closely resembles pinkeye in horses, and which thus far has baffled the skill of physicians. Chico is one of these localities.

An Asphalt Mortar.

The Centralblatt der Bauverwaltung describes a patented composition made at a factory in Stargard, Pomerania, which has for some years past been used with perfect success on the Berlin-Stettin railway for wall copings, water-tables, and similar purposes requiring a water-proof coating. The material is composed of coal-tar, to which are added clay, asphalt, resin, litharge, and sand. It is, in short, a kind of artificial asphalt, with the distinction that it is applied cold, like ordinary cement rendering. The tenacity of the material, when properly laid, and its freedom from liability to damage by the weather are proved by reference to an example in the coping of a retaining wall which has been exposed for four years to the drainage of a slope 33 feet high. This coping is still perfectly sound, and has not required any repair since it was laid down. Other works have proved equally satisfactory. In applying this mortar, as it is termed, the space to be covered is first thoroughly dried, and after being well cleaned is primed with hot roofing varnish, the basis of which is also tar. The mortar is then laid on cold, to the thickness of about three eighths of an inch, with either wood or steel trowels, and is properly smoothed over. If the area covered is large, another coating of varnish is applied and rough sand strewn over the whole. The waterproof surface thus made is perfectly impregnable to rain or frost, and practically indestructible. The cost of the material laid is estimated at not more than 40 cents per square foot, and it is stated that this price can be reduced by at least two cents for large quantities put down by experienced workmen.

HIGHT NIGHT AND DAY. It is asserted by Dr. Merkel that a person's hight after a night's rest, measured before rising from bed, is two inches greater than in the evening, measured standing. On first rising, a sudden shortening takes place at the joints of the legs. The sinking at the ankle is one third of an inch; at the knee, one twelfth to one eighth of an inch; at the hip, two fifths of an inch. The contraction in hight is continued through the day by the gradual yielding of the arches of the feet and of the discs of the spine.

PARALYSIS strokes, heart disease, and kidney affections, prevented by the use of Brown's Iron Bitters.

THE PACIFIC RURAL PRESS, AN ILLUSTRATED AGRICULTURAL HOME JOURNAL.

Among other Reasons for Subscribing are the Following:

Because it is a permanent, first-class, conscientious, able, and well conducted journal. Because it is the largest and best agricultural weekly west of the Rocky mountains. That Patrons may be reliably informed on the progress of the Order in this and other fields. That more farmers' wives and children in their rural homes may be cheered by its weekly visits, laden with its pleasing, yet moral reading, and sound instruction. That a more extended interchange of views and opinions may be had among farmers, upon all the great questions touching their mutual interests and progress. That the agricultural resources of the Pacific States may be more wisely, speedily and thoroughly developed by an open and free discussion in our columns. That all the worthy industries of our State may be advanced in connection with that of agriculture, our columns being ever open to the discussion of the merits of all progressive improvements. That the RURAL, after having been read and pondered over by the home circle, can be relied away for future useful reference, or forwarded to the old Eastern fireside of the Atlantic border, in aid of an increasing immigration to our sunny clime. Subscription rates, $3 per annum when paid in advance. Please invite your friends to subscribe. A NEW USE FOR THE TRANSFUSION OF BLOOD. The transfusion of blood was successfully employed a few weeks since, in New York, in restoring to consciousness a man who had been found in his room unconscious from inhaling illuminating gas. Two physicians being called, one of them suggested the trial of the transfusion of blood. A colored man attached to the hotel consented to furnish the blood necessary for the operation, which was successfully performed six hours after the man had been found, during all of which time he had been perfectly unconscious. Dr. D. C. Valentine, a well known New York physician, performed the operation, which he has himself described as follows: "After first tightly binding the arm of the person from where the blood is to be taken, and the arm of the person to whom the blood is to be transferred, an incision is made in one of the veins of the former, and the blood which flows from it is placed in a bowl; then the blood, which meantime has been thoroughly beaten to prevent coagulation, must be strained through a piece of linen into another bowl, when it is ready for placing into the arm of the patient. This is done slowly—a little at a time—by the aid of a syringe, through a puncture made in a vein in the arm, and the operation is done. It is, as you will see, simple and almost invariably effective. Of course, care must be taken to have a healthy person to draw from, as otherwise any disease might be transferred, though, to my mind, I would sooner have an unhealthy person to draw from than none at all."

THE GOOD TIME COMING.—"The day is coming," says an exchange, "when a letter will go anywhere within the United States for one cent, a dispatch for ten, and a man for a cent a mile."

THE Mare Island Navy Yard employees will commence working ten hours a day on and after Thursday.

HEAT AND MAGNETISM.—L. Pilleux has lately called attention to the heating of iron during its magnetization. The fact had previously been observed by D. Tommasi in some researches, which are not yet published, upon the comparative study of the chemical properties of ordinary iron and of magnetized iron. In order to obtain a constant magnetic intensity he employed an electromagnet of single branch in place of an ordinary magnet. When the current, even if it was produced by a weak battery, had traversed the coil for some hours, the magnetized bar became perceptibly warm. He at first attributed the heating of the iron to the heating of the coil; but he was greatly astonished one day when he had removed the bar in order to clean it and had forgotten to interrupt the current, to find that the coil was not heated at all.—Les Mondes

THE ACTION OF CEMENT ON LEAD PIPE. Herr Bamberger reports the following apropos of his examination of a piece of lead pipe which had rested for years in a layer of Portland cement: It was coated with a red layer 1 to 3 mm. in thickness, resembling litharge in appearance, with a composition PbO 85, Pb 13, other matters 2. This film was carefully removed. Its specific gravity was between 8.002 and 9.670, the difference being due to the presence of adhering metallic particles of lead and lead carbonate. This coating appears to have been produced by the action of the oxygen of the air, in conjunction with that of the lime contained in the mortar, from which it would appear that lead in contact with lime, and with access of air and moisture, is actively corroded; a hint which builders, plumbers, and others, would do well to bear in mind.

"Were you ever in an engagement?" inquired an innocent rustic of a militia man. "Yes, one," replied the son of Mars, having a deep sigh; "but she jilted me."

Important to A. O. U. W.

We occasionally send complimentary sample copies of the WATCHMAN to the various officers and members of the A. O. U. W. We ask as a special favor of those receiving them, and all interested in the success of the various Lodges will lend us a helping hand in increasing our circulation. Nothing contributes more to the successful working of the A. O. U. W. than the circulation of general Fraternity news, and the best way to secure this is through the WATCHMAN, which is an able and faithful advocate. It is to the interest of the A. O. U. W. that the WATCHMAN be placed in the hands of every Workman, and to accomplish this we must rely in a large measure upon the voluntary efforts and subscriptions.

Liberal inducements will be offered to active and reliable members who will canvass for subscriptions. Sample copies will be mailed free to Workmen on application, all of whom are invited to endeavor to assist in extending the circulation of the WATCHMAN.

Let every Workman into whose hands this notice may come, if not already a subscriber, fill out the subscription blank below, enclose two dollars, and send it to us for a year's subscription.

J. T. Rogers, Grand Master Workman.

We present the readers of the WATCHMAN with a very good portrait of our newly elected Grand Master J. T. Rogers. We would be glad to accompany it with a more complete sketch of his life-history, but his retiring disposition limited us to such information as we could collect through collateral sources, which is unhappily very meager. He is a lawyer by profession, and has for several years been recognized as one of the prominent members of the bar at Ukiah, Mendocino county, and of the Supreme Court of California. He has long been known as a leading Odd Fellow, greatly esteemed by the members of that noble Order. His connection with the A. O. U. W. dates from May 14, 1878, when he became a member of Ukiah Lodge, No. 33. As a representative to the Grand Lodge his zeal and ability, in spite of his shy, unobtrusive manner was soon discovered, and he was elected to serve the Order in 1881 as Grand Overseer, and in 1882 as Grand Foreman, making an excellent record. At the late session of that body in San Francisco, he was unanimously elected to the honorable and responsible position of Grand Master Workman.

He is at present about 35 years of age, stalwart in mind and body, a perfect picture of good health and sound digestion, a pleasant conversationalist, and ebullient with social feeling. He is a forcible speaker, logical debater, and possesses the quickness of perception, cool judgment and self-poised will which ensures a successful presiding officer. This was thoroughly tested during the recent session of the Grand Lodge. There is no more trying ordeal to a speaker or Chairman than the first time he essays to preside over a deliberative body that has called him to that position. He is conscious that all eyes are riveted upon him. Friends are solicitous for the impression he makes. The captious are ready to criticise the slightest mistake or manifestations of awkwardness. Brother Rogers was very unexpectedly called to occupy the chair vacated by his predecessor, and proved himself equal to the occasion. His impromptu speeches at the receptions given the officers and representatives by several of the city Lodges, showed that he was thoroughly imbued with the fraternal sentiment, fully comprehended the duties of his position, and gave an assurance to all, which was warmly expressed, that the laboring oar for this year had been placed in the right hands.

The adoption of a constitution and by-laws for the Degree of Honor is a matter of considerable importance to the Order in this State, and should the permission and recommendation of the Grand Lodge be carried out, and a beneficiary feature be inaugurated, it will have the effect of giving stability to the degree, and awaking new interest in it.

The reports of the officers show that during the year past there has been a net gain of 1,489 members. During the year there have been $367,998.80 received, and $327,600 disbursed.

A. O. U. W. in Grand Council.

Sixth Annual Session of the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., of California.*

[Convened at D. Shaway Hall, San Francisco, Commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. Tuesday, April 3, 1883.]

The Grand Lodge was called to order by Grand Master Workman William H. Barnes, and opened in due form.

All the Grand Officers were present except the following: P. G. M. W., Clay W. Taylor; Grand Trustee, I. A. Dunsmoor; Corporate Directors, A. P. Murgotten, A. G. Burnett, J. M. La Rue.

At 10:30 o'clock the Grand Lodge took a recess of three quarters of an hour.

served for three consecutive years as Recorder, Financier, or Receiver, were allowed to take the P. M. W. degree, and then to be admitted to the sessions of this Grand Lodge.

The M. W. of Santa Rosa Lodge, No. 28, having been elected a representative to this Grand Lodge, the Grand Master Workman ruled that he could not be admitted; and on motion of Bro. C. C. Terrill, of No. 30, the ruling of the Grand Master was concurred in by the Grand Lodge.

The P. M. W. Degree was then conferred.

Bro. A. L. Hatheway, of No. 75, was appointed on Committee on Appeals, vice Bro. Wm. McWilliams of same Lodge.

On motion, the Grand Lodge took a recess until 1:30 P. M.

The Committee on Credentials reported the following list of representatives entitled

Report of Grand Master Workman, W. H. Barnes.

The following interesting report was read by the Grand Master Workman in the Grand Lodge of California, Tuesday P. M., April 8, 1883.

Officers and Members: Another year fraught with interest to our Order, and to its individual membership, has passed away, and once more, by the permission of Him that doeth all things well, we are privileged to assemble again in our State Council, and as the steward to whom you have confided your trust, I am here to make a report of my stewardship.

Notwithstanding the past year has been a political one, notwithstanding death has claimed 132 brothers, and 662 members have lost membership by suspension, withdrawals, etc., we close the year with a net gain of 1489 members, 9 new Subordinate, and 14 new Degree of Honor Lodges.

That this has been the result of continuous, energetic, increasing work, is apparent to all, and I here take pleasure in paying a merited tribute to those who have so faithfully seconded my efforts to carry forward the mission of this Order.

A glance at the following table will show the details of the work of my faithful deputies:

Official Visitations, Expenses, Etc.

I have not changed the opinion heretofore expressed, that the life, vitality, success and increase of any fraternal Order largely depends in keeping it constantly and favorably before the people, in order that the public may have its attention drawn to it, and comment and comparison instituted. Therefore, I have perseveringly followed out the programme instituted by me last year, and have had the pleasure of meeting tens of thousands of our citizens, as well as the members in their Lodges. The following points have been officially visited:

Alameda, Alvarado, *Antioch, Auburn, Berkeley, Biggs, Dixon, Dunnigan's, Gilroy, Grass Valley, Lathrop, Livermore, Los Angeles, *Martinez, Marysville, Merced, Mission San Jose, Modesto, Monterey, *Napa, Newark, Oakdale, Oakland, Oroville, Petaluma, Redwood City, Rocklin, Sacramento, San Diego, San Francisco, San Jose, San Leandro, San Lorenzo, *San Luis Obispo, San Mateo, San Rafael, *Santa Barbara, Santa Cruz, Saucelito, Sonoma, Stockton, Temescal, Vallejo, West Berkeley, Wheatland, and Woodland.

In addition to the public and private meetings and addresses in this jurisdiction during the year, I have had the pleasure of speaking in the interests of our great fraternity in several of the cities of Ohio, Georgia, New York, Massachusetts, and Illinois. The work in California has been arduous; requiring constant and daily attention, and has assumed a magnitude not only worthy of, but demanding earnest and increasing efforts.

One hundred and three visitations have been made during the term, at which representatives from 204 Lodges have been met; 19,555 miles have been traveled during the year, 12,600 of which were in this jurisdiction, and sixty-five public addresses delivered. Number of letters written, 1,417; printed documents sent by G. M. W., 825; dispensations, 71.

The items of expense that I can properly bring before this body are the following: Traveling expenses, $602.95; Postage, express, and telegrams, $56.50; Copying, clerk hire, books, etc., $126.00; Total, $785.45.

There have been other expenses incident to the office which have no place here, and are not presented. The time necessary to discharge these duties is valuable to a working man, and he who has daily duties to discharge to employers, if absent, must supply competent assistance to make good his absence. I allude to this in justice to my successors who may not be so situated as to be able to devote so much time and labor as this Order, thus far, has been so fortunate as to obtain from its Grand Masters.

Decisions.

A very large number of queries have been received during the year. At least three-fourths of them could be answered by former decisions and established law. Many have been amicably settled and are not reported, and I congratulate the Order on the universal good feeling and harmony throughout the entire jurisdiction. The following are submitted for your approval:

1.—Before a person who belonged to one of the suspended Lodges in Iowa can be received into membership in this jurisdiction, in addition to the regular requirements, he must pay the amounts named in the various Relief Calls of the Supreme Lodge.

2.—While the last Supreme Lodge permits public installations, none can be performed in this jurisdiction until our Grand Lodge authorizes them.

3.—An applicant has the right to join the Lodge nearest his residence, although said residence is in a different district from that in which the Lodge is situated.

4.—A brother, having served a term of office in any Lodge and afterwards joining another Lodge, is eligible to the office of M. W. in said last Lodge.

5.—When a Lodge is aware of facts showing it would be manifestly unjust to a family to grant a clearance card to a member, and thus permit him to leave the jurisdiction, his family, his obligations, etc., and deprive said family, who have been paying his assessments, of their rights and interests in his Beneficiary Certificate, in my judgment, the Lodge has a right to refuse a clearance card.

6.—No member can be compelled to vote "for" or "against" a candidate. The ballot in this case is optional. In matters generally before a Lodge, with this exception, members can be required to vote, and if declining are to be counted on the negative side of the question.

7.—Applicants should not be balloted for until notice has been received that the Examining Board has approved them.

8.—When a committee has brought in a verdict of "guilty," and a vote has been taken on "expulsion" and "suspension," and both failed to obtain the requisite vote, then the penalty shall be, "reprimand" or "fine," or both, at the option of the Lodge.

9.—When a vote is by ballot the M. W. is entitled to vote.

10.—A vote, although illegally cast, if it does not affect the general result, does not destroy the illegality of the ballot.

*Visited by E. F. Loud, P. G. M., at my invitation.

11.—A brother holding a clearance card is a member of the Lodge granting it, and entitled to all the rights and privileges of any other member until he deposits it in some other Lodge. When the date of the card expires, and it has not been deposited, no action of the Lodge is required in regard to the holder. He stands the same as though the card had not been issued.

12.—Any person who is entitled to receive the degree of the Supreme or Grand Lodge at any session, is eligible for the office of representative to said Supreme or Grand Lodge at said session.

13.—A majority of all votes cast is requisite to elect any officer in our Order. Every brother in good standing is entitled to have his vote counted, and if he chooses to vote a blank it is his privilege to do so. If twenty-one votes were cast, ten for a candidate and eleven blanks, said candidate would not be elected, but defeated.

14.—Under our laws, the entire question of sick weekly benefits is entirely under the control of such subordinate, and there is no appeal to the G. M. W., or the Grand Lodge.

15.—A M. W. holds his chair and office until his successor is installed. At the end of the term he is entitled to the honors of P. M. W., although he has not been installed as such. The Foreman can only take the chief chair when the proper M. W. is absent. The junior P. M. W. does not hold over if the M. W. is re-elected.

16.—A member belonging to this jurisdiction has the right to deposit his clearance card in any Lodge in said jurisdiction that will admit him.

17.—When by-laws provide a fine for absence, failure to have reports ready, failure to attend a sick brother, or to be present at a funeral, it is not necessary to put the delinquent on trial, prefer charges, etc., as the fine can be imposed, but the Lodge at its option can affix the penalty.

18.—The Recorder of a Lodge is the official Keeper of the Seal, but he has no right to use it upon any document unless authorized by the Lodge so to do.

Degree of Honor Decisions.

1.—A M. W.'s widow is eligible to take the Degree of Honor. If having said degree, and a member of a D. of H. Lodge, she marries a person not a member, she would not lose membership. If she had been an M. W.'s widow, and married a person not a member, before applying for the degree, she would not be eligible, as she is not a M. W.'s "widow," but somebody else's "wife."

2.—As the D. of H. is intended to enlist the sympathy of co-operation of the female members of a Workman's family, I am disposed to give a liberal construction to the law regarding it, and to decide that any lady blood relative of a Master Workman or his wife, who is a regular inmate and part of the family and household of a Master Workman, is entitled to receive the degree.

Appeals.

I am pleased to announce that we have had but a few cases this year. A number of notices have been received from individuals, but they either failed to notify their Lodges, or the Lodges failed to send the record.

The competent Appeal Committee will present the four cases that have been referred to it, and I need only allude to those I have personally decided:

C. F. WENSEL vs. FORTUNA LODGE, No. 13.—Appellant was tried and found guilty. A vote was taken on "expulsion," and lost. "Suspension" was voted for. Lodge suspended him for one year. Appeal is taken, on the ground that suspension for one year is equivalent to expulsion, and the "expulsion" having been voted for and lost, Lodge was not competent to suspend for so long a time, etc.

The Lodge was sustained, and appeal dismissed. Lodges clearly have the right to suspend for any indefinite period. (Secs. 321-322, 146, Digest.)

PENGELLY CASE.—R. Pengelly, of Gold Hill, No. 1, was admitted to Yerba Buena, No. 14, August 25, 1882. Assessments No. 14 and 15 were levied on deaths that occurred previous to August 25th. Grand Recorder claimed $2 for said Pengelly, which Yerba Buena Lodge declined to pay, on the ground that said Pengelly was not a member in California at the date of the deaths, and therefore not liable.

Decision.—Pengelly must be liable somewhere, and as when Nevada levied its assessment in September he was not a member of the Order there, and could not be assessed, and as he was a M. W. in good standing at the date of the deaths for which the assessments were levied, he must pay the same in the jurisdiction to which he belongs when the assessment is published, otherwise he would pay no assessment anywhere. By moving from one jurisdiction to another he forfeits the dollar which was to his credit in his subordinate Lodge, and said dollar goes to the Treasury of the G. L. of Nevada.

LUCKY CASE.—The Grand Lodge, at its last session, having reversed the decisions of the G. M. W., under which decision Valley, No. 30, had reinstated W. S. Lucky and W. P. Faust, members suspended for non-payment of dues (see page 100, Journal of 1882), on April 11, 1882. I notified Valley Lodge, No. 30, of said action, and requested them to suspend the certificates of said members, which request was complied with.

In connection with this case, I submit the petition of Mrs. Lucky, the widow of W. S. Lucky, who has died since the last session of this Grand Lodge. The widow asks that the $2,000 may be paid to her, briefly, on following grounds: That her husband has paid all assessments, and was suspended for non-payment of dues only, and said suspension took place when none of his personal friends were present in the Lodge, and just at the time the six months expired; that at said time, and previously, her husband had been, and was sick; that they were poor, and had been assured by the officers of the Lodge that all of his indebtedness would be attended to, etc. That, at a subsequent meeting, under a decision of the G. M. W., "that a Lodge had a right to revoke a penalty inflicted for a violation of its own local law exclusively," said Valley Lodge, by a large majority, did revoke said suspension, and reinstated her husband, and he paid all dues, assessments, etc. That at the last session of this Grand Lodge, it ruled that the G. M. W. erred in his construction of the law, and that said reinstatement was illegal, and her husband was notified again that he was suspended; that he tendered the money for subsequent assessments made upon the members of the Lodge, which was declined. These, and other points, are set forth in the petition, which was herewith submitted.

ASHFIELD CASE.—A number of letters are submitted in this case, points of which are, that Bro. Ashfield was a member of Redding Lodge; for violation of law he was arraigned and tried on different occasions, and the penalties inflicted—"reprimand," afterward "fine," and again, "suspension for six weeks." During this latter suspension he was taken sick. The brothers, feeling, perhaps, that they had made the punishment too severe, desired to revoke a part of the penalty and reinstate, but this, under the circumstance of sickness, could not be allowed. Mr. Ashfield died, and quite a correspondence has taken place. The widow claims in very energetic, and not always complimentary language, that she should be paid $2,000.

MCQUESTEN CASE.—Petitions, etc., are submitted in this matter, the points of which are, that H. Barnard was a member of Spartan No. 36; that said Barnard's certificate was made payable to Mrs. M. A. McQuesten; that said Barnard left the city, and that Mrs. McQuesten requested the officials of the Lodge to send notice of his assessments to her, which she alleges that they agreed to do; that she failed to receive any such notice, and that she inquired at said Barnard's former place of business for said notice, and found none; and that after repeated inquiries she was informed that said Barnard was suspended for non-payment of assessments, and she petitioned that he may be reinstated, etc.

Circular Declined.

A party who had made application to become a member of a Lodge became insane, and subsequently died. The brethren asked permission to issue a circular to raise $2,000 for his family. Declined to grant said request.

Dispensations.

Dispensations have been granted as follows: For celebrations, 6; to admit applicants from other districts, 10; change night of meeting, 8; confer degrees, 16; to meet semi-monthly, 15; to change name, 1; change place of meeting, 7; rebalot, 8. Total, 71. Dispensations by Deputies, 112.

Defunct Lodges.

Under this head I regret to report Snow Lodge, No. 139, of Gibsonville, Sierra county, and Castoria Lodge, No. 152, of Lathrop.

Copies of same are herewith submitted. As last year, I do not deem it of importance to incorporate them in my report or the journal.

Beneficiary Certificates, etc.

A large number of applicants has been rejected—at least twelve per cent. of the entire number presented. In performing the duties of an Examining Board, the closest scrutiny has taken place, and the rules laid down in the instructions to Medical Examiners followed without fear, favor, or partiality. I have to reiterate that, from the social drinking custom comes the direct or indirect cause of most of our deaths, and that there is more danger from the beer drinker who never gets drunk, than from the imbibitor of more fiery fluids who gets "high" on a few glasses. The deaths from liver and kidney diseases in the United States are assuming frightful proportions; and on the Pacific coast, and especially in California, the vast quantities of beer consumed by all classes of society, is sowing a terrible crop, which is being daily harvested.

We have drawn the line prescribed by the Supreme Lodge; that is, on the regular daily drinker, who every day drinks more or less liquor, beer, etc. None such have been passed by the Board. True, there may have been remonstrances, and parties brought before us, to show how ruddy, strong, and solid they were, but we have not passed them, for we know that if a trifling hurt or bruise was made on their apparently "solid and substantial" candidates, that erysipelas would ensue, and no antidote be found. Therefore, we have carried out, to the best of our ability, your laws, and rejected many.

Some of the causes of rejection are annexed: Predisposed to hereditary disease, 7; high ratio of pulse and respiration, 5; hemorrhage of lungs, 1; dissipation and daily drinkers, 10; lung trouble and chronic cough, 3; catarrh, 1; over age, 2; dizziness, 2; saloon-keepers, brewers, daily drinkers, 15; asthma, 2; heart disease, 2; secondary syphilis, 1; aneurism of aorta, 1; varicose veins and ulcers, 1; for former attempt at suicide, 2; chronic bronchitis, 1. All of these cases were favorably reported upon by the local medical examiners, but under our instructions we were compelled to reject them. As affirmed last year, everything depends upon the faithful examination by the local Medical Examiner. If he sends a clean bill of health, all of the experts of the world could only pass the applicant. If he makes a thorough examination, and gives a true and correct report, if there is any reason why the applicant should not be received, any intelligent man, who is familiar with the rules, and carefully examines the record, can detect it.

The above gives but an incomplete outline of the causes of rejection. It will be noticed that daily drinking and dissipation present the highest figures as separate items, but it may also be truthfully added, in regard to a majority of all of the other items, that intemperance and dissolute habits, besides the causes given, would have warranted their rejection.

Medical Examiner.

Personally I believe that California's present system of an Examining Board is superior to that of any other State, and that three intelligent men, not physicians, will work closer to rule than if they were medical men; but at the session in Cincinnati, a law was passed by the Supreme Lodge which interferes with our present system, and creates a Medical Board, or State Medical Examiner, who is to be paid for the work that we have so long performed for nothing, and a tariff is to be levied on all future applicants. While I am in total opposition to the movement, believing it unnecessary in every particular, yet it is law, and to be obeyed, until it can be repealed. I therefore make the following suggestions, as the various "schools" would come up if an election of a State Medical Examiner was to be held, and involve valuable time of this Grand body in similar discussions to those heretofore heard, without any valuable result.

I suggest that the State Medical Examiner be appointed by the incoming Grand Master; and that said State Examiner be subject to removal by the G. M. W.; also, that the said Examiner be required to be at the Grand Recorder's office at least one hour each legal working day; and that 25 cents per applicant's medical examination be fixed as the maximum fee to be charged for the service, said fee to be paid by the applicant, in addition to any rate now charged by the Lodges.

Degree of Honor.

My efforts to arouse an interest in this Degree among the lady members of the families of our brethren have been very successful, a large number of new Lodges are already instituted, and others are being formed. I believe it will be found that wherever a subordinate Lodge has given to a Lodge of this Degree one of its evenings, and taken an interest in said meeting, not only has the Degree of Honor Lodge flourished, but the subordinate Lodge has been benefited in a marked degree. I cordially recommend the formation of these Lodges wherever they have not been instituted, as they will be found a most valuable auxiliary. I have my own ideas as to the inaugurating of a beneficiary feature for the benefit of the members, but will not now present them, as I feel confident the able committee on this subject have something tangible to report.

New Lodges.

Two petitions for new Lodges were declined, one for another Lodge at Napa, one for another Lodge at Stockton. It is a question whether the instituting of new Lodges at both of these localities would not have been of benefit to the Order, as well as to the subordinates already there. In my opinion, every locality of the size of either of said cities, should have at least two Lodges, but the opposition at both points was so marked and decided, it was deemed best not to proceed.

Public Installations.

The Supreme Lodge having permitted Grand bodies to enact laws by which public installations can be held, I trust that this Grand Lodge will take measures looking to the permission of public installations in this State.

Chas. Campbell—H. A. Oliver.

On November 2, 1882, Bro. Chas. Campbell, Deputy of Placer, No. 1, finished his life work and was called home, and on January 20th, 1883, Bro. H. A. Oliver, Deputy of Lake county, was one of the victims of the terrible disaster at Tehachapi. My two earnest, faithful, reliable officers are gone, but they have left the imprint of their footsteps behind them, and their labors and counsels will be cherished and remembered while the temple of the Workmen stands. I briefly call attention to the above, leaving to a committee a suitable expression of our sorrow at these bereavements.

Mountain Lodge, No. 105

In November, 1882, I received the unpleasant news that our brethren at Truckee had again suffered from fire in homes and Lodge room, losing everything, and taking all of the surroundings into consideration I permitted them to ask a trifle each from their sister Lodges to put them once more in working order. A circular was issued, and the following contributions were the result: Fidelity Lodge, No. 136, $5; Spartan, 36, $5; Forest, 124, $10; Bay View, 159, $5; Washington, 60, $5; Manzanita, 154, $2.50; Gilroy, 26, $5; Tulare, $10; Franklin, 44, $5; Harmony, 9, $5; Main Top, 156, $10; San Rafael, 24, $5; El Dorado, 188, $5; Triumph, 180, $20; Navarro, 200, $5; Los Gatos, 76, $5; Santa Ana, 82, $3.75; Olympic, 127, $5; Highland, 104, $5; Golden Gate, 8, $2.50; Los Alamos, 29, $5; Hercules, 53, $5; Marysville, 38, $5; Oak Leaf, 35, $5; Shasta, 71, $5; Lake, 135, $5; Alameda, 5, $2.50; Protection, 16, $5; Portersville, 199, $5; Reliance, 93, $2.50; Smartsville, 119, $2.50; Sierra City, 125, $2.50; Total, $173.75. When the brethren had replaced their regalia, books, etc., at a cost of $100.75, they forwarded to me the balance, $73.00, with a request to return it pro rata. As there were four Lodges that contributed over $5, it was determined to return the surplus over said amount to said Lodges (amounting to $30), and then to return to the Lodges 30% of their original subscription (amounting to $42.90). If the representatives of the Lodges above named will call during the session at the Grand Recorder's office, the pro rata will be paid to them by Bro. J. W. Watson.

J. A. Calhoun—John Chrisman.

Bro. J. A. Calhoun was drowned at Astoria, Oregon. The body was not found, but the evidence sent by his employers, and the testimony of reliable witnesses, were of such a character as to warrant the Grand officers in ordering the assessment, and paying the amount of $2,000 to his widow, Mrs. Grace S. Calhoun.

A similar case was the death, by drowning, of Brother John Chrisman, at Cascade Locks, Oregon, in which similar proofs were required; received, and similar action taken.

Instruction, Etc.

To secure uniformity and correctness in "work," has ever been the aim of true lovers of fraternal orders. That each officer of every lodge should use precisely the same language in rendering the instructions, and make the signs, etc., alike, is a result worthy of earnest effort by all. E. F. Loud, Deputy Grand Master, from the time that the new work was promulgated, has labored assiduously for this purpose, and many throughout the State have given time and thought to this subject. In this city, especially, my untiring and able deputies have worked nobly to achieve this end, and therefore, when at a recent meeting of officers and members, it was suggested to hold regular "Schools of Instruction," or "Fraternal Institutes," for the purpose of exemplifying, instructing, and illustrating the work, and that committees from every Lodge be invited to be present at the sessions, the plan and idea met my hearty approval, and under the law permitting the G. M. W. to hold special meetings, etc., I authorized such gatherings to take place. I believe they will be productive of great practical good, and recommend their continuance.

New District.

I have deemed it of advantage to the Order to create a new district in Alameda county, composed of San Leandro, No. 12;

Haywards, No. 18; and Eden, No. 204, at San Lorenzo, and placed the same under the care of E. A. Webb, as Deputy, with the title of District No. 7, of Alameda.

General Relief Committee.

Again, I call to your attention this practical and worthy body, and its unselfish fraternal work. Steadily and perseveringly this committee has labored, doing good on the right hand and left hand; visiting the sick, relieving the needy stranger brother and his family, aiding the distressed, obtaining employment for applicants, and in a score of ways carrying out its benevolent object. Its area of usefulness is only confined by the limit of its resources, and any assistance or co-operation that this Grand Lodge can extend, will be seed cast upon waters, that will return a hundred-fold.

Public Assemblies.

If I were to be asked for the main reason why our Order during the past few years has gone so far in advance of all similar fraternities in increase of membership and reputation, without hesitancy I would answer, because of its numerous successful public gatherings, and the familiarizing of the public with its practical results, aims and objects. What an Order constantly needs is new members. A Grand Master might make one hundred visits to Lodges, exemplify the work before the brethren, and so far as those present were concerned, render the visit enjoyable; but this would not obtain new members, save incidentally, but when thousands of citizens who are not members are reached by public addresses, the instances are numerous where from five to as many as twenty applications have been presented to the Lodge at its next session, and in some cases parties present who resided in localities have gone to work and formed new Lodges. The Good Templars understand the value of this and keep from seven to ten lecturers in the field all the time, with good results. Other fraternal Orders have traveling deputies and lecturers, whom I have met throughout the State. Our own Order provides for the office of Grand Lecturer, but under such restrictions that it can scarcely be made of general practical service.

I have not appointed any Grand Lecturer during either of my terms, and with the assistance of Bro. Loud have personally attended to the duties of the position; but that public addresses regularly in different points of the State are essential to the continued increase of this or any Order is, in my judgment, beyond all question. To give even briefly an account of the great gatherings that have taken place during the term would fill a volume.

To one and all I hereby tender my sincere thanks for the generous and enthusiastic courtesy I have received at every point visited, and I urge upon them a continuance of these assemblages, and a continuance of those rules of decorum and freedom from the presence of liquors, that have made the celebration of the A. O. U. W. so great a success, and won the respect of fathers and mothers and the good-will of every citizen who desires the elevation and purity of mankind.

"Pacific States Watchman."

Again I take pleasure in recognizing, officially, this standard journal of our Order. The energy that characterized its inception has never flagged. I find its reporter by my side, at home and abroad, and its pages ever present an index of our onward progress. Worthy of the great Order it represents, worthy of the lodge-room and the home-circle, let it be our privilege as well as duty to aid in its still greater value and circulation, not only by our pens, but by our subscriptions.

Officials.

And what shall I say of my faithful official staff, with whom I have so long been in constant association. As Brother Jordan's Grand Lecturer, Brother Taylor's Grand Foreman, and your Executive for over two years, four years of active service have passed away, years fraught with history to our Order.

Brother Pratt still stands at the post of Grand Recorder, the duties of which he so faithfully performs, with Brother Watson by his side, and every working day that I have been in the city, we have met him for consultation and examination of papers. Our good Grand Recorder,—honest, faithful and true—may the Father above grant him still a long, happy, and useful life.

Brother Haile, also, our trusty Receiver, who files his great bond ere the ink is dry on the last day's proceedings of the Grand Lodge, handling hundreds of thousands of dollars in a term, and no deficit ever reported.

Brother Loud, who conferred my first degree upon me, and who, for years, as Deputy Grand Master, has aided and labored in the great work, who goes by steamer, or rail, or otherwise, cheerfully and w to any point, as time, opportunity and circumstances require.

The faithful Finance Committee, discharging its intricate and tedious duties, at regular intervals, with an ability and service that in business life would command grand salaries.

The reliable, painstaking Committee of Appeals, the careful Committee on Laws and Supervision, and the able Committee on Amendments, are doing our work, free gratis, without pecuniary reward, or the hope thereof.

The position of your Grand Officers and Committees are no sinecures. They demand, and are entitled to the best efforts and time of those upon whom they are bestowed. They are not "ornamental," but "working" places, and no brother should accept any of them unless intending to perseveringly discharge the duties thereof. The interests, pecuniary, as well as fraternal, have assumed such immense proportions that this Order can not afford to jeopardize them in any particular.

Brethren, do you realize how grateful we all should be for these unselfish efforts of these noble men? The National Life Insurance Company, with policies insuring less than $17,000,000, pays annually for salaries and advertising $57,000. The A. O. U. W., of California, carries over $30,000,000 on its membership, and pays for salaries, rent, contingent expenses and stationery, all told, only $6,600 annually, and, adding the entire cost of representation and pro rata tax to Supreme Lodge, with expense of our Grand Lodge session, and mileage and per diem of our 250 representatives, the entire cost is but $13,100. Compare the difference, and it is not difficult to answer the question, how the A. O. U. W. can guarantee $1,000 for half the price charged by a company.

To all of these officials I give a brother's best wishes, that long may they be spared to labor in the cause of active benevolence, and peace and happiness be theirs, here and hereafter.

Conclusion

I have reached the conclusion of my report, and the work is before you for your examination. That errors have been made, who can doubt? Perfection is not guaranteed to man. If all has not been accomplished that might have been, I can conscientiously say I have done what I could, and according to the light vouchsafed me, have acted fairly, honestly and impartially to each and every individual Lodge and member thereof, without exception, to my knowledge.

California's name and reputation stands high in the Supreme Lodge, and throughout the National jurisdiction. Second to none in the status and ability of its membership and liberality, second to only one in numerical strength, its star glitters brightly in the diadem of our great fraternity. May its luster never dim, nor its brilliancy and beauty ever tarnish, but its strength and influence continue to increase as year after year is gathered into history.

For errors made, I crave, in confidence, your charity and good will, and as the mighty mountain's peaks are illumined by the rays of the sinking sun long after the valley is in shadow, may I not hope that this great Order, after the mantle of office has fallen, will retain a kindly remembrance of one who has endeavored, even if ineffectually, to carry forward its heaven-appointed mission.

Fraternally yours, WM. H. BARNES.

VALUE OF SUNSHINE. There is a vital relation between sunshine and the human body. Living in the shade is a prolific source of disease among women. A potato grown in a cellar is pale, sickly and worthless; expose it to the sunlight and it begins to show color, strength and power. Rear your daughter in the parlor, and she is pale and sickly; expose her to the sun, and its health-giving, direct rays soon commence to influence her health; keep increasing the daily amount, and from the invigorating sunshine she soon gathers health, strength and beauty. From experiments made with difficult diseases, I find the truest science of success lies in the use made of sunshine. Would poor, suffering women be galvanized into health, let them expose themselves daily for hours at a time to these life-giving rays (if possible without clothing,) always protecting the head by a shade, while the remainder of the body is drinking in vitality, and, other things being equal, health is sure to bless the effort. Dr. Larkin.

THE ANNOYING HOUSE FLY.—In addition to the other annoyances connected with the presence of the common house fly, Dr. Thomas Taylor, of Washington, D. C., has made some investigations, from which it would appear that that insect is possessed of the capacity for transmitting disease by carrying the germs from place to place. This fact has long been suspected, but we know of no careful experiments having before been made to establish the facts in the case.

A. O. U. W. in Grand Council.

The committee further reported that the following Lodges have not made returns of representatives: Nos. 39, 61, 65, 81, 168, 186, 195, 216, 217.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Upon calling the Grand Lodge to order, the Grand Master Workman, Wm. H. Barnes, read his report [published elsewhere in this issue.]

Report of Grand Recorder, H. G. Pratt

To the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., of California. Sirs and Brothers: In accordance with my duty, as prescribed by law, I have the honor to submit my annual report for the fiscal year 1882.

It is a source of much pleasure to report the continued prosperity of the Order in this jurisdiction, and that universal harmony and satisfaction prevail.

Membership.

We began the year with 13,943 members, and closed with 15,432, a net gain of 1,489. We lost by death 132, and from other causes, 662, a total of 794. To meet our losses required, nineteen assessments, from which was realized the sum of $271,055. If the future shall give us the same ratio of death losses, and the same proportion from other causes to those by death, it will show that if every member who joins the Order remained in till he died, we should have to pay eighty-seven assessments per year, instead of nineteen. As this would prove the average expectancy of life of our membership to be but twenty-three years, while the expectancy tables would give it as twenty-eight years, our average membership age being 38.28, we conclude that we may reasonably expect not more than eighteen assessments per year on the average.

Semi-Annual Reports.

A portion of the tables presented herewith is compiled from the semi-annual reports of subordinate Lodges, and would be much more comprehensive but from the fact that the reports are manifestly so full of errors that any showing, based thereon, would be faulty and misleading. I should have returned them for correction, but the magnitude of such an undertaking was so apparent, and the time so short after many of the reports were received, that I thought proper to make the best use possible of the matter they contained, and present the subject to the Grand Lodge for such action as in the wisdom of this body might be deemed best.

Beneficiary Fund.

I am persuaded that many Lodges, in violation of law, keep but one fund, and pay the calls of the Grand Lodge for beneficiary moneys out of that, if they have money enough, and if not, they wait till they collect from the members. As a result, remittances are not made with that promptitude which should be the case, and the payment of death losses is thereby necessarily delayed. Such a practice begets carelessness and demoralization, injuring the whole Order, and at the same time doubly injuring such Lodges as are guilty of this reprehensible practice. Disregard of one important law is sure to breed contempt for all law, and then the road to anarchy and ruin is short, and quickly followed to the end.

Monthly Reports.

Another source of much annoyance is the delay of many Recorders in forwarding their monthly reports. Every month there are from thirty to forty delayed beyond the middle of the succeeding month for which report is made, and our Lodge registers are all that time kept in an imperfect condition. Representatives are earnestly requested to see if a reformation can not be made in this important matter wherever needed.

The Remedy.

It is believed that a complete remedy for the evils would be found in requiring that in the Order of Business, of each and every subordinate Lodge, should be the questions: "Have all assessments due on call of the Grand Lodge been transmitted to the Grand Recorder?" "Has the monthly report for the previous month been forwarded to the Grand Recorder?" The asking of these questions would quicken the memory of officers if their duties had been overlooked, and inform the Lodge in case of neglect.

Rituals.

The ritual receipts forwarded show a loss of one ritual each by eleven Lodges, and one Lodge is short two. What course to pursue in this matter is a question of doubt, and is respectfully submitted to the Grand Lodge.

Rejections.

During the fiscal year there were 306 rejections of candidates. Of these ninety were rejected by the Lodge physicians, 172 by the Lodges, eight by the Grand Master before the enactment of the law creating a Board of Examiners, and thirty-six by said Board. The causes for rejection by the Board appear in the report of the Grand Master.

Chief Medical Examiner.

As it will devolve upon this Grand Lodge to provide for a Chief Medical Examiner, or Examining Board, it may not be amiss to suggest that whatever action be taken, it should be with reference to having the duty of examining daily the reports as transmitted to the Examiner, or Examiners, for any delay in this regard will work great injury to the Order. Provision should be made for filling any vacancy promptly. It is submitted that one important prerogative of the supervising authority should be to re-examine and accept or reject such candidates as may not be satisfied with the decision of the Lodge Examiner, or as it may be thought desirable for any reason to re-examine.

Settlement of Losses.

Many questions of a serious and perplexing character arise in connection with the settlement of death losses. A considerable portion of our membership is engaged in maritime pursuits. Frequently losses occur at sea where no one is left to tell the tale of how or when the disaster occurred. Some rule should be prescribed by the Grand Lodge for the government of its officers in this regard.

Posthumous Re-Issues.

We have sometimes an application come into the office for the re-issue of a beneficiary certificate after the member applying is known to be dead. That is, the preliminary work of filling and signing the paper by the member, and the attesting by the Recorder of the Lodge is done while the member is still alive, but before it can reach this office he is dead. As I am in doubt as to the legality of issuing a new certificate under such circumstances, the matter is submitted for instruction.

Office Insecure.

We need a better safe for the protection of our books and other valuable matters. At the last session authority was given a committee to purchase one, but the condition of the treasury has at no time been such as to warrant the outlay. We are liable at any time to meet with some great and irreparable loss from fire or burglary.

Degree of Honor.

The Degree of Honor may be considered as in a flourishing condition, so far, at least, as the organization of new Lodges is concerned; but the laws for their government are meager, and what we have are not very strictly regarded. But few have sent in any semi-annual reports, and little is known of most of these Lodges, except the fact of their existence. I am firmly grounded in the opinion that unless we make these Lodges beneficial, or provide that they may become such, the fate that has overtaken them in other jurisdictions must inevitably compass their destruction here. No doubt with a beneficial feature for such as might desire the benefits of its provisions, and be properly eligible, would make this degree a source of much pleasure and strength to our Order; but to leave the matter in its present condition is to destroy all hope for permanent benefit in the hearts of its best friends.

Business Showing.

In the financial mortuary, and other tables submitted herewith, will be found much valuable and interesting matter, giving some idea of the magnitude of the business we are conducting. When we remember that nearly all of this money collected and disbursed is for the protection of the homes of our people, and to meet the wants of the widows and orphans of our deceased members, it becomes apparent that not only is our Order a great benevolent institution, but a public benefactor, as well.

Conclusion.

In conclusion, I desire to thank our excellent Grand Master, Wm. H. Barnes, for his uniform courtesy, friendly council and wise suggestion, by which I have been greatly assisted in the performance of my duties. Few will ever fully appreciate the magnitude of the valuable labor he has rendered the Order. The Grand Receiver has been prompt and efficient in his duties, keeping his great trust faithfully and inviolate. Our relations have been in every way pleasant. Again I thank the Finance Committee for their promptitude, care, and efficiency. So long as we have the services of such a faithful committee, no fear need be entertained for the honest conduct of our affairs. Finally, to all officers and brethren, my kindest regards are extended. They have confided great and important trusts to my keeping, and I have done what I could to merit the confidence reposed.

Financial Exhibit.

Below will be found a full exhibit of the financial transactions of the Grand Recorder's office for the fiscal year beginning January 1, and ending December 31, 1882.

The report of C. H. Haile, Grand Receiver, containing essentially the figures given in other reports is not deemed of interest for publication.

Report of Grand Trustees.

To the G. L. of A. O. U. W. of Cal. BROTHERS:—Your Grand Trustees submit the following report. We have examined the books and accounts of the Grand Recorder's and Grand Receiver's offices and find them properly kept and in good condition. The records show the following facts:

Cash on hand Jan. 1, 1882.....	$ 3,896.43
Receipts from all sources to Jan. 1, 1883.....	292,155.05

We have calculated the probable revenue and expense of this Grand Lodge for the ensuing year, and submit the following estimate:

REVENUE.
15,400 members at 60 cents per capita.....	$9,240.00
500 members at 60 cents per capita.....	300.00
500 members at 30 cents per capita.....	150.00

Salary of Grand Recorder, including pay of Assistant.....	$3,500.00
Contingent expenses of Grand Recorder's office at $75 per month.....	900.00
Rent of Grand Recorder's office.....	600.00
Printing and stationery.....	250.00
Grand Receiver's salary.....	400.00
Contingent expense, Grand Master Workman.....	750.00
Four officers and representatives of Supreme Lodge, in addition to mileage, $100 each.....	400.00
260 representatives and officers of Grand Lodge, three days at $2.....	1,560.00
Mileage for same.....	2,540.00
Supreme Lodge tax on 17,000 members at 10 cents.....	1,700.00
Expenses of Grand Lodge session.....	500.00
Total.....	$13,300.00

The General Fund is about $1,500.00 short of the amount required to pay the year's expenses; it was also short about the same sum on the preceding year, and as an increase of the per capita tax will not meet the present emergency, we recommend that Article V, sec. 5, of the Grand Lodge Constitution, be so amended as to cut off the per diem of Representatives and officers, and allow their traveling expenses only. By so doing, the arrearage will be paid up in one year's time, without the necessity of increasing the per capita tax. We also recommend that appropriations be made in accordance with the above estimate.

Report of Finance Committee.

G. L. A. O. U. W. of Cal.: We, your Finance Committee, would respectfully report, that since the last session of the Grand Lodge, we have examined each month the books and vouchers of the Grand Recorder, and each quarter those of the Grand Receiver, and have invariably found them correct and in due form.

Your Committee would also report that, in compliance with the law, they invited proposals for printing and stationery for the current year, and sent specifications to several firms.

Upon opening bids, we found that of A. L. Bancroft & Co. the lowest, and the contract awarded to them at the same rate as that allowed them last year.

We would again call the attention of the members present, to the necessity of the Lodges always sending a full and correct remittance report with each sum of money sent to the Grand Recorder as that is the only check the committee have on the receipts of that office.

In conclusion, we would return thanks for the courtesies of the Grand officers, Bros. Pratt, Haile, and Brother J. W. Watson, the able and efficient assistant of the Grand Recorder, Bro. H. G. Pratt.

Respectfully submitted in C. H. and P.

PHILIP PECK,
E. H. MORGAN,
Finance Committee.

On motion, the reports of the Grand Recorder, Grand Receiver, Grand Trustees, and Finance Committee were referred to Committee on Distribution without being read.

The resolution of Wm. H. Jordan that the following telegram be sent to the Supreme Master Workman, was adopted.

"The Grand Lodge of California, now in sess' on in San Francisco, hereby sends its fraternal greeting to the Supreme Head of the Order."

Report of Supreme Representatives.

Bro. P. G. M. W. Jordan presented the following report of Supreme Lodge Representatives:

DEAR BRETHREN—At your last session, held in this city, you selected three delegates to represent you at the approaching convocation of the Supreme Lodge at Cincinnati, Ohio; of that number, one—Brother Past Grand Master Workman Taylor, we regret to say—was unable to go, and his place in the delegation was filled by the appointment of Brother Pratt.

Charged with your several commissions, this delegation reached Cincinnati on the evening of the 5th of June last, and at once repaired to the hotel, where we found a large number of delegates, from various States and Territories, already assembled.

On the following morning, at the sound of the gavel, we took our seats in the body of the Supreme Lodge, and continued in attendance upon the deliberations of that body at each sitting—never missing a single roll-call—until the final adjournment, on the morning of the 12th; and we think that it may be confidently asserted that much of the most important legislation enacted at that session sprang from the delegation representing this Grand Body.

The report of the Supreme Master Workman, Brother Baxter, was a document of far more than ordinary interest, both in the manner of its preparation, and the subject-matter contained. It was listened to throughout with the most profound attention, and when that portion was reached which recited the manner in which the revolting jurisdiction of Iowa had been handled, the reader was interrupted by prolonged and earnest applause, which foreshadowed, beyond all doubt, the reply which was soon to be given to H. B. Fouke, who then stood knocking at the door, asking admittance as a representative of the rebellious jurisdiction, and carrying in his hand a long and insidious document, in printed form, boldly asserting the doctrine of secession, and unblushingly abusing the Supreme Master for daring to enforce the laws of the Order, which provided the penalties for disobedience. As a further endorsement of the cause presented by Brother Baxter, the Supreme Lodge, at a later hour, re-elected him, by a large vote, to the Master's chair, thus paying him a compliment never before known in the history of the Order.

The reports of the Supreme Recorder and Supreme Receiver, each contained matter of interest and importance, but their details have already been laid before you in printed form. Both of these officers were re-elected to their stations by a unanimous voice. Upon leaving home you instructed us to obtain from the Supreme Lodge a law amending Sec. 2, of Art. IV, Supreme Lodge Constitution, so as to provide that certain Grand Lodges could have more than five votes, but in this we were unsuccessful, and we are thereby reminded to recommend to you that in future your representative be sent to the Supreme Lodge uninstructed, commending to their judgment such measures as you deem of importance, and trusting to their intelligence and good sense to do these things in your behalf, which will be proper and fit under controlling circumstances, but not tying them down, like children, without the aid of their intellectual capacity.

Our brethren of Cincinnati did all in their power to render our visit to their city most agreeable. Numerous excursions and entertainments were prepared for us, which served to relieve the tedium of the session, and bring us into a hearty and lasting sympathy with Ohio Workmen, and many will be the days that shall pass ere we forget the cordial grasp of their hands, or their words of cheerful greeting and affectionate adieu.

We are pleased again to inform you that our jurisdiction was honored a second time by the re-election of Past Grand Master Workman Fish to the chair of Supreme Foreman. We were also given the Chairmanship of a Special Committee on Ritual, besides being intrusted with other important and arduous duties.

We omit the report of the amendments to the laws of the Order which were adopted by the Supreme Lodge.—ED.

The Grand Lodge received and accepted invitations to attend the following subordinate Lodges in San Francisco, Fidelity Lodge, No. 136, Valley 30, Unity, 27, Triumph, 180, and Olympic, 127.

Second Day, A. M.

The Grand Master appointed Bro. J. N. Long on Committee on Laws and Supervisions vice W. C. Flint, absent; and a Memorial Committee vide elsewhere.

At half-past ten A. M., the special order—election of Grand officers—having arrived, the Grand Master Workman called the Grand Foreman to the chair, and thereupon tendered his resignation as Grand Master, which, on motion of Brother C. K. Robinson, of No. 35, was accepted, and Grand Foreman Jas. T. Rogers, then assumed the duties of Grand Master Workman.

Election of Officers.

The Grand Lodge then proceeded to the election of officers.

J. G. Jewell, of No. 179, and J. J. Hayes, of No. 30, were appointed Tellers.

Past Master Workman Wm. H. Jordan, placed in nomination for Grand Master Workman, the present acting Grand Master Workman James T. Rogers.

On motion of J. G. Jewell, the nominations were declared closed, and the Grand Recorder was directed to cast the ballot of the Grand Lodge in favor of Grand Master Workman James T. Rogers. The ballot was so cast, and the Grand Foreman declared James T. Rogers elected Grand Master Workman for the ensuing term.

Brother D. S. Hirschberg, of No. 35, placed in nomination for Grand Foreman Brother David McClure, of No. 127; Brother Samuel Booth, of No. 126, nominated Brother E. Danforth, of No. 136.

Nominations were declared closed and the Grand Lodge proceeded to ballot on roll call, with the following result: Total number of ballots cast, 252; of which David McClure received 157 and E. Danforth received 95.

David McClure having received a majority of all the votes cast, was declared elected as Grand Foreman for the ensuing term, and on motion of E. Danforth, of No. 136, the election was declared unanimous.

Nominations for Grand Overseer were made as follows:

C. K. Robinson nominated for Grand Overseer M. S. Levy.

Wm. A. Brace, A. L. Hatheway.

H. C. Hinman, Duncan McPherson.

A. A. Egleston, J. G. Severance.

Alfred Daggett, A. P. Murgotten.

H. T. Smith, Alfred Daggett, who declined.

W. W. Morrison, C. K. Robinson, who declined.

W. B. Lyon, H. S. Ball.

The ballot for Grand Overseer was deferred until after recess.

The Grand Master Workman appointed Brother C. E. Wilson, of No. 136, on the Committee on Appeals and Grievances, vice Henry Vrooman, absent.

The Grand Lodge then took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Grand Lodge was called to order by Grand Master Workman Jas. T. Rogers, and a quorum was found to be present.

The Grand Lodge then proceeded to ballot for Grand Overseer with the following result:

Total number of ballots cast, 212: of which M. S. Levy received, 23; A. L. Hatheway, 20; Duncan McPherson, 43; J. G. Severance, 25; A. P. Murgotten, 35; H. S. Ball, 64; Alfred Daggett, 2.

There being no election, a new ballot was ordered taken.

A. P. Murgotten, M. S. Levy, and H. S. Ball declined the nomination.

The time for the Special Order—the Bureau of Relief—having arrived, the consideration of the same was postponed until after the election of officers.

The result of the ballot was as follows:

Total number of ballots cast, 221: of which A. L. Hatheway received 22; Duncan McPherson, 139; J. G. Severance, 50; H. S. Ball, 7; Scattering, 3.

Duncan McPherson, having received a majority of all the votes cast, was declared elected Grand Overseer for the ensuing term.

D. S. Hirschberg, nominated Brother H. G. Pratt for Grand Recorder; and, on motion of Brother Henry Hoerber, nominations were declared closed, and Grand Receiver C. H. Haile, was directed to cast the ballot of the Grand Lodge in favor of Brother H. G. Pratt for Grand Recorder. The ballot being so cast, H. G. Pratt was declared elected Grand Recorder for the ensuing term.

W. B. Lyon, nominated Brother C. H. Haile for Grand Receiver; on motion the nominations were declared closed, and the Grand Recorder was directed to cast the vote of the Grand Lodge, in favor of C. H. Haile, for Grand Receiver. The ballot being cast, Brother C. H. Haile was declared elected Grand Receiver for the ensuing term.

The following Brothers were placed in nomination for the office of Grand Guide: Oscar Robinson, of No. 66; O. N. Kent, of No. 218; Henry Brown, of No. 13; Seneca Davis, of No. 118; D. M. Blank, of No. 80; J. H. Flint, of No. 38; John Taylor, of No. 120; F. W. Rossbach, of No. 127.

Brothers O. N. Kent, F. W. Rossbach, and J. H. Flint declined the nomination.

The Grand Lodge proceeded to ballot, with the following result:

Whole number of votes cast, 225; of which Oscar Robinson received 11; Henry Brown, 8; John Taylor, 5; D. M. Blank, 4; and Seneca Davis, 197. Seneca Davis having received a majority of all the votes cast, was declared elected Grand Guide for the ensuing term, and on motion his election was declared unanimous.

J. E. Prewett nominated Brother Alvin Fay, of No. 106, for Grand Watchman.

On motion, nominations were declared closed and the Grand Recorder was directed to cast the ballot of the Grand Lodge in favor of Alvin Fay for Grand Watchman.

The ballot being cast, Alvin Fay was declared elected Grand Watchman for the ensuing term.

Past Master Workman Wm. H. Jordan, nominated Brother Chas. G. Reed, of No. 7, for Grand Trustee.

Brother E. M. Reading, nominated Brother H. B. Davidson, of No. 58.

Nominations were declared closed and the Grand Lodge proceeded to ballot with the following results:

Whole number of ballots, 179; of which H. B. Davidson received 98; Chas. G. Reed, 78; Scattering, 3.

Brother H. B. Davidson, having received a majority of the votes cast, was declared elected Grand Trustee for the ensuing term.

The Committee appointed to nominate Corporate Directors presented the following names: J. T. Rogers, H. G. Pratt; Will G. Hawtett, No. 6; E. F. Loud, 30; J. H. Flint, 38; J. Davis, 41; W. W. Morrison, 53; Oscar Robinson, 66; A. P. Murgotten, 17; A. G. Read, 22; H. C. Hubbard, 214.

The Grand Recorder, on motion, cast the ballot for the Brothers named who were declared elected Corporate Directors for the ensuing term.

On motion, all the Past Grand Master Workmen were placed in nomination for Representatives to the Supreme Lodge.

Past Master Workman Wm. H. Barnes declined the nomination.

On motion of Brother J. M. Baird, of No. 27, the three Past Grand Master Workmen receiving the highest number of votes, and having a majority of all votes cast, to be declared elected.

The Grand Lodge proceeded to ballot, with the following result:

Whole number of ballots, 177: of which Wm. H. Barnes received 36; Jas. T. Rogers, 162; H. G. Pratt, 23; Wm. H. Jordan, 132; Clay W. Taylor, 91; and M. T. Brewer, 89. Past Grand Master Workmen James T. Rogers, Wm. H. Jordan, and Clay W. Taylor, having received the highest number and a majority of all the votes cast, were by the Grand Foreman, declared elected Supreme Representatives for the ensuing term.

The list of new officers and appointments of the Grand Master Workman will be found in our A. O. U. W. Directory, on page 132.

Thursday A. M.

There was an unusually large attendance of officers and Representatives present at the forenoon session of the Grand Lodge.

The Supreme Master Workman sent the following telegram in answer to one sent from this city to him yesterday:

Many thanks. May the future of California be incessantly prosperous.

WM. H. BAXTER, S. M. W.

The proposition of having public installations was approved, and the G. M. W. was authorized to review and prepare for use the installation ceremonies.

A committee was appointed to select and appoint a State Medical Examiner, whose compensation should be twenty-five cents per certificate, to be paid by the applicants examined. The P. G. M. W., G. M. W. G. R. constitute the committee.

A constitution and by-laws were adopted for the Degree of Honor, permitting a beneficiary feature. The vote for this was almost unanimous, and it is conceded to be a valuable action in favor of the Degree of Honor, and of great benefit both to that Degree and the Order at large.

We will give a summary of the report of the Committee on Appeals and Grievances at a future time.

The Grand Master Workman was authorized to appoint a committee of one to compile the laws, decisions, etc., under the title of "Digest of California, A. O. U. W."

The report of D. Thomson, Chairman of Memorial Committee, paying a glorious tribute to the memories of Charles Campbell and H. A. Oliver, Deputies, was adopted by a rising vote.

EVENING SESSION.

At the evening session, J. N. McCurdy, P. G. M. W. of Nevada, was introduced by W. H. Jordan, P. G. M., and received a welcome from the presiding officer.

The Committee on Resolutions reported favorably on the following, offered by A. O. Carpenter:

To the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W.—In view of the great good offices of the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN to our Order generally, and to traveling brothers especially, I desire to offer the following resolution, believing that our organ deserves at our hands a hearty specific approval; therefore,

Resolved, That we consider the complete form in which the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN has for several years published the list of subordinate Lodges of this jurisdiction, with the names of their (presiding and recording) officers, and time and place of meeting, is a great convenience and benefit to our Order, and we would recommend that each and every Lodge continue the publication of its card, and afford such other support to our excellent society paper as their means will allow, and, further, urge each member of our Order to give it countenance and material aid.

Adopted.

The G. M. W. was authorized to permit the issuance of a circular asking contributions for the widow of W. S. Lucky, formerly a member of the Order, but who was not in good standing at the time of his death.

Action was taken requesting the Supreme Representatives to endeavor to procure legislation at the Supreme Lodge, whereby if a member had been unjustly expelled or suspended, upon his reinstatement said member would not have to pass a medical examination, the opinion being held that a reinstatement, under said circumstances, placed the member in the same position he was in before said expulsion or suspension.

The number of representatives and P. M. W. in attendance during the session was 336.

It is ordered that the proposed amendments constituting the rules and system of the relief committee should be referred to a committee, and by them sent to Lodges, asking for action by said Lodges, and the result reported at the next session.

The officers were then installed by M. W. Fish, Supreme Foreman, assisted by P. G. M. W., Wm. H. Jordan.

The bonds of the Grand Recorder were fixed at $15,000, and those of the Grand Receiver at $30,000, the same as before.

The report of the Committee on Amendments and action thereon will be given in the next issue of the WATCHMAN.

Further information of the proceedings will be given in future issues of the WATCHMAN.

BRO. J. MEREDITH DAVIES, General Agent for the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, has been a resident of our city for three years. He is known as a prominent and honored member of the leading fraternal societies, and by his general manner, politeness, integrity, and honest dealing with the traveling public, has become a great favorite. Parties desiring information or a trip east will be correctly equipped by applying to J. Meredith Davies, No. 2 New Montgomery, Palace Hotel.—Com.

BRO. H. C. DODGE'S City Transfer and Delivery Co., No. 3 Post street, is deserving of patronage. His large experience and responsibility, together with a deduction of twenty five per cent in charges, is giving him the leading position as a common carrier in this line.

THE Protrero Ranch dairy, of which Bro. William Schlothman is proprietor, furnishes pure milk to families at the lowest rates. Those wishing milk from one cow can have it. Orders addressed, W. Schlothman, Howard and Third streets, will be promptly filled and satisfaction guaranteed.

The Fireside.

Home.

Oh! what is home? that sweet companionship
Of life the better part;
The happy smile of welcome on the lip
Upspringing from the heart.

It is the eager clasp of kindly hands,
The long remembered tone,
The ready sympathy which understands
All feeling by its own.

The rosy cheek of little children pressed
To ours in loving glee;
The presence of our dearest, and our best,
No matter where he be.

And, failing this, a prince may homeless live,
Though palace walls are high;
And, having it, a desert shore may give
The joy wealth cannot buy.

Far reaching as the earth's remotest span,
Widespread as ocean foam,
One thought is sacred in the breast of man—
It is the thought of home.

That little word his human fate shall bind
With destinies above,
For there the home of his immortal mind
Is in God's wider love.

Edna Gray.

(By FANNIE ISABELLE SHERRICK.)

Edna Gray sat at her desk in the little old fashioned schoolhouse, looking through the windows upon the snow-covered hills beyond. An open letter lay in her lap and it had evidently brought her sad thoughts, for she leaned her head upon her hand and sighed wearily.

She was thinking of her home so far away in the beautiful western country, where even now she knew that the flowers were blooming. She could hear the sound of the broad Pacific as it broke in waves upon the shore, and catch a gleam of the sunset as it fell on the distant mountains. Here, in Vermont, were bleak, snow-covered hills and desolate valleys—there, in California, were fruit-laden vineyards and hillsides wreathed in blossoms. The little home that she loved so well was warm with sunshine, and she fancied she could almost catch the scent of the flowers as they grew in the garden. It made her homesick, and, for a moment she almost wished that she had never seen these cold New England States, so much did she long for the sunny hills of her native State. The children had all gone home long ago; even the little stragglers, who loitered night after night just to walk down the road with her, had seen how preoccupied she was and stolen away, one by one, whispering to one another that Miss Edna was almost crying.

She thought she was quite alone, so she did not check the tears that came unbidden to her eyes.

But she was not alone, for some one stood at the door.

"Miss Edna—pardon me." A tall form stood at her side, and a pair of handsome eyes looked down upon her.

She rose hastily and brushed the tears away. But she need not have feared, for there was surprise in his eyes and tenderness in his voice when he spoke.

"Dear Miss Edna, pray pardon me. I did not mean to intrude, but I was passing and I thought I would stop and take you home in my sleigh. The roads are almost impassable, and though you have not far to go, the walk will be quite disagreeable."

"Oh, thank you; how very kind to think of me," Edna looked up gratefully through the mists that still moistened her eyes. "I will be ready in a moment."

And soon they were flying down the road that led from the village to the little brown house that Edna now called her home.

Once in the sleigh behind Dr. Ludington's fast horse, Edna's sad spirits took wing, and her fair face dimpled over with smiles. The keen wind brought the roses to her cheeks, and her eyes brightened like stars beneath the magic of kind words and thoughtful attentions.

Dr. Ludington looked down upon her bright face with admiration. For a long time there had been a fascination in her dark eyes that he could scarce resist—but he was a man of ambition, and he knew that a Vermont school teacher was not the woman he should love—no matter how pretty she might be. He was young, handsome, on the road to success and fortune, and the woman he would marry must be a stepping-stone to greater renown and riches. All this he thought of, and he was a dangerous man to win the love of such a girl as Edna Gray.

He wrapped her up snugly in the warm robes, tucking them around her securely, and Edna fancied his arm rested around her just a moment longer than was necessary, but she smiled at herself for the fancy.

As they turned down the road that led from the village to her home, he said:

"Is it too cold to ride longer?"

"Oh, no, go on. I enjoy this bracing air. It is delightful, charming, it almost makes one feel like a sprite of the air to go dancing along in this fashion. Remember, I was born in a climate where snow seldom falls, and these beautiful rides over the crisp snow are full of pleasure and novelty."

He looked at her and smiled, and the smile deepened the roses on her cheeks, and the glow in her eyes. It was indeed a novelty to know that such a man as Dr. Ludington cared to give her pleasure. She had always thought of him as one far removed—a prince, whom she might admire, but always from a distance—so kind, almost like Herman Rodgers, dear, good Herman, whom she loved as her own brother.

And she felt so happy—this dear little Edna, whose soul was as far above Hugh Ludington's as the stars are above the earth—happy because he smiled on her and talked to her of the things she loved to hear, and his voice made music in her ears.

Edna thought she had never seen the woods half so beautiful as they were on that winter's day—the trees drooping beneath their weight of ice and snow, and crowned with diadems of glistening gems. Fences were fringed with jewels, and hedges were wreathed in chains of crystal leaves. It was like some beautiful land, some far off fairy-land that she had read and dreamed of.

"What a beautiful world this is!" she said softly—"all robed in white. It is like death—so calm, so white, so full of peace. It were as though the earth had died and all nature had come and laid flowers at her feet—snowy blossoms that one lays on the face of the dead. In her white shroud she lies, and the pale flowers lie on her breast and in her hair. Beautiful earth! even in winter's icy sleep her face is full of peace and love."

Hugh Ludington turned and looked at the girl at his side—but her face was turned from him and her dark eyes fixed on the distant snow-clad hills. This speech was a sudden revelation to him that waked him out of his own self-consciousness into a world that he knew was not his own. The girl whose profile was so clearly outlined against the waning light was more than he had thought her—and he knew by that far away look on her young face that her soul was beyond his reach.

But the thought nettled him, and he drew her back gradually into the world of reality and commonplace. Soon she had forgotten her strange fancies and was chatting away merrily.

When he lifted her out of the sleigh at the old-fashioned gate, he held her hand for a moment in his.

"Dear Edna," he said, smiling down upon her in his half imperious, half tender way, "I shall never forget this ride."

"Nor I," she smiled up into his face, as the flower looks up at the sun and reflects its radiance. "Good-bye."

In a moment he was gone, speeding away over the smooth roads, and carrying with him the best and purest thoughts of a fair girl-nature.

When Edna entered the house Herman Rodgers, who had been standing at the window, came forward to meet her.

"You must be cold," he said, and gently drew off her gloves and wraps—he was so like a woman in these little things, thoughtful and kind always.

Edna thanked him gratefully, as she warmed her hands at the blazing fire, but she did not see the wistful look that followed her as she left the room. Herman had seen the smile that had shone upon her face at parting with Hugh Ludington, and somehow its brightness had jarred upon him. He knew her face had never lit up that way for him, and the thought brought with it an undefined sadness.

And all the evening his eyes followed her with that same wistfulness. It was as though he had put her away from him as something out of his reach—something nobler, better, higher; too sacred and pure to be profaned by his love.

Herman was the only son of Mrs. Rodgers, who had been more than a mother to Edna since her aunt had died. The summer before, Edna had come to visit her aunt, with whom she expected to remain for some time; but very suddenly that aunt died, leaving Edna almost alone in a world which was very strange and new to her. Her first impulse had been to start for home, but the friends she had made prevailed upon her to stay. The little village children needed a schoolmistress very much, and they begged her to accept the position. And so she did, and until this evening she had never regretted it; even then her regret had been a mere fancy, and she had quickly thrown it away.

Dr. Ludington was a practicing physician in the town of H—, not very far from the little village which nestled so prettily among the picturesque hills. He had been eminently successful, and he seemed likely to out-distance any of his competitors in the town and neighborhood. Hugh Ludington was an ambitious man; so much so, that he would allow no obstacle to stand in his pathway. Highly educated, polished, gentlemanly and fascinating in his manner, it was no wonder that he was courted and petted in the highest circles of society.

During the summer he had met Edna at the home of a mutual friend in M—, and he had been much impressed with her fair face and girlish simplicity. Edna Gray was not beautiful, but there was a certain charm in her graceful manner, and a sudden lighting up of her dark eyes when she smiled that made one feel as though he had caught a sudden gleam of sunshine, or looked into the radiant heart of an opening flower.

Many times they had met after that, and each time they had seemed more and more attracted towards one another; but this last meeting had been the torch that set the wood aflame, and henceforth they were seldom apart.

Day after day Hugh Ludington's sleigh was seen at the door of the little school house, and day after day he lifted her from it with the same tender words of parting.

Night after night Edna Gray dreamed of the prince who lived in her thoughts by day, and each morning the love in her eyes deepened and grew more beautiful. Never yet had Hugh Ludington expressed his love for her in words—never yet had he said, "be my wife," but Edna knew that he loved her—knew it as many another woman has known it, by the tender light that lingered in his eyes when he looked upon her, and by the thousand and one acts that speak louder than words.

And Herman saw it all—saw it with clenched hands and tearless eyes, but said nothing. He knew she was not for him, this white lily that loved the sunshine. The man she loved would give her what her soul craved for—riches, refinement, society, culture, everything. And what could he give her? Nothing—only the love of an honest heart, that would work for her, slave for her, die for her; that was all—love and nothing more. He knew it and he gave her up willingly, unselfishly putting her memory away in his heart as we treasure the dead, sacredly, hopelessly. Once he had had a dream, but now he knew it was not for him, it had faded away forever.

And so the days glided away, full of peace and happiness to Edna—full of pain to the heart that she had never given a thought to, but had trampled upon itself for her sake. So do we in our blind human egotism cast aside the things that love us best.

But, one day Hugh Ludington went away, and he did not bid good-bye to the girl whose love he had won. Still, Edna thought nothing of it, for he was often called away hurriedly. He was gone several weeks, and when he returned he did not come as of old day after day to the school-room.

Edna waited. Day after day passed and still she waited for his coming. The days lengthened into weeks, and yet, the man who was ever present in her thoughts came not. Then the color began to die out of her face and a wistful look came into her eyes that pained the great, generous heart of Herman Rodgers. He set his teeth tight when he looked at her and cursed the man she loved.

One day he too went away. He told his mother he was going to Boston. Edna looked up as she caught the name. How familiar it sounded, it was the old home of Hugh Ludington, and how often she had heard him speak of it. She wondered why Herman was going there, but she felt so little interest in his life and actions that she did not question him.

When he came back for a few days he was not like himself. His face looked almost stern, and he went about his work with a strange and preoccupied air. One day he came into the sitting-room where Edna was sitting with an open book before her, evidently trying to read, but her thoughts far away.

"Edna," he said, "I have something to say to you."

"Well!" the book dropped from her hand, and she looked at him questioningly.

"I have a letter from your friend Dr. Ludington."

She started from her seat, stretching forth her hand eagerly. A glad light crept over her face.

He shook his head. "It is yours, Edna, and you shall have it, but before I give it to you, I feel that I must tell you something—something that I would not have said, perhaps, had not this letter forced me to do it."

For a moment he hesitated, as though scarcely knowing how to proceed, and then he said, almost abruptly:

"Edna, Dr. Ludington is engaged to be married to a wealthy society girl in Boston. They will be wedded in May."

Not a sound came from Edna's lips, but she grew so white that Herman involuntarily put out his hand to keep her from falling.

"No, no," she put his hand away and turned to leave the room.

"Forgive me," he said gently, "I would not give you this pain only to save you from a greater sorrow."

She looked at him dumbly, gratefully. He felt as one who has stabbed some poor, helpless creature to the heart, and he looked at her pitifully, sorrowfully as he handed her the letter.

Without a word she took it, and scarcely glancing at the address dropped into the fire. She looked at it as it lay there—quivering, burning—and she knew that it was her own heart she had crucified in the flames. "So shall my love die," her soul seemed to say, and then she turned to Herman. Her lips were white and drawn, and her eyes looked at him with a strange pathos in their shadowy depths. He scarce recognized her.

"Tell me, Herman, did you go to Boston to find this out—to save me?"

"Yes," He bowed his head, lest his eyes should catch the misery in hers.

"I thank you." In that moment she had recognized the nobility of this man's nature. It flashed upon her like a sudden burst of light, and she scorned herself for having so blindly misjudged him. But even to him she could not show the heart that was writhing in its sudden anguish. With a proud look, hiding her pain as best she could, she passed from the room.

When she had gone, like one who curses himself for another's sin, Herman Rodgers threw himself into a chair and buried his face in his hands. He felt like he had trampled upon some tender flower that had lifted its head to catch the sunlight.

A little while later he went to his mother and told her all. "Go to her, mother," he said, "you can help her; I cannot."

Mrs. Rodgers knocked at the door of Edna's room, but received no answer. She opened the door softly and entered. There on the bed where she had thrown herself lay Edna, white and motionless. Mrs. Rodgers lifted her up tenderly and kissed her, but she did not open her eyes, only a faint moan came from her white lips. Mrs. Rodgers took her in her arms, and soothed her gently as one would some poor grief-stricken child.

"My head hurts," Edna said, putting her hand to her brow as though to ward off some deep pain.

"I know it, dear." Mrs. Rodgers' eyes filled with tears of pity. Once in her life she too had had a sorrow akin to this, and all the mother-love in her heart went out to this girl whom she loved as her own child, and she cared for her tenderly, lovingly.

All the evening Edna lay there with closed lids and white lips, and Mrs. Rodgers left her alone, for she knew that the pure young heart was battling with a love that had grown to be a part of itself; but in the night she stole into Edna's room, longing to know if the poor, tired eyes had closed in slumber.

Edna was tossing restlessly. She took hold of her hand; it was burning with fever; her head was hot and her temples throbbing. Mrs. Rodgers was alarmed, and she went to Herman.

"When it is light," she said, "go for Dr. Rush; Edna is ill, quite ill I fear." And all the night she watched beside Edna, caring for her as best she could in her simple, kindly way.

In the morning the kind, old doctor came bringing with him, as he always did, sunshine and kindly words.

But Edna did not know him, and for many days after that she knew no one, but lay tossing in the delirium of fever, with flushed cheeks and bright tearless eyes; and Herman and his mother watched her anxiously, fearing lest the frail life should go out into death, among these bleak northern hills, far away from her home and friends.

The little schoolhouse was closed, and every day little children with hushed voices stood outside the gate of the old fashioned farmhouse and asked about the dear teacher whom they loved so well. But Edna's thoughts were far away, and she did not know the many kind messages that came from loving little hearts.

But, at last, the struggling spirit triumphed over the frail body and Edna came back to live among them once more. One bleak day in March, when the snow had faded from the hills and left them brown and bare she opened her eyes and looked upon them. And the world seemed more desolate than ever to the proud young spirit that looked with pathetic eyes upon it.

But gradually her strength and health came back, and when the showery days of April came and clothed the hills in a green verdure, she went back to her school-room with a smile in her sad eyes for the little ones that came to meet her and who clustered around her with an eager love and questioning.

One morning in May Herman came into the sitting-room just before breakfast and laid a bunch of violets in her lap. Ah! how sweet they were; they brought back memories of her old home, where they did not lie hidden all winter under drifts of winter snows.

She looked up at him; her eyes filled with tears. How good this man was to her—always thoughtful, always kind, yet never intruding upon her silent sorrow. Once she had thought him clumsy, awkward, unrefined, uneducated; now she knew him to be noble, gentle, courteous—one of Nature's noblemen, indeed.

On the way to school that morning she held the violets in her hands, and somehow they gave her consolation and renewed strength. All the world was so lovely in its bright May-day dress that she could not shut out the new hopes that the sunshine and the spring blossoms seemed to bring.

Suddenly she stood still—coming down the road towards her, driving leisurely, was Hugh Ludington. Instinctively she grasped the bunch of violets more tightly, and their heavy perfume seemed to raise an invisible wall between him and her. As he neared her, he hesitated and drew the horses' reins as though he would stop and speak to her, but she bowed coldly and passed on.

In that moment she knew that her love for him was indeed dead, but the sight of him had brought back memories that were full of pain and regret. And all the day her eyes wore a troubled look and her face an added pallor. In three weeks he would bring home his bride; could she look upon that girl's fair face with calmness and resignation. No! not even though she loved him not, for what woman who has ever loved a man can look upon the face of his wife with a cold and passionless regret. Not one who had loved him as Edna had done.

The next morning, at the breakfast table, Edna said briefly:

"In two weeks, dear Mrs. Rodgers, the village school will be dismissed. The day after it closes I shall start for home."

Home! Herman looked up with a sudden pain on his kindly features. But he said nothing. Why should she not go home when she so longed for its rest and sunshine? Not for the world would he have held her back by a single word. But when she was gone he knew how lonely the house would be, how dreary and narrow the valleys between the Vermont hills.

And his mother, dear, good soul that she was, only put her arms around Edna's neck and cried softly. She too knew that the fierce New England winds had blown too rudely on this California wild flower. Once she had hoped something different—a hope that was born in her mother heart by the love she saw in Herman's eyes; but now she knew it would never be, and she gave up the hope unselfishly.

"Go, dear," she said gently, "If you feel it is for the best, but God only knows how lonesome we will be when you are gone. The house will have lost its sunshine indeed."

"Dear Mrs. Rodgers, how good you have been to me, and Herman, how kind; I can never repay you, but be sure that I shall never forget you." And she, too, could not keep back the tears that rose in her eyes at the thought of parting with these dear friends.

And Herman stole away leaving these two women together, for he would not throw the shadow of his own sorrow upon them. He would not mar the pleasure of Edna's going home by one thought of selfish longing.

And when June came, and the meadows were bright with flowers and the roses crept around the porch of the old house, Edna was far away, speeding away to the western coast.

And Herman, working in the yellow fields day after day, or standing at the hour of twilight with his face turned towards the distant hills, felt that life had grown to be a strange and sorrowful thing. For he felt that a light had gone out of his heart that even the sunshine of June could not replace. But he was patient and kind and he hid his sorrow out of sight that his mother might not know that it still was there.

The summer has passed away; and winter has set his seal upon the earth again; but the season which brings cold and desolation to the east, brings to this western coast only an added loveliness and bloom. Far away in Vermont the hills are covered with snow, and the summer flowers are cold and dead in their icy sleep; but here, in the "Golden State," the sun is warm and bright, and the hills are green and beautiful.

The quaint cottage that Edna calls her home is covered with vines heavy with blossoms, and Edna herself is busy in the garden, tending her loved flowers. Once in awhile she lifts her head, as though to catch a glimpse of the blue Pacific, whose crested waves break on the shore, or to feast her eyes on the purple mountains, bathed in the sunset glow. The sound of the distant ocean is music in her ears, and the sight of the mountains brings a glad light into her eyes. After awhile she pulls off her gloves and throws her garden hat upon a rustic seat, and wanders down to the gate.

It is almost dusk, but that roseate glow so peculiar to California sunsets still lingers around the horizon. She leans her elbow on the gate and rests her head upon her hand, she is dreaming, of what? perhaps of Herman Rodgers in his far off eastern home, and in fancy she can see the snow knee deep in the old lane and the stately elms bowed down almost to the ground beneath their icy covering. She wonders why Herman had not answered her last letter, written almost two months ago. It seems strange for him to be forgetful, dear Herman, whose worth she only begins to comprehend since he is so far away. She misses his kindly smile—his thoughtful words and something has come to her since she has been in home—the knowledge that Herman Rodgers had loved her. And she is filled with remorse at her blindness. How he must have suffered, poor Herman, and how nobly and unselfishly he hid his love lest he should give her added pain. She recalled looks, tones that she had not remembered then, and she knew that he had laid his heart at her shrine, asking no recompense, no recognition.

Soon she hears a foot-step on the walk. She lifts her head. Surely that form looks familiar. He puts his hand upon the gate and she opens it.

"Herman!"

"Edna!"

She puts out her hands and he takes them both in his own. Yes, it is Herman indeed—but Herman grown more handsome, more proud and refined. It were as though some great grief had passed over him and making his sun-browned face more calm and fair.

"Dear Edna," he said, looking down upon her sweet face with his kindly smile, "I came because there was something in your last letter that I could not resist. I thought you wanted me to come."

"I did," Edna dropped her eyes lest he should see their sudden flash of happiness.

"Mother is dead," he said, a sad look coming on his face, and his words were almost a sob. "She died nearly two months ago. After her death there was nothing to keep me there, and so I sold the old place and came here. Dear mother, almost her last words were of you."

Edna laid her hand upon his arm, and the dark eyes lifted to his were filled with tears. "Dear Herman," she said, softly, "I loved her too. Let me share this sorrow with you."

"God bless you, Edna, God bless you." That look in her eyes made him think that he had not traveled all these miles in vain, and he took her in his arms and folded her to his heart, and Edna did not put him away. She knew that the man who had loved his mother as this man had done would never forsake the woman whom he had chosen.

No words of love were spoken between them, but when in the dusk they entered the house where the lights were now lit, and Herman was made known to Edna's family, there was not one in that little circle who would not have guessed their secret. For it was written on the calm, kindly face of Herman Rodgers, and in the happy eyes of Edna Grav.

Mothers and Daughters.

Said one dark-eyed woman to her neighbor, in the public conveyance which accommodated a throng of passengers:

"She had completely effaced herself for her daughter. Everything is done to accommodate Helen and Julia, and Mrs. — is superseded. It don't seem just right to me that a mother should be kept altogether in the background."

"Oh," said the sweet-looking lady to whom this was addressed, "self-denial is easy to mothers. What is a mother's life any way but a sacrifice all through?"

I agree with the first speaker. It don't seem right to me that the Helens and Julias, bright, beautiful, bewitching though they may be, should step to the front in selfish absorption and monopolize the best things, while "mother," a pale, colorless, worn-out figure, is wearing old dresses, reading old books, or none at all, seeing few friends, and living a humdrum life of routine, chiefly enlivened by conflicts with to the daily demands of her household, she has absolutely no opportunity left for sitting at the Master's feet. Society is not, in our cities, given up so wholly to the young as it was a few years ago. In fact, there can be no social success where only the crudity of early youth appears on the scene. Older people who bring to the front the tact, the experience, and the knowledge which they have gained through the years, must mingle in the social gathering if it is to be witty, brilliant and attractive. The mothers must be in the van, and the daughters, as befits their age, a little in the sheltering shadow if we are to have the ideal social life growing out of the ideal home life.

I am very fond of the Helens and Julias. I like their sparkle, their vivacity, their esprit, but I do not like their want of consideration for mother, if she is, perhaps, a little old fashioned, a little tired, a little diffident and frightened in the blaze of their splendor. True and tenderly-loving daughters will never be contented to let mothers efface themselves, even though self-denial be an easy maternal duty.

The Movement of Water in Plants

The American Journal of Science gives some interesting particulars in regard to some recent channel by which the upward movement of water takes place. Some think that the transfer is solely by imbibition, and that no free water is carried from cavity to cavity of the wood element, or rather, that no free water exists in the cavities. Others have held that free water was carried from one wood element to another, and that the walls themselves play only a subordinate role. To these opposed views may be added a third, which appears to be a compromise; namely, that water in a free state actually exists as a thin lining on the cell wall. The chief advocate of the latter view has, however, abandoned it in favor of the imbibition theory. A recent publication by Elfving details the results of experiments which considerably strengthen the "cavity" theory. Now just at this point come observations of Vesque, in a continuation of the paper regarding the method of direct demonstration, which go far towards showing that he, as was long ago suspected, the truth is to be found between the extremes. These experiments, which need to be carefully repeated, indicate that under certain circumstances the transfer of water takes place by means of the cavities themselves, but that in all cases they may serve the part of reservoirs.

Moreover, the caliber and length of the vessels regulate the rate of transpiration; resistance to the movement of the water following the law of Poiseuille, so that the resistance is inversely proportional to the fourth power of the diameter, and directly proportional to their length. Climbing plants have larger vessels than low-growing plants. The quantity of water which can pass through a vessel in a given time bears a certain relation, varying for each species with the water which it contains. M. Vesque expressed the opinion that the study of the anatomy of plants will open the way to a more national culture than any which now prevails.

Obtaining Oxygen from the Air.

A method of obtaining oxygen from air for technical purposes has been devised by M. Margis, of Paris, the principle being that of diffusion under pressure. Atmospheric air being forced against a caoutchouc membrane by suction, a mixture of about forty per cent. oxygen and sixty per cent. nitrogen is obtained on the other side. A second membrane increases the proportion of oxygen to sixty per cent., that of nitrogen being reduced to forty per cent. A third gives eighty per cent. oxygen, and a fourth ninety-five per cent. The membranes are prepared by immersing taffeta in a solution containing bisulphide of carbon (or light petroleum ether), spirits of wine, ether and caoutchouc. When dry, the taffeta has a fine layer of caoutchouc. A bag of the taffeta, with a framework of rings of galvanized wire, is placed in a cylindrical iron vessel admitting air. It is connected by means of a strengthening caoutchouc tube with the suction apparatus, which is formed of a cylinder containing a series of conical cups with small spaces between. Steam is forced through these cups, and draws in the gas obtained from the first diffusion, passing on with it through a cooler, where the steam is condensed and the gas is separated for a second diffusion. This latter takes place in a similar apparatus, except that the space round the bag is provided with a tube passing down into water, so that the pressure can be regulated and the superfluous gas be let off. After the air has passed through four of these bags, the final gas is collected in a gasometer.

The Rose Madame Welche.

We are indebted to the catalogue of Woods, Beach & Co., of Brighton, Pa., large rose-growers and general florists, for the handsome engraving of the rose Madame Welche which appears upon this page. This rose is described in their catalogue as follows: "Very large, double, and beautifully formed; soft pale yellow, shaded in the center with orange and copper; vigorous in habit, and blooms freely. The combination of its handsome shape and fine coloring makes of this a splendid flower. New, but already classed with the finest ever-blooming roses." If any of our readers have the Madame Welche, we would like to have their judgment of its success under California conditions.

DYEING LEATHER.—In the glove trade the leather has hitherto always been dyed by brushing on the dyes by hand. The defects of this method are: Its slowness, the occurrence of large, soiled edges on the fleshy side, and notwithstanding every care being taken, the uneven character of the dye produced. To avoid these, Joseph Kristen, of Brunn, has a process in which even dyeing is obtained by the application of centrifugal force. The skin to be dyed is fixed on the center of a horizontally rotating disc; the color is also fed on to the center, and by the rapid revolution of the disc is spread equally over the whole surface. The color is forced on to the disc by means of a pump, or it merely flows from a reservoir standing at a higher level. The excess of color driven off at the edges of the revolving disc is collected and used over again, until the skin is fully dyed. To dye one skin by this method takes from ten to fifteen minutes. A single pump may serve at least for five machines, which would require only one attendant, so that, by the above arrangement, one man could, in twelve hours, easily dye 150 skins, possessing great evenness of dye and free from spotting.

Bridget's stupidity and Noah's impertinence. Indeed, it is not right, and Helen and Julia, flashing like butterflies in the sunny morning of youth, would be the last to enjoy their warm and cosy home if they felt that they were responsible for the monotony of their mother's existence. Mother is herself the person most to blame. For self-denial is easy indeed to a real mother. From the hour when her nature first overbrimmed with the tidal rapture which sweeps full-blooded into the heart that cradles a babe, through the weary, watching hours of teething and whooping-cough, mumps and measles, on through school days, and vacation days and courting days, the mother's life is poured out and given incessantly for her children. So it should be in a sense. In every child the mother renews her youth, and each son and daughter is an addition to the home wealth.

But some of you mothers, to whom I am talking, carry your self-sacrifice so far that you forget that you have any life of your own, for which you are responsible to God. You spend your strength so freely and so recklessly during the years of children's childhood that you have no elasticity, no resources, no health left to spare by the time they are grown up. You so devote your skill and talents to the material side of the house that you have no time to keep up with the current of the world's thought, or to grow up intellectually with your young people. Many a good woman suffers her religious life to droop and languish because in her thoughtless giving up of every moment of time and of every remnant of nervous force observations by N. Julien Vesque in regard to the movement of water in plants. That gentleman has devised a very simple method of demonstrating the transfer of water in the stems of plants, which promises to have a wide application. The stem is cut obliquely during immersion in water, and the thin part of the severed stem is placed in the field of the microscope, of course completely wet on the cut surface. After the cover-glass is adjusted and the stem is securely fastened, so that it cannot be easily disturbed by subsequent treatment, a very little freshly precipitated calcium oxalate or other finely divided substance, is introduced under the cover. If the leaves have not been removed from the stem, a rapid current is at once observed to flow towards the cut surface. The insoluble salt collects at the open mouths of the vessels, often passing into the capillary tubes after a temporary arrest, and the same phenomenon is repeated several times as the minute plugs are formed and then sucked in.

With low powers of the microscope it is possible to use a second slip, instead of the thin cover, and then the simple apparatus can be held more firmly in its place. In any case it is possible to measure the rapidity of the current by means of a micrometric eye-piece; and several such rates are given.

When the stem is quickly stripped of its leaves the current is stopped at once. But when, on the other hand, a leaf or a part of the stem is pinched, there is immediately a backward flow of water.

It is well known that two conflicting views have been held by physiologists as to the

Favorable to Advertisers

By consolidating the large subscription lists of the Pacific Workman with the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN our advertisers gain an unusually great advantage. We doubt if any one weekly newspaper has ever been circulated to as many different readers on this coast, as have been served heretofore by the Workman and WATCHMAN together. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns cities of the coast.

We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

William Henry Barnes.

We feel like heartily saying to our late Grand Master, as he now retires from the high and responsible position he has occupied the past two years in the Order, "well done, good and faithful servant." The WATCHMAN predicted a brilliant career when he was unanimously elected as helmsman of the ship, and has not been disappointed. We cast no disparagement upon the ability of his worthy predecessors, when we say that as a presiding officer he has no superior on the coast. His decisions have been remarkably correct, and always tempered with mercy; and his appointments uniformly judicious and acceptable. His numerous visits, eloquent speeches and magnetic social qualities have greatly helped to advance the Order. Full of fire and enthusiasm, he has gone like a flame through the Lodges of the State. He has especially kindled into life the fraternal feeling, the genial, odorous sentiment, which is the soul of the Order. Bro. Barnes is still in the prime of life, and long may he live to work for the good of humanity, and enjoy new tokens of fraternal honor and esteem.

Grand Recorder.

It is a good sign, that the doctrine of Civil Service Reform, as it is called, the principle of keeping tried and true men in office, and promoting in regular order those who have proved worthy in subordinate departments, is taking root among fraternal Orders. We, therefore, congratulate our Order that Horace G. Pratt, our popular Grand Recorder, is again re-elected. For the past six years he has occupied this high and honorable position, and proved himself a competent, faithful and obliging officer. The business of this office is very extensive and complicated, and requires constant care and attention, and he has never allowed it to accumulate ahead of him.

Superstition and Fraud.

There is a form of superstition, beginning with savages or very ignorant people, that has shown a remarkable tenacity of life, and in spite of all our boasted scientific enlightenment still largely colors and tinctures the thought and belief of a large class. All savage people believe in dreams, visions, impressions, presentiments, charms, and lucky or unlucky omens. It is not strange they should. They are playing the game of life, without any knowledge of the rules of the game. What they have learned of any value, was apparently by chance. Some one accidentally drank the waters of a mineral spring and was cured of rheumatic pains, and straightway the spring became sacred, and a panacea for all diseases. An enterprise was resolved on under the shade of a tree, and was successful, and the tree became ever after an emblem of good fortune. Another enterprise failed when a magpie was heard to chatter by the wayside, and that bird was regarded as a bad omen. A serpent crawled across the path of a band of savages who were going to a battle that was crowned with success, and the serpent became a good omen.

That such forms of superstition should continue to live and exert a wide influence among civilized people, shows how hard it is for a fascinating error to die. Sailors are proverbially superstitious. It would be hard to persuade an old tar to sail on Friday, or take service on board of a ship a rat had been seen to leave, and their excessive reverence for Mother Carey's chickens is well known. A shark following a ship is an omen of death, and to kill a seagull or any bird that hovers about the mast would be regarded as a most atrocious and sacrilegious crime. Gamblers as a class are known to be very superstitious as to the chance part of a game. Most whist-players may have no fixed conviction about the matter, may laugh at the thought as silly and ridiculous, but still the impression somehow lingers that there is luck under a "black deuce" and they mutter some not very gentle words, if they happen to turn up as trump the four of clubs, because it is believed to indicate bad luck, and is sometimes called the "devil's bed post." Many gamblers are men of too good sense and general knowledge to attempt to cherish such notions, but still they cannot drive them away. There are many very sensible people who would not permit the members of their family to sit down thirteen at the table; who pick up every cast off horseshoe they find; who feel a little uneasy if they should happen to see the new moon over the left shoulder, and never fail to throw an old slipper at a newly-married couple leaving home.

We had an illustration of the tenacity with which this rudiment of superstition still lingers, in the signs and wonders which, in the imagination of many, multiplied around the death-bed of President Garfield. That a howling dog or a brainless bat could indicate more about his destiny than his physicians, is certainly not very flattering to the popular intelligence of the time. All will remember that when President Garfield was shot, how an agent of the associated Press felt it to be his duty to telegraph all over the country the prophecy which a vagabond gypsy fortune-teller had made years before, that he would die a violent death. A reporter of the New York Herald stated that the night the President died at Elberon, the sky was very clear, the stars seemed unusually bright, but a strange black abyss was noticed in the starry realm over the cottage, at the moment of his death. Many persons who consider themselves educated and enlightened, fancied there was a prognostic of something in the rainbow which suddenly appeared on the skirt of a cloud at the funeral. The comet discovered the night of his death was also the subject of considerable comment. That such stories and omens should be seriously mentioned and find credence, however slight, among an enlightened people, is only another illustration of what Darwin calls the "survival of rudiments" of the witchcraft, magic and sorcery era of superstition.

But it is not necessary to travel so far to find a segment of the dark age of necromancy and astrological prognostication. The reader of Schiller's Tragedy of Wallenstein wonders how so great a scholar and General could become so daft as to guide the movements of his army by horoscopy; and yet it was not strange, for that was an age of superstition, when it was generally believed that the aspect of the stars exerted a good or evil influence over human life, but it is strange that this sort of tomfoolery and idiocy should now find adherents.

Our city is too full of so-called astrologers, pretending clairvoyants, and fortune-tellers, who advertise to tell all about the past, present, and future, and have a thriving business. Men are visiting them every day to find out whether it will pay to buy a certain piece of land or deal in this or that kind of stocks. They are consulted as to the best way to discover thieves, murderers, unearth stolen goods, or disentangle complicated plots and intrigues. Hearts smitten with a tender passion are slipping to the rooms of magnetic oracles, or revealers of the mystic signs of the zodiac or the tea-cup, in order to see whether the sweet flame which consumes them has a reciprocal warmth in the bosom of another. And the fact that such brazen frauds are so numerous, that they advertise their tricks and impositions with such business-like assurance, and are known to be well patronized, shows that with all our boasted science and progress the dark age still lingers, or that the number of the credulous who are easily duped and fooled, does not very perceptibly decrease before the light of the school house.

The Grand Lodge.

The Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., concluded its labors and adjourned last Thursday evening. It was truly a representative body of manhood, intelligence, and the substantial industries of California. In point of ability, it would compare favorably with any legislative assembly that has met in this or any other State. The business was managed with dignity, harmony, and good feeling, and a strict adherence to parliamentary rules. It was emphatically a working body. The members turned out promptly and attended closely to business. There were many able speakers present, who often in the heat of debate rose to the fervor and potency of true eloquence, and were listened to with profound attention, but no one was allowed to waste much time of the assembly with useless talk. Without any pronounced expression there was a spirit of conservation in the air, which augurs well for the future peace and stability of the Order. Experiments and innovations would have been very coldly and ungraciously received. All seemed satisfied to let well enough alone. As very little legislation is needed, some expressed the opinion that it would be better to hold biennial sessions on the ground of economy and convenience, as the body is becoming very large and expensive, but no formal expression was given to the feeling. The inevitable law of change which permeates all things will in time reveal what is best. We may not be fully aware of the silent influences for good which radiate from such deliberative centers. The fraternal feeling that is here warmed into friendships and enthusiasm for the good of the Order reach and quicken the remotest subordinate Lodges. In the choice of new officers the Grand Lodge was extremely happy and fortunate. The pilot is at the helm, the officers on deck, the ship thoroughly equipped, and we have every assurance of a prosperous voyage for the coming year.

The Late Session.

The sixth annual session of the Grand Lodge has come and gone. But little legislation was done. There was but little to do, and yet there was passed one measure that may prove more important and far-reaching in its results than any other act done by this body. The Degree of Honor must henceforth be a grand success or a miserable failure. We believe it will be a success. The constitution and laws enacted for the government of the Degree will no doubt need some improvements and additions, but, in the main, it will be found to work like a charm. The beneficiary is peculiar, or rather the machinery by which it is to be worked is peculiar. It was a necessity of the case, for it was conceded on all hands that the Degree of Honor Lodges should not be compelled to meet oftener than once a month, and our present beneficiary system could not be successfully worked with monthly Lodge meetings. Again, those who have had much practical experience know that the more evenly payments can be made, the more steadfast is the membership of any beneficial Order. To meet these ends, and at the same time save expense, the idea was conceived of making stated payments of a stated sum every month, and then of remitting to the Grand Lodge the aggregate of such payments, thus doing away with assessments altogether, except in extreme cases. It was also thought desirable to provide against an accumulation of any considerable amount of funds, which was done. Two classes of members are provided for—beneficial and non-beneficial. This was not only desirable, but a necessity of the case. The maximum amount of assurance to beneficial members is fixed at $500. The monthly payment is fifty cents, which is sufficient to pay all losses on a death rate of a little over one per cent—a higher rate than will, in all probability, ever be reached on the average. In practice, it is probable that payments by the members will far oftener be stopped than will assessments be levied. The scheme has every appearance of being feasible and excellent, and if it fails to work well in practice, we are sure it will be from faulty details, and not on general principles.

The law now only awaits the approval of the Supreme Lodge authorities to go into force, which we trust it will have. Then we predict a new awakening in the Order—a grand and glorious revival, so to speak, and the A. O. U. W. will be more popular, if possible, than ever before. The jurisdiction of California has cause to be proud of the work she has done in perfecting and exalting our beloved Order, and now is about to see the crowning glory of her achievements in making a really important auxiliary to the organization in this long neglected degree.

As to the other matters of legislation of the session, but little need be said at the present time. A Chief Medical Examiner was provided for. Standing committees were made members of the Grand Lodge, which was logically and practically right, and a few minor changes made in our laws. The body was largely composed of new members, who evidently were more intent on learning than on making themselves conspicuous. Possibly more important sessions have been held, but certainly none more harmonious.

Office of Grand Master.

This is a very honorable position, but certainly no sinecure. The Order has become so large numerically, and is spread over such an extent of Territory, that its duties are arduous and absorbing. Our late Grand Master, W. H. Barnes, made 103 visitations during the past term, traveled 19,555 miles, 12,600 of which were in this jurisdiction made 65 public addresses, wrote 1,417 letters, sent out 825 printed documents, and granted 71 dispensations.

Grand Recorder's Department.

Headquarters of Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Rooms 40 and 41, St. Ann's Building, corner of Eddy and Powell, San Francisco. H. G. PRATT, G. R.

THE Journal of Proceedings is now going through the press, and will be ready for distribution in a very short time. A copy will be sent to each member of the Grand Lodge and two to each subordinate Lodge. As quickly as possible slips will be prepared and sent to all Lodges, showing the changes in our constitution and laws made at the recent session. Till then the law as it now is will remain in full force and effect.

THE issue of Beneficiary Certificates has been necessarily delayed the last week owing to the change of administration. We are all right now, however, and business will go forward with the usual celerity.

A MARKED improvement on the part of Recorders in sending in their monthly reports, is manifest. We have never received so many to the corresponding date as during the present month. Good boys. But don't weary in well-doing.

Work for the Future.

The laws, rules, and regulations of the A. O. U. W. are now so nearly perfect and so well adapted for the purposes for which they are made, that little more can be done in the way of improvement, at least till time shall have demonstrated some defect that is not now apparent. But there is room for something to be done in the way of improving our ritual and ceremonials. The ritual in substance is very good, but in point of literary excellence it is far from what it should be for such a great fraternal Order. We are aware that to produce a good ritual is no child's play—it should be a work of inspiration, full of "thoughts that breathe and words that burn," so that those who speak and those who hear may alike be impressed by its truth and its beauty. These are such productions that we never tire of repeating or of hearing repeated. Such should a ritual be, but such we may be a long time in getting, and until such a one is presented it were better that we make no change at all.

It is not a little gratifying that we notice a general inclination throughout the Order to pay more attention to its fraternal features than in times past. Schools of Instruction or Fraternal Institutes are being everywhere organized that the work may be rendered in a becoming and uniform manner. The importance of these efforts cannot well be overestimated. Correctness of work and the strict enforcement of discipline is just as necessary for the full efficiency of a fraternal organization as for an army of soldiers. Neither can be expected to succeed without. Thoroughly appreciating this fact, we have been persistent in urging it upon the attention of our chief authorities, and though often saddened by the indifference with which our pleadings have been treated, yet we have never despaired nor become weary of heart. Now we see, or think we see, the light breaking in the East and the day-spring appearing.

The A. O. U. W. was formed for a work of practical benevolence. Its work could not be done in the manner of ordinary business. Benevolence and selfishness cannot go hand in hand. You cannot serve God and Mammon at the same time. They are radically antagonistic. Fraternity must be our means or the end will fail—nothing is nor can be more certain. That this truth is beginning to be so fully recognized by our membership is a source of unspeakable pleasure to every lover of the Order.

The Grand Lecturer for the current year will soon be appointed by Grand Master James F. Rogers.

The list of newly-elected Grand Officers and Deputies will be found in the Directory, page 132 of this number of the WATCHMAN.

Our New Officers.

David McClure, Grand Foreman.

The subject of this sketch was born in Clark county, Illinois, in 1843, and came to California with his father in 1856; who settled at Napa. He was educated at the Chicago University, and begun the battle of life in 1861, as a miner, working for a short time on the Salmon river in Idaho, thence floating to Guaymas, Mexico, where he was employed a few months as a hotel clerk, and then received the appointment of purchasing agent for the Mena Prieta Mine, located at San Antonio, acting in this capacity until the French invasion of Mexico, when he returned to California. In 1869 he determined to study law, entered the law office of Hartson & Burnell, at Napa, and after being admitted to the bar concluded to finish his legal education at the Law Department of the Chicago University, where he graduated in 1871. He had scarcely got fairly into practice when the great Chicago fire consumed his library and office, and he returned to California and formed a partnership with Robert Crouch, of Napa. In 1875 he removed to San Francisco, practiced law for three years in connection with Garber & Thornton; and then formed a partnership with ex-Congressman John Coghlan, which terminated with the death of the latter. On the retirement of Judge Samuel H. Dwinelle from the bench he joined him, and formed the law firm of McClure & Dwinelle. His able defense of Pinney and Duncan is still fresh in the public memory. Suffice it for the present to say, that Mr. McClure is one of the acknowledged leaders of the San Francisco bar. He entered politics in 1878, and was elected by the Republicans to the lower branch of the Legislature, and in 1882 was elected to the State Senate. He was the first Grand Dictator of the Knights of Honor in California, and for three years acted as Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias. His connection with the A. O. U. W. began in 1878, as one of the charter members of Spartan Lodge, No. 36, being its first Past Master Workman. Brother McClure is in the prime of life, in good health, is a ripe scholar, an eloquent speaker, a logical debater, and takes an enthusiastic interest in the prosperity of the A. O. U. W.

Duncan McPherson, Grand Overseer.

Our new Grand Overseer is a native of New York, forty-five years of age and a resident of California since 1852, arriving at Placerville, El Dorado county, when a small boy. He finished his education at the university of the Pacific, and soon after leaving the halls of learning, began the struggle of life as a miner at Michigan Bluff, Placer county, thence drifted with the great excitement to Fraser river, British Columbia; tried farming and teaming for awhile; and in 1864, engaged in journalism and has ever since been either the editor and one of the publishers of the Santa Cruz Sentinel, or the San Mateo County Gazette. He is at present the able editor of the Sentinel, and the senior member of the Sentinel Publishing Company. His connection with the Order began as a charter member of Santa Cruz Lodge, No. 46, being its first presiding officer, and is at present and has been for five consecutive terms its treasurer. Bro. McPherson is thoroughly alive to the best interests of the Order, as every reader of the Sentinel knows. The Grand Lodge had determined to honor Southern California with a representative, and after the declination of H. S. Ball of Salinas City, and A. P. Murgotten of San Jose, the nomination of Bro. McPherson was hailed with enthusiasm.

The picnic season is coming on, and, properly conducted, they may be the means not only of pleasure and new acquaintance, but of instruction. Good speakers may be had by paying their expenses. We hope the brethren will report to the WATCHMAN all social gatherings of this nature. We would like in this way to taste of the fresh air of the country.

Indian Question.

The Indian question is up again. The terrible Apaches are on the war-path, in paint and feather, murdering men, women and children, and desolating the country, merely to appease a brutal appetite for robbery and blood. The Government troops, as usual, are galloping over the country trying to drive these savages back upon the reservations. The Arizona editors, wearied out of patience by these frequent outbreaks, think the time has come to exterminate the savage tribes, and the San Francisco Examiner winks approval. This gives the Argonaut a spasm of sentiment; it says the Indian usually goes upon the war-path to seek revenge for the cruel wrongs he has received, and advises the Arizona editors to kill off the gamblers and cowboys before they wildly scream over the offenses of the desperate red men.

At every Indian outbreak the question comes up, what shall be done with the hostile savages? and remains unanswered, and seems likely to remain so for some time yet. The aim of the law, both in its enactments and execution, is to protect the good element of society from the encroachments of the bad, and supplant the bad with something better. To know how to segregate the good from the evil, and promote the growth of one and discourage the growth of the other, is the first step in all wise legislation. Is civilization, then, better than barbarism? This is the first question that meets us in discussing Indian affairs. Of course we must assume the affirmative, for were the converse of the proposition true or even doubtful, then the most stupendous blunder and outrage has been perpetrated by building a nation of fifty millions upon the hunting grounds and fishing privileges of a few hundred thousand savages. Were we to take the narrowest view of civilization and the highest view of the savage state, it would still be clearly apparent that the latter must give way. The law must protect the best. Destiny has decreed it. And in the race of life the best wins, and the weak and inferior must go to the wall. Hence, in determining what to do with the savages, the policy of the Government should be decidedly in the interest of civilization. The life of one settler on the frontier is worth more than a tribe of these barbarous marauders and murderers. And yet the Government has strangely and uniformly pursued a course that has tended to preserve the savage condition of the aborigines. Whenever the interests of civilization and barbarism have come in conflict the sympathy of the majority remote from the field of bloodshed and atrocity has come to the support of the savage. A mawkish literature embalmed him as a martyr. Poetry and song wailed his woes. The coarse, brutal, treacherous savage chief, whose wigwam dangled with the scalps of white men, found himself a hero at Washington, and well received by the authorities. No doubt the Indian has often been the victim of wrong, but the kind of sympathy we find lavishly expended in such works as "A Century of Dishonor" and in the speeches of Boston philanthropists, is of that soft-hearted, flabby, puerile sort, that sends bouquets and dessert to atrocious murderers, and coddles and apologizes for a polygamous reprobate.

The recognition of these savage, nomadic tribes as sovereign powers to be treated with in a diplomatic way, has been the leading error of our governmental policy. The treaty-making power is one of the highest acts of nationality. With the Indians it is a huge farce. Think of a Commission of disguised Ambassadors of a great nation on one side, and a few savage chiefs, dirty, lousy, lazy, repulsive creatures, meeting on the same plane to negotiate a treaty! The whole scene is supremely ridiculous, and only tends to pamper the self-importance of the chiefs strengthen tribal relations, and destroy every sense of gratitude and responsibility to the Government.

Then our present system of reservation corralling a lot of "bucks" and squaws upon a small slice of territory, has proven a miserable failure. It amounts to but little more than training and fattening the restless Indians during the winter, for the war-path in the spring, and the more peacefully inclined become lazy, shiftless, dissipated and worthless. Judge Henry C. Dibble, a leading citizen of Arizona, in his open letter to the President, points out in a forcible way the folly and wickedness of quartering savage tribes in the midst, or in the vicinity of civilized communities, and unless the policy of the Government soon becomes more vigorous and effective, we could hardly blame the citizens of Arizona for promptly settling his question as the citizens of Minnesota did a few years ago.

Personals.

BRO. JOE. POHEIM, the merchant tailor, was recently presented by his employes with an A. O. U. W. badge, solid gold, in which is set four diamonds and two rubies. Gracious acts of this kind are appreciated and are the rule of the day among Workmen.

BRO. C. H. HAILE, Grand Receiver during the session of the Grand Lodge displayed a beautiful gold watch charm, on which was the anchor and shield, enameled with the letters C. H. P.; on the opposite these words are engraved: "Presented to C. H. Haile by the members of Alameda Lodge, No. 5, A. O. U. W., Feb. 28, 1883." This souvenir was given as a token of esteem and remembrance for his service as Recorder of his Lodge for eleven successive terms.

In Memoriam.

It will be remembered that the Rev. Laurence Hamilton, while discoursing on Mind and Matter, dropped dead in his pulpit on Easter Sunday, April 10, 1882. The following beautiful tribute to his memory was composed at the time by Miss Ina Coolbrith, and was read at the late memorial service at the Hamilton Church, Oakland:

Enter upon thy rest, thy great reward,
Most gentle servant of thy gentle Lord!
Thine eyes yet turned upon the page, half read!
The words still lingering on thy lips, unsaid,
Ere thy day darkens to its set of sun,
The Master summons and thy task is done.

Thy task is done! O, steadfast to endure,
Unsparring self—faithful, and firm, and sure,
Who buried not, with lax, indifferent hand,
Thy Lord's one silver talent in the sand;
But from the coinage of thy life's pure gold,
The sacred trust restored an hundred fold.

A blameless servant—whose pure purpose knew
One only aim: "To know the right, and do!"
Braving all things for Truth's beloved sake,
The storms might bow thee, but they could not break.

What richer prize, O man, than this to seek!
What greater praise of man than this to speak!
What grander death hath king or conqueror known
Than this: To pass from the Altar to the Throne!
Seeker of Truth! the truth is thine at last,
But the cold lips hold their great secret fast.

O, could that mightier seal be once removed,
That still voice speak the fold that knew and loved
Their Shepherd, here, whence, passed thy fleeting breath.

"Look up! be glad! 'tis life; there is no death!"
Surely God's universe no greater bliss
Thy grand and loving heart could yield than this.

Among the Easter lilies softly rest,
O, blessed life—in death supremely blessed!
Pass on, white soul! the path thy dear Christ trod
Can hold no fears for thee—indeed with God,
Where'er in His great mansions thou may'st dwell
'Tis well with thee, pure spirit! it is well!

Coming Grand Sessions.

Legion of Honor.—The next Grand Council of this Order will be held at San Jose, on the third Tuesday in April, 1883.

Independent Order of Chosen Friends.—The second annual session of this Order will meet in San Francisco, on the first Monday in May, 1883.

Odd Fellows.—The thirty first annual Communication of the Grand Lodge will be held in San Jose, on the second Tuesday in May, 1883.

Druids.—The nineteenth annual session of the Grand Lodge convenes in the city of Petaluma, on the first Tuesday in June, 1883.

Red Men.—Next Great Council will meet August 2, 1883, in some grove to be selected by the Advisory Committee.

The Triennial Conclave of Knights Templar will meet in San Francisco, August 21, 1883.

Parsons of Husbandry.—State Grange meeting, Tuesday, Oct. 8th, at 10 A. M., in San Jose.

The Grand Lodge of F. & A. M. will convene in San Francisco, October 9, 1883.

The Supreme Commandery of the K. G. R.—Will meet in regular session in August, at Philadelphia, if not in the meantime changed.

Improvement in Shoemaking.

The Boston Herald gives the following account of a new process in sewing shoes, the invention of Mr. Lee E. Moore of that city, which it is said promises to revolutionize the whole business, being extremely simple but decidedly practicable, as it is equally applicable to ladies' work as to that of heavy work for men. Heretofore in the manufacture of hand-sewed work, the upper leather, which remains after sewing the welt to the inner sole, has either been cut off or tacked down and the space filled; but by the new method the upper, after having been fastened to the sole, is turned back over the welt, and in turn is again sewed to the outer sole, thus making the boot doubly strong, and making it virtually waterproof. In case a poor inner sole is used, so that the sewing gives way, the welt still acts as a lever, and there is no possibility of the upper pulling out. In the manufacture of common work for women, where machines are used, there is a rough seam left on the inside of the shoe, which is decidedly uncomfortable to the wearer, whereas if made by the process alluded to, the inside of the boot is left perfectly smooth. Then, again, by the old method nails are used to a greater or less extent in lasting, which in due time give the wearer unmeasurable discomfort, but this is entirely obviated by the new process, as no nails are used as the upper does not require to be fastened to the inner sole except by the sewing. Those who have investigated the process are loud in their praises, and compliment the inventor highly upon his success, and it is a fact that manufacturers of shoe machinery are already at work endeavoring to produce a machine which will accomplish the work which is now done by hand, and with a good prospect of success. This process, it is stated, enables hand-sewed goods to be made within a few cents per pair of cheap machine work.

AN UNALTERABLE FACE.—There is said to be a man in Bellevue Hospital, New York, with a face that never alters its expression in the slightest degree. Something is the matter with the nerves and muscles so that they do not work at all. Not the faintest smile nor the suggestion of a frown ever varies the stolid monotony of his countenance. The features are regular and rather handsome, there being no distortion, or any outward evidence of the affection other than the strange immobility. His name is Henry Stube, but he is called "Masky," because his face is like a mask, behind which he laughs and weeps unseen. He has worn this mask of his for two years. He acquired it after a neuralgic cold. He is being treated with electricity chiefly, and the physicians think he will recover. In the meantime he parts his lips with his fingers for the introduction of food and water, and when he sleeps his eyelids are held shut by a slight bandage. His imperfect talking is done without moving his lips, and when he speaks or listens the impassiveness of his face looks singular, indeed. There is something uncanny about it, and, after the idea has once got into your mind, you can hardly regard this face as anything else than a mask.

AN "OLD CURIOSITY SHOP" will be one of the features of the approaching Railroad Exhibition at Chicago. The building will be especially designed for its purpose, and will contain a most interesting collection of the earliest railway appliances, and curious and attractive articles from every department of railway service. One of the most remarkable objects in this collection will be George Stevenson's "Rocket," the first locomotive ever built. A cablegram from Commissioner Peters, who resides in London, states the directors of the South Kensington Museum have consented to permit their almost sacred relic to be sent across the Atlantic to be placed in the exposition. Several other very old locomotives have already been secured for the exhibit, one of which will be brought here by the engineer who ran it forty years. The universal attention which this exhibit and others to be located in the annex will attract must necessarily make the ground space of the court as valuable and desirable as that in the present building.

FROM THE BALTIC TO THE OCEAN.—Again the new ship canal between the Baltic sea and the German ocean is coming to the front. It will save a journey of 600 miles for a vessel making a trip between either of these waters, as the circumnavigation of the Peninsula of Jutland will be unnecessary. But the possession of this canal will necessitate Germany becoming a first-class naval power, with all the expense and responsibilities which that involves. In all, the proposed canal will be only fifty miles, or half the length of the Suez canal, and it will extend from Glickstadt to Kiel.

LONG CONTINUED BATHS.—Professor Kaposi of Vienna has introduced continuous baths for skin affections. The patient is placed in them on a mechanical bed, and remains there for fifty or one hundred days, not only taking his meals, but sleeping while thus immersed in water. The Progres Medical pronounces them successful, and recommends their introduction into the Paris hospitals.

LIVER diseases, headache and consumption, caused by bad digestion, quickly cured by Brown's Iron Bitters.

TRUE Temperance

Is not signing a pledge or taking a solemn oath that cannot be kept, because of the non-removal of the cause—liquor. The way to make a man temperate is to kill the desire for those dreadful artificial stimulants that carry so many bright intellects to premature graves, and desolation, strife and unhappiness into so many families.

It is a fact! BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, a true non-alcoholic tonic, made in Baltimore, Md., by the Brown Chemical Company, who are old druggists and in every particular reliable, will, by removing the craving appetite of the drunkard, and by curing the nervousness, weakness, and general ill health resulting from intemperance, do more to promote temperance, in the strictest sense than any other means now known.

It is a well authenticated fact that many medicines, especially 'bitters,' are nothing but cheap whiskey vilely concocted for use in local option countries. Such is not the case with BROWN'S IRON BITTERS. It is a medicine, a cure for weakness and decay in the nervous, muscular, and digestive organs of the body, producing good, rich blood, health and strength. Try one bottle. Price $1.00.

The Red Spot on Jupiter.

At the first regular meeting of the American Astronomical Society, held March 5th, the topic for discussion was the "Physical Changes in Jupiter." A paper on the "Red Spot on Jupiter" was expected from Mr. S. V. White, the President of the society, and there was considerable disappointment over his inability to be present.

The remarks of the members were confined to the recent changes in Jupiter. Messrs. Parkhurst and Serviss described their observations of the great red spot which made its appearance on Jupiter's disk in the summer of 1878, and which within a few weeks has almost entirely disappeared. Others took part in the discussion.

The general opinion expressed was that Jupiter is a world which is yet in a very early stage of its geological history, and that in the great red spot, and in some other remarkable spots which have made their appearance upon its surface, evidences are seen that the planet either has already a solid or liquid surface, or that the formation of such a surface has begun. Several theories to account for the great red spot, which was upward of 30,000 miles long by 6,000 or 8,000 miles wide, were suggested.

One theory was that some volcanic action may have been taken place, which threw up into the atmosphere a mass of smoke and erupted materials which formed the red spot. Another theory was that the crust of the planet where the spot appeared may have been exceptionally heated, so that the atmosphere above it was kept free from clouds. A third theory regarded the red spot as possibly a solidified mass thrust up through its gaseous and liquid surroundings, and forming, perhaps, the nucleus of one of the future continents of the giant planet. The difference between rate of rotation of the red spot and the white spot in the southern belt was referred to. The red spot overtakes the white spot once in 34 days.—Scientific American.

Not a drink, not sold in bar-rooms, but a reliable non-alcoholic tonic medicine, useful at all times and in all seasons, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

Chaff.

Unprecedented trade announcement—The pig market is quiet.

"What does the sign 'inward baggage' mean?" asked Snodkins of his friend, as they walked through the depot. "Refreshments?"

A little girl in church, after the contribution plate had been passed, complacently and audibly said, "I paid for four, mamma; was that right?"

A Chicago girl said that she could not remember the number of her shoes, and then got mad because some one said it was a good deal to tax one's memory with.

When a man is a fool and knows it, he is a comparatively harmless animal, but three quarters of the troubles of our human life are caused by fools who are not aware of the fact.

Select Thoughts.

Women are the most perfect when most womanly. —Gladsone.

From the lowest depth there is a path to the loftiest height. —Carlyle.

What man is there whom contact with a great soul will not exalt? A drop of water upon the petal of a lotus glistens with the splendors of the pearl. —Hindu.

Consider how much more you often suffer from your anger and grief, than from those very things from which you are angry and grieved. —Marcus Antonius.

Fear invites danger; concealed cowards insult known ones. —Chesterfield.

It is easier to suppress the first desire than to satisfy all that follow it.

Discontent is the want of self-reliance; it is infirmity of will. —Emerson.

One pound of learning requires ten pound of common sense to apply it. —Persian Proverb.

Complimentary Sample Copies of this paper are occasionally sent to parties connected with the interests specially represented in its columns. Persons so receiving copies are requested to examine its contents, terms of subscription, and give it their own patronage; and as far as practicable aid in circulating the journal and making its value more widely known to others and extending its influence in the cause it faithfully serves. Subscription rate, $2 a year.

N. B.—Personal attention will be called to this (as well as other notices, at times) by turning down a leaf.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the Watchman's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the Watchman has not been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the Watchman family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we will split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the Watchman.

We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the Watchman, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this, the oldest of the beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

CAREFUL MAILING.—We take all possible care to mail our papers promptly and correct, and we seldom hear of complaints in its postal delivery; yet we would thank any subscriber, who may happen to miss a copy, to send us at once a postal card, giving full address and the date of the number missed, and we will remain them.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the 8th and 23d of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
INDEPENDENT ORDER CHOSEN FRIENDS,
ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST,
AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS,
IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN,
KNIGHTS OF HONOR.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and choice selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

FOUR CITY LODGE.

Valley, No. 30.

By common consent and the invitation of Valley, No. 30, it was agreed to hold a grand meeting during the session of the Grand Lodge. Laurel Hall was filled to repletion and the J. W. degree was conferred on three candidates, and the M. W. degree, by dispensation, on the same, who were leading and well known citizens. At the close of the degrees a large delegation from Fidelity was admitted, after which a very enjoyable recess was had and the Havanas were passed. The time having arrived for a feast of reason, C. Usinger, M. W. called on Seneca Davis, G. G. elect, who made some happy and facetious remarks, followed by Geo. A. Case, P. M. W., who delivered a speech of welcome. E. M. Reading, Secretary of the Guarantee Fund Association, spoke in apt terms of the necessity of forming a Relief Board. Wm. H. Jordan, P. G. M. W., made a short and appropriate speech which had the fire and energy which characterized his efforts years ago. Bro. E. B. Young, P. M. W. of Fidelity, made a few appropriate remarks that were listened to with close attention. Brother J. T. Rogers, G. M. W. elect, then made a grand speech in which he pledged his best efforts to make his administration worthy of this grand and beneficent organization. He said: "Under the constitution and law of the Order, I shall administer as your servant fearlessly and conscientiously, I ask your co-operation and assistance, and with it working in fraternal mission this Order will be one of the great living lights of the 19th century."

Wm. H. Barnes P. G. M. W., seemed to feel the inspiration of the occasion, and in one of his characteristic speeches fairly electrified his audience and at the close was awarded an ovation.

The following lines were composed by W. H. Barnes for this occasion:

How grand is the sight that is witnessed to-night,
As Fidelity visits us here,
And the Grand Master too, with Jordan so true,
With various brethren appear.
From the north and the south, the east and west,
From the valleys, the meadow, and hill,
We greet one and all, in "Valley's" old hall,
And greet them with hearty will.
God bless our great cause, and prosper our laws,
Make its mission successful and pure,
May its members increase, its efforts ne'er cease,
But until time closes endure.

E. F. Loud Deputy Grand Master, in his happy and interesting manner closed one of the happiest and most interesting meetings that was ever held in Valley Lodge, No. 30.

Unity, No. 27.

On Tuesday evening, April 3d, during the session of the Grand Lodge, there was a grand meeting held in Cosmopolitan hall, by the members of this Lodge and visiting brethren. The J. W. degree was conferred in two candidates in a manner that brought out several merited compliments from the visiting brothers. Under the head of "Good of the Order," Wm. H. Jordan, P. M. W., made a very practical and interesting speech. Bro. Jas. H. Baird, P. M. W. of Unity, gave a succinct history of the growth of Unity Lodge. He said five years ago, even men met in the northern part of the city, and rustled around to get three more to make the constitutional number. At eleven o'clock at night, this subordinate was given a place and name. That, with the genius of our Order, has now a membership of 300, a good bank account and hundreds of homes made happy. Bro. W. T. Rodgers, S. F., was quite happy in a short speech, forcibly illustrating the principle of fraternity as inseparable with the success of our order, as giving staple and reliable protection as an insurance society. The Grand Master then made extensive remarks, drawing a beautiful picture of nature in the Yosemite Valley, and comparing it with the growth and standing of our Order among men. In his interesting speech he detailed some of the deeds of charity and hospitality of this old pioneer, and, in terms of a highly logistic character, said the name of Unity, and the history she has made, would be, and main, a living light while memory lasts. Deputy Danforth made a few pertinent remarks, and gave some good advice, that was listened to with close attention. Bro. Caleb Lind, P. M. W., made some happy and facetious remarks that seemed to please every one. Bro. Harry J. Lask, G. G., made a short speech, having for his subject the Relief Committee, after which, by request, he rendered me pleasing artistic music on the organ. Seneca Davis, G. G., and others had a few appropriate and congratulatory words to offer, which closed one of the best Lodge meetings of the season.

Yerba Buena, No. 14.

On Friday evening, the 6th inst, by preconcerted action, an impromptu reception was given our Grand Master in Yerba Buena Lodge-room. The business was dispatched quickly, and large delegations from Spartan, 36, Franklin, 44, were admitted with honors and a welcome by Bro. Thompson, M. W. Bro. J. T. Rogers, G. M. W., then made one of his practical and instructive speeches, which was well received. Among the many good things he said, was: It is an organization that has the hearty commendation of the best classes of men in society, and is vitalized and crystallized as experience and mature thought learns of its beneficent and certain protection. I believe we shall have a prosperous year, and, with your assistance and co-operation, 18,000 at the close of my term. Bro. Severance, P. M. W., then, in a few felicitous remarks, introduced Judge Ferral, who seemed to rise to the occasion, and electrified his audience. He said: It is a good thing to see in this age of improvement that this practical benign Order is spreading its good work, and sets men thinking and giving confidence in his fellow men. Night after night, day after day, and year after year we meet and elevate our fellow men, and make our community a happier people. I am proud to be a Workman, and to know that such able and noble men have been collected to do service in our cause, and am here ready to pledge an executive ability and wise counselor from the distinguished brother who has been called to be public servant for this grand organization second to none of his illustrious predecessors. Bro. W. W. Hanscom, P. M. W. of Franklin, made some practical remarks that were listened to with close attention. Bro. E. M. Reading, Secretary of the Guarantee Fund, made a complimentary speech that took everybody in who was, or had been a Workman. Bro. Frank B. May then, with his aids, passed around the Havanas, and a season of fun and song was indulged for a short time. Prof. Eastman gave a reading. A recitation by Deputy Poland, and short congratulating speeches by others, closed a grand and happy meeting. It was the first meeting of the term under our newly-elected Grand Master, and augurs well for a prosperous year.

Bernal, No. 19.

The members of this Lodge met Monday evening, April 2d, in their new quarters, No. 2933 Sixteenth street. One candidate received the J. W. degree, after which the brethren were entertained with speeches and recitations. D. D. M. W. Thompson was present and make a few practical remarks. The pleasant evening closed with many expressions of satisfaction with the new hall.

Triumph, No. 180.

This Lodge received a visit last Tuesday evening from several officers and a large number of representatives to the Grand Lodge. Pertinent remarks were made by Grand Master Rogers, P. G. Barnes, Deputies A. O. Carpenter, W. J. McKay, E. Danforth, and Representative Leonard and others.

Excelsior, No. 126.

This Lodge has arranged to give a grand open meeting on Thursday evening, April 19th. Judging from the past, it will pay every one to attend their instructive and pleasant exercises.

SANTA CLARA.

Enterprise, No. 17, and Mt. Hamel, No. 43.

These Lodges are preparing to give a joint excursion and basket picnic to Monterey, May 16th. Bro. George Featherstone was in the city last week, and chartered thirty cars for the occasion. They expect to go and return the same day, and yet have five hours to enjoy that beautiful seaside resort. The brethren of San Francisco are invited to come down and take an airing. Bro. Featherstone reports peace and prosperity among the Lodges of San Jose.

ALAMEDA

University, No. 188.

This Lodge is preparing to give one of its popular receptions on Tuesday evening, 17th instant. A pleasant time is expected. The meetings of this Lodge are largely attended, and are characterized by order and harmony.

Three Grand bodies met in San Francisco last week, the Knights of Honor, Knights of Pythias and Native Sons of the Golden West.

The address on Secret Societies, delivered before Union Lodge, No. 21, Sacramento, by F. G. Magann, came too late for this issue of the WATCHMAN.

Other Jurisdictions.

The Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, of Massachusetts, closed a two-days session on the 28th of March. The meeting was a very harmonious one, and if any indication of the future of the Order could be gathered from it, that future will be a most prosperous one.

The Grand Medical Director of Kansas, calls attention in his report to the questions of the admission of the liquor selling class. The people are waking up to their rights. Touch a man's pocket and he will feel it.

Twenty-seven new Lodges were organized in Texas last year and their membership is nearly or quite 2,000.

The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania legislated District Deputies out of existence, and the Protector says "the probabilities are that no Lodges will be organized this year in counties where Lodges now exist."

The Grand Lodge of New York did not approve of biennial sessions, nor of changing the time of meeting from February to June.

Twenty-four assessments for the Beneficiary Fund were called in the jurisdiction of Ohio, the past year.

The Supreme Court of Ohio recently rendered the following decision bearing upon beneficiary certificates in beneficiary organization, including the A. O. U. W.: "Such a contract of insurance to pay in case of a member's death 'to himself or assigns,' 'to his estate,' 'to his executors or administrators,' or to any person, whether a relative or not, who is not of his family or heirs, is against public policy and void."

Cullings.

Last year there were 765 deaths in the various States among our members. On each of these sorrowful occurrences there was paid to the representatives of the deceased brother, the sum of $2,000. We therefore paid out last year in death benefits, the sum of $1,530,000. Just think of it, readers! Over a million and a half in one year!

Membership in the A. O. U. W. means a safe, cheap and easy mode of keeping the wolf from the doors of our wives and little ones, when we go "to that bourne whence no traveler returns."

In the State of New York it has cost on an average between the ages of 25 and 49 annually $61.11 in the old life companies, when in the A. O. U. W. in the same State between the ages of 21 and 50 it has cost each man per year $13.77.

The Cincinnati Enquirer says: The secret societies have responded liberally to the cry of distress called forth by the great calamity which has affected almost every man, woman, and child in the Ohio Valley during the past week. There is no occasion now to rehearse the noble actions of the Masons, Odd Fellows, the United Workmen, and all the other Orders which have given time, money, and personal attention to the sufferers by the great flood. This has been a time which has tried men's souls. The Orders have shown that they are worthy of the earnest support that is given them, and even their enemies must admit that the charity as practiced by them is worthy of emulation.

Business Locals.

BRO. G. A. DEAN, proprietor of Pacific Straw Works, No. 16 Fourth St., is at the front with spring style hats, bonnets, and frames. Straw and felt hats cleaned like new, and feathers cleaned, curled, and dyed. Parties wanting anything in this line can not do better than to call on our genial Bro. at No. 16 Fourth St.

BRO. JACOB DAVIS, P. M. W., has opened fine tobacco parlors in the Hammam Bath Building, 11 Dupont St., and still continues at his old stand, 12 O'Farrell St.

BRO. C. S. LAUMEISTER, proprietor of the Laumeister mills, 203 Mission street, has added to his mills the best and latest improved machinery for the manufacture of breakfast cereals. His long experience and close attention given to this growing industry, with improved facilities, will be a warrant that this old and popular brand will be a guarantee that his meals and cereals are the best in this market.

BRO. I. W. TABOR has taken a number of photos of Paraiso Springs and vicinity. The views of the old Mission, a birdseye view of the valley and hotel and sheep-shearing scene are unique, and a faithful representation of this noted place and surroundings. The art rooms of this enterprising and leading photograph gallery manage to keep some new views unique and historical to interest and instruct our citizens and visitors.

Business Notes.

IXORA HALL—This favorite resort for balls and parties under its present management, is gaining popularity. The ventilation is good, the accessories ample and convenient and the floor is considered the best one for dancing in this city. The management will not allow meetings in this hall to any questionable parties, it being their desire to make this the resort for the best class in this city.

WE call attention to the California Bed Comforter factory of Bro. F. F. Du Rose, 29 Second street. There are no shoddy goods used in this factory and no Chinese employed. With an experience of fifteen years in business in this city and nothing but a superior quality of cotton batting used in his goods, he is prepared to fill orders at lowest rates.

BRO. ADAM MURPHY, long and favorably known as a dealer in fine coffees and spices in this city, has established the Continental Coffee and Spice Mills at 406 Sansome. A full line of spices, herbs, baking powder, flavoring extracts, coffee, green and ground of the best quality, will be kept in large stock.

BRO. WM. STATHAM, piano manufacturer, 765 Mission street, received the gold medal at the Mechanics' Fair of 1882 for the best pianos. The demand for Statham's upright pianos has been so great that it will take many months yet to fill orders already booked. Bro. Statham intends to enlarge this factory to meet the demand soon.

BRO. C. WALLER has opened a large first-class family grocery store at 1731 Market, at the junction of Valencia. He also has a branch for supplying coal and wood. Parties can find in this house a place where they can get their supplies to their satisfaction.

BRO. DAVID P. BELL, well and favorably known as a wholesale and retail dealer in fresh, smoked and salt fish, has taken stalls Nos. 27 and 29 Bay City market, and is prepared to furnish the best the market affords, and at low prices. Telephone connection and goods delivered free to any part of the city.

THE California Washing Machine, manufactured by Bro. Geo. M. Pursell, at 431 Fourth street, San Francisco, is growing in favor each year. It saves time and money. It is the best and cheapest washer made. Parties wishing this labor-saving machine can take one on trial, and have satisfaction guaranteed, or no sale.

THE CHANNEL TUNNEL. The foolish discussions of the English politicians in regard to the military problems and dangers to England from the construction of the Channel tunnel do not seem to have much influence in retarding the actual work upon that great engineering work.
The new plans issued by the channel tunnel companies contain some important alterations, both companies having altered or amended their original plans with a view to meet the requirements of the objections or recommendations of the channel tunnel commissioners.
The amendments shown by the southeastern company are a great improvement in point of defensibility on their previous plan. It is proposed to carry the present lines inland to the extent of about three miles, and then run down the Alkham valley, forming a detour and joining the southeastern main line at the Pier station. This would bring the entrance and approach to the tunnel well within the range of the defenses of the garrison of Dover. A branch line will also connect the London, Chatham & Dover line at the upper end of the town.
The channel tunnel company have abandoned their plan of beginning the tunnel at Dover, and have reverted to their old scheme of commencing a descent to the base of the tunnel at St.
Margaret's, in the vicinity of Kearsney, about three miles from Dover. Another item reads as follows: The channel tunnel scheme is vigorously agitated, with a view to securing concessions in its favor. By the one mile and a quarter bore on the French side, the French engineers have shown they can proceed to Dover at the rate of 132 feet daily. This would complete a gallery the whole way across in a little over eighteen months. French enthusiasm on the subject takes no account of the English opposition.

THERE are two kinds of girls. One is the kind that appear best abroad—the girls that are good for rides, parties, visits, etc., whose chief delight is in such things. The other is the kind that appear best at home—the girls that are useful and cheerful in the dining room, sick room, and all other duties of home. They differ widely in character. One is often a torment at home, the other a blessing. One is a moth consuming everything about her—the other is a sunbeam inspiring light and gladness around her pathway. The right kind of an education will modify both, and unite their qualities.

THE NEW ELECTRIC UNITS.—The late Electrical Congress decided to make use of the centimeter, gramme and second in all electrical measurements. They decided to retain the old units of measurement—that is, the "ohm," as the unit of resistance, and the "volt" for the unit of electromotive force. They added the following new units: The "ampere," which is to represent the intensity of the current produced by one "volt," with the resistance of an "ohm;" the "coulomb" is to signify the quantity of electricity given by an "ampere" in one second; the "farad" indicates the capacity of the condenser, which, laden with a "volt," holds one "coulomb" of electricity. The old term "weber" is abandoned. Dr. Siemens, in his presidential address before the British Association meeting last summer, urged the retention of the "weber" as the unit of magnetic quantity, and suggested the addition also of another unit to represent the power conveyed by a current of an "ampere" through the difference of potential of a "volt." This he proposes to call a "watt," in honor of the great mechanician, James Watt. A "watt" would, therefore, represent the rate of an "ampere" multiplied by a "volt." A horse power will be 746
"watts." Tabulating these units, we would have: 1. Weber, the unit of magnetic quantity; 2. Ohm, the unit of magnetic resistance;
3. Volt, the unit of electro-motive force; 4.
Ampere, the unit of magnetic current; 5. Cou-lomb, the unit of magnetic quantity; 6. Farad, the unit of magnetic capacity; 7. Watt, the unit of magnetic power.

DRIVING PILES WITH DYNAMITE. A cotter of the United States Miller, in Budapest, Austria-Hungary, in a recent letter, mentions an interesting experiment in pile-driving by the use of dynamite. The piles experimented on had already been driven by an ordinary pile-driver, but it was desired to drive them down further.
An officer of the military engineer corps was detailed to superintend the experiment. The piles were squared and the top covered by a wrought iron plate fifteen inches square and four and a half inches thick. A seventeen and a half ounce charge of dynamite in the form of a cake six inches in diameter, wrapped in paper and clay was placed on the centre of each plate and fired. The effect produced was estimated to be equal to five blows of a 1,500-pound hammer, falling from a height of ten feet.

The Exciting Property of Oats.
Experiments have been recently made by M. Sanson with a view to settling the question whether oats have or have not the excitant property that has been attributed to them. The nervous and muscular excitability of horses was carefully observed with the aid of graduated electrical apparatus before and after they had eaten a given quantity of oats, or received a little of a certain principle which M. Sanson succeeded in isolating from oats. The chief results of the inquiry are as follows:—The pericarp of the fruit of oats contains a substance soluble in alcohol and capable of exciting the motor cells of the nervous system. This substance is not (as some have thought) vanilline, or the odorous principle of vanilla, nor at all like it. It is a nitrogenized matter, which seems to belong to the group of alkaloids; is uncrystallizable, finely granular, and brown in mass. The author calls it "avenine." All varieties of cultivated oats seem to elaborate it, but they do so in very different degrees. The elaborated substance is the same in all varieties. The differences in quantity depend not only on the variety of the plant, but also on the places of cultivation. Oats of the white variety have much less than those of the dark, but for some of the former, in Sweden, the difference is small; while for others, in Russia, it is considerable. Under 0.9 of the excitant principles per cent. of air-dried oats, the dose is insufficient to certainly affect the excitability of horses, but above this proportion the excitant action is certain. While some light-colored oats certainly have considerable excitant power, some dark oats have little. Determination of the amount of the principle present is the only basis of appreciation, though (as already stated) white oats are likely to be less exciting than dark. Crushing or grinding the grain weakens considerably the excitant property, probably by altering the substance to which it is due; the excitant action is more prompt, but much less strong and durable. The action, which is immediate and more intense with the isolated principle, does not appear till some minutes after the eating of the oats; in both cases it increases to a certain point, then diminishes and disappears. The total duration of the effect is stated to be an hour per kilogramme of oats ingested.

FROM SEA TO SEA—ONCE MORE. Mention has already been made, in this column, of a proposition to construct a ship canal from the head of navigation on the Tyne, which empties itself into the North Sea, to the Solway Frith, which enters the Irish Sea. The distance from sea to sea is about 80 miles, of which but 12 are navigable. The mouth of the latter is flat and for some distance up is a naked flat at low tide. The tides upon the opposite coasts are very large and return with great violence. The spring tides upon the North Sea coast have a rise of 18 feet; upon the coast of the Irish Sea the flow is 11 feet. Of course one or more locks will have to be constructed in connecting the waters of the two rivers. The work will be one of great interest to the coast commerce of Great Britain. Engineers are engaged in the necessary surveys for the preparation of plans and estimates. In the meantime a notice of motion in favor of the project has been given at a meeting of the Newcastle Town Council.

MANY are the joys of well doing. We read of the Princess Eugenie, sister of the King of Sweden, who recently sold her diamonds to raise funds in order to complete a hospital in which she was interested. When visiting this hospital after its completion, a suffering inmate wept tears of gratitude as she stood by his side, and the Princess exclaimed, "Ah! now I see my diamonds again."

We occasionally send complimentary sample copies of the WATCHMAN to the various officers and members of the A. O. U. W. We ask as a special favor of those receiving them, and all interested in the success of the various Lodges will lend us a helping hand in increasing our circulation. Nothing contributes more to the successful working of the A. O. U. W. than the circulation of general Fraternity news, and the best way to secure this is through the WATCHMAN, which is an able and faithful advocate. It is to the interest of the A. O. U. W. that the WATCHMAN be placed in the hands of every Workman, and to accomplish this we must rely in a large measure upon the voluntary efforts and subscriptions.

Liberal inducements will be offered to active and reliable members who will canvass for subscriptions. Sample copies will be mailed free to Workmen on application, all of whom are invited to endeavor to assist in extending the circulation of the WATCHMAN.

Let every Workman into whose hands this notice may come, if not already a subscriber, fill out the subscription blank below, enclose two dollars, and send it to us for a year's subscription.

Among other Reasons for Subscribing are the Following:

Because it is a permanent, first-class, conscientious, able, and well conducted journal.

Because it is the largest and best agricultural weekly west of the Rocky mountains.

That Patrons may be reliably informed on the progress of the Order in this and other fields.

That more farmers' wives and children in their rural homes may be cheered by its weekly visits, laden with its pleasing, yet moral reading, and sound instruction.

That a more extended interchange of views and opinions may be had among farmers, upon all the great questions touching their mutual interests and progress.

That the agricultural resources of the Pacific States may be more wisely, speedily and thoroughly developed by an open and free discussion in our columns.

That all the worthy industries of our State may be advanced in connection with that of agriculture, our columns being ever open to the discussion of the merits of all progressive improvements.

That the RURAL, after having been read and pondered over by the home circle, can be filed away for future useful reference, or forwarded to the old Eastern friends of the Atlantic border, in aid of an increasing immigration to our sunny clime.

Peter Cooper.

How strange it is that we never fully recognize the worth of a great, noble nature while among us. It is only after he has gone that we begin to say, one to another, what manner of man is this who walked and communed with us by the way. It is the old illusion of what is present and familiar. The heart fails to realize how precious are its jewels until they are lost. Future generations build the sepulcher of the prophets, and do honor to their name. Peter Cooper works of love and charity fell upon the eager, money-making, giddy people of New York as a gentle rain upon the grass. Now they begin to realize how far-reaching and permanent are his beneficent deeds. Endurance is the only true test of a noble character, and Peter Cooper will be remembered in New York long after her Astors, Vanderbilts, Stewarts, and Goulds are spectral names.

His long, busy, thrifty career is a fine commentary on the law of patient, productive industry. There were hundreds all around him in those early days, as now, who sought to sprout fortunes in hothouse ventures. Mr. Cooper never ran after wildcat speculations. He threw no money into the lottery wheel of chance. He believed that wealth could be had, without making other people poorer. That a dollar judiciously planted would grow a harvest. At seventeen years of age he began the struggle as an apprentice in a carriage shop on $25 a year and board; and by zeal and diligence won the confidence of his employers. At twenty-one years of age we catch sight of him in a woolen factory on Long Island working at $1.50 per day. While here he invented a machine for shearing nap from cloth. It was patented, and for a short time had a rapid sale, and put a little money into his pocket. With this he opened a furniture store at Newburg, where his parents lived, which he kept for a short time, and then returned to New York and opened a grocery store. Hearing that an old run-down glue factory was for sale, he purchased it for $2,000. He was now permanently established in business. It proved the source of the great bulk of Mr. Cooper's fortune. For many years he carried on the business alone, had no book-keeper, no clerk, no agent, no salesman. At break of day he was at the factory starting the fires and preparing for work. At noon he drove down into the city and made his sales. His evenings were spent posting his books, attending to his correspondence, and enjoying the society of his wife. This was his daily routine for nearly thirty years. His money swarmed, and at the age of fifty-five we find him owning rolling mills and iron works at Baltimore, Trenton, New York, Phillipsburg and Williamsburg, giving employment to 2,500 men. Through economy, sagacity and patience, his immense fortune had grown as naturally as the trees grow.

Peter Cooper entered New York with only ten dollars in his pocket. Jay Gould found himself on Broadway with only a patent mouse-trap to begin business. Alone among strangers both resolved to make a fortune. Both succeeded. There is nothing remarkable in all this. New York is full of rich men, who started life as poor as they. The fact is, acquisitiveness is an instinct, and is almost sure to lead to success when the environments are propitious. It is the motive which animated these two men with which we are now concerned. Gould sought for wealth, because it was a scepter of power that awed courts, legislatures, and levied at its own caprice tribute upon the earnings of twenty years of its operation, it has transferred the lives of thousands of youths from the unproductive and servile employment to which they would have certainly fallen, into the higher plane of intelligent, skilled artisans and original designers in the workshops and schools of the country. It can point throughout the land to miners, engineers, architects, builders, telegraphers, photographers and teachers; even professors in the higher departments of science who have been indebted to it for their success in life.

Glue Factory, building the first locomotive in America at his Baltimore Iron Works, or manufacturing the first railroad iron in this country at Trenton, during all these busy years, the founding of that school shone like a day-star in his thoughts. At last the time came to realize the beautiful dream of his life. About twenty-five years ago the foundation of the Cooper Union was laid. It was five years before the building was finished. It is a brownstone and iron structure, thoroughly fire-proof, of massive Roman archetecture, an irregular quadrangle in shape, having dimensions on its four sides

Stephen Girard, ungracious in manner, ill tempered, miserly lived and died without a friend, and when he could no longer enjoy his wealth founded the Girard college for orphan boys, at Philadelphia, but so hedged about by the crabbed eccentricities of his character that it may be called a rose encircled by ugly thorns. John Jacob Astor, gave New York a library upon such impracticable conditions, that it is of little use except to a few literary men. But Peter Cooper, whose life had been a perpetual perfume in the homes of the poor, with unselfish devotion, labors to found an institution that like the "happy gates of gospel grace," will stand open night and day to all who would enter and enjoy its blessings. Had wealth always fallen into the hands of such unselfish, generous natures as Ezra Cornell, Daniel Drew, George Peabody and Peter Cooper, the envy and irritableness of the poor, the clamor of the incendiary mob, the boding moan of a communistic storm, never would have been the terror of our civilization.

PETER COOPER.

the people. Here they part company. Mr. Cooper, while an apprentice in a carriage shop and spending his scanty earnings on the teacher of an evening school, determined to devote his years to the accumulation of wealth that he might found an institution where poor working boys and girls might acquire a free education in the practical arts and sciences. It was forty years before he was able to give definite shape to that idea. But he never forgot it. It gave unity, method, aim, and inspiration to his long years of toil. While carding wool at Hempstead, selling sugar, salt, and fish, at the Bowery grocery, making glue and isinglass at the Old Middle Road of 90, 146, 165, and 195 feet, and costing $964,000; exclusive of the institution an addition has cost $700,000. Of the splendid success of the institution in supplying the want which it was intended to meet, a recent annual report of the curator gave ample evidence. Every department was full to overflowing. More than 3,000 pupils has entered the various classes. Between 400 and 500 applications has been put on file to await the retirement of those who already held places in the classes. The instruction, and lectures which these pupils enjoyed were given to them absolutely without charge. It is not easy to realize the far-reaching and beneficent influence of such an institution. n t

Home Miscellany.

Note the Bright Hours Only.

A lesson in itself sublime
 A lesson worth enshrining
 Is this: "I take no heed of time,
 Save when the sun is shining;
 These motto words a dial bore,
 And wisdom never preaches
 To human hearts a better lore
 Than this short sentence teaches.
 As life is sometimes bright and fair,
 And sometimes dark and lonely,
 Let us forget the toil and care,
 And "note bright hours only."

There is no grave on earth's broad chart
 But has some bird to cheer it;
 So hope sings on in every breast,
 Although we may not hear it,
 And if to-day the heavy wing
 Of sorrow is oppressing,
 Perchance to-morrow's sun may bring
 The weary heart a blessing.

We bid the joyous moments haste
 And then forget their glitter;
 We take the cup of life, and taste
 No portion but the bitter.
 But we should teach our hearts to deem
 Its sweetest drops the strongest,
 And pleasant hours should ever seem
 To linger with us longest.

The darkest shadows of the night
 Are just before the morning;
 Then let us wait the coming light,
 All boding phantoms scorning.
 And while we're passing on the tide
 Of Time's fast ebbing river,
 Let's pluck the blossoms by its side
 And bless the gracious Giver.

A Nest Egg.

But a few miles from this city, and on the sloping banks of the stream, noted more for its plentitude of clubs and "shiners" than the gamier two and four-pound bass for which, in season, so many credulous anglers flock and lie in wait, stands a country residence, so convenient to the stream, and so inviting in its pleasant exterior and comfortable surroundings—barn, dairy and spring-house—that the weary, sunburnt and disheartened fisherman, out from the dusty town for a day of recreation, is often wont to seek its hospitality.

It wasn't even weather-boarded, but, instead was covered smoothly with some cement, a, though the plasterers had come while the folks were visiting, and so unable to get work at the interior, had just plastered the outside.

I am more than glad that I was hungry enough, and weary enough and wise enough, to take the house at first suggestion; and so, putting away my fishing tackle, for the morning, at least, I went up the sloping bank, crossed the dusty road, and confidently clambered over the fence.

Not even a growling dog to intimate that I was trespassing. All was open—gracious looking—pastoral. The sward beneath my feet was velvetlike in elasticity, and the scarce visible path I followed through it, led promptly to the open kitchen door. From within I heard a woman singing some old ballad in an undertone, while at the threshold a trimmed, white-spurred rooster stood poised on one foot, curving his glossy neck and cocking his wattled head as though to catch the meaning of the words. I paused. It was a scene I felt restrained from breaking in upon, nor would I, but for the sound of a strong male voice coming around the corner of the house:

"Sir: howdy!"

Turning, I saw a rough-looking but kindly-featured man of sixty-five, the evident owner of the place.

I returned his salutation with some confusion and much deference. "I must really beg your pardon for this intrusion," I began, "but I have been tiring myself out fishing, and your home here looked so pleasant—and I felt so thirsty—and—"

"Want a drink, I reckon," said the old man, turning abruptly toward the kitchen door, then pausing as suddenly, with a backward motion of his thumb—"Jest follow the path here down to the little brick—that's the spring—and you'll find 'at you've come to the right place fer drinkin' water! Hold on a minute till I git you a tumbler there're nothin' down there but a tin."

"Then don't trouble yourself any further," I said heartily, "for I'd rather drink from a tin cup than a goblet of pure gold."

"And so'd I," said the old man, reflectively, turning mechanically, and following me down the path. "Druther drink out of a tin—just a fruit-can with the top knocked off—er—er—a gourd," he added in a zestful, reminiscent tone of voice, that so heightened my impatient thirst, I reached the spring house fairly in a run.

"Well—sir!" exclaimed my host, in evident delight, as I stood dipping my nose in the second-cupful of cool, reviving liquid, and peering in a congratulatory kind of way at the blurred and rubicund reflection of my features in the bottom of the cup, "well sir, blame don! ef it don't do a feller good to see you enjoyin' of it thataway! But don't you drink too much o' that water!—'cause there's some sweet milk over there in one o' them crocks, maybe; and ef you'll jest, kind o' keerful-like, lift off the lid of that third one, say, over there to your left, and dip you out a tinfel or two o' that, w'y, it'll do you good to drink it, and it'll do me good to see you at it—but hold up!—hold up!" he called abruptly, as, nowise loth, I bent above the vessel designated. "Hold your horses for a second! Here's Marthy; let her git it fer ye."

If I was at first surprised and confused, meeting the master of the house, I was wholly startled and chagrined in my present position before its mistress. But as I rose and stammered, in my confusion, some incoherent apology, I was again reassured and put at greater ease by the comprehensive and forgiving smile the woman gave me as I yielded her my place, and with lifted hat, awaited her further kindness.

"I came just in time, sir," she said, half laughingly, as with strong, bare arm she reached across the gurgling trough and replaced the lid that I had partially removed. "I came just in time, I see, to prevent father from having you dip into the 'mornings' milk, which, of course, has scarcely a veil of cream over the face of it as yet. But men, as you are doubtless willing to admit," she went on, jocularly, "don't know about these things. You must pardon father, as much for his well-meaning ignorance of such matters, as for this cup of cream, which I am sure you will better relish." She arose smiling, with her eyes turned frankly on my own. And I must be excused when I confess as I bowed my thanks, taking the proffered cup and raising it to my lips, I stared with an uncommon interest and pleasure at the donor's face.

She was a woman of certainly not less than forty years of age. But the figure, and the rounded grace and fullness of it, together with the features and the eyes, completed as fine a specimen of physical and mental health as ever it has been my fortune to meet; there was something so full of purpose and resolve—something so wholesome, too, about the character—something so womanly—I might say manly, and would, but for the petty prejudice, maybe, occasioned by the trivial fact of a locket having dropped from her bosom as she knelt; and that trinket still dangles in my memory, even as it then dangled and dropped back to its concealment in her breast as she arose. But her face, by no means handsome in the common meaning, was marked with a breadth and strength of outline and expression that approached the heroic—a face that once seen is forever fixed in memory—a personage once met one must know more of. And so it was, that an hour later, as I strolled with the old man about his farm, looking, to all intents, with the profoundest interest at his Devonshires, Shorthorns, Jerseys, and the like, I lured from him something of an outline of his daughter's history.

"There're no better girl'n Marthy!" he said mechanically answering some ingenious allusion to her worth. "And, yit," he went on reflectively stooping from his seat in the barn door, and with his open jack-knife picking up a little chip with the point of the blade—"and yit—you wouldn't believe it—but Marthy was the oldest of three daughters, and hed—I may say—hed more advantages o' marryin'—and yit, as I was jest goin' to say, she's the very one 'at didn't marry. Hed every advantage—Marthy did. W'y we even hed her educated—her mother was a livin' then—and we was well enough fixed to afford the educatin' of her, mother allus contended—and we was—besides, it was Marthy's notion, too, and you know how women is that-away when they git their head set. So we sent Marthy down to Indunapolis, and got her books and put her in school there, and paid for her keepin' and everything, and she jest—well, you may say lived there stiddy for better'n four year. O' course, she'd git back evry once-an-while, but her visits was allus some way-another, unsatisfactory like, 'cause, you see, Marthy was allus my favorite, and I allus laughed and told her ut the girls could git married ef they wanted, but she was goin' to be the 'nest egg' of our family, and s'long as I lived I wanted her at home with me. And she'd laugh and contend ut she'd as lif be an old maid as not, and never expected to marry, and didn't want to. But she hed me seart once't, though! Come out from the city one time, durin' the army, with a pearl-looking young feller in blue clothes and gilt straps on his shoulders. Young lieutenant he was—name of Morris. Was layin' in camp there in the city somers. I disremember which camp it was now adzackly—but anyhow it 'peared like he hed plenty o' time to go and come, fer from that time on he kep' on a-comin'—ev' time Marthy ud come home he'd come too, and I got to noticin' at Marthy come home a good 'eal more'n she used to afore Morris first brought her. And blame ef the thing didn't git to worryin' me. And once't I spoke mother about it, and told her ef I thought the feller wanted to marry Marthy I'd jest stop his comin' right then and there. But mother she sought o' smiled, said somemin' about men a-never seein' through nothin'; and when I ast her what she meant, w'y she ups and tells me at Morris didn't keer nothin' fer Marthy, nor Marthy for Morris, and then went on to tell me that Morris was kind o' aidin' up tords Annie—she was next to Marthy, you know, in pint of years and experience, but ev'body allus said 'at Annie was the purtiest o' the whole three o' 'em. And so when mother told me 'at the signs pinted tords Annie, w'y, o' course, I hedn't no particular objections to that, 'cause Morris was of good family enough it turned out, and, in fact, was as stirrin' a young feller as ever I'd want for a son-in-law, so I hed nothin' more to say, nor they wasn't no occasion to say nothin' 'cause right along about then I begin to notice 'at Marthy quit comin' home so much, and Morris kep' a-comin' more.

Till finally, one time he was out here all by hisself, 'long about dusk, come out here where I was a-feedin' and ast me all at once't, and in a straightforward way, if he couldn't marry Annie, and, some-way another blame ef it didn't make me as happy as him when I told him yes. You see that thing proved pint-blank 'at he wasn't a-fishin' round for Marthy. Well, sir, as luck would hev it, Marthy got home about a half hour later, and I'll give you my word I never was so glad to see the girl in all my life. It was foolish in me, I reckon, but when I see her drivin' up the lane—it was purt' nigh dark then, but I could see her through the open window from where I was settin' at the supper table, and so I jest quietly excused myself, p'like like, as a feller will, you know, when there's comp'ny round, and I skipped off and met her jest as she was about to git out to open the barn gate. "Hold up, Marthy," sez I, "set right where you air; I'll open the gate for you, and I'll do anything else for you in the world 'at you want me to!"

"W'y, what's pleased you so?" she says, laughin', as she druv slowly through, and ticklin' my nose with the cracker of the buggy whip.

"Guess," says I, jerkin' the gate to, and turnin' to lift her out.

"The new peanner's come?" says she, eager like.

"Yer new peanner's come," says I, "but that's not it."

"Strawberries for supper," says she.

"Strawberries for supper," says I, "but that ain't it."

Jest then Morris's hoss whinniered in the barn, and she glanced up quick and smilin', and says, "Somebody come to see somebody?"

"You're a gittin' warm," says I.

"Somebody come to see me?" she says, anxious-like.

"No," says I, "and I'm glad of it—fer this one 'ats come wants to git married, and o' course I wouldn't harbor in my house, no young feller 'at was a layin' round fer a chance to steal away the 'nest egg,'" says I laughin'.

Marthy hed riz up in the buggy by this time, but as I held up my hands to her, she sort o' drawed back a minute, and says, all serious-like and kind o' whisperin':

"Is it Annie?"

I nodded. "Yes," says I, "and what's more, I've given my consent, and mother's give hern—the thing's all settled. Come, jump out, and run in and be happy with the rest of us!" and I held out my hands agin, but she didn't pear to take no heed. She was kind o' pale, too, I thought, and swallowed a time or two like as ef she couldn't speak plain.

"Who is it?" she ast.

"Who is it?" I says, a-gittin' kind o' out o' patience with the girl; "W'y, you know who it is, of course. It's Morris," says I. "Come jump down? Don't you see I'm waitin', fer you?"

"Then take me," she says; and blame-don! ef the girl didn't keel right over in my arms as limber as a rag! Clean fainted away? Honest? Jest the excitement, I reckon, 'o breakin' it to her so sudden-like, 'cause she liked Annie, I've sometimes thought, better'n even she did her own mother. Didn't go half so hard with her when her other sister married. "Yes, sir," said the old man, by way of sweeping conclusion, as he rose to his feet, "Marthy's the only one of 'em 'at never married—both of the others is gone—Morris went all through the army and got back safe and sound, he's livin' in Idyho, and doin' fust rate. Sends me a letter ev' now and then. Got three little chunks o' grandchildren out there, and never laid eyes on one of 'em. You see, I'm a gittin' to be quite a middle aged man, in fact a very middle aged man, you might say. Since mother died, which hes ben—lem-me-see, mother's ben dead somers in the neighborhood of ten year—sence mother died I've ben gittin' more and more of Marthy's notion, that is, you couldn't ever hire me to marry nobody, and them has always ben, and still is the 'Nest Eggs' views! Listen! That's her a-callin' fer us now. You must sorter overlook the freedom, but I told Marthy you'd promised to take dinner with us to-day, and it ud never do to disappoint her now. Come on!" And ah! it would have made the soul of you, either rapturously glad or madly envious, to see how meekly I consented.

I am always thinking that I never tasted coffee till that day; I am always thinking of the crisp and steaming rolls, ored over with the molten gold that binted of the clover-fields, and the bees that had not yet permitted the honey of the bloom and the white blood of the stalk to be divorced. I am always thinking that the young and tender pullet we happy three discussed was a near and dear relative of the gay Patrician rooster that I first caught peering so inquisitively in at the kitchen door; and I am always—always thinking of the "Nest-Egg."—J. W. Riley.

At last a man has been found who would not marry for money, and the fact is worth the record. A certain young lady wrote to a popular young clergyman of Toronto that he had converted her soul to grace, that she was ready to lay her fortune at his feet, that she loved him deeply, passionately, and that her hand was his if he would take it. To which the clergyman replied: "My dear Miss—, give your soul to God, your fortune to the poor, and keep your hand till some man asks for it."

Arsenic for the Complexion.

Speaking of the weakness of the gentler sex, says a Cleveland correspondent, I met my friend, the doctor, yesterday, and as he and I stood and surveyed the passing show, a plump, fair woman passed by, and I said to him, "What a charming complexion!" "Short-lived, though, my dear boy," quoth he. I expressed surprise, for my charmer was young. "Arsenic, Talbot, arsenic!" said he calmly. Then it dawned upon me what he meant. Resuming, he said: "Its use is increasing. Women eat it in two forms—the white powder, that caused poor Jennie Cramer's death, or arsenious acid, as the drug dealers have it, and Fowler's solution, which the pharmacopœia says is a mixture of arsenic with potash in the fluid form. Either way of taking arsenic produces the plumpness of face and beauty of complexion that you noticed in yon fair lady. Its influence is principally on the the capillary system of the skin, which produces the plumpness. In plain English, water is the influence at work, and in the end it shows itself. The skin assumes a watery transparency, which in its turn gives way to ghastliness and whitening of the lips. This is the awakening from a blissful dream. Beauty vanishes and the end comes. Horrible? Oh, no! I call it retribution. Cynical? Perhaps! But plain truth generally is, my dear boy, in these days of ours. Arsenic eating can be stopped at any time without an effort, except that which vanity dreads. It has none of the soporific effect of opium or morphine. Used as a medicine, it is an excellent tonic, one of the best known."

"How long can arsenic be used before it produces the ghastliness you speak of?" I asked my mentor. "Six weeks' unbroken dosing will do the work well and effectually," answered he; "but woman is skillful, and, using it a week she pauses, and before the effect of the cessation comes she takes another interval of arsenic dosing. Thus fate is held off. The end must come, however, and it comes all too soon for the arsenic eaters. Some systems agree with the drug longer than others, but a few years of the periodical eating settles it." "It is astonishing," went on the cynic, "that you cannot kill a pig with arsenic. I had a friend who was an enthusiastic chemist. He had preserved a lot of cherries in an arsenical solution, and having no further use for them threw them one morning from his laboratory window. A rambling porker, on the lookout for edible trifles, saw them drop, and looking them over and contrasting them with the usual expanse of tile, brickbat and old tin cans on which it had been his daily wont to browse, eagerly swallowed them. My friend was alarmed, and visions of a bill for the value of a dead and uneatable pig rose like a spectre before his eyes. He chased the pig away, and thought perhaps its death might not be laid at his door if the pig was not there when it expired. The incident warned him; but on the following morning he was dumfounded to see the pig waiting for more of the deadly fruit. Some were prepared, for my friend was an investigator, and doled out to his hogship. He devoured them, and grunted a muffled pean in their praise. Each morning that pig returned, and each morning the dose was increased until my friend was ruined and the pig's confidence in arsenical cherries stronger than ever."

SLATES BAD FOR THE EYES.—Professor H. Cohn, of Breslau, believes that the use of slates by school children tends to produce short sightedness; and would substitute either pen and ink or an artificial white slate with black pencil, manufactured in Pilsen, and already introduced into a few German schools. In 1878 Horner found that B and E could be read, if black on white ground, 496 cm.; if white on black, 421 cm.; and if gray on black, 330 cm.; and ascribed the greater difficulty with white letters to irradiation. The reflection of light from the surface of slates is, it is said, enough alone to cause their disuse. The school board of Zurich has forbidden the use of the slate after the first term (primary year), and many teachers and oculists advocate the substitution of white-boards for blackboards. The noise of slates; dirty habits formed by erasures; bad positions favored by reading the less legible script; a heavy hand; and the habit of twisting, learned with a pencil, and to be unlearned, with a pen—these, it is said, are obviated by the use of pen and ink at the outset. The obvious objections are, that children can occupy themselves better with slates, and from pencil to pen is from the easier to the harder.

ASBESTOS ROPE.—Asbestos rope is described among other articles now being turned out by the United Asbestos Co. of Great Britain. The strength seemed to be about one fourth that of ordinary hemp rope of the same diameter. Rope one and one half inches in diameter is stated to have a breaking strength of one ton, and twenty feet of it weighs thirteen and one fourth pounds. It is made especially for fire-escape purposes, for theatres, fire-brigades, and for ready means of escape from houses and public buildings; its advantage being that it will not break and drop its burden if a flame bears upon it. It is made like ordinary rope, but spun from Italian asbestos thread, and there seems to be every probability of its favorable reception by the public.

Our Boys and Girls.

For the Farmers' Boys and Girls.

Come, boys, I have something to tell you,
Come near, I would whisper it low;
You are thinking of leaving the homestead,
Don't be in a hurry to go.
The city has many attractions,
But think of the vices and sins;
When once in the vortex of fashion,
How soon the course downward begins!
The farm is the safest and surest;
The orchards are loaded to-day;
You are free as the air in the mountains,
And monarch of all you survey;
Better stay on the farm awhile longer,
Though profit comes in rather slow;
Remember, you have nothing to risk;
Don't be in a hurry to go!

The New Baby.

"How do you do, little Mary," I said.
She put her finger in her mouth, but did not speak. I sat on the sofa, holding the new baby. Mary did not like the baby, and that was why she stood ever so far away and frowned.
"Is your dolly pretty well?" I asked.
She blushed, and hung her head. Then she ran and climbed upon mamma's bed with that big, big wax dolly, and began to cry.

"Dear little Mary!" said mamma, putting her arm about her and holding her close to her heart. But little Mary only cried the more.

"O mamma," said she, "I love you, I love papa, I love all the folks, but I don't love the baby! Baby is naughty!"

Mamma looked sad. She knew Mary had not been happy since the little brother came. She did not like to have any one rock him, or sing to him, or kiss him. She wanted all the kisses herself; and then, too, she was so afraid mamma would forget to love her, now that the new baby was here.

Poor little Mary! This was a sad mistake. Her mother's heart was very large—large enough to hold and love two darling children just as well as one.

I went away, thinking how dear and sweet that baby was, with his soft blue eyes, and smiling mouth, and cunning hands; but I did not like to think his sister Mary had frowned at him and said such unkind words.

Four weeks after this I saw the pretty baby again. He was pale and weak, for he had been very ill; but the doctor said he would soon be well. He lay in his mother's arms, and Mary knelt beside him, kissing his dear little hands, and face, and feet.

"Mary loves her brother now," said mamma.

"Oh, yes; I knew that the moment I saw her."

"She was very sorry when she thought God was going to take him away," said mamma, "and she means now to be always good to him if God lets him stay here with us."

"Oh, how glad I am!" said I.

And then little Mary hid her face in her baby brother's bosom, and I heard her whisper: "I love mamma, I love papa, I love you, and I love God."

Tears came in mamma's eyes, but she kissed her little daughter with a tender smile, and I thought I had never, never seen her look so happy before.

Household Hints.

EXCELLENT BEAN SOUP.—Soak a quart of black beans over night in clear cold water; drain them well the next morning and put them on to boil five or six hours before dinner, with a small slice of pork (minced and fried), three large onions, minced and fried in pork fat, or in butter; a carrot and three potatoes cut into small pieces, a pod of red pepper, salt, a gallon of clear cold water. Let it come slowly to a boil, then set it where it may simmer gently and steadily; keep it well skimmed. Just before dinner is served, strain and return it to the pot, add pepper and salt if necessary, and thicken with a table-spoonful each of butter and flour worked together to a cream. Let it boil up once, and serve. Some persons like it flavored with Worcestershire sauce.

SALLY LUNS.—One pound of flour, two eggs, one ounce of butter, one teacupful of milk and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. First mix the baking powder and the flour, then add the eggs, which must be well beaten; the milk must be warmed and the butter dissolved in it, then mix all together to a rather stiff dough, cut it into four pieces, which should be made into the shape of buns and flattened with the hand, put them in the oven at once and bake for about twenty minutes; when removed from the oven paint them over with a little egg and milk, cut, butter and serve them as you would crumpets.

BROWN BREAD.—Brown bread made by following these directions is sure to be good. Sift, until thoroughly mixed together, half a pint of flour, one pint of corn-meal, half a pint of rye flour, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking-powder, one tablespoonful of brown sugar. Peel, wash and boil two medium-sized potatoes; rub them through a sieve, and beat them well with half a pint of water. Make a batter of this, and the meal, etc. Butter a deep basin, or small pan, and pour the batter in; then set the pan in a kettle of boiling water; let it cook in this way for an hour. Cover the pan, of course, and put it in a hot oven for half an hour.

SPONGE CAKE.—For a large sponge cake, or for one which may be baked in two tins, use this formula: One pound and a quarter of sugar; beat fourteen eggs, the whites and yolks separate; then with the yolks beat the sugar and a little powdered mace; then beat in the whites of the eggs and sift the flour in through a colander. Beat this all thoroughly, and bake with an even heat until the cake begins to shrink away from the edges of the tin. If you wish to frost this cake, reserve three of the whites of the eggs for this purpose; but it is better "form" not to frost a sponge cake. Take pains with the baking, and the top of the cake will be much more pleasing to the eye than frosting can make it.

MAYONNAISE OF SALMON.—Cut cold cooked salmon into any pretty shape you choose, then pour over it the following marinade:—Mix one spoonful of salt, one of pepper, and one teaspoonful of grated onion in a salad spoon; then add three tablespoonfuls of vinegar and one table-spoonful of oil. Let the salmon remain on ice for several hours in this marinade, then drain well. Form shells of lettuce leaves upon a low platter by placing two or three leaves together. Put some of the salmon into each shell, and add a spoonful of thick mayonnaise sauce to each. The salmon may also be arranged upon the lettuce in the form of a mound, and then the thick sauce should be spread over it, completely masking it.

CANAPEES.—After cutting the crust from a loaf of stale bread, cut the loaf in very thin slices, and toast to a delicate brown. Butter lightly, and spread with any kind of potted meat or fish. Put two slices together, and with a sharp knife cut them in long strips. Arrange these tastefully on a dish and serve at tea or evening parties. Sardines may be pounded to a paste and mixed with the yolks of hard-boiled eggs, also pounded to a paste, and used instead of potted meats. In this case the slices of bread may be fried in salad oil.

SUBSTITUTE FOR CREAM.—Here is a substitute for cream, to be used in coffee: To a pint of milk allow the yolk of one egg; beat the egg till very light, then strain it, and stir it in the milk, set this on the stove and let it scald, that is, become thoroughly heated, but not boiled. This, although lacking much that is desirable, is better than a little cold milk in the coffee.

ORANGE ICE.—Squeeze the juice from six large oranges and two lemons; pour about five gills of boiling water over the broken peel and pulp and let it stand until cool; then strain and add the water to the orange and lemon juice. Sweeten to taste with loaf sugar, and freeze.

PEOPLE who have recently visited the Howell reduction works, twelve miles southeast of Prescott, speak of the institution in complimentary terms. Messrs. Howell and Adams, who have devoted time, talent and money to the erection of these fine works, and to the opening of mines, will, we hope, soon get their reward. They employ a small army of men, whom they have paid regularly, and display other traits of character which stamp them as men of the right calibre to win success in our hills. The capacity of the smaller is thirty tons per day.

Scientific Nursing.

There is no subject of so much general interest as this, concerning which there is, at the same time, such a widely prevalent ignorance. There are few, especially among women, upon whom will not devolve, at some time in their lives, the care of the sick; fewer still, who will not at some time become dependent upon such care; and it might naturally be supposed that matters of such primary and universal importance as sanitary conditions and the practical application in the sick room of scientific principles would be too familiar to every one to need to be further enlarged upon. But the fact is, it too frequently happens that all the scientific knowledge which ever enters the sick room comes in with the doctor and goes out again with him. This state of things requires to be improved. Knowledge, and that correct knowledge we call science, is just as indispensable to the nurse as to anybody else.

It is a great mistake to suppose that all women—even good women—make good nurses. The best intention and the tenderest heart may co-exist with an utter lack of executive ability, and be more than counterbalanced by ignorance and prejudice. Native aptitude gives advantage, but it cannot be relied upon alone. Even those who possess in the highest degree the natural gift of ministrations which renders them so acceptable to the invalid, would find their power of usefulness very largely increased by a familiarity with what may be properly called the science of the sick room. Physicians are recognizing more and more the importance of hygienic agencies in the treatment of disease, and with this there has come an increasingly urgent call for the scientific instruction and practical training of those who are to take charge of invalids. Science explains the conditions upon which the art of the nurse depends, and lays down principles which can not be violated without injury; but it is not at all necessary to make a parade of technical language in stating its requirements.—Popular Science Monthly.

How to Feed Babies.

Dr. H. Gibbons, Jr., gave an interesting lecture at Cooper College last week on baby food, taking the ground that the system of nursing by artificial food was very destructive to children's health. He claimed that in San Francisco one death in every 300 was attributable to improper diet, and one in every 200 in New York. Taking the average, 250, for the United States, he said we have 200,000 infants whose deaths are the result of improper food. For natural food no substitute has yet been found, unless it be cow's milk, which, though not of course as good, answers the purpose. Wet nurses, he thought, were better than cow's milk. The statistics showed that of 100 children nursed by their mothers eighteen per cent. had died, while of 100 nursed by wet nurses twenty-nine per cent. had died in the first year.

A striking example of the fallacy of the artificial food theory, he said, was furnished by a London hospital. Nineteen per cent. of those cared for by wet nurses had died, while of those nursed by artificial food fifty-four per cent. had died. Of one hundred children nursed by their mothers sixty-three were healthy, twenty-three tolerably so, and fourteen sickly. Of those half nursed fifty-two were healthy, sixteen tolerably so and thirty-two sickly, while of one hundred children fed on artificial food, ten were healthy, twenty-six tolerably so and sixty-four sickly. A practice injurious to a child's health is, he said, that of nursing immediately after birth; another, that of nursing at night, as a child's stomach, as well as an adult's, needed rest. If the milk was insufficient, he said, other food might be added, as this was better than frequent nursing and overloading the stomach. He recommended fasting during illness, instead of constant feeding, and advised the giving of a drink of barley water before nursing, especially in hot weather.

IMPROVED FOOT WARMERS.—M. Anselin, a French experimentalist and the discoverer of heating with crystalline acetate of soda, has demonstrated the much slower cooling of foot warmers containing that substance than that of the ordinary ones with water. Two leading French lines of railway have this system in general use, and in England the London and North-western railway, which had last year 3000 of such warmers in service, has this year 6000. Applications of the system have also been made in Italy, Spain and Portugal; and it is pointed out that among other applications of the same principle are the heaters for beds, dishes, poultices, muffs and feeding bottles. But Mr. Anselin, in an article contributed to La Nature, remarks that the operation of filling the warmers requires certain precautions to avoid suffusion or supersaturation, which the acetate is liable to in a closed vessel. This phenomenon is apt to occur, especially if there is an excess of water in the acetate—a fact due often to the moisture in the air, which the substance readily absorbs. The precautions consist mainly in elimination or saturation of this excess of water, and also in the employment in the warmer of a spherical reservoir of crystals, with thick walls of a material which conducts heat badly. This reservoir also acts in destroying supersaturation by the vibration it imparts to the liquified salt during the train's motion.

Worth Knowing.

NEW TEST FOR WASTE PIPES.—A Boston paper relates a discovery which may prove to be a better test for leaky waste pipes than heretofore used. The invention is accorded to a woman. Noticing an offensive odor in the parlor, she suspected a defect in the waste pipes, and sent to the agent to request that a plumber might be sent to examine them. The agent was incredulous, and refused. She tried the peppermint test. To make her proofs more convincing, the woman, after borrowing two cats from her friends, purchased some oil of valerian, and stationing the animals in the parlor, went up stairs and poured the valerian into the basin in the same way that the peppermint had been applied, and then descended to watch the result. Cats are extremely fond of the odor of valerian, and it was not long before both of them began to sniff the air, and move toward the door of a closet through which the waste pipe ran. The door was opened for them, and they immediately sprang upon a certain shelf, where they remained purring with satisfaction. A third time the woman went to the agent, who, though still unbelieving, consented to send a plumber to make further investigations, and, on cutting away the plastering so as to expose the pipe, a joint was found completely separated at the place where the cats had indicated.

IMPROVEMENTS IN MAKING GLASS. The high expectations in regard to toughened glass can scarcely be said to have been realized as yet, and several improvements must yet be made before the process can be considered as perfect. The original method consisted in immersing the article while still red hot in a bath of oil heated to 200 degrees C. (392 degrees Fahr.), and letting it remain there until it had cooled down to that temperature.

T. Lubisch claims to have discovered a better method of hardening glass, or, rather, an improvement on the same process. He also immerses the article while red hot into a hot bath, but he takes it out again when it has nearly lost its redness, and lets it cool very slowly in an oven that is heated nearly to the temperature of the glass. As the bath does not need to be much above 212 degrees Fahr., he prefers to use solutions of the carbohydrates in water (starch, gum, or the like.) Such a bath does not soil the surface of the glass, as is the case with fats, oil, and bituminous substances.

Glasses subjected to this operation resist pressure and shock just as well as those hardened in oil, but possess this advantage, that they can be cut with a diamond, or polished and cut with sandstones. While the oil method only permits of the hardening of articles of simple shape, by Lubisch's process all glass things can be hardened—as, for example, all bottles, mugs with handles, pitchers and other vessels.

MORE NEW USES FOR COTTON.—It is said it has been demonstrated that fire and water-proof houses can be built out of cotton and straw. The cotton used is the refuse of the plantations and factories, and when ground up with about an equal amount of straw and asbestos, is converted into a paste, and subsequently into large slabs or bricks, which becomes as hard as stone. The article thus made is pronounced the best of architectural material, and will be much used. A Boston rope maker of long experience, like the father before him, says that cotton rope can be made for fifty per cent. less than hemp, and is preferable for all shipping uses, cables, bolt, rope halyards, tow ropes, hawser, tackle and falls, hoisting, etc. He also says that cotton is superior to hemp for caulking, and believes that it can be used for roofing and as a substitute for leather and rubber in hose and belting, and for tubing to inclose telegraph and telephone wires, both over head and under ground. He states that 150 tons of hemp rope is made in the United States daily, the material for which is mostly imported. Congress has authorized the Secretary of the Navy to introduce cotton cordage into the naval service of the United States, to such an extent as will fully test its value and efficiency, as compared with the kinds now in use.—Industrial South.

ORIGIN OF THUNDER-STORMS.—Spring attributes the appearance of a thunder-storm to a sudden condensation of atmospheric vapor, not into a mist but into hail. The source of the electricity is the rupture of the adherence of the air to the particles of hail; the electric influence then carries the electricity, which was accumulated upon each particle of ice, to the particles which form the limit of the frozen region. Abbe Moigno fears that this theory rests on a vicious circle, for the condensation of water, under the form of hail or rain, can only take place by reason of an electric discharge. All the secret of thunder-storms is to be found in a nimbus encountered by a very cold, very dry and highly electrified cirrus.—Les Mondes.

FORMATION OF THE SOLAR SYSTEM.—At a recent meeting of the London Physical Society, Mr. Braham gave an experimental demonstration of the vortical theory of the formation of the solar system by rotating a drop of castor oil and chloroform in water until it threw off other drops as planets.

LUMINOUS PAINT is now used to illuminate the faces of clocks, watches and door plates. It may easily be made as it consists merely of a compound of lime, sulphur and varnish.

OUR CITY LODGES.

Excelsior, No. 126.

On Thursday evening, April 19th, Excelsior entertained its friends in open meeting. P. M. W. Sam. Booth, who acted as Master of Ceremonies, in the absence of the brother who was expected to deliver the opening address, stated, that in giving these open Lodge entertainments Excelsior had two leading objects in view. First, to gather the families, friends, and neighbors of the members together, for the purpose of cultivating fraternal and social intimacy. And second, to extend the fame of the Lodge, for the purpose of gaining new members. The determination to buy a lot and build a hall of their own, is continually growing in favor with the Lodge, and every accession to its membership makes the project more feasible and certain. As an extra inducement for joining the Lodge, a rebate of the usual fees was agreed upon some weeks ago, to continue for three months, during which time members will be admitted for $15 all told. Excelsior has earned an enviable reputation by the excellence of its social, literary and musical entertainments, and the one under notice was not unworthy of its former efforts, as may be inferred from the following programme: Trio—piano, violin, and cello, Prof. and Mr. Rudolph Hahn, and Mr. J. M. Curtis; recitation, "The Lovers," Miss Myrtle Herrman; song, "Will O' the Wisp," Chas. Parent, Jr.; recitation, "Money Musk," Miss Bertha Clark; Duo—violin and piano, Prof. and Mr. Rudolph Hahn; song, Miss Ellinghouse; recitation, Fred. Maurer, Jr.; vocal trio—"Adis," Mrs. Amelia Clark, Miss Bertha Clark, and Mr. L. S. Clark. The performance of each number was liberally applauded, an encore being demanded in almost every instance. Past Grand Master Barnes concluded the programme with one of his happy and felicitous addresses, leaving everybody delighted with the evening's entertainment.

Golden Gate, No. 8.

It often happens in Lodges of our Order that disturbing elements arise that create an apathy among members who become indifferent about attending Lodge meetings, and as a natural result the membership is not increased, and often diminished. This old pioneer has had this experience, but we believe this ordeal has passed and now there is unity of action and the most cordial relations and good feeling among her members. At their last meeting night one candidate received the M. W. degree and one the J. W. degree. During recess impromptu singing and sociability was the rule of action, and it might be termed a happy family. They have an excellent corps of officers, the attendance is very good, and Golden Gate seems to have taken a fresh and vigorous start that will make the old pioneer one of the leading and best of our city Lodges.

Spartan No. 36 and Franklin No. 44

A goodly number of members from these two Lodges paid a fraternal visit to Yerba Buena, No. 14, Friday evening, April 20, and were warmly made welcome by the M. W., Wm. J. Thompson. Appropriate remarks were made by Brothers Hamilton of 44, I. C. Alexander, P. M. W. of 36, Wm. Wilson, M. W. of Spartan, and J. G. Florence, M. W. of Franklin, and Quinton, Eggleston, May, Prevost, Curry, Henderson, all P. M. W. The speeches were interspersed and the occasion enlivened by songs by Bro. Purdy, P. M. W., and Lewelling, recitation by Bro. Purdy, readings by Bros. Jordan and Payson, and a violin exercise by Prof. Bean. The cigars were then passed, and all hearts were melted into fragrant sociability. The brethren of Spartan and Yerba Buena will pay the brethren of Franklin a fraternal visit May 4th.

Memorial, No. 174.

This young and vigorous Lodge composed as it is of young men, (as appears by the records, has the lowest average age of any Lodge in this city), is gaining in membership and of the same class. Bro. John Blohm, M. W., has proven himself quite capable and efficient both as a presiding officer and in rendering the secret work. With his able corps of officers as assistants, the initiations are always interesting and as a rule very pleasant Lodge meetings. As there are a number of good speakers and strict parliamentarians in this Lodge it frequently happens that their debates are spicy, pointed and personal, but seldom if ever carried on with rancor or ill-feeling. It is always a pleasure to visit the brethren of Memorial, No. 174, in their Lodge room, Shiel's Building, as a visitor is sure to receive a personal and cordial welcome.

Unity, No. 27.

It is a subject for congratulation to note the substantial prosperity of Unity, No. 27. At their meeting on April 24th, nine applications were received for membership, and the M. W. degree was given to six candidates. This old pioneer has made a record in their deeds of charity extending over a term of years that is among the best and brightest in our Order. The members take a pride in their Lodge and attend the meetings regularly, so that it is the exception to see a Lodge meeting without a full attendance. Their increase in membership is expected to reach over 50 this term, and the larger number of them thus far are young men. It is expected that their anniversary will be celebrated in fine style.

Valley, No. 30.

The last meeting night of April in Valley, No. 30, six candidates received the M. W. degree. There was a large attendance, and during the evening a line was formed that extended from the Financier's desk to and into the anteroom to pay assessments. Two applications received for membership which will swell the membership to 961. Under the head "Good of the Order" Deputy McKay, Bro. Wm. Broderick, P. M. W., and others, made extended remarks that were listened to with close attention. Bro. T. G. Mysell read an article on the great mortality caused by the use of alcoholic drinks. This is a question that is giving much solicitude in the Order.

Burns, No. 68.

On Thursday evening, April 26, one of the old-time meetings was held by Burns, 68. The chief subject for consideration was whether they should move back to their old home in the Pythian Castle. Their decision was unanimous and they will be found hereafter on each Thursday night at the Castle.

ALAMEDA.

California, No. 1.

Tuesday, 17th instant, this pioneer Lodge gave, for the enjoyment of the members and their friends, one of its most successful socials at Masonic Hall, West Oakland. There was a large attendance, and all were in the happiest mood. One of the judicious features of their entertainments is the arrangement of the seats along the sides of the hall, leaving plenty of room in the center for dancing. A tedious programme, in consequence of the numerous encores, is also discouraged. The dancing and music and literary exercises are intermingled in such a way that those who cannot stay late have an opportunity to enjoy a little of both. The following is the programme: Original poem, "California," by Brother W. H. Wood; piano duet, by Birdie and Carrie Leach; recitation by P. M. George Hadsell; song by ——— Albie, "My Gentle Mother," encore, "What is Home Without a Mother," recitation by Charles Eaton and George Hadsell; duet, by Joseph Hollywood and son; recitation, W. H. Wood. Nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the occasion, and to a looker-on all "went merry as a marriage bell," true there was a "sound of revelry by night" but it was of that well-ordered, kindly, courteous and hospitable character for which this Lodge is noted.

University, No. 188.

On Tuesday evening, 24th instant, University Lodge, at Berkeley, gave a public entertainment for the purpose of giving the public an opportunity of hearing P. G. M. W. H. Barnes speak on the aims and objects of the Order. The evening was well spent and the exercises well enjoyed. Bro. Barnes spoke for about forty minutes in a plain, earnest, and very impressive manner, sending fact after fact straight home in regard to what the A. O. U. W. have been, is, and will in all probability continue to be. With such advocates as Bro. Barnes has proven himself to be, grow the Order must. University says grow it shall. After the address came music, song and recitation, by the brethren and friends. Then to close, Bro. Barnes, in his inimitable manner, gave music, mirth, and merriment, causing roars of applause, filling the hall with a perfect atmosphere of fun and good humor, making the audience utter many a silent God bless you, as he bade them farewell. After the meeting broke up a few brethren sat down with Bro. Barnes to a lunch at Bro. Wright's. But soon the imperious whistle of the cars was heard and broke up the festivities of this happy evening, and our truly grand guest was lost in the distance bound for home.

School of Instruction.

The committee appointed by the various Lodges of this county to organize a School of Instruction, met at Lincoln Hall, on the 14th. There was a large attendance, nearly all the Lodges being represented. Deputy Grand Master E. F. Loud and a delegation of District Deputies, together with a number of Master Workmen were also present from San Francisco. The meeting was duly called to order, when the following were nominated and elected to fill the various offices. President, Charles E. Alden, District Deputy of District No. 2; Vice-President, John Munce, Master Workman of Occidental, No. 6; Secretary, Brother ———, of Temple, No. 11; Treasurer, Brother E. K. Russell, of Oakland, No. 20. After the election the President called on Deputy Grand Master Loud and Master Workman Munce, who exemplified the work for the benefit of the brothers present. In conclusion speeches of congratulation at the success of the institution were made by Master Workmen of Valley Lodge, No. 30, Friendship Lodge, No. 179, and many others. By Laws were adopted and the organization was named "The A. O. U. W. Fraternal Institution of Alameda county." The next meeting will be held at the same place on the 28th instant at 8 o'clock P. M.

LOS ANGELES.

Southern California, No. 191.

From Deputy Danforth who has just returned from a flying trip to Los Angeles we gather the following items: Tuesday evening, April 25th, he visited the brethren of Southern California, found them out in force with Deputy A. V. Cobler of District No. 1, in attendance. They are making steady progress securing applications at each meeting. On this evening the M. W. degree was conferred on one candidate, the secret work being conferred by Deputy Danforth. After the work was over an enjoyable recess was had and the true spirit of sociability manifested. Under head of "Good of the Order" Deputy Cobler made some practical remarks in the course of which, he said he would soon establish a Lodge at Pomona, already an application on which there are fifteen names and expect to increase it to thirty. Deputy Danforth took occasion in some remarks to impress upon minds of our brethren in the orange groves the necessity of establishing a Band of Relief as a creature of law, which was met by an approval seemingly. Bro. Danforth called on several of the members and was greeted most cordially and fraternally.

SAN JOAQUIN.

Stockton, No. 19.

We paid a visit to the brethren of Stockton, on Friday evening, 19th of April. The actual business of the Lodge was transacted with quick dispatch and the Lodge room handed over to the D. of H., who conferred the degrees on six candidates and expect to receive ten candidates at the next meeting. Stockton, No. 19, is one of our vigorous and honored Lodges and many expect a large Lodge of D. of H. to be formed from it.

New Legislation.

We gave in the last issue of the WATCHMAN the essential features of the Grand Lodge proceedings, condensed from the official reports to be published in pamphlet form.

The following important legislative matter was omitted from lack of space. It will be read with interest as every one is anxious to watch the growth and modifications of our Code. The following are the amendments to the Constitution of the Grand Lodge.

Article II, Section 1, by inserting after the word "officers" in the fourth line "and standing committees."

Section 12, Article VI, Grand Lodge Constitution, to read as follows: "Foreman, shall at each session of the Grand Lodge, or within thirty days thereafter, appoint a Grand Medical Examiner."

"It shall be the duty of said Grand Medical Examiner, to examine each applicant's medical certificate, in accordance with the Laws of the Supreme Lodge."

"The Grand Medical Examiner shall be a competent, practicing physician, and a member of the Order, and shall be required to file with the Grand Recorder, evidence of his authority to practice medicine. All medical examiners' certificates must be approved by the Grand Medical Examiner before the degrees can be conferred."

"Provided, however, upon the institution of new Lodges, the degrees may be conferred, and the Lodge instituted, but no beneficiary certificate shall be issued, nor will any liability be incurred until such Medical Examiner and applications shall have been submitted to and been approved by the Grand Medical Examiner."

"The fee allowed the Grand Medical Examiner for examining medical examinations shall be twenty-five cents, to be paid by the applicant."

The Laws of the Grand Lodge were amended by adding a new section as follows:

Section 18. In the Order of Business at all Subordinate Lodges in this jurisdiction, the Master Workman shall, on the night of the first stated meeting in each month, inquire, under the head of "Unfinished Business," of the Recorder: "Has the monthly report of the previous month been sent to the Grand Lodge?"

On the night of the second stated meeting of the Lodge, he shall inquire under the head of "Unfinished Business" of the Receiver: "Have all assessments due the Grand Lodge been transmitted, accompanied by the official Remittance Report?"

Should the officers named have failed to forward the reports or to transmit the money, the Master Workman shall at that time order the reports to be made and the money to be forwarded at once, and shall cause their delinquency to be entered upon the minutes of the Lodge.

Section IV, of Article II of the Constitution of Subordinate Lodges was amended so as to read:

"Should an applicant be rejected, his proposition fee, less the amount to be paid to the lodge Medical Examiner, and Grand Medical Examiner, without any documents, shall be returned immediately to the applicant by the Recorder, and this shall be deemed a sufficient notice of rejection. When an applicant for membership has been rejected, notice of the same shall be immediately sent by the Recorder to the office of the Grand Recorder, and where there are two or more Lodges in the same district, notice of all rejections shall be furnished each Lodge."

Art. IX, by adding a new section to be known as Section 2:

"The Lodge may install its officers publicly, provided a dispensation for that purpose has been granted by the Grand Master Workman or District Deputy Grand Master Workman. The use of all secret work at such public installations is strictly prohibited."

The following are all the resolutions that were adopted:

WHEREAS, the Supreme Lodge having declined, at its last session, to order the completion of a Digest, and the present one being, in many respects, obsolete and incorrect; and whereas there are many important decisions of this Grand Lodge that have been approved by the Supreme Lodge, that are not in print, save in the journals; and as it is deemed essential and necessary that these laws and decisions should be in convenient form for instruction and reference, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Grand Master is hereby authorized to appoint a competent brother to collate and put into convenient form, such existing laws of the Supreme and State Grand Lodges, and decisions thereon, as are of vital importance to Lodges and members; to be published under the title of the Digest of California Ancient Order of United Workmen; said Digest to be the sole property of this Grand Lodge, and to be supplied to Lodges and members through its Grand Recorder; provided, that such Digest shall not be published until approved by the Grand Master Workman, Grand Foreman, and Grand Recorder.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Grand Lodge that it has jurisdiction over all matters arising on appeal in regard to weekly sick benefits paid by Subordinate Lodges in this jurisdiction.

Resolved, That this Grand Lodge, having adopted the law permitting public installations, the Grand Master Workman is hereby authorized and requested to examine the present form of installation, and erase those words and sentences that are not applicable for public use, and direct that such words and sentences be omitted when said installation ceremony is used in public.

The decisions submitted to the Grand Lodge for its approval by the Grand Master, W. H. Barnes, were published in the last issue of the Watchman. They were all adopted but the twelfth, and the sixth was modified so as to read:

No member can be compelled to vote "for" or "against" a candidate. The ballot in this case is optional, except as required by the ritual. In matters generally before a Lodge, with this exception, members can be required to vote.

Coming Grand Sessions.

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF CHOSEN FRIENDS.—The second annual session of this Order will meet in San Francisco, on the first Monday in May, 1883.

ODD FELLOWS.—The thirty first annual Communication of the Grand Lodge will be held in San Jose, on the second Tuesday in May, 1883.

DEGREES.—The nineteenth annual session of the Grand Lodge convenes in the city of Petaluma, on the first Tuesday in June, 1883.

RED MEN.—Next Great Council will meet August 2, 1883, in some grove to be selected by the Advisory Committee.

THE TRIENNIAL CONCLAVE OF KNIGHTS TEMPLAR will meet in San Francisco, August 21, 1883.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.—State Grange meeting, Tuesday, Oct. 8th, at 10 A. M., in San Jose.

The Grand Lodge of F. & A. M. will convene in San Francisco, October 9, 1883.

The Supreme Commandery of the Knights of the Golden Rule will meet in regular session in August, at Philadelphia, if not in the meantime changed.

Arguments in Favor of Secret Societies.

Answers to Objections of Church Members and Others to the Secrets, Signs, and Symbols of Secret Orders.

[Delivered by Jas. G. Magann before Union Lodge, No. 51, A. O. U. W., at Sacramento, March 24, 1883, and published in the WATCHMAN by request of the Lodge.]

Secret organizations or societies have had an origin coeval with that of human society. Ever in the forefront of the progress of civilization, as the nations of antiquity have emerged from the darkness of traditional history, has marched up and on, step by step, slowly but firmly and surely, some secret society or mystery. For more than two thousand years before Christ we know they flourished, but how far back of this period had they an existence history tells us not. Gathered within the temples of these societies were true and earnest men who had the eye to read, and the courage to assail the hollow, deceptive professions of their fellow-men. To establish the principles of humanity, and an endearing faithful and reliable brotherhood between man and man, was among the fundamental objects of these societies. Nor was their labor in vain. Indeed they accomplished more than they had attempted, for history bears out the assertion that in the earlier days of the world the wisest and best of men sought these secret temples in the hope that they might penetrate the mysterious gloom which enshrouded, not only their own being but the immortality of the soul and the truth of the living God. I assert more—that the first ideas of a practical civilization and a true christianity owe their birth and final development to the secret societies of ancient Greece and Italy. Nor has an advancing civilization, under new conditions, and with new truths as its basis, taught us to do without these societies. To-day many of the highest and holiest principles of true religion receive their most perfect exemplification amid the mystic symbols.

Yet, in the face of these historical and incontrovertible truths, what are the relations, or rather the feelings of a vast number of church members of the present day toward our own beloved Order and other secret societies? Who of you have not been approached by the uninitiated brother Baptist, brother Methodist, brother Catholic, or brother so and so, with the query: "why is your Lodge a secret Order? If your teachings are founded upon correct principles which have for their object the good of society and the amelioration of the condition of mankind, why do you meet in secret session and work by signs, symbols, grips, and passwords? If your mission is a pure and holy one, why do you put your light under a bushel and thus bar out many true and worthy men who would otherwise join you in the good work?" I say, who of you have not been asked these questions, or similar ones, if not in regard to the A. O. U. W., in respect to some other secret society to which you may belong?

I have intimated that these objections to secret societies are more frequently made by church members than by other outsiders. In this I mean no disrespect to any church or any member of any church. On the contrary, I entertain the highest regard for all church organizations, believing them to have good in all and none all good. But my business is to deal with the facts as I find them, and to correct any erroneous impression if it be in my power so to do.

In the first place, let me say, brethren, that the objection to secret societies is not real, but imaginary. "If the principles of your Order are good," etc., they say, "why do you keep them a secret?" Now if there is a single secret principle inculcated by the Ancient Order of United Workmen, I have yet to learn it. Our aims and objects, and the fundamental tenets of our Order, as advanced here in this hall every night we meet, are as public as the printing press. What are some of our principles? To cement a bond of brotherly love and friendship between man and man; to place confidence in each other, and learn to trust one another; to encourage and assist our unfortunate brother; to help him in business and guard and protect his honor and the reputation of his family; to see him during sickness or misfortune, and cheer him up, and to provide a stipulated sum of money for the helpless ones he may have left behind when called to the final Lodge above. These are some of the principles of our Order. Do they appear to be secrets? Instead of wanting them kept as secrets, this society would gladly have them published from every pulpit in the land on every Sabbath morning.

The same may be said of all or nearly all the other secret societies of the present generation. That grand old secret brotherhood, the Odd Fellows, have similar principles, nor are they secrets; and that ancient Order, the father of all secret societies, the Masons, can force the church of to-day to hide its head in view of the fact that the great idea of the brotherhood of man was first promulgated within the sacred temple of Free Masonry. That young giant, the Knights of Pythias, has in this country to-night an army nearly 200,000 strong banded together by the common tie of fraternal love and the brotherhood of man. But I need not dwell longer on this point. Driven from one position the enemies of secret societies will attack us in another, and we will pass on to the next objection they urge.

"Why do you meet with closed doors and work under signs, symbols, grips, and passwords?" The answer here is even more easy than that given above. We meet in secrecy, or with closed doors, for self-protection—to guard against impostors and the consequent disintegration of our Order. Secret societies, it should be remembered, are not generally composed of a promiscuous body of men; they are not only a secret, but a select body. A man who aspires to become a member of our Order also has a higher aspiration, that of becoming our brother. Consequently we owe it not only to our society and to ourselves, but also to our brothers, to see to it that no unworthy personage gains admission to our circle. There are many other good reasons why our doors are closed, but some of these will appear further on.

Our signs, symbols, and passwords, are all objected to under one head, and we will therefore offer a general answer.

It is Yankee-like to answer a question by asking another, and may we not ask our brethren of the churches who object to our signs and symbols, why they also use symbols in their most sacred worship? What is the cross but a symbol? What is the sacred communion service but symbolical—an allegorical representation of the broken body and shed blood of our Savior? The mode of worship in the church organization, which, more than any other opposes secret societies, is nearly all symbolical. We members of secret societies know very well why they use symbols; nor do we disapprove of them, because we know their value. But why complain of us for doing what they do?

We use grips and passwords simply and solely for the purpose of recognition—that we may know the genuine from the counterfeit. We use signs and symbols for the double purpose of illustrating and impressing our principles, our aims and objects more thoroughly upon our members. Symbolic teaching is impressive and rarely ever forgotten. Words fail to express the soul's deepest and purest thoughts. Language cannot imprison our holiest emotions. It can utter only what is finite and limited, but symbols body forth the infinite and everlasting. Indeed, they are the speech of God. Carlyle, in his chapter on symbols, says: "Bees will not work except in darkness; thought will not work except in silence; neither will virtue work except in secrecy. Let not thy right hand know what thy left hand doeth." * * In a symbol there is concealment and yet revelation: hear, therefore, by silence and by speech acting together, come a double significance. By symbols is man guided and commanded, made happy, made wretched. He everywhere finds himself encompassed with symbols, recognized as such, or not recognized; the universe is but one vast symbol of God; nay, if thou wilt have it, what is man himself but a symbol of God? is not all he does symbolical? a revelation to sense of the mystic God-given force that is in him, a gospel of freedom, which he, the messiah of nature, preaches as he can by act and word? Not a hut he builds but is the visible embodiment of a thought, but bears visible record of invisible things; but is, in the transcendental sense, symbolical as well as real."

The object of symbols in secret societies is to make the work more impressive.

I do not mean to intimate that the American people are not patriotic, yet I certainly do believe that had it not been for the stars and stripes the war against the rebellion would have been a failure. Though nothing but a cheap cotton rag, yet so long as it waved as the symbol of American Independence and of the Union, fourteen hundred thousand men offered their lives in its defense.

To recapitulate the substance of these arguments we are forced to the conclusion—first, that Christianity owes its existence, its rise and progress to the developments of ancient secret societies; and, secondly, that they have done quite as much, if not more, than the church in the way of elevating the condition of mankind, the protection of society and the advancement of a superior and enlightened civilization. Suppose you were in some distant city, without home or friends and out of money; suddenly you are taken sick. You are a member of a church and also a Master Workman. You send for a member of each organization to which you belong. Which do you suppose would reach your bedside first, and which would stay the longest? Would it be the church or the secret society that would minister first, last, and more tenderly to your wants? And should you die, which would follow you to the grave and communicate with your friends? I have no desire to answer these questions; they are answered hundreds of times almost daily.

And now, in conclusion, let me ask—is it not enough for our church members, and indeed, all who find fault with our Orders because they are conducted by signs, symbols and secrets, to look around them and witness what we have done and what we are daily doing for the good of society and mankind?

Look upon this beautiful city of flowers. There is the lovely rose-bush with its hundred and more varieties. We see them in their variegated shades and remark how beautiful and how fragrant; how they cheer us on our weary way through life, and how they perfume the very atmosphere we breathe. But do we seize them by the stem and pull them up by the roots in order that we may see with our own eyes and publish to the world the kind of manure in which they flourish? So with our own beloved Order, and other secret societies of the world. It is enough for the uninitiated to know that they are to-day, and have been from the earliest history of mankind, reaping the fruits and enjoying the blessings that flow from the numerous fraternal secret societies of the present generation.

Business Locals.

FRATERNAL, BENEVOLENT AND BENEFICIARY SOCIETIES.—It is generally conceded that the growth, interest and general prosperity in these societies in our State, is largely greater now than ever before. As showing the interest locally that is taken in these organizations, the popular halls in Shiel's building, O'Farrell street, near Market, forty-three of these societies meet in the seven different halls of this building, weekly. In this connection we may say that this building is one of the great resorts for this purpose. It is centrally located, richly furnished and upholstered, and under the able management of Mr. E. Peterson as agent, there is seldom or never any cause for complaint. Brother Geo. Dickson has had charge of Shiel's building since it was built, (something over two years ago) whose close attention and scrupulous care, and accommodating ways have made him a great favorite.

GRAND EXCURSION TO MONTEREY.—The grand excursions to Monterey and Pacific Grove Retreat, via S. P. R.R. (broad gauge) last year, that were so attractive and popular, have been resumed this season. Trains leave Fourth and Townsend each Sunday at 7:30 A. M., arriving at Monterey at 10:30, giving five hours at the sea shore. Tickets for the round trip can be procured at the office, No. 2, New Montgomery street, under Palace Hotel, for $3; children half price. These excursions will be under the best management and care, and they promise as they have been in the past, the chief attractions of the season. Lodges can make arrangements to have special cars.

THE great Electric Hair Tonic, of Mrs. M. A. Reaves, is one of the most remarkable discoveries of the century. It is a purely vegetable compound, which will produce a full, thick growth of hair upon heads which have been bald for years. The virtue of this discovery is too well known to be doubted and there are scores of testimonials to this fact. The gold medal was awarded to Mrs. M. A. Reaves, 120 Tyler street, at the State Fair, 1882, for the great Electric Hair Tonic.

THE California Piano Manufactory located at the Old Kimball Manufacturing Co., Fourth street, under the direction and management of Bro. Walter S. Pierce, who has had large experience and known skill, are building and have completed a number of fine uprights, which are models of tasteful designs, and have been pronounced by experts equal to any make in tone and excellence. These new California pianos can be seen at their warehouses 30 New Montgomery street, under the Palace Hotel.

CALAVERAS BIG TREES.—The new route to the Calaveras big trees via Stockton, and Lodi, on Narrow Gauge Railroad to Wallace, thence by stage to San Andreas, eighteen miles only. Taking this route the trip can be made in four days, giving twenty-four hours at Mammoth Grove. Fine turnouts, teams, buggies, saddle horses and outfits, can be procured of Bro. J. F. Washburn, of San Andreas, at reasonable rates, by application or telegraphic order.

OFFENTIMES the dress proclaims the man. A stylish cut and perfect fit made from the best material can be found at the large tailoring establishments of Brother Joe Poheim, 724 Market and 203 Montgomery streets. He employs the most skilled workmen and has in large stock a fine selection of the best domestic and imported fabrics. Samples with price and rules for self-measurement sent to any address, and satisfaction guaranteed in all cases.

BROTHER I. E. ALEXANDER, carpenter, builder and contractor, has removed to a central location, No. 616 California street, where he is ready to serve his friends. His skillful handwork takes a wide range in repairing, refitting, jobbing in stores or houses, or building houses. His large experience and good judgment will be brought into requisition for his customers, and any would do well to avail themselves of his services.

FRANK P. LATSON & Co., importers and wholesale and retail dealers in hardware and building materials, at 28 New Montgomery St., under the Palace Hotel, have a full stock in their line. They have a large assortment of bronze burglar-proof locks, carpenters' tools, fine cutlery, fire-arms, etc., and are agents for feather dusters and brushes. Builders and contractors are invited to examine their new stock.

BRO. WM. GUSSEFELD, the leading merchant tailor of San Jose, has had so large an increase in patronage that he has enlarged his parlors and taken a partner, Mr. Mioteke. Their new importation consists of an extensive line and choice selection of the best domestic and imported suitings, which will be made into fashionable suits for their patrons, that in design, fit, and cost, cannot be beat in this State.

WELLINGTON'S IMPROVED EGG FOOD.—This compound has attained a celebrity as one of the chief factors among those engaged in raising poultry. It is cheap, keeps poultry in a healthy condition, and, as an egg producer, it stands unrivaled. Bro. B. Wellington is also an importer and dealer in seeds, and agent for the Perfect Hatcher Co. Office and salesroom, 425 Washington street.

W. C. PRICE & Co. have opened a wholesale shipping and commission house at 320 Washington St. In their business they take in the whole range of California and Oregon produce and are doing a large business. They are a responsible house, and Bro. W. C. Price is one of those active, pushing young men who are bound to succeed.

BRO. B. J. RHODES, the leading druggist of San Jose, has attained a State reputation in the preparation of his 38 Cough Mixture for all diseases of the throat and lungs, and his 38 German Liniment for general debility, rheumatism, sick headache, etc. Citizens of San Jose who have used the remedial agencies speak in the highest terms of praise.

BRO. W. G. BROWN, at the Depot, corner Fourth and Townsend, is agent for the well known Hartford Accident Insurance Co. A large number of the travelers of to-day never think of making a trip or voyage without taking out an accident policy which provides for medical attention and care if disabled, or payment of policy in case of death.

PARADISE FLOUR MILLS.—Brother J. H. Congdon, 34 California street, about two years ago introduced the Paradise Mills Flour, located at Modesto, in our market, since which its popularity is such that 500 barrels are sold each week. It is especially manufactured for family use and there is a growing demand for it.

WE observe unusual activity in the industrial and mechanical interests in this city. On a recent visit to the Mission Iron Foundry, at the northwest corner Noe and Twenty-fifth streets, we found our genial Brother, Wm. Axford, crowded with a class of work heretofore done at the East, fine, light and difficult castings.

BROTHER John Horner, 1300 Folsom, corner of Ninth; manufactures to order all kinds of men's boots and gaiters, as well as ladies', Misses' and children's shoes, in the best manner and of the finest quality. His prices are very moderate, both for repairing and manufactured work.

BRO. K. G. SCHWARTZ, successor to W. Turner, 524 Battery St., has established and maintains a prominent position as a watchmaker and jeweler. Intricate movements and valuable time-keepers can be placed in his hands without risk of damage, and his charges are very reasonable.

BRO. H. T. PLONTEAUX, D. D. S., of Oakland, has opened fine dental parlors at the northwest corner of Geary and Dupont streets, S. F. He enjoys the reputation of being one of most scientific and skilled dentists on the Pacific Coast.

DRESSMAKING PARLORS.—Sister E. Stevenson, 115 Kearny St., rooms 7, 8 and 9, is one of the leading establishments, of this city. The best material of most artistic and experienced help is employed and terms are very reasonable.

THE Bakery, 1523 Mission St., between Eleventh and Twelfth, is one of the popular bakeries. Bro. Robert Matthey, the proprietor, is extending his business, and runs his wagons to all portions of the city.

LOCKFORD has a grand gathering on the 2d, at which a large assemblage is expected.

WILLIAM H. BARNES, P. G. M., is to be the speaker at the Farmington and Lockford celebrations.

EVENING STAR LODGE, No. 23, D. of H., will hereafter hold its meetings on the first and third Thursday evenings, at California hall, 417 Kearny street.

THE Rocklin brethren will hold a picnic in the beautiful grove near Rocklin, on May 2d. A special train will go up from Sacramento, and a large gathering is anticipated.

Fresh Water Pearl Mussels.

[Written by ROBERT E. C. STARRS.]

Almost everybody who has lived in the country in the neighborhood of lakes, ponds, brooks, and rivers, has seen fresh water mussels, for they are a common form of bivalve shell fish in such places. There are two principal groups of these—one with usually solid shells, with interlocking projections in each valve, which are termed hinge teeth; the other with rather thin shells, which are destitute of hinge teeth. The first, with hinge teeth, are called Unios; the last, Anodons. The word Unio means "a pearl;" the word Anodon means "without teeth." These are the principal groups which constitute the family Unionidae. The inside of the valves, as the two pieces which form the shell are called, is lined with pearl. Sometimes this lining is pink, again white, yellowish, or orange, and more or less translucent.

It is quite frequently the case, that the soft mantle of the animal contains the round or oval pearls used for jewelry, and fine or seed pearls are quite common in such shells as live in streams where the water is silty, or carries sediment part of the year. A grain of sand gets lodged in the soft mantle of the mollusk, and causes irritation, the same as a speck of hard matter is painful in the human eye; this causes the mussel to cover the grit with a coating of mucus, which hardens upon the outside of the speck, and gives it a smooth, pearly surface. All pearls are produced in this way, and many bivalve mollusks, both fresh water and marine, contain these concretions. At one time, the gathering of fresh water mussels for the pearls contained in them was an extensive occupation in Britain; the streams were systematically searched, and the business profitable; for a long time, however, it has ceased to be remunerative.

Some historians state that one inducement to the invasion of Britain by Julius Caesar was the alleged great value of the pearl fisheries; so, also, with the invasion and conquest of Florida by De Soto. The narratives of the old Spanish explorers and adventurers contain exaggerated accounts of the size and abundance of pearls in the hands of the American aborigines, and even recent historians have given more or less credit to the glowing accounts and ridiculous fables of the old Spanish soldiers and chroniclers. Undoubtedly many and oftentimes valuable pearls are found in the fresh water mussels which abound in the tributary streams of the Mississippi and other southern and northern water courses which drain into the Mississippi basin, but "bushels of pearls" as has been related as seen in the possession of the Indians by the Spanish soldiers of De Soto's time is simply an absurdity. What they really did see was probably the smooth, shining shells of a species of Margaritella, which are pearl-shaped and of the size of large pearls. These are quite common, and have been found in quantities in many cases in old burial mounds in the Mississippi valley and around the Gulf of Mexico, where these shells live. Some idea of the number of species of the river and pond mussels may be formed by the figures of Dr. Isaac Lea, of Philadelphia, who has made these forms an especial study for a great many years. In Dr. Lea's "Synopsis of the Family of Unionidae," 1870, he says: "In the following tables there will be found in the family 1,069 recent species as admitted, 224 unknown to me or doubtful, and 183 fossil; in all, 1,476; and the synonymy, according to my views, is enormous, being 891." Of this large number, nearly 700 of the family are credited to North America, inclusive of Mexico.

Regarding the fresh water mussels, the late Philip Carpenter wrote: "As far as shells are concerned, this family forms the special glory of North America, and especially of the drainage area of the Mississippi. The American Unios are the most numerous, the most remarkable, and the most beautiful that are found in any portion of the globe. There is a special reason for this provision. In no other known portion of the earth is there so large an area covered with soluble limestone. The waters of the rivers being saturated with this would be unfit for many of its uses, were it not for the immense development of this group of heavy shells. The North American Unios may be regarded as so many water filters absorbing the lime from the water, and preserving it from re-absorption by their strong, horny skins. The muskrats also play an important part in this economy, being nature's great Unio fishers. They bring them up out of the streams, and leave the shells in heaps on the banks."

In the foregoing we get some idea of the position and importance of the fresh water mussels, as related to the molluscan fauna of North America, a glimpse at the part they play, the kind of work they perform in the grand economy of nature, and a momentary glance at the complementary and compensative methods and implements through and by means of which the processes of nature are performed.

There are four or five so-called species in California, Oregon, etc., and one ever so far north, at the Youkon river, in Alaska, where they are eaten by the natives; the California aborigines also used them for food, and in the Klamath river country large heaps of the empty shells may be seen on the banks, the Kitchenmiddens, or refuse of ancient feasts and festivals; so in other parts of the State. Similar heaps are found in the southern and western States; the remains of fresh water clam bakes which have almost outlasted the race and the tribes who participated on those occasions. The shells of some of the species are used in the arts, and buttons and various trinkets are made from them, but the true mother-of-pearl shell has the long and poetical name of Margaritifera margaritifera, from Margarita, a pearl, and fero, to bear; namely, the pearl bearer. This is a marine shell, found only in salt water, and in the sea of warm climates, like the Gulf of California, the Bay of Panama, among the South Sea Islands, and Southern India, Australia, also the Persian Gulf, etc.

While the shells of the salt water mussels are quite distinct, the anatomy or soft parts that is to say the animal—is very much like that of the salt water mussels which are so abundant on nearly every sea coast, where the shells may be seen attached to rocks; seaweeds, also, to the woodwork of wharves, particularly double white, and differs from it only in color which is bright pink.

WHAT IS SOAP?—Soap consists of an alkali in combination with a fatty acid. The alkalies principally used in soap manufacture are soda, potash and ammonia. The acids are chiefly oleic, stearic, palmitic and margaric. Soda forms the hard soap, potash the sweet or soft soap, and ammonia the kind of soap used in medicine, technically called liniment. Soda soaps will vary in hardness according to the

to the piles of such structures, and upon old wrecks. These sometimes contain small pearls, but they are dark colored and of no value. Like their fresh water relatives, these also are used for human food, and are used both by whites and Indians.

CANNING ASPARAGUS.—The Record-Union gives some information concerning one branch of the business of the Capital Packing Co., of Sacramento. It says that asparagus is now largely grown near the city. In the neighborhood of East Park there are some large fields, there being in one alone over eight acres. Asparagus is delivered at the factory every morning, and when it arrives there is yet wet with the dew. For packing they use only "white grass." Within a short time they have begun the canning of the "tips" only, and when it is heated and opened it is ready for table use, and does away with the "debris," which attends the consumption of that vegetable when prepared for the table in the old way.

Death of Peter Cooper.

The well known philanthropist, Peter Cooper died of pneumonia, at New York, on Wednesday, 4th instant, at the ripe age of 93. Perhaps Mr. Cooper was better known as the founder of the "Cooper Institute," in New York, than for anything else, although his life has been a very useful and exemplary one in many respects. He was a skilled inventor, and emphatically a self-made man. He was apprenticed to a coachmaker when seventeen, and at the end of his apprenticeship began work on an improvement in the machines for shearing cloth. When this invention took tangible shape, Cooper found that he had made his first step toward fortune, as these machines were in great demand while the importation of foreign cloth was prohibited, during our war with Great Britain, in 1812-15. Afterward he went into the manufacture of cabinetware, then into the grocery business, and finally began the manufacture of glue and isinglass, in which he amassed a handsome fortune. He was, however, at different times, engaged in other branches of business. In 1830, he built works for the manufacture of iron, and afterward a rolling and wire mill in New York, where he first successfully used hard coal in puddling iron. In 1845, he started a rolling mill in Trenton, New Jersey, where he was the first to sell beams for building purposes. He was one of the earnest promoters of telegraphic enterprises in this country, and for nearly a score of years he was President of the New York, New Foundland and London Telegraph Company. He was also among the first to become interested in that great scheme of internal navigation, the Erie canal.

Before the canal was ready for use the question of a propelling power for the boats that were to be used upon its waters began to be debated, and Cooper made an experiment of propulsion by means of an endless chain. Although abandoned at the time, his plan, under the name of the Belgian towing system, is now used on some sections of the Erie canal. Peter Cooper keenly felt the disadvantages under which he had labored when a youth in obtaining an education, and a plan for the instruction and elevation of young people of both sexes, rich and poor alike, took tangible shape in the now famous Cooper Union, the corner-stone of which was laid in 1854. In this institution which is "to be devoted forever to the union of art and science, in their application to the useful purposes of life," is afforded the amplest opportunity for education without cost. The institution now affords instruction to an average of 2,000 pupils annually. It has a school of art for women, with instruction in all branches of drawing, painting, wood engraving and photography. It also has a school of telegraphy for young women. In the evening free instruction is given in mathematics, practical engineering and practical chemistry, and free lectures are delivered in natural philosophy and the elements of chemistry. A large free reading-room and a library is open day and evening.

This library has been greatly extended in the past few years, and is a favorite resort of certain of the working classes of the great city. It has done a great deal of good. The Institute is maintained at a cost of some $12,000 a month. Mr. Cooper has given it about a million of dollars. An inventor and manufacturer, who was at the same time a philanthropist and a millionaire, could do vast good with his money, and Mr. Cooper did it. His memory will always be kept green by the thousands he has benefited.

Peter Cooper was nominated by the National Greenback party for President in 1876, and received 81,740 votes. He leaves two children—Edward Cooper, formerly Mayor of New York, and Mrs. Hewitt, wife of Congressman Abram S. Hewitt.

AGRICULTURAL STATISTICS. J. R. Dodge, Statistician of the Department of Agriculture, has a report in the hands of the printer, in which he presents some interesting statistics on live stock. According to his latest census, the aggregate value of live stock in the States and Territories is $2,338,147. The average value of horses is $70.59; of mules, $79.49; of milch cows, $30.21; of other cattle, $21.80; of sheep, $2.53; of swine, $6.75; An increase during the year of $12.07 on horses, $8.14 on mules, $4.32 on milch cows, and $1.20 on swine. He also presents a statement showing the comparative prices of agricultural implements in this country and Europe, and an exhibit of the exportation of agricultural implements from this country. He proves that the United States imports no agricultural machinery, and ventures the assertion that European field machinery would not be used in America if it could be had at half price, on account of its general antiquity of style and clumsiness.

THE USE OF GAS FOR HEATING AND POWER.

Dr. C. Siemens predicts a vast extension of the consumption of gas in the future for heating and power. It will effectually dispose of the smoke nuisance, and will afford in time a more economical and convenient fuel. When heating gas is supplied to us from street mains at twenty-five cents per 1,000 feet, as it will be at some time in the near future, the housekeeper's millenium will not be far off.

Issued on the 1st and 15th of each month.
At No. 282 MARKET STREET, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Tues. Elevator No. 12 Front Street.

Favorable to Advertisers.

By consolidating the large subscription lists of the Pacific Workman with the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN our advertisers gain an unusually great advantage. We doubt if any one weekly newspaper has ever been circulated to as many different readers on this coast, as have been served heretofore by the Workman and WATCHMAN together. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns cities of the coast.

We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

OFFICIAL RECOMMENDATION.

Resolutions adopted by Grand Lodge of Cal., Feb. 3, 1881
WHEREAS, the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, the pioneer A. O. U. W. advocate on this coast, without official aid, has long rendered able and valuable services for the good of our glorious organization, we earnestly recommend that our Lodges and the brethren individually patronize the WATCHMAN as liberally as circumstances will justify

Co-operative Life Insurance Principle.

The Insurance Commissioner of the State of Massachusetts, in his report upon life insurance for 1882, gives a tabulated statement of the business done by the various beneficiary or co-operative insurance associations, which are permitted to issue certificates, that is worth a careful study. The laws of that State require these societies to make an annual statement of their business, in the same manner as the regular life companies have long been compelled to do. The Commissioner makes no comment on the showing. He merely ventures the significant remark, that publicity is not likely to impair the business.

The report shows that the co-operative societies have made wonderful progress. That the seventy-two societies, included in the report, the growth of a few years, had in force on the 1st of January, 1882, certificates to the number of 403,758, and had paid out in losses during the year 1881 no less than $5,838,215. The 27 life companies, whose returns are also given, reported outstanding risks to the number of 598,862, and losses paid the past year of $21,819,600. A business which has grown to such proportions within a few years must possess some marvelous secret of life. It certainly shows, that in the popular estimation, there is something sadly lacking in the regular life insurance methods.

It has been strenuously alleged by the regular companies that the co-operative societies are not built on sound business principles. That is, no difference is made in the amount of assessment for the disparity of age, or that the amount based on the age of a member is not raised as his risk increases with advancing years. The effort in some associations to cure this supposed defect by an annual advance in the rate of assessment, is open to the objection that the heaviest payments will fall at a period in the life of man, when he will be the least able to earn money, and meet his obligations. But in spite of all these supposed defects, there stands the fact, that the co-operative principle is rapidly growing in popular favor. The Stock Exchange in New York, has for a long time carried on a co-operative life insurance business. Business organizations all over the country have made it an auxiliary. The Free Masons and Odd Fellows have their relief associations, in which life insurance by means of assessments at the death of each member, is made a prominent feature. The most successful of these societies, have been those fraternal Orders, that recognize the need of a stronger bond than a mere mercantile one, and have clothed the principle with the fascinating mystery of signs and pass-words, ritualism, and fraternal sentiment.

There can be but one explanation of this progress. The co-operative system possesses merits not found in what is called the regular method. This report furnishes abundance of proof. It shows that the regular companies paid out last year in losses $21,819,600, at an expense for collections, management, etc., the sum of $11,758,744. That is to say, for each two dollars paid on losses, there was more than one dollar paid on the expense of running the machinery. It shows that the expenses of the co-operative societies were only 5.27 per cent. of their loss payments, against 53.43 per cent. on the part of the regular companies. The total expense of the co-operative companies is given as $307,826, but if it had been on the same percentage of the regular companies would have reached the sum of $3,119,358.

There is still another advantage in favor of the co-operative societies. Thousands every year who have insured their lives in regular companies forfeit the blessing they had expected to obtain for their families, by the non-payment of the regular premiums. As they are based upon the promise of accumulating a reserve fund, the holder of a lapsed policy often forfeits a sum in advance of what it would cost to insure his life for the term the policy was in force. Now he may not be able to prevent the forfeiture. It may be the result of misfortune, and yet the amount he has paid into the reserve fund is a dead loss. The holder of a co-operative certificate is liable to suffer no such hardship. Should he fall from the list by non-payment of an assessment he loses nothing, as he had paid no more than was necessary to insure his life during the period his certificate was binding.

Picnic Season.

The picnic has become an American institution. About the time of "The green leaf of the new-come spring" and at intervals during the long, hot, drowsy summer months a sort of universal hunger seizes the tired dwellers of the towns and cities, to go out into the country and take a whiff of fresh air, and a few hours respite from business and domestic routine and care. The rich, weary of the endless din, racket and empty pageantry of the city, or growing dull and dumpy from apathy and high living, may at any time find a refreshing alternative in going to the springs or seaside. Tolerably well-to-do people who can afford the time, but not the foolish expense of a fashionable watering-place, find a more sensible and healthful regalement in camping out a few weeks in the mountain pines or near a good bathing place by the sea. The mighty army of toilers who tramp from morning till night under heavy loads, and barely earn enough to keep soul and body together, should be excused if they try to forget their hard lot by taking their wives and little ones on a Sunday ramble over the hills. Blessings on the man who invented picnics! It is the most democratic of all our institutions. Then all the people who constitute a church, school, or fraternal order; the rich and poor,

"And young and old come forth to play,
On a sunshine holiday."

It is the children's jubilee, especially that class who are brought up on hygiene, and a superstitious fear of fresh air and dirt.

It has become a trite saying that the best part of a picnic is getting home again. Only people who are letting the boy and girl of their nature die prematurely could utter such a heresy. There is pleasure in the anticipation. It is in the air for several days. The children first hear it talked over at Sunday School, and come home beaming with joy. Everybody feels happy in the thought of their enjoyment. There is a deal of satisfaction in preparing a lunch-basket. To pack the knives, forks, spoons, salt, pepper, sardines, cold ham, and chicken, etc., and forget nothing, have everything in apple-pie-order and abundance, is no ordinary achievement. That basket is a sample of stored energy, of pleasurable possibilities. Then the starting, the joyous hubbub and flutter of expectation, the ride, the rush for the grove, the boys climbing trees, girls in swings, their hats off and the wind playing with the "tangles in Nerea's hair;" the young folks pairing off for a ramble under the thin pretext of gathering ferns and wild flowers; and the older people who had scarcely been on bowing terms at home, though belonging to the same church or Order, now chatting freely under the leafy roof, all together makes a picture of gladness and joy worthy of the poet or painter's art.

Who of us, however well housed or fed, has not sometimes felt a nomadic impulse, and for a moment envied the chapleted ease and freedom of a gypsy life? Is this what Darwin calls a "survival of rudiments" of a time when our ancestors lived on acorns and hung up at night among the branches of the forest? Be this as it may, we all need the confessional of nature. We leave our morbid fancies, frets, and worries upon her bosom and return home blithe as the singing birds. Humboldt says: "The mere contact with nature, the issuing forth into the open air, exercises a soothing and calming influence on the sorrows and the passions of men, whatever may be the region they inhabit, or the degree of intellectual culture they enjoy." Was this why the old Greeks sent Apollo to herd the flocks of the shepherd King, Admetus, and Jove on vacation trips among the dwellers of the hills?

But away with myth and sentiment! We are getting hungry. Where is the basket? The cold snack spread on the grass is the culmination of a sylvan feast. How fragrant the coffee! Did ever cold chicken and hard-boiled eggs taste so delicious? Say what we may of our boasted civilization, the happiness of man hangs on the pleasant thrill of an epigastric nerve.

Hark! The steam-whistle. What if all is hurry and anxiety to get aboard! What if the baby frets and the children are ragged, disheveled and bedraggled! What if everybody is a little tired and cross, all are happy in getting home, "Sleep, that knits up the raveled sleeve of care," soon wraps all in pleasant dreams.

GRAND MASTER J. T. ROGERS writes the WATCHMAN that he expects to be in San Francisco within a few days. Matters connected with the executive department need his attention. But we cannot wait till he calls to thank him for his kind words and promise to use the columns of the WATCHMAN. We hope that every District Deputy throughout the jurisdiction will follow the Grand Master's example, and help to freight the pages of the WATCHMAN with every thought and fact that may promote the good of the Order.

BE not over-anxious about the rapid numerical increase of your Lodge. The corn-stalk grows tall in the fervid glow of the summer sun, but the early frosts of autumn wither its leaf and lay it low, while the sturdy oak, that stands for centuries, is many years in coming to maturity. Brothers, make the application.

THE subscription lists of the finance committee of the Knights Templar Conclave are meeting with a generous response.

Business Men and the Conclave.

The Knights Templar Conclave which convenes in this city, August 21st, is now an assured success. The little breeze about accommodations has blown over. It was a senseless flurry at best. It was preposterous to intimate the incapacity of a city of 250,000 people, famous for its numerous and spacious hotels, its wilderness of restaurants, boarding houses, and elegant caravansaries, to amply entertain 15,000 or 20,000 visitors. The flurry did good, however, it put the Committee on Hotels and Accommodations on its metal, and it is now a satisfaction to know, after a thorough canvass, that we have all the facilities for accommodating double the number that will probably come.

The transportation companies have been liberal in the reduction of fares; and the United Carriage Company has signified a willingness to maintain uniform rates, and that no extortionate prices for carriage hire will be allowed. Baggage will be taken from boat and train to all parts of the city for Sir Knights, at twenty cents a piece, as cheap as could be asked. It now remains to be seen how generously the business men of the city will respond to the call of the Committee on Finance. It has been estimated that the Conclave in Chicago, in 1880, was the occasion of infusing from $9,000,000 to $10,000,000 into the circulation, and that we may safely calculate that the Conclave here will leave not less than $5,000,000 in the city and State. Then these Sir Knights are representative men, prominent in the learned professions, leading merchants, manufacturers, mechanics, men skilled in all sorts of artistry; they will travel extensively through the State studying its soil, climate and resources, taste of its fruits and wine, visit its grand scenery and natural curiosities, and the report they make of the country will carry more weight than tons of documents distributed by Immigration Commissioners and real estate associations. Selfish considerations alone ought to cause the business community to come down in a munificent manner. The Triennial Committee is doing all it can to glorify California hospitality. It needs generous assistance. True, these Knights Templar come to the coast under the auspices of the Sir Knights of the State, but every citizen should feel that the good name of California for hospitality, courtesy, and chivalrous feeling is pledged to these pilgrims who come with banner and cross, and casting aside all selfish motives, generously help to make this Conclave a glorious success. All the fraternal Orders in the city especially, should heartily aid in giving a generous welcome to these sojourners.

HAPPINESS is like manna. It is to be gathered in the grains and enjoyed every day; it will not keep, it cannot be accumulated; nor need we go out ourselves, nor into remote places, to gather it, since it has rained down from heaven, at our very doors, or rather within them.

THE death claims which our Order will be called upon to pay depends solely upon the vitality of the persons that we take in as members of our Order. Great precaution should be taken that none but healthy men be admitted, and, when once in, try and keep them in.

Public installations were approved by the recent Grand Lodge of California, and the G. M. W. was authorized to review the installation ceremonies and prepare it for public use.

The Farmington brethren hold a grand picnic and celebration on May 1st, and the Order in Lockford have similar exercises the following day. William H. Barnes, F. G. M., will deliver an address at each of these reunions.

Grand Recorder's Department.

Headquarters of Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Rooms 40 and 41, St. Ann's Building, corner of Eddy and Powell, San Francisco. H. G. PRATT, G. R.

ON receiving official notice of the appointment of Grand Medical Examiner all Medical Examiners' Reports on applicants for membership must be transmitted as directed by that officer, and his fee will be paid to him and not to the Grand Lodge, in such manner as he may direct. Probably he will arrange for the collection of his bills monthly or quarterly, but will have the undoubted right to exact payment with the application if he sees fit.

THE Chairman of the Committee on Laws and Supervision is J. N. Young, of Sacramento. All amendments to By-Laws should be sent to him direct. If such amendment involves a change of time of meeting of the Lodge, a dispensation from the Grand Master must accompany the proposed change, or the committee will have no power to approve.

THIS number of the WATCHMAN will be found exceedingly valuable, containing as it does in convenient form all the legislation done at the recent session of the Grand Lodge, except the new Constitution for the Degree of Honor. Preserve it for reference. Every Workman who can afford it, should take the paper.

THE new constitutions of the Degree of Honor cannot go into force till approved by the Supreme Lodge authorities. We hope to get this business through in the course of a few weeks, and if all correct, a boom in the Degree of Honor may be expected.

SEVERAL new Lodges are in process of organization, both Subordinate and Degree of Honor.

About Iowa.

The old Grand Lodge of Iowa, rebelled and was cut off by the Supreme Lodge. A new Grand Lodge was organized from the loyal elements of the Order. There was no other proper course to pursue. The alleged cause of Iowa's defection is so well known that we need not report it. The real cause was disappointed ambition on the part of a few individuals high in authority. They made use of their positions to bring about rebellion. To be sure this involved moral perjury, but for this no penalty could be inflicted by the Order except that which was meted out. We do not know that to the arch conspirators this was any punishment at all. Next to the total destruction of the Order, separation was the thing, we believe, they most desired. The rank and file of the membership were perhaps as inherently loyal and conscientious as others were, but they were led on to the final catastrophe by the plausible sophistry of the able but conscienceless conspirators. No doubt many would now be glad to return to the fold. Many have, more probably will, but the head and front of the offending should be forever barred out. As a rule a man who has once committed an evil deed will do the like again where the temptation is as great and the fear of punishment as little as in the first instance. We may forgive a sinner, but we may not safely accord to him the same confidence reposed before the offense was committed.

In this connection we may note a strange fact. More than a year has gone by since the organization of the new Grand Lodge in Iowa, and not a single death has occurred in a membership of over 2,000. It seems providential. In the old organization the death-rate has been greater than usual.

A suit has been commenced by the Loyal Grand Lodge against the other organization, to recover the property held by them, which they refuse to surrender, and also to restrain them from using the name of the Order they have foresworn. If there be justice in the Iowa Courts the loyalists will surely win their case.

A. O. U. W. Financier's Cash Book and Itemized S. A. Report Book.

A Combination of Receiver's Receipts to Financiers, Financier's S. A. Reports to Lodges and Reports of Auditing Committee

(Compiled, Copyrighted and for sale by C. P. HITCH, Paris, Illinois.

The above two books constitute a complete set for the use of Financiers of the A. O. U. W., and are so necessary for the proper time and labor-saving methodical transaction of Lodge business that every Financier should use them. Lodges, one and all, who have adopted the use of these books are unanimously of the opinion that these most valuable books should be used by every Lodge, in order to make A. O. U. W. bookkeeping uniform throughout the Order. The following Lodges in California are now using these books exclusively:

Lodges Nos. 4, 5, 16, 22, 24, 26, 33, 51, 52, 57, 64, 66, 78, 87, 89, 93, 96, 106, 108, 112, 118, 124, 134, 135, 143, 144, 158, 172, 175, 182, 183, 193, 194, 198, 202, 204, 205, 206, 207, 211, 214 and 219.

Sample sheets of the books have been sent to every Lodge some time since, and Lodges not having the books should, in their own interest, at once procure them. A complete set will be sent to every Lodge for the very low price of $5. Expressage prepaid by ordering of C. P. Hitch, Grand Recorder, Paris, Illinois.

I most heartily recommend the adoption of the above books, and trust that every Lodge in this Jurisdiction will avail themselves of this new and most simple system of keeping their accounts. The "CASH BOOK" will last a Lodge of 100 members six to eight years, and the "S. A. REPORT BOOK" will last Lodges meeting weekly 10 years, and those meeting semi-monthly 20 years.

H. G. PRATT, Grand Recorder of California.

Give Heed.

THE WATCHMAN is proud of its mission. Its highest aim and deepest desire is to serve as best it may the grand old pioneer Order that brought it into existence. Most sincerely and thoroughly does it believe the A. O. U. W. to be the best organization of the beneficial class ever devised by the wisdom of man, and yet it is not claimed that the A. O. U. W. is not susceptible of improvement. Nothing conceived by mortals is nor can be perfect. Perfection belongs to the Infinite alone. But we feel that our feet stand on a safe and sure foundation. We have encountered so many quicksands and safely passed them to the other side, that we gain confidence and assurance as the days come and go. A host of other Societies with substantially the same ends in view have been born out of the A. O. U. W. They are not rivals, but helpers in a great and glorious work. Most of them have difficulties from which we are exempt growing out of their forms of government which strangely enough have been formed on the ideas of many centuries ago instead of the present. They cannot now make any radical change with safety. Revolution would almost certainly be the outcome. But it seems clear some change must be made to avoid revolution. There is Scylla on the one hand and Charybdis on the other. A middle course is the path of hope. Several of these Societies are about to meet in Supreme Lodge sessions. Representatives from the Pacific coast will be present, full of love and solicitude for the Orders they go forth to represent. We would, if possible, strengthen their hands. They know better than others can know the needs of their respective organizations. Their prayers should not be passed by unheeded by their brethren less unfavorably situated. All they will ask may be safely granted we believe. But refusal, we fear, may end in disaster. The disaster of any of these must in a measure work an injury to the A. O. U. W. by weakening public confidence in all such organizations. Hence the deep and honest solicitude we feel in behalf of our confraternities.

BRO. L. L. DENNERY, of Hercules, No. 53, has resigned his position as Foreman, and Bro. J. H. Congdon, who has served as M. W., was elected to the place.

BRO. JOHN HOESCH, Recorder of Magnolia, No. 41, has resigned his position on the Finance and Mileage Committee, and the vacancy will soon be filled.

Stored Energy.

The useful development of electricity is one of the chief marvels of our age. Ever since it slid down from the sky on a kite string, and learned to respect houses and barns armed with lightning rods, there went abroad an impression that this mighty force could be caught, tamed and harnessed to a great variety of important uses. This expectation has been fully realized. It has been turned into medicine and liver pads, and at a touch of the finger flashes human thought across mountains and under the sea. Within a few years it has been taught to carry the very words, accent and tones of the speaker's voice. It writes for us, rings bells, strikes the time in electric clocks, warns a whole city of the locality of a fire, and floods the streets with a warm, brilliant and beautiful light. But the great trouble has been to manufacture and store it away, as water in a tank, or gas in a reservoir, in short barrel it up and keep it on draught. It is such a sly, subtle, potent energy. But within a year or two past even this marvelous feat has been accomplished. Sir Wm. Thomson's experiment with the Faure accumulator, sent him from Paris to Glasgow, gives perfect assurance that it will not be long till electricity is boxed, barreled and bottled, and shipped all over the world as an article of merchandise.

But in this invention, as in all others, man has only caught a hint from nature. Though to a superficial eye she may seem very prodigal of her energies, the fact is she is very economical and allows no waste. We may feel a little surprised to read that Faur's battery held "a million of foot pounds," yet a pound of coal contains energy equal to eleven million foot pounds. Every drop of water is said to hold lightning enough to kill a man, and in that case a tumblerful is a condensed thunderstorm. The sun pours his beams lavishly upon the earth. Much is radiated, but the earth like a prudent housekeeper, stores the most of it away for future use. It is packed in seeds, garnered in bulbs, blushes in flowers, and comes out in the flavor of fruits. Even cucumbers and radishes are full of sunshine, though it may take a digestive apparatus equal to a quartz-crushing machine to eliminate it. Nature is a careful banker and makes the most of her capital. Nature is generous, because she saves. What tremendous energy is stowed away in gun-cotton, powder, or glycerine. A dynamite bomb that a child could hold in its hand contains a small earthquake. A loaded gun or cannon is a fine sample of stored energy.

Thanks to Mr. Faure for the hint. Now for the application. A newspaper should be a sort of mental battery charged with wholesome ideas, valuable suggestions, a summary of the life and business of the city, a bulletin of the market, an epitome of the State, the nation, the world. It is a portable accumulator that the reader can stuff into his pocket, lay on his desk, or hang on a file until he has leisure enough to put his optic nerve and brain in contact with the magnetic currents of the world.

The sermon the reader listened to last Sunday was the stored energy of a week's elaboration, and if it lacked electric warmth, light and fire, it was because the preacher's brain battery worked badly or he tried to manufacture mental energy out of theological coke or the dust, slag and cinders of medieval theology. It may be that the conditions of the hearer were not good.

A fine physical constitution is a form of stored energy, sometimes inherited, but usually the result of wise and prudent care. For more than three months President Garfield fought death from a mortal wound, for the simple reason that the accumulated power of a sober, chaste and temperate life came to his help.

Good character is another form of stored energy. It is the accumulation of moral force, generated by a long, constant and steadfast resistance of evil temptation in every shape. It is the lack of this silent storage of power, that causes so many to break down the moment any great trust and responsibility are placed upon them. They are like hollow trees that are well shaped and apparently solid and vigorous, but are easily twisted, bent, and broken in a storm.

Our New Officers.

In the last issue of the WATCHMAN we gave a portrait of our new Grand Master, James T. Rogers, together with some personal matters. We also gave a few items of information concerning our new Grand Foreman, David McClure, and Grand Overseer, Duncan McPherson. Our only object is to give such facts and impressions as will enable the brotherhood to form some idea of the men the Grand Lodge has selected to go in and out before us the ensuing year. Lack of space caused the following brothers to be omitted in our little gallery:

Seneca Davis, Grand Guide.

We would like to give a more complete account of the life-history of our newly elected Grand Guide. We may be able to do this some time in the future. At present it must suffice to say, that he is about forty years of age and engaged in mining in El Dorado county. He resides at Placerville and is a member of El Dorado Lodge, No. 118, and is a zealous worker in the Order. He was appointed District Deputy by Grand Master, W. H. Barnes, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Wiltse. A year ago he was elected Grand Watchman, and at the recent Grand Lodge called to fill the responsible position of Grand Guide by a very complimentary vote.

Alvin Fay, Grand Watchman.

Our newly elected Grand Watchman was born in McHenry county, Ill., in 1849, and finished his education at the North Western University, located at Evanston, twelve miles north of Chicago. He began the battle of life at eighteen years of age, as a teacher, in the meantime worrying with Blackstone and Chitty, and at the early age of twenty-one years, was admitted to the bar in Wisconsin. He came to this State eleven years ago; resided three years in San Mateo county and the remainder in Kern county. Brother Fay at present resides at Kernville, and for the past five years has been actively engaged in the practice of his profession. He is a member of Kern River Lodge, No. 106, thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the Order, and was the unanimous choice of the Grand Lodge for Grand Watchman.

Charles H. Haile, Grand Receiver.

This faithful servant and pioneer of the Order was elected to the very responsible position of Grand Receiver for the sixth time. The choice was unanimous. Brother Haile was born on the 5th day of January, 1832, in the town of Addison, Vermont. From an early age he has taken great interest in fraternal orders. In 1850 he joined the F. and A. M. in New York, and affiliated with Eden Lodge, San Leandro, in 1864, acting as its Worshipful Master for four years, and serving the Order in several other capacities. He has taken a prominent part in helping to plant the Order of A. O. U. W. on this coast. For ten years he served Alameda Lodge, No. 5, as Recorder, and has stood guard over the finances of the Grand Lodge since the 13th day of November, 1877. During that time he has received and paid out in current expenses and to the widows and orphans of deceased brothers, about $700,000 without a deficit so much as a five cent piece, making a record that Workmen may point to with pride and satisfaction.

EVERY assessment paid by a member is a dollar deposited in the safest of all savings banks, to be returned many fold in the hour of greatest need.

At last the ashes of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home," rest in American soil. They were brought last month from Egypt, where Payne was Consul at the time of his death, and deposited in a beautiful cemetery near Washington, D. C. We have sung "Home, Sweet Home," since childhood. But few know the incidents of the early history of the beautiful song. "Home, Sweet Home," was first given to the public in 1823, in an English opera called "Clari, or the Maid of Milan." The music of the opera was composed by Sir Henry Rowley Bishop, once the husband of Madame Anna Bishop, who speaks of it as follows: The music was adapted by Sir Henry Bishop from an Italian melody, a "Sicilian air," as he called it in his score. I remember the first time I heard "Home, Sweet Home." It was long before I met Sir Henry, and when I was quite a little girl studying at the Royal Academy in London. I was taken along with other pupils to Drury Lane, or Covent Garden, where it was being performed. Miss Tree sang it. The melody was made to recur again and again by Sir Henry, and I remember very well how effective it was. The scene in which it was sung was one in which a simple girl, after having been deceived by her lover, returned to her home.

How strong should be the protest of wives and mothers, sisters and sweethearts, against the silly dissipations which rob homes and children of so many little necessities and comforts and yield the ones who indulge in them no benefit, but rather weaken, and sometimes destroy them. It has been estimated that an ordinary drinker and tobacco user wastes in one week three dollars and eighty-three cents. In consequence he finds himself poorly clad, family in want of many necessities, and completely behind in his dues. He is never prepared for accident or sickness financially, and his family, through the effects of these habits, are reared in disorder and uncleanness. Never thinking of adopting methods of economy, or changing his mode of living by abandoning these injurious habits, the burdens of life are grievous. While it is shown that husband, wife and four children can procure a week's supply of food for four dollars and fifteen cents, the saving of the rum and tobacco waste turned into clothing and home comforts would produce comparative ease and pleasure, where sorrow and despair is now the lot.

A NEW method of manufacturing belts or bands for machinery, which comes from Paris, is applicable to rubber, woven tissues of gutta-percha, and consists in making the belt in longitudinal ribs or grooves, the main object of which is to increase the capacity of the belt on the same cross section, say twelve inches, by the extra strength put in the same space, and also to prevent so much stretching and variation. Another modification of the same invention is grooving one side of the belt the same as saw teeth, then putting these two pieces together, leaving a plain bearing surface for contact besides, thus making a double belt, which is less liable to stretch or to warp. Especial machinery is built for the purpose, and the claim for it is that better contact is given. The pores are closed during this grooving process, the belts have a higher resisting power, and do not twist on the pulleys. The grooves may be regular, irregular, spiral, or crossed.

If you are feeding the baby be sure that the little treasure has sweet, pure and rich milk. Sometimes we are furnished milk by the milk vendors which is good, except that part of the cream has been removed. It is very dangerous, as is shown by the report of the New York City Board of Health last year 17,520 children under five years of age died in that city. Of this number 13,462 were under two years and 9,867 under one year. The number of these deaths resulting from diarrheal diseases was 3,479. This great mortality is largely due to cholera infantum and other complaints brought on by skim milk. It takes a certain amount of fat to secure digestion. A grown person eats enough fat in other articles of food to aid in digesting skim milk; but with infants, who live almost wholly on milk and eat no other fats, skim milk coagulates in the stomach and produces disease and speedy death. There is no difference of opinion on this subject among competent and disinterested authorities. The infants die mostly in the months when the skim milk turns stale quickly.

On the ingenuousness of childhood; what a joy it is amidst the pomp of ceremony and circumstance! When Lady Mandeville's little four-year-old twins were presented to Her Majesty, Victoria, instead of kissing her hand, as they were told to do, one of them just rushed through the surrounding courtiers, and, putting her arms about the Queen's neck, gave her a real old fashioned, honest hug. After a little the other one, who by this time had concluded to make herself perfectly at home, also drew the attention of Her Majesty, and cried out, "Say, Queen, can't you give us a bun?" Victoria was not offended, as a lesser personage would have been, but was, on the other hand, delighted, and the buns were forthcoming.

SIDNEY DILLON has authoritatively denied the report that the additional issue of $7,000,000 of Union Pacific stock is contemplated.

NERVOUS debility, the curse of the American people, immediately yields to the action of Brown's Iron Bitters.

Oh, My Back!

That's a common expression and has a world of meaning. How much suffering is summed up in it.

The singular thing about it is, that pain in the back is occasioned by so many things. May be caused by kidney disease, liver complaint, consumption, cold, rheumatism, dyspepsia, overwork, nervous debility, &c.

Whatever the cause, don't neglect it. Something is wrong and needs prompt attention. No medicine has yet been discovered that will so quickly and surely cure such diseases as BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, and it does this by commencing at the foundation, and making the blood pure and rich.

Wm. P. Marshall, of Logansport, Indiana, writes: "My wife has for many years been troubled from pain in her back and general debility incident to her sex. She has taken one bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, and I can truthfully say that she has been so much benefited that she pronounces it the only remedy of many medicines she has tried."

Leading physicians and clergymen use and recommend BROWN'S IRON BITTERS. It has cured others suffering as you are, and it will cure you.

Slang.

The use of slang, which is so prevalent among our young people, is one of the evils which all should endeavor to eliminate. A correspondent of the Western Rural writes of a society of young ladies, which had for its object the suppression of slang in the conversation of its members. The method adopted was for each member to write in a blank-book every slang phrase used during the day, and to compare notes at night. The young ladies were urged to this point by a desire for the approval of their gentlemen friends. How many of these same gentlemen friends refrained from the use of vulgar and profane language, even while in the company of the young ladies? If gentlemen whose sensibilities are so offended by the expressions of their sisters and friends would use only refined language in their presence, they would accomplish more of a reform than in any other way. We are very apt to do as those in whose society we are thrown do, and if their conversation is always pure and chaste, ours will be so also.

One of two young ladies, who was not a habitual user of slang, allowed an unguarded expression to escape her lips, which produced the following remark from her companion: "Oh, I am so relieved! I have not used slang before you because I thought you never used it, and would be so shocked." The young lady had not only lowered herself in her own and her companion's estimation, but had destroyed the influence which had been a check upon the latter.

SILK HANDKERCHIEFS AND SORE THROATS.—Sore throats vanish when encircled in a silken kerchief. This is established beyond peradventure. The grandmothers knew all about this a hundred years ago. They believed, too, that silk would cure all other diseases, and some of them thought it would heal a broken leg "if only taken in time." We do not go so far as that, but we know that silk will absorb and store electricity as readily as a Leyden jar. It forms an essential curtain for the electric cylinder, and rubbed with quicksilver, has a mysterious power that imparts force to its retention. The curative force of silk is due to its electricity, and the medical faculty recommend silken hose and shirts for a thousand diseases. As we are not professional, we only take silk by the throat, and know its wonderful powers. We will give a sure recipe: When you have the throat trouble, give a nice, clean silk handkerchief to your sweetheart with a request to tie it around your neck. If you are not cured or choked by tender hands we have made a mistake. The more expensive the kerchief the surer the cure, because your pet takes so long to examine the quality and get it just right, so it won't hurt. Try it and go home cured. We expect silk handkerchiefs will advance in price, when this matter is understood.—Dry Goods Bulletin.

EXPANSION AND CONTRACTION OF IRON WIRE. Some of the anomalies presented in the expansion and contraction of iron wire, as observed by metallurgists and chemists, have led to the conclusion, recently, that in steel and iron containing free carbon, there is a contraction or shortening which is excited by heat, and which proceeds simultaneously with the dynamical expansion and marks its true amount—this being divisible into high and low temperature contraction. In cooling a strained iron wire from redness, it was found that the contraction due to cooling was, at a certain point and for a limited period, changed into action of elongation; in good iron wire this irregularity has not been detected, but in hard wire and steel is very apparent. The wire has to be raised to a very high temperature before the temporary elongation during cooling is visible, nor does it take place if the wire is heated only just beyond the temperature at which it occurs.

CAREFUL MAILING.—We take all possible care to mail our papers prompt and correct, and we seldom hear of complaints in its postal delivery; yet we would thank any subscriber, who may happen to miss a copy, to send us at once a postal card, giving full address and the date of the number missed, and we will remail them.

Complimentary Sample Copies of this paper are occasionally sent to parties connected with the interests specially represented in its columns. Persons so receiving copies are requested to examine its contents, terms of subscription, and give it their own patronage; and as far as practicable aid in circulating the journal and making its value more widely known to others and extending its influence in the cause it faithfully serves. Subscription rate, $2 a year.

N. B.—Personal attention will be called to this (as well as other notices, at times) by turning down a leaf.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has not been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we will split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this, the oldest of the beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

The Lemmon Herbarium.

This Herbarium has been removed from the Blake House to a permanent place at 1205 Franklin St., near Fourteenth St., Oakland, one square east of the Post Office, where plants of the Pacific Coast, including Arizona, may be determined on application, and instruction given in botany during the winter. Sets or single specimens of the rare and new ferns of the Pacific Coast for sale.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the 8th and 23d of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
INDEPENDENT ORDER CHOSEN FRIENDS,
ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST,
AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS,
IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN,
KNIGHTS OF HONOR.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and carefully selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

Start Right.

There are thousands of young men in the city and country, who have passed through their school days and reached that point where they are called to throw off the dependence of youth, and assume the helm of their own fortunes. It is the most eventful period in human history. Nearly everything depends upon starting right. And few seem to be aware how much success hinges upon the spirit, pluck, energy, and equipment of the individual at the outset. Five or six years will usually determine what sort of a destiny the maturer experience of manhood will develop. Fortunate circumstances here and there, may place one above the plane of toil and effort, but it is certain that ninety-nine out of every hundred will have to work out their own life-problem. If a young man starts the race of life in a mood of indifference, with low aims and ambitions, inclined to wait till he is married before he settles down to any special effort, or trust to luck and enjoy the prize sent him from the wheel of fortune, he may have what is called a "good time" for a season, but old age will almost certainly overtake him not far from the place where he started.

It is, therefore, a matter of pre-eminent importance that a young man starts in the right spirit, and throws his whole soul into the business he has selected. Success is the blossom of energy, courage, integrity, hope, faith, and an intelligent appreciation of golden opportunities. The young man who possesses these elements will not fail to make his mark. If he seeks wealth, it will come to him; fame, he will secure it; power, it will be given him. His reward will be commensurate to his deserts. He will reap according to the quality and extent of his sowing. It is true, there are exceptional cases, but they will generally be found not attributable to the man so much as to those unfortunate contingencies which come like tropical storms, suddenly, and give no warning, and destroy in an hour the work of years. But such squalls are rare in the climate of thoughtful, honest effort.

But it cannot be too emphatically insisted upon, that the main secret of success in any calling is an ample mental equipment for it. Mr. Froude, in an address before the University of St. Andrews, said: "Every occupation, even the meanest—I don't say the 'scavenger,' or the 'chimney-sweep,'—but every productive occupation which adds anything to the capital of mankind, if followed assiduously, with a desire to understand everything connected with it, is an ascending stair, whose summit is nowhere; and from the successive steps of which the horizon of knowledge perpetually enlarges. Take the lowest and most unskilled labor of all, that of the peasant in the field. The peasant's business is to make the earth grow food; the elementary rules of his art are the simplest, and the rude practice of it the easiest; yet between the worst agriculture and the best lie agricultural chemistry, the application of machinery, the laws of the economy of force, and the most curious problems of physiology. Each step of knowledge gained in these things can be immediately applied and realized. Each point of the science which the laborer masters will make him not only a wiser man but a better workman, and will either lift him, if he is ambitious, to a higher position, or make him more intelligent and more valuable if he remains where he is."

The same thought is applicable to the whole catalogue of manual craftsmen; the blacksmith, carpenter, tailor, bricklayer, printer, or to those who work with the hand and brain combined; doctors, lawyers, editors, reporters, engineers, and preachers. Whoever would grow and thrive, and make the most of himself, must become skilled in his particular art or vocation, by gathering and utilizing all the knowledge that clusters around it. This is no world for mopes and idlers. The young man who cares more for fine clothes than a thorough knowledge of his business, who is more fond of small talk and the pleasure of society than the companionship of the world's great thinkers, who spends more time playing cards and billiards, making calls and haunting places of amusement than in storing his mind with useful information, may glitter and shine in a sort of glow-worm style, but will rarely become anything more than a routine man, a drudge and automaton in his work, ever dependent upon the caprice of circumstances.

District Deputies.

The faithful discharge of the duties assigned to the District Deputies is of vital importance to the well-being of the Order. They possess considerable power and come into immediate contact with the membership. They are the Grand Master Workman's official staff. It is their duty within their respective jurisdictions to see that the work is properly and uniformly rendered, to instruct the Subordinate Lodges when requested, and perform such other duties as the Grand Lodge or Grand Master Workman may from time to time direct. They have power to grant dispensations to Lodges to elect and confer all the degrees at one and the same meeting, or confer one or more at the same meeting, and for public display. The Order in this State has been very fortunate in its choice of District Deputies. Brethren, when the District Deputy comes round give him the best bed, the firstlings of the flock, and the delicacies of the season, for they are the shepherds who feed the flock and live on treasure laid up in heaven. The following list of District Deputies will be found very convenient for reference:

IN the year 1875 there were only three Lodges of the Ancient Order of United Workmen instituted in California, the first at West Oakland, (the Point) the second on Broadway, (Oakland,) and third at Brooklyn, (East Oakland). No other Lodge was then organized until January, 1877, when the first Lodge of the Order was instituted in San Francisco.

Other Jurisdictions.

C. P. Hitch, Grand Recorder of Illinois, in his second annual report, presents some interesting tables. Nine of the deaths were accidental; no suicides. Thirteen assessments of $1 each have been sufficient to pay all losses. The average death rate per 1,000 members for 1882 was 54.11, a little over one half per cent. The State has 232 Lodges and 11,809 members. The average age of the membership in the jurisdiction is 36 years and 11 months, which is less than the average was last year. One hundred and eighty-four members is the largest number reported by any one Lodge in the State.

At a meeting of the Ormsby Lodge, No. 4, held Wednesday evening, April 11th, in Carson, Mr. Charles W. Sharpe was elected Representative to the Grand Lodge, which convenes in Eureka in June next. No secret Order in Nevada has more progress than the above. When the first Grand Lodge met in that State, the jurisdiction numbered but 300 members. Now the membership embraces 1,700, showing an increase of 1,400 in three years.

Supreme Recorder Sackett's report for February, 1883, shows: March 1, number of members in good standing, 117,506, a gain for the month of 1,274. Paid during month to heirs of deceased members, $151,250. New York reports, at said date, 17,447 members; California, 15,267; Pennsylvania, 13,600.

There is to be a grand reunion of all the A. O. U. W. Lodges of Illinois, held in Chicago, next June, in which the Select Knights will participate, and a handsome banner, costing $300, will be awarded to the best drilled Legion. The A. O. U. W. numbers over 12,000 in Illinois.

Deputy Grand Workman J. W. Kinsley instituted the first Lodge of the Order in Wyoming, at Evanston, on the 9th inst., which will be known as Uinta Lodge, No. 1. The charter list was an exceedingly fine one. An organization will be effected at Green River.

The Supreme Commander of the Select Knights reports 164 supreme beneficiary certificates taken out during January and February. Of these but one came from Kansas, 34 were from Missouri, 40 from Illinois, 10 from New York and Pennsylvania, and 19 from the Supreme Jurisdiction.

The Ohio A. O. U. W. Journal in the issue of April 14th, presents its readers with a fine portrait and brief biographical sketch of Grand Medical Inspector C. O. Wright, M. D.

Brother S. H. Wells has ceased his labors on the Pacific Overseer. He has done his work well, but the press of other duties compels him to lay aside the pen.

Several of the Lodges of Portland are discussing the policy of requiring members to pay all dues and assessments in the Lodge room.

The Supreme Jurisdiction has two assessments for April. This covers seventeen deaths.

The average age of those admitted during the year, in Canada was 36.

There are 96 Lodges in Wisconsin, with a membership of $4,442.

Pennsylvania issues assessments Nos. 8 and 9 for April.

Texas has a membership of 1,675.

The Healdsburg Lodge will give a picnic on May Day. Grand Master Workman James T. Rogers of Ukiah, has been invited to attend and deliver the oration and it is expected he will be present.

Three hundred and fifty invitations will be issued for the grand calico ball to be given at Harmonic Hall, on the 26th inst., by Alameda Lodge, No. 5.

Brother George E. Freeman of Santa Ana, writes the WATCHMAN that the Santa Ana Lodge, No. 82, is flourishing. New members received every evening.

BRO. J. MEREDITH DAVIES, General Agent for the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, has been a resident of our city for three years. He is known as a prominent and honored member of the leading fraternal societies, and by his general manner, politeness, integrity, and honest dealing with the traveling public, has become a great favorite. Parties desiring information or a trip east will be correctly equipped by applying to J. Meredith Davies, No. 2 New Montgomery, Palace Hotel.—Com.

What They Say of Us.

The WATCHMAN appreciates the following kindly notices:

The number of PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN for April 2, is the best that has ever been issued from that enterprising office. The WATCHMAN stands at the head of the fraternal press, and this issue should be in the hands of every Workman in the State. It contains twenty pages and is full of facts interesting and instructive to every member of the Order whose good name is so zealously battles for.—Amador Sentinel.

The PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, the A. O. U. W. organ for the Pacific Coast, for April 15th, is an excellent number, and its first page contains a fine picture of James T. Rogers, the recently elected Grand Master Workman. The WATCHMAN is improving as it gets older, and is a very creditable journal, and should be taken and read by every Workman on this coast.—Los Gatos Weekly News.

The PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN for April 1st, in a double edition contains a condensed history of the A. O. U. W. from its inception, with a brief record of the Order on the Pacific Coast; also a complete Directory of the Lodges of California, Nevada, Utah, and Montana, with the names of M. W. and Recorder, place and day of meeting, officers of the respective Grand Lodges, with the Committees, District Deputies and the name of every officer of the Subordinate Lodges of those jurisdictions, in addition to the usual Lodge locals and other interesting matter and illustrations for which the WATCHMAN is noted. The WATCHMAN is well edited and neatly printed and always finds a hearty welcome by the Journal. It deserves and should receive the hearty support and co-operation of every member on the Pacific Coast.—Ohio A. O. U. W. Journal.

The PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN issued a special number on the first of this month, which is exceedingly creditable. It consists of twenty-four pages, filled with excellent reading-matter and fine illustrations. The special feature, however, is a complete Lodge Directory of the State, which originally covered four pages of the paper, but has been photographed down so that it is contained on a single page, and has been engraved and reproduced in that form. The Workmen of California ought to be very proud of this ably-conducted and beautiful journal, which is doing such effective service in their behalf. We do not doubt but what that is the case, and that the WATCHMAN is given a liberal support.—St. Louis Overseer.

Report of Memorial Committee

The committee appointed to draft resolutions memorial of our honored and beloved dead, would report that since our last annual session, the Divine Master has seen fit, in his wisdom, to remove to a higher sphere four of our most earnest and efficient co-laborers; and, in our council chambers, and around our altar-fires, the glad voices of our beloved Brothers CHARLES CAMPBELL, of Main Top, No. 156; I. WISLER, P. M. W., of Golden Gate, No. 8; J. M. BANKS, of Colusa, No. 66; and H. A. OLIVER, of Lakeport Lodge, No. 34, (District Deputy Grand Master Workman) will be heard again no more forever. They have gone on before us, and through the gates, to a higher life, have passed to the reward that ever awaits those who are faithful. Let us so live, that it may be said of us, as it can be truly said of each of these, our Brothers, "His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him, that Nature might stand up and say to all the world, 'This was a man.'" Therefore,

Resolved, That this Grand Lodge deeply feels the loss it has sustained in the death of the Brothers before mentioned; and, in a spirit of brotherhood, and with hearts touched by the warm hand of sympathy, we would desire to mingle our grief with that of the family and relatives of our dear Brothers, who have thus, in the prime of a vigorous and useful manhood, been taken from the high and responsible positions they have so faithfully and nobly filled.

Resolved, That these resolutions be inserted as a "Memorial Page" in the Journal of our Proceedings, and forever be kept in the archives of this Grand Lodge.

Resolved, That a copy be sent to the families of our deceased Brothers.

MISSING.—On the 26th day of February, 1883, L. L. Clifford, the Master Workman of Tacoma Lodge, No. 32, A. O. U. W., of Tacoma, Washington Territory, left his home on a business visit to Portland, Oregon, at which point he arrived the same day and was a guest at the Clarendon Hotel in that city. On Tuesday, the 27th, Mr. Clifford received $2,000 in gold coin from the Grand Lodge of A. O. U. W., and was last seen at said hotel on the evening of the 27th, at which time he paid his bill and requested to be called in time for the Kalama boat next morning, it being his intention to return to Tacoma on the 28th. Since that time no direct trace of him can be found. Description.—About 5 ft. 11 in. or 6 ft., spare built, light complexion, sandy whiskers; weight, 150 or 160 lbs., 46 years of age, married, and by trade a painter. Had on when last seen a gray suit of clothes, white felt hat. Any information as to his whereabouts will be thankfully received. Address ROBERT NEWCOMB, Grand Recorder, Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Portland, Oregon.

Grand Master Rogers at Home.

The saying that a prophet is not without honor, save in his own country, will not hold good of our newly elected Grand Master. The Ukiah City Press says:

J. T. Rogers, Esq., has received both a compliment and an acknowledgement of the esteem in which the Grand Lodge holds him, through his election as Grand Master Workman of the A. O. U. W. of California. The Workmen of Mendocino are certainly pleased.

The Dispatch and Democrat of the same city has the following:

Grand Master J. T. Rogers returned home last Sunday evening, and since his arrival he has been congratulated by the brethren of his home Lodge over his successful promotion to the highest office in the gift of the Order within the State.

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through Dewey & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

MANUFACTURE OF SORGHUM.—John K. Van derburgh, Marshfield, Oregon. No. 275,963. Dated April 17, 1883. This invention relates to a new and useful process of, and apparatus for, separating the sediment consisting of vegetable matter, insoluble, earthy compounds, and other suspended impurities, from the saccharine juice or sorghum, whereby the remittent juice will be pure enough to readily granulate and form a large percentage of sugar. The apparatus consists of an ordinary evaporator, in which one or more compartments are formed at its head by transverse partitions or diaphragms, the tops of which are below the level of the sides of the evaporator. In these compartments are placed removable perforated receiving pans. The process consists in admitting the pressed juice into the compartment, or, if there be more than one, into the first of the compartments at the head of the evaporator, heating it to the temperature of 210° Fahr. (the usual skimming process taking place meantime), and allowing the top, or pure juice, to flow over the depressed top of the partition into the next compartment, or into the main body of the evaporator, as the case may be. During the heating process, the heavy sediment of all descriptions sink, and cannot flow over as suspensions into the next compartment, but must remain in the first compartment, from which they may be readily removed, the main object being gained of removing the deposits from the juice at the beginning of the operation of making syrup or sugar. The presence of these suspended and deposited impurities, and the difficulty of removing them, has made the manufacture of sugar from sorghum almost impracticable, and consequently, little has been made from it but coarse syrups, which are used as such, or sold to the refiners for purification. When these impurities are present the sugar will not granulate. These impurities must be wholly removed from the juice, and at the first process of the operation.

PULLEY BLOCK.—Byron Jackson, of S. F., and Geo. W. T. Carter, of Byron, Contra Costa Co., Cal. No. 275,916. Dated April 24, 1883. The improvement in pulley blocks consists of a skeleton two-part iron shell, which is bolted together at the top and bottom, and has chambers formed in each side, into which wooden boxes are fitted. The pulley pin is formed with or fixed into the pulley, so as to turn in the wooden boxes. The top of the shell or case has a vertical hole opening at the bottom into an enlarged chamber, and the head of the bolt or hook by which the block is suspended fits loosely in this chamber, the shank passing out loosely through the hole.

An Improved File-Holder.

An article which is valuable mainly for its usefulness, if simplified without being made less effective, is improved. The file-holder illustrated herewith is an invention of this sort. Its merits, however, are more readily observed by sight than described in words.

To file newspapers, or other printed matter, the round rubber band is slipped over the inclined end of the upper bar into the notched end of the lower bar. With the lower bar resting on a table the upper bar is swung vertically or sideways, leaving the point for receiving the papers entirely unobstructed. The hinged ends of the bars, being rounded and held elastically, the upper bar is easily and naturally brought back to the right position, where it is quickly fastened by slipping the adjustable band over the incline.

The pointed end of the holder should be kept farthest from the body and the bottom of the papers placed near the rubber band, which acts as a hinge. If the rubbers become lost or damaged the same kind can be obtained from the patentee, or those which will answer the purpose very well, may be had at small cost at any stationery store.

Among the advantages gained by this holder are the following:

It can be opened and closed quicker than others.

The points are less obstructed while the articles to be filed are being placed.

The papers (wholly or partly folded) can be either "straddled" over the lower bar, or filed in regular book order.

The elastic hinge and band accommodate and hold firm either a large or a small number of papers.

Devoid of surplus material, it approaches nearer to bookbinding than other file-holders.

With less material, it is lighter and less cumbersome than other holders.

It has no protruding ends to tickle the reader's ribs; no sharp corners or metal parts for defacing furniture.

It has no rigid hooks, hinges or loose parts to break or get lost.

It has proved durable in practice. Consisting of so few parts, the two strong rubber rings are the only portions possible to wear out. These can be replaced at trifling cost. The file is adjusted but 52 times a year for a weekly paper. A sample holder can be opened and closed 1,000 times without showing depreciation.

Having, as a publisher, considerable use for fileholders, the inventor could find none of the hundred different kinds patented or in use devoid of decidedly objectionable features. For this reason he adopted and used some of the simplest forms conceivable. After several years' use and repeated improvements, the device we illustrate has proved the best.

The patent was allowed in April, 1876, since which time many holders have been used, giving full satisfaction.

Five sizes are made to suit the dimensions of different papers, viz. 18, 24, 26, 30 and 34 inches, inside measure.

From our own experience and the testimony of others, we do not hesitate to recommend this simple article as the best of its kind.

Liberal terms are offered to dealers for introducing this novel file-holder. Agents wanted in every town and county.

Patented by A. T. Dewey, S. F. Samples will be mailed for 50 cents, postpaid.

De Lesseps and his African Sea.

The African inland sea is still a matter of much thought with M. De Lesseps and his friends. That engineer has lately visited the locality of the proposed connecting canal, and, with a party of engineers, taken a horseback ride over the proposed route, and examined that portion of the country which it is proposed to cover with water. The locality of the proposed "inland sea" is not, as generally supposed, upon the desert of Sahara at all, but quite to the north of it, and separated therefrom by a range of mountains, which form the southern boundary of the Regency of Tunis. The "sea" will occupy the site of several marshy lakes in Southern Tunis, and will cover an area only a trifle larger than the little State of Rhode Island, and not quite so large as the valley near the Gulf of California, which an American Engineer has proposed to convert into a lake for a similar purpose.

One of the principal objects of the enterprise is to give water transportation to the seaboard for the timber from the mountains upon its southern and western border. It is thought, moreover, that the moisture which will be engendered by the presence of this body of water will bring into cultivation a vast tract of land, which, although now a desert, was quite celebrated for its fertility during the Carthaginian rule in Africa. The canal will start from a point near the port of Gabes. Exclusive rights over the land and the forests surrounding the "sea" will compensate the company which undertakes to excavate the connecting channel. A preliminary survey has been completed by Commandant Roudaire, and there is no doubt that the level of the lakes is fourteen meters lower than that of the Mediterranean. The chief question now requiring elucidation is the nature of the soil between Gabes and the lakes. If it turns out to be anything but rock, M. de Lesseps thinks there will be no difficulty in speedily carrying out the project, which has occupied his attention ever since it was suggested to him by the Empress of the French at the opening of the Suez canal. Sahara, however, will still remain as much a desert as it ever has been since the commencement of the historic period of time.

The Union Pacific Railroad has reduced the rates on immigrant movables from the Missouri river to all points in Utah, Dakota and Montana, from 25 to 50 per cent.

THE GREAT STATUE OF LIBERTY. A singular problem in engineering is presented to the committee which has in charge the construction of the pedestal for the great statue of Liberty in New York harbor. The statue weighs, complete, only about eighty tons, but presents an immense surface to the wind, and stands, moreover, on a comparatively small base. Considering that it is not extremely easy to construct a brick chimney of the same height—one hundred and forty-eight feet—weighing ten times as much, of pyramidal form, and standing on the ground, so as to resist the force of a storm, the difficulty of raising and securing the statue, not on the ground, but on the top of a pedestal nearly one hundred and fifty feet high, is apparent. There are no precedents for anything of the kind, and it will hardly do to secure the figure by the rope stays, like those of a derrick, which the incapable engineer would naturally resort to. The members of the committee seem to have perceived something of the difficulty of the undertaking, and have telegraphed to France for instructions as to the mode of doing the work. The American Architect suggests, that the plan said to be employed by the Japanese for securing their light pagoda towers against the effects of wind, by means of a long weight or pendulum, hung from the top of the tower, and reaching nearly to the floor, might perhaps be employed with very good effect for the New York statue. A very similar device, applied by Sir Christopher Wren, has for two hundred years held up the spire of Salisbury Cathedral, as well as those of one or two other English churches, in which a heavy wooden framework, extending as far downward as the construction of the tower permits, is suspended by strong iron bars from the capstone, free to swing in any direction. The effort of the wind on one side of the spire inclines it until the hanging framework rests against the opposite side, but when the pressure is relieved, the pendulum swings back, bringing the stone-work with it into its original place.

To DEODORIZE RUBBER ARTICLES, cover them with charcoal dust, place them in an enclosed vessel, and raise the temperature to 94° F.; let it remain thus for several hours; remove and clean the articles from the dust, and they will be found, says a contemporary, free from all odor.

LADIES and sickly girls requiring a non-alcoholic, gentle stimulant, will find Brown's Iron Bitters beneficial.

THE PACIFIC RURAL PRESS,

AN ILLUSTRATED

AGRICULTURAL HOME JOURNAL.

Among other Reasons for Subscribing are the Following:

Because it is a permanent, first-class, conscientious, able, and well conducted journal.

Because it is the largest and best agricultural weekly west of the Rocky mountains.

That Patrons may be reliably informed on the progress of the Order in this and other fields.

That more farmers' wives and children in their rural homes may be cheered by its weekly visits, laden with its pleasing, yet moral reading, and sound instruction.

That a more extended interchange of views and opinions may be had among farmers, upon all the great questions touching their mutual interests and progress.

That the agricultural resources of the Pacific States may be more wisely, speedily and thoroughly developed by an open and free discussion in our columns.

That all the worthy industries of our State may be advanced in connection with that of agriculture, our columns being ever open to the discussion of the merits of all progressive improvements.

That the RURAL, after having been read and pondered over by the home circle, can be filed away for future useful reference, or forwarded to the old Eastern fireside of the Atlantic border, in aid of an increasing immigration to our sunny clime.

Subscription rates, $3 per annum when paid in advance. Please invite your friends to subscribe. We will send free sample copies for circulation and further information on subscription, etc., on application.

Constitution of the Sun.

In a paper recently presented to the French Academy, Faye gives his reasons for believing that our sun and the other large self-luminous heavenly bodies have not yet arrived at either a solid or a liquid state, but are gaseous all the way to the centers. Otherwise, he says, the heat radiated from them would not be so quickly replaced by heat from within, and the surface, consequently, would soon become covered with a solid, non-luminous crust.

Cagniard-Datour has proved by means of some very remarkable experiments that a gaseous mass can acquire the density of a liquid without changing its state of aggregation, provided both temperature and pressure are high enough at one time. If, then, the external strata of the solar atmosphere, where all matter is in an elementary or dissociated state, should cool sufficiently for the elements to enter into chemical combination, if the vapors of metallic calcium, magnesium, and silicium, mixed with oxygen there, on cooling should form clouds of lime, magnesia, and silica, for example, these clouds would sink to the interior, where they would again be dissociated, while at the same time they would drive the hotter particles upward, so that an approximately uniform temperature would be maintained until the whole mass had gradually cooled to such an extent as to assume the liquid and afterwards the solid state.

Faye bases his hypothesis on the spectroscopic observations of many years, and on Carrington's study of sun spots, which show that the currents are all in zones parallel to the equator, while there are none from the equator toward the pole. Besides this, the flattening of the sun and the slow motion of the sun spots near the poles are more easily explained on this hypothesis of Faye than on those hitherto in vogue.

GOD IN NATURE.—In a recent scientific lecture, Prof. C. A. Young, the astronomer, of Princeton College, used the following language: "Do not understand me at all, as saying that there is no mystery about the planets' motion. There is just the one single mystery—gravitation—and it is a very profound one. How it is that an atom of matter can attract another atom, no matter how great the disturbance, no matter what intervening substance there may be; how it will act upon it, or at least behave as if it acted upon it, I do not know, I cannot tell. Whether they are pushed together by means of an intervening ether, or what is the action, I cannot understand. It stands with me along with the fact that when I will that my arm shall rise, it rises. It is inscrutable. All the explanations that have been given of it seem to me merely to darken counsel with words and no understanding. They do not remove the difficulty at all. If I were to say what I really believe, it would be that the motions of the spheres of the material universe stand in some such relation to Him in whom all things exist, the ever-present and omnipotent God, as the motions of my body do to my will—I do not know how, and never expect to know."

WHAT a boon it would be to be free forever from the multitude of pastes and preparations for the complexion, many of which destroy the cuticle which they adorn. Suppose we all try the London Truth's prescription for beauty-making. It says: "Whatever the internal application of water may effect, girls desirous of having a good complexion would do well to apply it to their faces. They should either dip their faces into a basin of very hot water, or apply the water with a sponge. At first they are like lobsters, but in a few moments this is replaced by the tints of peaches and lilies."

Important to A. O. U. W.

We occasionally send complimentary sample copies of the WATCHMAN to the various officers and members of the A. O. U. W. We ask as a special favor of those receiving them, and all interested in the success of the various Lodges will lend us a helping hand in increasing our circulation. Nothing contributes more to the successful working of the A. O. U. W. than the circulation of general Fraternity news, and the best way to secure this is through the WATCHMAN, which is an able and faithful advocate. It is to the interest of the A. O. U. W. that the WATCHMAN be placed in the hands of every Workman, and to accomplish this we must rely in a large measure upon the voluntary efforts and subscriptions.

Liberal inducements will be offered to active and reliable members who will canvass for subscriptions. Sample copies will be mailed free to Workmen on application, all of whom are invited to endeavor to assist in extending the circulation of the WATCHMAN.

Let every Workman into whose hands this notice may come, if not already a subscriber, fill out the subscription blank below, enclose two dollars, and send it to us for a year's subscription.

Mining and Scientific Press.

THE MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS is the leading mining journal in America, and enjoys a larger circulation among the more intelligent operators and workers in the gold fields of the world.

Established in 1860, it has firmly maintained its position as a reliable, progressive journal. The information given in its columns has saved millions of dollars to the practical miners, metallurgists, mill men, mine and shareholders on the Western side of our continent.

Among its contributors are the ablest and most experienced mining engineers, superintendents and practical miners in this country.

The Press gives a condensed summary of Mining News from the most important mining districts of the country.

New processes and methods of mining are described in its weekly issues. New mining machinery and improvements are frequently illustrated and explained in a manner to be of great value to all interested in mining.

As a scientific and mechanical representative of the Pacific coast it is decidedly popular, and a standard journal with the most thrifty industrial people of the Pacific States and Territories. Its authority is of the highest order, and its usefulness in its special sphere unrivaled.

Every public library, mining engineer, metallurgist, mining operator and intelligent mechanic and manufacturer, will find profit by its reading.

Praising.

"Among the minor duties of life," says Sydney Smith, "I hardly know any more important than that of praising where praise is due. It produces more labor and more talent than twice the wealth of a country could ever rear. It is the coin of genius, and it is the imperious duty of every man to bestow it with the most scrupulous justice and the wisest economy." Nothing can be more true than these words of the great essayist, and yet it is equally true, that among the minor duties of life, that of bestowing praise where praise is due, and watching for the most fitting opportunities in this and kindred ways, to help the faltering and discouraged, is just about the one most neglected.

The world is full of men and women and children, who are living unhappily, who are rusting in comparative inaction, who are not doing one-tenth of the good they are capable of doing, for want of genial recognition and a little judicious commendation. They lack faith in themselves, and need the inspirational help that comes from the timely appreciation of others. The fear of failure, makes failure sure. They lose hope and courage, for the simple reason that what little they do seems never to be warmly received.

Moralists in all ages have denounced vanity, but we seriously doubt whether it deserves all the bad names they have heaped upon it. A certain amount of self-esteem seems absolutely necessary to keep men alive and hopeful. It is to man what the oily secretion is to a bird, with which it sleeks and adjusts its ruffled plumage. If any man could hear all that is said about him, that he is stupid, that he is henpecked, that he is a spendthrift and a bad manager, that he has softening of the brain, has said all his best thoughts and keeps on repeating himself; and could be made believe that one half of the allegations made against him were true, he would go out and hang himself or seek oblivion in some other desperate way. The fact is, most men and women need praise, hopeful incentives, words of kindly cheer, as much as flowers need the sun, and we shall never see the best foliage of their energies, unless it is liberally given. It is all very nice to talk about self-reliance, and the beauty of possessing an indomitable will, but there are very few who are perfectly self-contained, and are so indifferent or independent of all social relations that they can get along without being braced and propped up by tender and judicious sympathy and encouragement.

"Praise me, Mr. Pope," said Sir Godfrey Kneller, to the poet of Tinckenham, as the latter sat for his portrait. "You know I can't do as well as I should unless you praise me." Ridiculous as the request may have seemed, there is no doubt that the ugly, crooked little poet took the hint, and got a better picture by complying with the request. Bulwer tells the story in his essay on "The Efficacy of Praise," that the elder Kean, when performing in some theater in this country, came to the manager when the play was half over and said, "I can't go on the stage again, sir, if the pit keeps its hands in its pockets. Such an audience, sir, would extinguish Aetna." Upon this the manager slipped quietly out and told the audience that Mr. Kean, not being accustomed to the severe intelligence of an American au-

The Russian River Flag, published at Healdsburg, says: "We know all our own people will feel under obligations to the members of the A. O. U. W. for becoming responsible for a series of Redpath Lyceum Lectures, the first one by Major Henry C. Dane, to take place at an early date. It is in this way that the various towns of the State are able to have visits from eminent and noted men of the world, such as Oscar Wilde, Beecher, Robert Ingersoll, Lieutenant Danenhower (the survivor of the Jeannette expedition), and others. Major Dane is said to be a thrilling lecturer. Let our teachers, professional men, merchants and citizens generally, sustain the experiment of the Workmen."

Ukiah Lodge held a picnic at Todd's

THE brethren of Fortuna Lodge, No. 19, Napa, are contemplating holding their annual social on the evening of May 30th, but no definite action has been taken. The annual anniversary comes so late in the season that it has been thought by many desirable to change it to the date named.

THE status of the Finance Committee has been slightly changed, and now consists of Messrs. Morgan, Peck and Hayes.

The Occident and the Orient.

The view which we present on this page is interesting in showing to those who have never visited Asiatic countries the effect produced by planting occidental architecture on oriental soil, something like the scene in the engraving may be observed in many ports on the east coast of Asia, where foreign nations have gained access and established their consular offices and trading establishments. There is something incongruous in seeing bits of Grecian and Norman architecture, surrounded by people in Asiatic costumes, and looking down upon waters covered with Asiatic ships. It is an item of progress of European ideas which the designers or the old classic models could never have dreamed of. It is a fact worthy of note, that western civilization has planted such slightly structures on Asiatic soil without a return, which can be regarded as any equivalent, because although representatives of China, for example, are far more numerous abroad than are representatives of foreign nations in China, they do not bring anything enduring to the countries which they visit. Their buildings are of the most wretched chardience, mistook their silent attention for courteous disappointment, and that if they did not applaud Mr. Kean as he was accustomed to be applauded, they would not see Mr. Kean act as he was accustomed to act. The audience, of course, caught the hint, and as their fervor rose, so rose the genius of the actor, and their applause contributed to his success. But words and acts of appreciation must be timely and wisely given, and hence it should become one of the pleasant duties of life in home, school, church, fraternal Order, or in society and business to watch for the golden moments, when we can in this and kindred ways, "lend a hand."

acter, and even the wealthiest of them live in squalid and repulsive apartments. The characteristics of the races, as shown forth in their styles of living and building, have already furnished themes for many interesting essays.

ONE MILLION.—But few persons are aware of what constitutes one million. We will illustrate this with the standard dollar. This piece of money is one and one-half inches in diameter. Place one million of these coins in a straight line, touching each other, and this silver line will reach nearly twenty-four miles. Again, to engage a boy to pick them up, averaging one a second, for ten hours a day, it will take him 417 days before his work would be done.

Apullin' my whiskers and hair,
Aclimbin' up on the table
Into her little high chair.

"The first night that she took it,
When her little cheeks grew red,
When she kissed good-night to papa,
And went away to bed
Sez she, 'Tis the headache, papa,
Be better in the mornin'—bye!
And somethin' in how she said it
Just made me want to cry.

"But the mornin' brought the fever,
And her little hands were hot,
And the pretty red uv her little cheeks
Grew into a crimson spot.
But she lay there just as patient
Ez ever a woman could
Taking whatever we gave her Better'n a grown woman would.

"The days are terrible long and slow,
And she's growin' wun in each,
An' now she's just a shippin'
Clean away out of our reach.
Every night when I kiss her,
Tryin' hard not to cry,
She says in a way that kills me—
'Be better in the mornin'—bye!'

"She can't get thro' the night, parson,
So I want ye to come an' pray,
And talk with the mother a little—
You'll know just what to say;
Not that the baby needs it,
Not that we make any complaint
That God seems to think He's needin'
The smile uv the little saint."

* * * * *
I walked along with the corporal
To the door of his humble home,
To which the silent messenger
Before me had also come;
And if he had been a titled prince,
I could not have been honored more Than I was with his heartfelt welcome
To his lowly cottage door.

Night falls again in the cottage;
They move in silence and dread
Around the room where the baby
Lies panting upon her bed.
"Does baby know papa, darling?"
And she moves her little face,
With answer that she knows him;
But scarcely a visible trace.

Of her wonderful infantile beauty
Remains as it was before;
The unseen, silent messenger
Had waited at their door.
"Papa—kiss—baby!" I—so—tend
The man bowed low his face,
And two swollen hands are lifted
In baby's last embrace.

And into her father's grizz'd beard
The little red fingers cling,
While her husky, whispered tenderness
Tears from a rock would wring.
"Baby—so—sick—papa!"
But—don't—want—you—to—cry
The little hands fell on the coverlet—
"Be—better—in—mornin'—bye!"

The night around baby is falling,
Settling down dark and dense,
Does God need their darling in heaven,
That he must carry her hence?
I prayed, with tears in my voice,
As the corporal silently knelt,
With grief such as never before
His great warm heart had felt.

Oh, frivolous men and women!
Do you know that around you, and nigh,
Alike from the humble and haughty,
Goeth up evermore the cry:
"My child, my precious, my darling!
How can I let you die?"
Ah, hear ye the white lips whisper:
"Be better in mornin'—bye!"

Rev. Leonard S. Green

On the day before the reception tendered her at St. George's, Bermuda, the Princess Louise went on a sketching expedition along the shore, all alone, and, after a time, becoming thirsty, went for a drink to the cottage of a negro fisherman. No one was there but "auntie," and she was busy as could be ironing a shirt for her "ole man" to wear at the reception. The Princess asked for a drink. "Use no time to bodder getting water fo' you," was the reply: "I see feaful busy, for I see bound to see de Queen's chile to-morrow." "But if you'll get me a drink, I'll iron while you do so," said the thirsty Princess. The offer was accepted, the Princess finished the shirt and got her drink, and then revealed her identity. "Fo' de Lord, honey!" exclaimed "auntie," when she recovered from her surprise, "ole man no' no one else ever wear dat shirt again, nohow!"

The aggregate receipts of internal revenue for March, 1883, were $1,425,121 greater than for March, 1882. The increase was distributed as follows: On spirits, $1,736,975; on beer, $42,125. There was a decrease as follows: On tobacco, $218,751; on banks and bankers, $59,137; miscellaneous, $76,091.

Farmer Gregory's Reform.

"Hetty, Hetty! Mehitable Gregory, where are you? Why don't you answer me? 'What do I want?' I want you to hurry right down stairs and go to the spring for a pail of water for the tea-kettle! Here it is, nigh on to supper time; five hungry men coming in from the harvest field; my fire almost gone out, no wood and no water in the house, and this blessed, cross little baby screaming hard enough to drive me crazy, while my head is aching as if it would burst! Here, Tommy, take the basket and run to the lot, like a good boy, and get some chips to make mother a fire; be quick, now!"

Hetty, a pretty, rosy-looking girl of fourteen, came hurriedly down the stairs at this imperative summons, caught up the pail and threw on her sun bonnet, saying as she passed through the room: "I'm real sorry, mother. I forgot all about the water. I was reading a story in the magazine that Mary Greene lent me, and it was just splendid. Oh, mother, I do wish father would let us take something to read. We don't have anything like other folks," and she went out, giving the door a spiteful little bang after her.

Tommy, a brown-faced, barefooted little urchin of seven summers, took the basket, mounted a stick, and trotted off to the lot, while tired Mrs. Gregory drew the cradle to the side of the table and rocked it with one foot while she pared the potatoes and made the biscuit for the men who would soon be in from the wheat field, tired and hungry.

Hetty soon returned from the spring, flushed and breathless from the exertion of carrying the heavy pail so far; Tommy, with the aid of his wooden horse, brought the basket of chips safely to the door, and supper was steaming on the table by the time the men had washed the perspiration and dust from their faces and hands, and made themselves ready for the meal.

"Well, well, I declare, mother," said Mr. Gregory, with a wry face, as he broke open one of the biscuits, "what in the world is the matter with your oven? There's something wrong, somewhere; this biscuit isn't done."

"The wood gave out entirely, and I had to send to the lot for chips, and they never heat the oven well. I do wish, (Giles, that we could have plenty of wood near the house; its hard on the children to have to carry so much wood and water."

"Nonsense; it won't hurt 'em a mite! It's about all they can do toward earning their grub. Sister Sarah and me had to do it when father lived on the old place; we carried water year in and year out from that same spring. I calculate to get up a good pile of wood when the Fall work is through with, but don't for mercy's sake, take harvest time to grumble over your little inconveniences!"

Mrs. Gregory thought a great many things, but said nothing, knowing well, by past experience, that words availed nothing in any difference of opinion between herself and her very excellent, but rather obstinate spouse; silently she took the baby in her arms and seated herself to pour out the tea for the weary workmen.

Little Hetty, however, was not so prudent, and, with bright visions of the pretty book and its interesting stories in her mind, she tried her father on another point.

"Oh, father, won't you please let us take the magazine that Mrs. Greene takes for Mary? It is so nice, and has such splendid stories in it, and the loveliest pictures, too! I'll work just as hard as anything if you will. Mary Greene said the agent told her mother—"

"No, no, I won't; you needn't trouble yourself to tell me what the agent said to Mary Greene's mother. I'm poor enough, goodness knows, without throwing any money away in patterning after Mrs. Greene's extravagant fooleries. They are just ruining their children."

"Well," piped up Tommy, "it's real nice over to their house, anyway; ever so much better than it is here. They've got a splendid swing in the barn for George and Katie, and they've got a well and cistern, and a woodshed with lots of wood in it; and you just ought to see the piles and piles of funny books and papers!"

"Yes," snarled Mr. Gregory, "and 'piles and piles' of reapers and mowers, cultivators and corn shellers, patent churns and washing machines, and a dish washer, too, for all I know; and my gentleman Greene just walks about, I suppose, with his hands in his pockets and takes his ease, while machinery works for him. I'll warrant you he's spending every dollar he gets hold of in some new kink or other, instead of laying it up for his old age! His new-fangled notions will land him in the poorhouse yet, see if they don't."

"It doesn't look much like it yet, father," said John, the eldest son, a youth of sixteen; "he seems to be making money all the time. Mary is going to the Milldale seminary this fall, and he is going to send Dick away East somewhere, to learn to be a civil engineer. Why don't you try some of his labor saving ideas, too, father? You wouldn't have to work near so hard, and it must pay!"

"You needn't try to argue with me. 'Gentleman Greene' can make a befrizzled, befeigned seminary girl of his daughter, and a civil or uncivil engineer of his son if it suits him. I don't set myself up to be any better than my old father was; his ways are good enough for me. He worked on this old place nigh onto twenty years, and was satisfied to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. I'm willing to do the same, if I do have to work like a dog for it!"

"Yes," muttered John, as he rose from the table and walked hastily out to the porch; "yes, and you are willing to keep poor mother and all the rest of us at it, too. Kill her, and let us children grow up dunces! I'd light out pretty quick if it wasn't for mother and dear little Hetty! It's too bad to keep her out of school to make a drudge of her, she learns so fast and is so bright and pretty." And, catching up the milk pail he hurried to the barnyard with a surly, dissatisfied look on his boyish face.

"Giles," said Mrs. Gregory, in a hesitating way, after the men were gone, the table cleared away and the baby asleep in its cradle, "I don't see how in the world I can get along with all my fall work without some help with my sewing. Both you and John must have shirts and winter clothes made, and the children grow so fast that it takes half my time to let out and piece-down for them. I do wish, (Giles, that we could afford a sewing machine. There was an agent here to-day who offers a good one for $50, in easy payments. He told me—"

"There, there; you needn't waste your breath and time in repeating the senseless palaver of some city popinjay, who is too lazy to work with his white hands and earn an honest living, and so sticks on a paper collar, greases his hair, and sets out to gull simpletons into buying those clattering treadmill things! My mother never heard tell of such a thing in her day! She was satisfied to do her work with the tools nater provided for her. She cut and made, and spun and knit for us all with her own hands, and she wasn't too stuck up to do her own scrubbing and soap making, either. If she'd lived, she could show you what it is to do good, honest work."

"Perhaps, (Giles, she would have lived longer if she hadn't worked so hard. You know she was still a young woman when she died."

"I don't know, Mary, I don't know about that. I reckon the good Lord don't take none of us till our time comes. She was a good woman, mother was, and things didn't go well with us boys after she died," and Mr. Gregory rose with a sigh, knocked the ashes from his pipe, and, depositing it on the clock shelf in the corner, seated himself in silence.

For a long time nothing more was said. The jogging of the cradle kept time to the monotonous tick-tick of the clock, and back in the shadows sat (Giles Gregory, entertaining an unwelcome and unwonted visitor. He was arraigned before the bar of conscience, and memory was reading to him the bitter things recorded in the book of the past. She whispered him to look back to the days of his boyhood, to call to remembrance the quiet, patient life that had, indeed, gone out early in its day, only because the heart's best food, love and sympathy, were withheld altogether, or grudgingly given, by those to whom she had, as wife and mother, the best and holiest right to look for it. Ah, how like a sad, accusing angel that mother's face came up before him at the tribunal to which his awakened conscience had summoned him.

Memory reminded him of the dreary years that followed her loss—years filled with carelessness and neglect on the father's part, and utter indifference, if not positive dislike on the part of the motherless children. She said to him, "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap," and asked him if he was not sowing the seed for a like harvest in the hearts of his own children. Then she whispered to him to look at the thin, weary face before him, a face loving and patient, but seamed with the sad lines of care and premature old age, and contrast it with that of the pretty rosy-checked, bright-eyed girl, whom he had promised before God to cherish, love and comfort so long as life lasted, and she asked him how he had redeemed his pledge. She held before his eyes a mirror in which he might see himself in all his repulsive selfishness, his wilful stubborn ignorance, and he shrank from the picture. Oh, faithful conscience—blessed memory—well are you doing your work!

Slowly and gently the hand of the angel of repentance is feeling the way to the blessed fountain whose waters have so long lain sealed. Softly the stout barriers are withdrawn, and its warm tides wash over the world calloused heart like a healing flood, melting all the hardness, and bringing up from the stony, neglected soil the late but sweet blossoms of tenderness and love.

"Mary," said he, suddenly—and there was a strange huskiness in his voice—"the children are all quiet; a'pose we go over to neighbor Greene's a little while?"

"Why, (Giles," she said, with a surprised, gratified look. "I'd like ever so much to go; but I don't see how I can. I must get Tommy's pants done to-night."

"Let it go this time; a visit will do you good. You look clean tuckered out with your work."

Wondering greatly at her husband's unwonted mood, and with a confused idea that there must be a mistake somewhere, she quickly donned bonnet and shawl, called Hetty from her nook up stairs, where she was revelling in the stories that were to her so many glimpses into a veritable "fairy land," made her mind the little ones, and was soon comfortably seated in the cosy parlor at Mrs. Greene's.

The sharp contrast between their own bare living room and this pretty little nook gave another twinge to the already smarting conscience of the awakening penitent. Here were books, pictures, games and toys for the children; an open melodeon, with a music book on the rack, stood at one side of the room; upon the table lay a goodly supply of solid and miscellaneous reading for the older heads, and in one corner, carefully covered, stood the pride of Mrs. Greene's heart, the sewing machine.

After the weather and farm matters had been duly discussed, politics touched upon, and various items of neighborhood interest interchanged, there came a little pause which was broken by Mr. Gregory, who said, with a shy glance at his wife and a little awkward hesitation:

"I say, (Greene, I've come over here to make a sort of confession. I've been having a little 'experience meeting' with my own thoughts to-night; been looking at myself as I s'pose others look at me, in a sort of looking-glass, as it were, and I'm free to confess that I've had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of a cantankerous old curmudgeon—so to speak. I've been a going on, year in and year out, trampling on the hearts and feelings of my wife and children (keep still, Mary, you've no call to deny it; it's just the truth I'm telling); hardening them and hardening myself, too, until I seem to have forgotten, somehow, that the good Lord, when He made me, intended me to be a man! I don't know what it means, but I seem to be just turned all about. I reckon maybe it was thinking of my mother that has melted me, so to speak. You can just mark this down, neighbor (Greene. (Giles Gregory has looked at his own heart to some purpose to-night. I'm going to begin over again, and try to have a home like yours, here. My children shall have books and toys and gimcracks, too, and my wife is going to have a sewing machine; yes, sir, two of 'em if she says so. There, there, Mary. Sho', now, if it ain't a curious thing that a woman will cry just as hard when she's glad as when she is sorry. No, sir, I ain't crying myself, either. I've got a pesky cold in my head, and it makes my eyes troublesome, that's all."

NEW YORK pays $7,000,000 a year for its religion and $22,000,000 for its drinks, which goes to show that New York is having more fun in this world than it will in the next.

"I KNOW why there is no rest for the wicked," said the bad boy, as he slid into a seat at the second table, after the minister and other guests had departed. "It's because the good people took all there was."

"WHAT county do you represent, sir?" asked one individual of another in front of a saloon, one day last week. "I'm not a member of the Legislature," was the reply; "I'm only a private citizen on a drunk."

"IS Miss Blank at home?" asked a faultlessly attired bore, of the new girl. The girl took from her pocket a photograph, carefully scanned it, and after another look at the features of the visitor, answered: "No, sir; she has gone to Europe." He left.

"When I grow up I'll be a man, won't I?" asked a little boy of his mother. "Yes, my son; but if you want to be a man, you must be industrious at school, and learn how to behave yourself." "Why, mamma, do lazy boys turn out to be women when they grow up?"

AN Englishman shooting small game in Germany said to his host that there was a spice of danger in shooting in America. "Ah!" said the host, "you like danger mit your sport. Then you go out shooting mit me. The last time I shoot my bruder-in-law in the schtomack."

The first thing a city man does when he becomes rich is to buy a farm, move into the country, and bankrupt himself trying to raise enough to keep him from starving. A rich country man, on the other hand, buys a brown stone front in the city and becomes interested in stocks with a like result.

A WELL-KNOWN Presbyterian clergyman of one of the lower Delaware counties, somewhat famous as a wit, was approached by a Baptist clergyman with the question: "Well, brother, we're going to have a new bell for our church. What sort would you recommend?" There was a twinkle behind the Presbyterian parson's glasses, and he answered promptly: "By all means, a diving bell."

SOLDIERED MILK, OIL, WHISKY, ETC.—In the market of Jokutok, the Siberian town, whose name has become so familiar to American readers through the story of the ill-fated Jeau nette, it is said milk is sold by the block—frozen. Each block has a string or stick frozen into it for convenience in carrying.

We have already in these columns made mention of the solidification of oil, and now, in addition to these two substances, it is said that some ingenious chemist has succeeded in solidifying whisky, so that it may be carried about in cakes in the waistcoat pocket and resorted to at any hour of the day or night. He must be a very ingenious fellow indeed, who has done anything one half so clever. In this country, at least, the essential element of whisky is alcohol, and alcohol has never been solidified. Even under the greatest pressure it only becomes a viscous fluid. From all that we have ever heard of American whisky, however, we think it very likely that its composition is so peculiar as to make its solidification quite possible, but the man who would carry it about in his waistcoat pocket, must indeed be an ardent opponent of total abstinence.

Riddle.

Though discord and terror I have ever stirred,
And loud in the roll of the thunder been heard,
Without me no banner was ever unfurled,
And the lone wold I changed into a world,
I dwell in the earth, the whirlwind and storm,
I ride through the carnage when slaughter is warm,
In the roar of the strife I always am found,
And, though in its rear, with glory I'm crowned,
In the courts of monarchs I ever reside,
Am found in their people, and seen in their pride,
With the fair virgin all rosy and grand,
I with her lover at the altar do stand,
I roam with the herds over desert afar,
Dwell in the fire and live on the star;
Without me the nun may smile in joy,
And with her beads and candle may toy,
But in all her mirth, her praise and her prayer,
I'll mingle in her grief and in her care;
With me the sailor waters shall roam,
But I cannot guide him back to his home.
I dwell in regions of darkness and wrong,
And in the grim warrior's errors I throng,
I'm ever with the true, abide with the sure,
Start with the rich and end with the poor.

Cruel Game of the Indian Boys.

Mr. Cushing, who is writing some very entertaining articles about the Arizona Indians in the Century, gives the following account of a sport of the Zuni boys: One day I saw some of the children playing at "breaking horses." One juvenile demon was leading a band of four or five others, in the pursuit of a big bristling boar. Lasso in hand, the little fellow watched his chance, and, twirling the flexible cord once or twice rapidly in the air, sent it like lightning toward the head of the boar. The latter made a desperate dash, only to run his snout and forefoot into the coil, which, held by the combined efforts of all, quickly precipitated him, in a succession of entangling somersaults, into the shallow river. In an instant another lasso was dextrously thrown over his hind feet, and his captives, heedless of mud and water, wild with vociferous glee, bestraddled him, and held him down. The leader tore off one of the legs of his cotton trousers, and with this he bandaged the eyes of the squealing animal, wrapping another piece tightly around his snout so as to smother his cries. Thus equipped, the hog was set at liberty. Two of the little wretches jumped astride him, while the others prodded him behind and at the sides. Thus goaded, the poor beast ran uncertainly in all directions, into corrals, over logs, headlong into deep holes, precipitating his adventuresome riders; not, however, to their discomfort, for they would immediately scamper up, drive, push, lead or haul him out, and mount him again. The last

I saw of them was toward evening; they were ruefully regarding the dead carcass of their novel horse.

We hope our young people will not imitate such a cruel game. From such youthful sports, we may expect cruel men. No noble boy will inflict pain upon any of God's creatures for his own amusement.

Household Hints.

CREAM PUFFS.—One half pint cold water, into which rub smooth six ounces of flour; put it into a spider with four ounces of butter, and stir it continuously over a fire not too hot till it is thoroughly cooked. It will resemble a lump of putty and slide off the spider like a pancake. Cool this lump and add four eggs. Beat well, and then drop on a buttered tin in neat, compact little "dabs," far enough apart not to touch when they rise. Have the oven about as hot as for cookies, and in turning them lift up the tin. If you shove them before they are set you will have pancakes. They should be hollow balls. Bake them long enough so they will not fall when removed, and cool them on brown paper as quickly as possible, so they won't sweat. To fill them take one half pint milk, two beaten eggs, one quarter cup of flour or corn starch, wet smoothly, one cup sugar, lemon or vanilla flavor; cook it in a tin pail in a kettle of hot water, and stir it so it will be smooth. When both are cold open the puff with a sharp knife—just a little slit on the side—and fill in one tablespoonful of custard.

RAISIN CAKE.—A delicious and inexpensive raisin cake is made of two eggs, one cup and a half of sugar, two thirds of a cup of butter, one cup of sweet milk, two cups and a half of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder or two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar and one of soda; one cup of raisins, cloves and cinnamon to suit your taste, one cup of stoned and chopped raisins. It is the experience of most cooks that cake made with cream of tartar and soda will keep moist longer than that made with baking powder, but the powder is so convenient to use that it has almost superseded the other. Do not frost this cake, but bake until the top is a dark brown.

OMELETTE.—A delicate omelette is made thus: Beat the yolks of four eggs, and, while beating, mix with them a teaspoonful of flour, two tablespoonfuls of pulverized sugar, a pinch of salt, and any flavoring extract that you choose; this, of course, can be decided with reference to the other dishes which make up the dinner. Beat the whites of the four eggs to a froth and mix with the other. Bake this on a buttered dish; a deep plate will answer; it will rise very light and brown nicely in a very few minutes. Send to the table hot. If you please you may sift powdered sugar over it before sending it to the table.

CHOCOLATE CREAMS.—Two cups of granulated sugar, half a cup of milk. Boil just five minutes; then take it from the stove and stir it till it is stiff; then drop on buttered plates and leave till cold. While it is cooling break a square of Baker's chocolate in small pieces in a bowl, and set it over the teakettle in which the water is boiling. After it is melted, then take the drops and with a fork roll them in the melted chocolate; then lay on the plates till cold.

CORN MUFFINS.—Two cupfuls of corn meal, one cupful of wheat flour, two even tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, three level teaspoonfuls of baking powder and two even teaspoonfuls of salt. Sift these ingredients through a sieve, and wet them with sweet milk to the consistency of a cake dough, remembering that corn meal swells considerably in cooking. A half teacupful of molasses or brown sugar may be added if liked.

DESSERT.—A delicious dish for dessert, to be served with white and fruit cakes, is made by taking one pint of thick, sweet cream, and beating it until it is very light; then add the grated rind of one large lemon, and the juice of two; half a pound of pulverized sugar must then be stirred with the cream. Serve this in wine glasses, or in small china cups that will hold as much as the after-dinner coffee cups.

SEED CAKES.—This recipe was sent me from Boston, and I find it very nice: One pound of flour, one-half pound each of butter and sugar, one cupful of milk, four tablespoonfuls of caraway seeds, two tablespoonfuls of ground ginger, and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Knead stiff, roll out thin, and cut in pieces about four inches long and two wide.

POOR MAN'S CAKE.—One cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of melted butter, one cupful of milk, two cupfuls and a half of flour and a teaspoonful of baking powder, and a little cinnamon or nutmeg, and one small tablespoonful of cornstarch. This will be found to be a very nice plain cake if eaten while fresh.

BUNS.—Three cups of sweet milk, one cup of yeast, one cup of sugar. Mix soft at night. In the morning add one cup of butter, part of a cup of sugar, a bit of soda; then mix, put in the pans and let rise till quite light. Bake same as rusks. Currants may be added if you like. Serve warm.

Health Column.

THE EYE.—If one would have clear and good sight, keep the stomach in a good condition, by the use of simple, nourishing and easily digested food, taken at proper times, and never rob the eye of its great food-stimulus—the light of the sun. Seeing is as natural as breathing, when no obstacles are presented. We breathe without effort naturally, but if the chest is bound and constrained, it is difficult. So with the sight. We have simply to open the eye and it sees naturally and without effort, under favorable circumstances. I know of no better eye-water than pure, soft water, bound with a wet cloth over the eyes, if inflamed or painful. I know of no better medicine than the light of the sun—not so bright and dazzling as to be painful. Even in sickness, with some modifications, a reasonable amount of clear sunlight is an advantage, at least in the room, the eye being covered by a wet cloth, if painful. If we would have good sight, away with stained glass, dark curtains, veils, shades, blinds "banged hair," or all hair through which one attempts to see. Do not attempt to read, study or work when the light is not a good one, always preferring natural light to artificial, doing as little work at night as possible. Do not use a flickering light or read in the cars to save time. Do not use the eyes at the twilight hour, or under any circumstances particularly trying. Open the eyes and let them see, instead of compelling them to see.—Dr. J. H. Hanaford.

RIGHT LIVING.—It is preposterous to suppose that we can live as our sensual impulses may dictate, outrage all common sense, violate all of the laws of our being, and then escape the penalty. We cannot live like swine and rise to the position of angels. Disease is no accident, but has causes as certainly as have bruises, sprains, broken bones, and the like. Derangements, disease, pain, suffering, and premature death are the direct outcome—the results—of the violations of the laws of the body, or the laws of God, in general, visited upon us as penal inflictions. There is no accident or uncertainty in the matter of securing health by obedience to the laws and conditions of health. There is no more uncertainty in securing it than there is in obtaining an education, in learning a trade, or in succeeding in any branch of business. Seeking health is a legitimate business, and is far more promising and certain than the mercantile, since there is no danger from competition, and very few obstacles in the way, save our own sensual weaknesses. As a general principle, the climate is far more favorable than our own habits. We can obey and succeed, or disobey and suffer. In this we are free to act, and are the architects of our physical fortunes, as much as in business.—Dr. J. H. Hanaford.

MULLEIN AS A REMEDY FOR COUGHS.—Dr. Quinlan, of Dublin, who last year read a paper at the British Pharmaceutical Conference on the hemostatic properties of the Plantago lanceolata, has recently investigated the properties of the common mullein, Verbascum thapsus (British Medical Journal, January 27, p. 149). This plant has long been used in Ireland as a domestic remedy for consumptive cough, and Dr. Quinlan has made a series of experiments with a view to determine if it really possesses the valuable properties attributed to it. He finds that when boiled in milk the patient takes the decoction readily, and experiences a physiological want when it is omitted. Its power of checking phthisical looseness of the bowels and the relief afforded to coughing were very marked, so that the patient took hardly any other cough mixture. In early stages it appears to have a distinct power of increasing weight, but in advanced cases Dr. Quinlan remarks that he is not aware of anything that will do this except koumiss.

SNEEZED SIX DAYS.—The Ithaca (N. Y.) Journal, of a recent date, says that Mrs. Harrison Thayer, who lives on Jersey Hill, in the town of Danby, began sneezing Tuesday. After eight hours' continued sneezing the family became alarmed and called a physician, who could not account for the strange attack and could only ease the lady by administering chloroform. But this only effected a temporary cure, for no sooner does Mrs. Thayer become conscious than she begins sneezing again. On Monday she was still at it. A second physician was called in, and both say they never knew such a case before.

BEWARE.—The Sanitary Engineer gives this valuable piece of advice to housekeepers: Beware of disused "conveniences," and don't trust to the memory of any one for filling the visible trap with water. Better remove the whole fixture and seal up its outlet if not wanted for frequent use. Moreover, don't you put such an antiquated device as a pan-closet in a first-class house anywhere. Even if its receiver be ventilated, the vent-pipe may work the wrong way and deceive you.

AN ALLEGED CURE FOR NEURALGIA. Take a desert spoonful of oat meal; place it, in the morning, in a tumbler, and fill up with new milk. Let it stand all day, and take it for supper or for a nightcap. The grains will have been softened by their long soaking in the milk, and it can be eaten with a spoon. This is said, by its advocates, to be a specific against neuralgia, and is strongly recommended for sedentary folks. The remedy would doubtless be very useful for dietic purposes, if for nothing else.

Worth Knowing.

The Postal Changes.

Rates of Letter Postage Under the New Law—The Proposed Postal Notes.

On and after October 1, 1883, letter postage will be two cents for each half ounce, or fractional part thereof, between all points in the United States. The rate will then be the same as drop letters and all others. No changes have been made in rates on other classes of matter.

On and after July 1, 1883, you can obtain at any money order office, postal notes in sums of $5 and under by paying a fee of three cents. These notes will be made payable to bearer without corresponding advices. They will be payable at any money order office within three months of the date of issue. After the lapse of that time the holder can obtain the par value only by applying to the Postoffice Department at Washington.

On and after July 1, 1883, you can obtain a postal order for as large a sum as $100. The present limit is $50. The fees on and after that date for orders will be as follows:

Not exceeding $10	5 cents.
From $10 to $15	10 cents.
From 15 to 20	15 cents.
From 20 to 30	20 cents.
From 30 to 40	25 cents.
From 40 to 50	30 cents.
From 50 to 60	35 cents.
From 60 to 70	40 cents.
From 70 to 80	45 cents.
From 80 to 100	45 cents.

The postal notes will, no doubt, be found more convenient in one respect than the fractional paper currency was, since they can be obtained for any number of cents under $5. There will also be less liability to loss, by theft, than there was when fractional notes were used for transmission through the mails, especially if the department uses judgment in prescribing the size and form of the notes, and in selecting the paper on which they are to be printed. On the other hand they will be less convenient, in that they can only be obtained at money order offices at a considerable sacrifice of time, especially in large cities. It will be observed that after the first of October the cost of sending any sum under $5 postal note will be 5 cents—2 cents postage and 3 cents fee.

Cleaning Watches with Benzine.

A correspondent of the Watchmaker and Metalworker tells how he cleans watches with benzine. The method may be useful for other fine work. He says: I immerse the parts in benzine and dry in boxwood sawdust. This gives the gilding a fresh, new look which I have never been able to get by any other process. The movement must be entirely taken down. The dial screws may be screwed down tightly and left, but all parts united with screws must be separated, so that there will be no places where the benzine can remain and not be at once absorbed by the sawdust.

I have a large alcohol cup, which I fill about half full of benzine, taking down my movement and putting the larger pieces in the fluid. The scape wheel, balance, and delicate parts I treat separately, that they may not be injured by contact with the heavier pieces. I then take the pieces one at a time, and tumble them into the sawdust. In a few seconds they will be dry, when I pick them out and lay them in a tray, using brass tweezers, which do not scratch. I treat all the parts in this way except the mainspring, when a slight use of the brush and clean chamois will remove all dust. Of course, the holes must be cleaned with a pointed peg, and I wipe out the oil sinks with chamois over the end of a blunt peg, but it is not often necessary to clean the pinions with a peg; they will come out of the sawdust bright and clean.

The mainspring must not be put into benzine unless you want it to break soon after. The fluid seems to remove the fine oily surface which a spring gets after working for a time, and which is very desirable to retain; so I clean my springs by wiping with soft tissue paper. If they are gummy I put on a little fresh oil to soften, and wipe off, being careful not to straighten out the spring.

PHOTOMICROGRAPHY. Dr. G. M. Sternberg, U. S. A., delivered a lecture Tuesday evening before the San Francisco Microscopical Society, of which the Doctor is an honorary member. His subject, "Photomicrography," was illustrated with the camera, with the aid of which he exhibited views of the minute parasites which science has connected with diseases of man and animals, prodigiously magnified, showing distinctively every line and member of their infinitesimal organisms. The views were excellent, and were witnessed with profound interest by a large audience.

THE PANAMA CANAL. Unless Mr. Charles Lesseps, who has just been interviewed in New York, presents an unwarrantably rose-colored view of the situation, work on the Panama canal has been pushed forward with an energy and success of which the American public generally has but an inadequate idea. M. De Lesseps reports that the work is less difficult than had been expected, and he professes to be hopeful of its completion in five years' time. No less surprising is his statement that the company is in no want of funds.

Lodge Locals.

Recorders are invited to correspond. Lodges may also find suitable reading here for "Good of the Order."

OUR CITY LODGES.

Yerba Buena, No. 14, and Spartan, No. 36, Visit Franklin, No. 44.

The custom of making fraternal visitations is one of the most pleasant and salutary in our Order, and should be encouraged. On Friday evening, May 4th, a delegation of over one hundred members consisting in about equal numbers from Yerba Buena and Spartan were admitted in a body escorted by Bro. Payson, P. M. W. of Franklin, and were received with honors by the M. W. of Franklin, Bro. Florence. Bro. Quinton, P. M. W., then delivered an address of welcome, followed by Prof. Eastman, in a character reading. Sam Booth, P. M. W., in his inimitable manner, then favored the large company with an original poem which was such a treat that it caused a hearty recall, which was answered by an original poem on our late dog show. Bro. Thompson, M. W. of Yerba Buena Lodge, was then called upon and made some fraternal remarks that were well received. David McClure, Grand Foreman, then delivered extended remarks that were full of instructive lessons and interesting incidents connected with our organization, "as doing a great and good work for humanity." His speech was full of pathos, eloquent words, and fraternal greetings to Workmen, and was listened to with much pleasure and most cordially received. Bro. Hamilton, of 44, then gave a fine basso song, at the close of which recess was had, and fine Havanas were passed, and Bro. May entertained the happy company on the organ, and was followed by Bro. Severance, P. M. W. of Yerba Buena, in his usual interesting manner, by a short speech. Bro. Thompson, P. M. W., by request, read an original poem dedicated to Yerba Buena, Spartan, and Franklin Lodges. Bro. Wilson, M. W. of Spartan, in a delicate and skillful manner, paid a high tribute to Workmen, and particularly to the members of Yerba Buena and Franklin Lodges. Duet, Bros. Hamilton and Eastman, "Larboard Watch." Deputy Danforth made some pertinent and instructive remarks, in the course of which he paid a fine compliment to the WATCHMAN, as a paper that stood at the head in journalism, and should be read in every Workman's family, and closed by reading a piece about the "Bad Boy." Bro. Bordwell, P. M. W. of Excelsior, was very interesting in a few remarks, followed by Bro. Alexander, P. M. W. of Spartan, who made extended remarks that were well received. The meeting was closed with remarks by Bro. Jordan, P. M. W., a reading by Bro. Henderson, P. M. W., and Bro. Breed, P. M. W. of San Francisco, No. 4, and a duet, "Wait Till the Clouds Roll By," by Bro. Hamilton and Prof. Eastman, and the audience joined in the chorus. Bro. Payson, as master of ceremonies, showed great tact and administrative ability in carrying out this most enjoyable programme.

The following lines were improvised for the occasion by Bro. J. D. Thompson:

The poet has said: "The social man,
What he is, let in life may be
If he be true, fulfils the plan
Of "Nature's God," and none but He.

In carrying out this plan divine
You meet to-night a social three,
Franklin and Spartan names that join,
And Yerba Buena, the least not far.

You meet to exchange the greetings true
Of an exalted friendly tie;
Exalted, because united to Protection, Hope and Charity.

Your names to-night recall to mind
Three promises, gem of priceless worth
More precious far than all combined,
The treasures in the "lap of earth."

Their names are these rare names in sooth.
He who possesses them is blessed;
And, having wisdom, courage, truth,
To perfect manhood surely is dressed.

Thus, Yerba Buena anglicised,
Means goodly herb designed to cure
All ills by which we're victimized,
And perfect health and strength insure.

So truth removes each foul disease
And moral plague-spot from the mind,
From every imperfection frees,
That holds in bondage human kind.

Franklin—the name at once suggests
A thought of wisdom to the mind;
A name that ever 'mong the best
Of earth's illustrious sons will shine.

Yea! shine immortal in the sphere
Of science; a particular star
Whose pure, unsullied radiance clear
Commends our reverence from afar.

In fancy view him delving deep
In nature's store-house, and for what
That subtle power that, while we sleep,
Girdles the world with human thought.

And found it too. To him we trace
The electric spark that now, to-night,
Brings all the nations face to face,
And floods their thoroughfares with light.

And more, but time will not permit.
To Spartan now we turn our lay,
Who, though the last, is not a whit
Behind her sisters, so we say.

That, since the time when Sparta's sons
Freed their young State from slavery,
Until this hour the name has won
A place beside true bravery.

Therefore, to-night in friendship warm,
United in friendship's sacred tie,
You typify that perfect form
A pure and noble manhood high.

Let Yerba Buena's goodness shine
And spread her radiant influence round,
Till all, warmed by the glow divine,
Upon the side of truth are found.

May Franklin's wisdom, type of power,
Guide all our councils, "shape our ends,"
Giving new strength to this strong tower,
On which the widow's hope depends.

And spartan's courage, firm and true
As that of Grecian heroes grand,
Who once the tyrant's power o'erthrew
And drove oppression from their land.

May it inspire each brother's heart
And be our armor in the fight;
Nerve every arm to do its part
In battling for the cause of right.

The cause of right, the Workman's cause,
Your cause and mine to watch, defend;
Obeying thus the perfect laws
Of Him who is the widow's friend.

Thus well equipped, our armors bright,
We'll onward march to victory,
Our watchwords ever in our sight,
Protection, Hope and Charity.

Our Order then shall surely stand
A monument through all the years,
To shield the orphan of our land,
Protect the widow, dry her tears.

At last, when time shall end his flight,
And the Great Recorder's book appears
Upon the pages where he writes,
The records of the rolling years.

May we behold these words of cheer
In letter's bright as noonday sun,
The United Workmen's record clear,
Their work is done, well done, well done.

Washington, No. 60.

The steady growth and personnel of the membership of Washington, No. 60, is a tribute to the genius of our Order and status of the men who are enlisted in this great organization. As a class, they are representative men and leading citizens of our community. On Thursday evening, May 3d, the M. W. degree was conferred on one candidate, and one petition received for the degrees. The membership is now 220, and there is hardly a meeting but one or more candidates are initiated or made Master Workmen. A commendable feature of this Lodge and one which is happily quite common with it, was put into practice on this evening. A worthy brother who was sick and poor was aided over by the Lodge paying his dues and assessments, without a dissenting voice. Bro. Minninger, Financier, is a very painstaking and efficient officer, and takes it upon himself to see that all the careless members are square on the books each month.

Triumph, No. 160.

We had the pleasure of visiting this flourishing subordinate on Tuesday evening, 8th instant. In their cozy hall, in Red Men's building, there was a goodly attendance and the M. W. degree was conferred on three young men in a highly creditable manner, each officer rendering the secret and ritualistic work letter perfect. It must be a source of gratification to the members of Triumph Lodge and also to our Order to know that taking all the adverse circumstances into consideration, this Lodge has so signally triumphed over all opposition, which from their inception was most bitter, and for a long time kept up, it being six months from their first preliminary meeting until they were granted a charter. Their membership is now 190, composed of our best citizens, and the most cordial, social and fraternal relations exists between the members.

Bay View, No. 159.

The brethren of South San Francisco are moving along in the even tenor of their way, fairly prosperous. Although their membership is widely scattered, they always have good meetings and a large attendance. Being in a measure isolated, they seem to gather in from all quarters of that locality and have a little world by themselves, and we always enjoy attending a Lodge meeting in South San Francisco.

Noe Valley, No. 185.

The brethren of this enterprising Lodge are preparing to give a grand musical and literary entertainment on Wednesday evening, May 23d, with a terpsichorean accompaniment. The open meetings of this Lodge are very popular and enjoyable. There will be the usual good time.

San Francisco No. 4.

This old pioneer Lodge stands as a beacon light, and an honored monument to the genius of our grand Order. Organized over six years ago under peculiarly adverse circumstances, when the name of Workmen with a great many had a political meaning. The earnest, conscientious, and prudent men called to their circle only those who had moral worth, and no physical disability. The wisdom of this course is now apparent, as during all this time but one member has died, and but one who was or ever had been a member of the Order. Their membership is now 165, and is steadily increasing. On their two last meetings, three candidates received the M. W. degree. The work was accurate and dignified. Under the head "Good of the Order," Bro. Hunter, P. M. W., of Butte Lodge, No. 114, of Meridian, Sutter county, made some very pertinent and appropriate remarks that were well received. One statement about his own Lodge is worthy of record. He said: "We have no sick, and since our organization not a death in our Lodge." The cheering words given by our esteemed brother, in relation to the enthusiasm and interest of our county brethren in workmanship, were quite entertaining. Bro. Curry, P. M. W., of Yerba Buena, was quite happy in a few remarks that were very instructive, in the course of which he related a touching incident of the widow of a Workman, who in gratitude erected a monument at the grave of her husband, and chiseled in the marble our anchor and shield. Brother Breed, P. M. W., took occasion to explain, by request, the working of the Relief Committee.

Fidelity, No. 136.

On Wednesday evening, May 2d, the J. W. degree was conferred on one candidate and a pleasant feature of the work was each officer changed stations. The Master Workman Bro. James looking on in a pleased and dignified manner. We commend this feature as one that should be put into practice more frequently in all our Lodges. Their membership has reached the 365 mark, and we are assured that they will reach and pass beyond 400 soon. Our worthy Deputy, Grand Master Charles E. Wilson, is a member of this Lodge, and for his continued and efficient service in his own Lodge and our Order, merits the compliment, and he will honor the position. While their meetings are not as a rule as well attended as some of the city Lodges, they are always pleasant, instructive, and dignified.

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

Oak Leaf No. 35.

On Monday evening, April 30th, the members of this Lodge with the assistance of their friends, gave an entertainment that was in every respect a rare, enjoyable and intellectual feast. Their large and beautiful hall was filled beyond seating capacity; and that too, after making requisition for all extra seats in the building. Bro. W. N. Miller, M. W., as Master of Ceremonies welcomed the select audience in a few well chosen words, in which he said "We have a double object in view, not only to make the acquaintance of our families, but to let the world, know what we are doing, the great good we hope to do for each other and those who enter our charmed circle." The following programme was given: Remarks, Master Workman W. N. Miller; piano solo, Miss Pedrini; male quartette, Chas. G. Reed, E. D. Farrington, H. T. Smith, W. R. Thomas; recitation, J. W. Osborn, encoired; vocal solo, Miss R. Schimmelpfenig; recitation, Mrs. Alexander Donaldson; vocal duet, Mrs. L. Carey Thornton and Miss K. Carmody. After this rendition J. T. Rogers, Grand Master Workman, delivered a short address that was worthy of the occasion, and well received. Recitation, Mrs. Capt. Beck; comic song, Geo. Alexander; piano solo, Miss K. Carmody; vocal solo, Mrs. L. C. Thornton; piano solo, Miss Bruguire; vocal solo, basso, H. C. Smith. The music and recitation was of a very high order and was a fair representation of the refined and enlightened denizens of Oakland. Oak Leaf, No. 35, has been justly noted for the prominent position it has taken as one of our Grand Subordinates, and her leading members have been recognized as among the most enthusiastic and useful in our Order. Knowing their history it was quite a change to see Bro. David Hirshberg and Chas. H. Dunton, both P. M. W., packing benches and listening as spectators, instead of an oratorical display of their eloquence as usual.

PLACER COUNTY.

Covenant, No. 97.

This Lodge is reported in a flourishing condition. It has thirty-seven members and is expected to reach forty before the end of this month. The members are wide-awake and constantly on the lookout for good accessions. Assessment No. 8 was paid out of the general fund, and the Lodge is proud of the fact that it has not been necessary to assess the members for the past month.

SAN JOAQUIN COUNTY.

Challenge, No. 190.

This Lodge gave its first annual picnic at Locke's Grove, a mile and a half south of Lockeford, Wednesday, May 2d, at which there was a large attendance. In the center of this beautiful grove an excellent dancing floor had been placed in position, over which a canvas tent was pitched, thus making a cool and delightful place for dancing. At about 11 o'clock A. M., Mr. W. B. Ambrose, President of the Day, introduced Wm. H. Barnes, P. G. M., who delivered a very entertaining and instructive address on the merits of the A. O. U. W. After and before the address of Mr. Barnes, the audience was treated to several songs and choruses by the local singers of Lockeford, who did themselves great credit. The Committee of Arrangements had provided swings, etc., for the little folks, purses for foot races and a game of base-ball for the young men who did not dance, and plenty of seats for the old folks, thus providing for the pleasure and entertainment of all. Hat Brannock, of Lodi, after repeated trials, won the box of cigars in the wheelbarrow race. The Lodi third nine and the Lockeford second nine played a match game of base-ball for the ice cream, which resulted in a tie, the score standing 11 to 11. In the afternoon the Lockeford "Seniors" and the Lodi second nine played a match game of base-ball for a purse of $10. The net receipts of the day will probably benefit the treasury of the Lodge to the amount of $125.

Shady Grove, No. 223.

The first annual picnic of Shady Grove, No. 223, was held at Farmington, May 1st. At twenty minutes past 2 o'clock P. M., Wm. H. Barnes, Past Master Workman, delivered an eloquent address in behalf of the interests of the A. O. U. W., telling the object and purpose of the Order. At the close of his remarks the merry throng were obliged to seek shelter in a warehouse from a smart shower of rain. At ten minutes of 3 o'clock P. M., dancing commenced in the warehouse, which by the way, was a model of neatness and beauty in the way of decoration. The building is 40x150 feet; the doorways were tastily clothed with evergreens and bouquets of flowers; at the back end of the warehouse were the words "Welcome" in evergreens; the beams were decorated with red, white and blue screen paper, with chandeliers and large reflecting lanterns depending from them. The floor was in fine condition and the dancers amused themselves exercising to the sweet music furnished by Schmidt & Dryfous' orchestra, until 5 o'clock P. M., when the crowd dispersed in different directions until 8 o'clock P. M., when they gathered again for the grand ball, which was one of the grandest affairs of the season, and a more polite crowd was never assembled together. The Workmen have distinguished themselves on this occasion.

SANTA CLARA COUNTY.

Enterprise, No. 17, and Mt. Hamilton, No. 43.

These two Lodges are making extra exertions to make their excursion on the 16th inst., to Monterey, the event of the season. "They have gone to an expense of $150 to build a dancing floor in the Del Monte grove. It is sixty feet wide by a hundred feet long, and will be polished so as to present the finest surface of any dancing floor in the State. They have engaged the best music that can be found, and those who desire to dance can have the opportunity. They have also made arrangements for carriages, so that those who desire to see all the sights of the historic town and vicinity can do so at a very little expense. Vehicles will be provided seating fourteen, nine, six, four or two persons. By making up parties, the cost will only be a dollar each for the round trip of twelve miles, taking in all the principal points of interest. Coffee and tea will be furnished to excursionists free of charge. Enough cars will be provided so that every person can have a seat, and every arrangement will be made for the comfort of the guests, both on the cars and at the grove. Ample provision is being made for the maintenance of order. People in Santa Clara who desire to accompany the excursion can take the cars at that place without extra charge. Special cars have been provided for lunch baskets and other picnic baggage, so that guests need have no trouble on that account. In fact, the A. O. U. W. are studying up every point on which they can do something to make their excursion attractive. They will probable carry twice as many people this year as they did on their last excursion."

SHASTA COUNTY.
Redding No. 72.

The Republican Free Press says: "Preparations for the Workmen's picnic on the first day of May were made with fear and trembling, owing to the unsettled state of the weather. However, full and complete preparations were made, and when the gay picks nicers assembled on the ground their eyes were greeted with beautiful and artistic decorations for the occasion. The grand stand was arched over and trimmed with fir, cedar, and yew, with the mystic words, "Charity, Hope, Protection," and the emblems, the anchor and shield, prominently and beautifully displayed, while the May-pole, twined about with roses and green, was encircled at its pinnacle with a wreath suspended by four pieces of green-covered cord. On no similar occasion have such effective decorations been made, and great credit is due the ladies who composed the committee for that purpose. Promptly at 10:30 o'clock P. M., the members of the Order started from their hall in the wake and under the influence of the soul-inspiring music of the Redding brass band; arriving in good order, the programme was carried out. Following the prayer, by Rev. I. N. Waterman, a choral salutation was rendered, when Dr. O. J. Lawry, the Orator of the Day, delivered an eloquent and well-appreciated speech on the origin, growth, and triumphs of the Order." This was followed by May Queen exercises and the usual picnic sports, winding up in a furious attack upon the doughnuts, cold ham, chicken, hard-boiled eggs, etc. It was one of the most enjoyable picnics ever held by the Redding Lodge. The ball in the evening, was well attended.

SONOMA COUNTY.
Healdsburg, No. 31.

Although the weather was threatening, and several heavy showers fell during the day, the May Day picnic of this Lodge was a brilliant success. The Russian River Flag says: The parade of children on May Day, amidst the flutter of dresses and bright ribbons, roses and wreaths, has in all civilized countries and times had its charms. But was it an unpleasant sight to observe the fathers and brothers and uncles also in line, on Tuesday last, as members of the Order of Workmen. Was it not an honor to the Workmen to be found in such company, and was it not a tribute to the pure and temperate character of their society.

The brass band, looking improved in their uniformed straps and music cases, and playing marches so nicely as to be praised generally, led the van, followed by Workmen and Sunday schools, and a long procession of teams and miscellaneous people. At the grounds, a lovely grove, kindly loaned by Mr. Hassett, Elder Burnett, P. M. W., of the lodge, offered an eloquent prayer. Then the May queen was crowned, and ribbons beautifully wound around the May pole. Grand Master J. T. Rodgers, of the Workmen, who is also a resident of our neighboring city, Ukiah, and the handsomest man in the Order, excepting, of course, the Master of the Healdsburg Lodge, Bro. Elijah Vaughn, delivered a short and eloquent oration. After this there was a picnic and games, winding up with a ball in the evening.

SUTTER COUNTY.
Butte, No. 114.

Brother R. C. Hunter, P. M. W., reports Butte No. 114, situated at Meridian, Sutter county, in a very flourishing condition, with a membership of 35, and an average attendance of 22. Although this Lodge has been organized over four years, there has never been but two suspensions, and no death. This is a very gratifying showing. They expect to have a grand celebration on the Fourth of July, consisting of a grand parade and literary exercises, and will be joined by other kindred organizations who are invited to participate. The matter is in the hands of an efficient committee, and no doubt will prove a grand success.

YOLO COUNTY.
Yolo No. 22.

The Yolo Democrat says: "There was a large crowd at Coil's Grove Tuesday [May 1], and from what we saw of them they seemed to be enjoying themselves to the utmost. At half-past nine in the morning, the Workmen, headed by the Woodland Band, marched in procession up and down Main street, after which almost every vehicle in Woodland was brought into requisition to take the crowd to the grove. The programme of the day was then gone through with. The principal feature was the oration delivered by Wm. H. Jordan, Past Grand Master Workman of California. The remarks of Mr. Jordan were very interesting, and were attentively listened to by a large audience. About noon the dancing commenced, and continued until sundown.

DEGREE OF HONOR.

Evening Star Lodge, No. 23.

Thursday evening, May 3d, this Lodge held their meeting at California Hall, 417 Kearny street, and will hereafter meet on the first and third Thursdays of the month. The charter is still open, and Workmen, their wives, daughters, mothers, and sisters are invited to join. Although organized in the Hall of Harmony, No. 9, yet its management is independent of Harmony Lodge. California Hall is centrally situated, nicely furnished, and of medium size. At the meeting on Thursday two candidates took the degree and several more are in waiting. After the degree had been conferred music and singing was given by the members. Deputy F. S. Poland was present. He takes a great interest in the D. of H. The next meeting will be held on the 17th inst.

Jurisdiction of Nevada, Utah and Montana.

The Grand Lodge of A. O. U. W. held its session May 8th and 9th at Eureka. The session was harmonious and chiefly occupied with the enactment of laws applying to subordinate Lodges. The election and appointment of Grand officers for the ensuing year were as follows:

J. W. Kinsley, of Fidelity Lodge, No. 3, of Ogden, Utah, as Grand Master Workman.

W. M. Bullard, of Alta Lodge, No. 4, of Wickes, Montana, as Grand Foreman.

W. T. Burns, of St. James Lodge, No. 9, of Winnemucca, Nevada, as Grand Overseer.

C. L. Broy, of Alpha Lodge, No. 1, of Eureka, Nevada, as Grand Guide.

F. H. Jones, of Sweetwater Lodge, No. 2, of Green River, Wyoming, as Grand Watchman.

Wm. Sutherland, of Storey Lodge, No. 3, of Virginia, Nevada, as Grand Trustee.

R. W. Wood, S. W. Chubbuck and E. N. Robinson, as Supreme Lodge Representatives.

The Grand Master Workman made the following appointments:

Nevada—Grand Medical Examiner, Dr. F. M. Coon; Deputy Grand Master, P. J. Dunne.

Montana—Grand Medical Examiner, Dr. C. K. Cole; Deputy Grand Master, W. M. Bullard.

Utah—Grand Medical Examiner, Dr. J. D. Carnahan; Deputy Grand Master, P. H. Emerson.

Wyoming—Grand Medical Examiner, Dr. J. H. Maynard; Deputy Grand Master, Wm. Hale.

Grand Lecturer, A. G. Cowan, of Gold Hill Lodge, No. 2.

DISTRICT DEPUTIES.

Montana—Silver Bow County, G. B. Sarchet; Lewis and Clarke, J. A. McDougald; Jefferson, Lyman Rowley; Gallatin, S. W. Langhorne; Meagher, E. W. Cook; Beaverhead, L. D. Beebe; Deer Lodge, Addison Smith; Madison, M. H. Lott; Northern Montana, Max Waterman.

Utah—L. B. Stephens, for Summit, Weber and Salt Lake Counties; Julius Jordan, for Washington County; A. G. Sutherland, for Utah and Juab Counties.

Wyoming—Uinta County, F. M. Foote; Sweetwater, L. C. Sweet; Laramie, F. C. Thomason.

COMMITTEES.

On Finance—S. W. Chubbuck, P. J. Dunne and H. W. Hand, of Nevada.

Appeals and Grievances—J. R. Shaw, J. L. Campbell, of Nevada, and Geo. Arbogast, of Salt Lake.

Laws and Supervision—Jesse Knight, of Evanston, Wyoming; A. G. Sutherland, of Provo, Utah; and W. A. Ralston, of Butte, Montana.

The Grand Lodge voted to meet next May, at Salt Lake City, Utah.

NEW LODGE INSTITUTED.—At Walker Lake, Nevada, on the evening of the 5th, District Deputy Grand Master Workman Hinds, of Anchor Lodge, Mason Valley, assisted by W. T. Mattingly, of Esmeralda Lodge, Candelaria, organized a Lodge of Ancient Order of United Workmen in Hawthorne. The following officers were elected: John C. Todman, P. M. W.; F. A. Angell, M. W.; E. Van Alstine, For.; E. W. Taylor, O.; Charles E. Ashborn, Rdr.; J. W. Stein, Fin.; F. P. Weeks, Rec.; John Bennetts, G.; James Cook, I. W.; A. Urquhart, O. W.; L. Stoner, E. Van Alstine and J. Bennetts, Trustees; J. C. Todman, E. W. Taylor and F. P. Weeks, Committee on By-laws; J. W. Stein, J. Bennetts and L. Stoner, Committee on Supplies, etc.

The Jurisdiction of Illinois.

The Grand Recorder, C. P. Hatch, closes his report to the Grand Lodge of Illinois, recently held at Rock Island, as follows:

The Lodges in general are in excellent condition, and have been more prosperous than for years past.

Since the advent of the present year our death losses have been exceedingly low. During the year we had only sixty-one deaths, which required thirteen assessments to liquidate these claims.

Our membership is larger, by about 2,500, than last year, and yet our death losses have decreased thirty-five per cent., and our assessments have been three less than those of last year.

In November, I had the gladdening news to send out to the Lodges of "No Assessment for November," and I have no doubt but what it made every one happy. Our death rate for the last year is only 5 1/2 per 1,000 members.

The work of the year has been considerably increased by the collection of a relief assessment for the Supreme Lodge, and the correspondence has been heavier than heretofore. I have sent out 7,448 receipts and have written 9,037 letters to the various Lodges.

The total receipts of the General Fund are $2,055,56 more than for the year previous.

The total receipts of the General Fund are $14,668.43, of which about $3,000 are on account of supplies.

There has passed through my hands the sum of $153,625.96.

Twenty-six hundred and seventy-four beneficiary certificates have been issued from this office.

Warrants in the amount of $134,000 have been issued in payment of death losses, and all deaths that occurred in our Order during the past year, and which have been properly proven and reported to me to this date, have been paid.

The average age of our membership is 36 years, 10 months and 29 39-100 days.

The average amount of money paid into the Beneficiary Fund by brothers deceased, is $38.74.

Twenty-nine new Lodges have been instituted during the year.

All claims were paid within an average time of 38 1/4 days after death.

Our Order is represented in 66 counties in this State.

There are 232 Lodges in this jurisdiction, with a membership of 11,809.

Other Jurisdictions.

The Pacific Overseer, published in Portland, and doing a good work in the web-foot country, says: Quite a revival is now taking place among the older Lodges, something that has been needed for the past year. We hope the good work will go on.

The Buffalo Lodges, and Grand Lodge officers, are making arrangements for the reception of the Supreme Lodge, which will meet in that city early in June.

Wisconsin's A. O. U. W. Lodges are numbered up to 96, with not a break in the list. Membership of the Jurisdiction, 4,442.

The Texas Grand Lodge was in session February 13th, 14th, and 15th. The Order is in splendid condition in that State and growing rapidly. The present membership is 1,675, and indications are that 2,000 will soon be reached. No Lodges are permitted to be instituted in the yellow fever districts.

The Ohio Journal says that the loyal branch of the Order in Iowa is prospering.

The Grand Recorder, of Ohio, reports in that jurisdiction, membership in good standing April 1st, 3,347, a gain of twenty-five in March. He also states that he issued thirty-two Supreme Legion Beneficiary Certificates April 10th.

Missouri has fifty-five Legions, and Washington Territory now has three Legions.

The Grand Lodge of Michigan has paid 132 death claims of 2,000 dollars each, up to December 31st, 1882.

The expenses of the Grand Lodge of Michigan for the past six years have averaged less than 5,000 dollars per annum.

Michigan had two assessments in April; there were 151 Beneficiary Certificates issued during the month of March. Grand Master J. A. Childs, and Grand Recorder Robert Newcomb, of Oregon, have made a fraternal visit to the Lodges in the eastern part of the State, and everywhere report the Order flourishing.

The members of the jurisdiction of New York are asked to contribute a nickel a head to raise a fund to be disbursed in the entertainment of the Supreme Lodge during its session in Buffalo, in June. There is nothing small about the New York brethren.

The largest Lodge in the jurisdiction, and probably the largest in the Order is Quaker City, No. 116, of Philadelphia, having 1,126 members. During the year it had 54 initiations, 27 withdrawals, 33 suspensions, 12 deaths, and 1 rejection. It expended $211 in relief, has a general fund of $12,219, and paid to the beneficiary fund $19,917.

The membership of Maryland, New Jersey, and Delaware, constituting one jurisdiction, is 2,924.

State of the Order in Michigan.

The House of Representatives, of Michigan, lately passed a resolution requiring the Attorney General of the State, to submit certain questions, 29 in number, to all co-operative and mutual benefit associations organized under the laws of that State. The Grand Recorder of the A. O. U. W., was on April 3d, served with the notice, to which an answer was required within 30 days. By the return made by the Grand Recorder, a very gratifying state of affairs is shown. The Grand Lodge was organized Feb. 27, 1877, and incorporated Jan. 7, 1878. Up to Dec. 31, 1882, 8,205 certificates had been issued, 17 of which were not taken, and 1,116 have been suspended and not reinstated. On Dec. 31, 1882, there were in good standing, 6,937 members. There have been 135 deaths, of which 132 have been paid up to that time. In answer to three questions to the Attorney General's questions, number of claims rejected, with reasons for each, to which the answer was, none. Number compromised, with reasons? Answer, none. Commissions paid? Nothing. Paid for salaries, $1,940 per annum. Paid Grand Master Workman for his expenses, $130. The Grand Recorder furnished a statement to show that $29,738.44 general fund collected since the organization has been collected, and that no officer or Trustee had any interest, directly or indirectly, except to the amount of $2,000, being his own certificate.

The Grand Lodge of Michigan, is to be congratulated on this magnificent showing.

Grand Recorder McNair's monthly report for Pennsylvania, dated April 15th, contains the following items: Amount collected on Assessment No. 6 and back beneficiary, $12,976; collected on Assessment No. 7 and back beneficiary, $13,287; balance carried from Assessment No. 5, $5,493; total, $31,756; disbursed, $24,007; balance in hands of Grand Recorder, $7,749.

General Fund on hand March 1st, $157.27; received during month, $169.81; total, $327.08; disbursements, $244.90; balance on hand, $82.18.

There were 23 rejections by the Grand Medical Examiner, and four by Lodges or committees.

FRATERNITY is a big word. It means more than a brotherhood or a community of men of the same class, profession, pursuit, or belief. It means brotherhood and husbandhood, for while it tenderly provides for the brother or sister in distress, watches by their bed during the weary vigils of sickness, and helps smooth the pathway to the tomb, it reaches beyond the grave and provides for the wants of the widow and orphan and furnishes them the means of a decent independence. Fraternity does not even stop there, for it is busily engaged in furnishing homes and asylums for the orphans, bread for the hungry, help for the indigent, labor for the needy and unemployed and in all ways trying to make the world more bright and beautiful.

THE national debt was reduced last month about $3,000,000. This is about one-fifth of the reduction in April of last year.

In Memoriam.

Alviso Lodge, No. 77, A. O. U. W.

At a regular meeting of Alviso Lodge, No. 77, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Supreme Master Workman of the Universe, to remove from our midst, by death, our brother, Charles Beger, therefore be it Resolved, By Alviso Lodge, No. 77, A. O. U. W. that while we bow with submission to the will of our Heavenly Father we do not the less mourn for our brother who has been taken from us.

Resolved, That in the death of brother Charles Beger, this Lodge has lost a good and true brother and the community a good citizen.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of this Lodge be extended to his family in their affliction.

Resolved, That the charter of this Lodge be draped in mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Lodge, and a copy sent to the family of our brother, and the PACIFIC STATES

WATCHMAN.

Among the Icebergs.

Notwithstanding the great improvement in the construction of steamships, by which the trip across the Atlantic has been materially shortened and the comfort of the passenger greatly enhanced, there are many dangers attending it. Aside from the rocks and shoals of the shore, the mountainous seas and hurricane winds, dense fogs and possibilities of collision with other vessels, there is still the fear of icebergs to worry the timid traveler. The immense bergs which come down from the northern regions, set free from the great living glaciers sometimes come in groups which scatter about a portion of the ocean in the tracks of the transcontinental steamships. Great care has to be exercised to prevent collision with them, and no situation causes more anxiety to the shipmaster than the presence of these picturesque but dangerous masses of ice. Many readers will remember how a very large steamer collided with one a couple of years ago, and the whole bow of the steamer was torn away. Nothing but her compartment system of construction saved her, as she came into port with her forward compartments filled with water. If a steamer traveling at a speed of 20 miles an hour, as is common now, strikes one of these huge floating obstructions, it is the same as striking a rock, and in a region of bergs it is customary to slow down. Frequent tests are made by thermometer of the sea water, as by this means they can tell the proximity of bergs. At night and in thick weather the tests are carefully and frequently made. A whaling captain has told the writer that he could tell when one was within three miles of him by taking a bucket of freshly drawn sea water. Still, with every precaution, accidents sometimes happen. Our engraving depicts a scene not uncommon on the Atlantic, where a large passenger steamer close in among bergs.

Icebergs are huge fragments of glaciers detached by the action of the water from the lower end of the glacier. Greenland, from the great number of its glaciers, is the fatherland of the iceberg. Icebergs are far more numerous in the northern than in the southern polar regions. They bring with them in their journeys masses of rock, earth and sometimes seeds of plants. Polar bears and seals are sometimes thus transported from one region to another. Icebergs are often of prodigious size and most remarkable shape. They have often been observed to measure 300 feet in height. Only one eighth of the mass is above the surface of the water. Icebergs are more particularly dangerous to navigators in polar seas. These dangers are extended southward by the Labrador current, which brings great numbers of them into the Atlantic, where they are melted by the warmer waters of the gulf stream, and drop their loads of gravel and stone upon the banks off Newfoundland. The streams of water from their sides are always fresh. On the Pacific, icebergs are never met with until we get way down by Cape Horn, where they are sometimes seen coming from the Antarctic. Up north, near Behring straits, great ice fields and ice floes are met, but none of the large bergs such as are encountered in the Atlantic. The reasons given for the absence of large bergs in the North Pacific is that the waters of Behring sea are shallow and the land about it low, conditions unfavorable for the formation of icebergs. Of course there are glaciers giving birth to icebergs, but they are small affairs compared with what are met with in the other ocean. The large steamers crossing from San Francisco to Japan and China are liable to cyclones or typhoons at certain seasons of the year; but the trade winds prevail most of the months, and bad weather is not then experienced. Therefore the passage is usually pleasant. We have never had a serious disaster on and listen to the ecstatic notes of the little songsters among the blossoms of the orchard, what it would be to look from your window only upon a noisy and crowded street, with its close atmosphere and unsavory odors, and to send your little children out to play in a planked yard inclosed by a board fence, or else to the sidewalk, with its countless risks to life and limb, and its more than doubtful companions. Yet the summer, now so near at hand, will bring nothing better to hundreds and thousands of women whose love of nature is not less intense than yours and mine, and whose longing for the simple pleasures we hold so lightly might astonish us, could we hear it expressed. I know whereof I speak, for I have been numbered among them, and I often wonder that the pleasant homes people who have a whole retinue of servants at home, who cannot wait upon themselves and who are dependent for their happiness on a constant succession of festivities and excitements are not desirable guests. We will leave them out of the question.

But find among your acquaintances some woman accustomed to do her own work, and ask her to spend a fortnight with you. Your experience will be very different from mine if she does not take up the dish-towel and dry the cups and plates as you wash them, dust the sitting-room and put it to rights while you are in the kitchen, proving herself a willing helper in many ways.

And then how charming is her admiration of all that is dear to your surroundings!

You appreciate the delights of a country life doubly when you see her enthusiasm, you begin to realize that the lines are fallen to you in pleasant places when the very sunshine and the fresh air the trees, the birds, the rippling water and the distant mountain all come in for a share of her song of praise. She will do you good in other ways as well; she will bring to you new thoughts and ideas from a different path of life; the breath of another atmosphere that is always refreshing and invigorating, and in this way give as much as she receives.

And her children who would not include them in the invitation; the little city children to whom the country is a sort of fairy land? It has always seemed to me that one of a mother's dearest privileges is the making of happy memories for the future years of the children whom God has given her. What if you can do this beautiful work for other little ones too? I think of a dear friend who comes to us every summer who is, perhaps, the ideal of a welcome guest. Her little flock trained to habits of obedience from their babyhood, and pleasant in temper as in manners, make the sunshine brighter with their smiling faces as we meet them at the gate. Off they dart to revisit each familiar spot, to make the acquaintance of the new colt and calf, to inspect the orchard and see what it has in store for them. Years hence, when these children are men and women, burdened, perhaps, with care acquainted with sorrow, will not the memory of that route, though some pretty heavy weather is occasionally met with.

Summer Visitors.

[Written by I. H.]

Did you ever spend an entire summer in a city? If not, try to fancy what it would be to be shut out from all the pleasant sights and sounds which make life itself delightful in our country homes; never to see the tender tints of the springing grain, nor to search for the early wildflowers bending in the breeze; never to watch the old, yet ever new miracle of the unfolding leaf, the Easter awakening of nature, after the sleep of the winter months. Picture to yourself one of these delicious spring mornings, when you drink in the soft, fragrant air, scattered through our mountain valleys are not filled all the summer long with visitors of this class. Many of them are, but there are others, where the dwellers are yet to learn how much happiness they may give and receive by the exercise of a little hospitality toward their city friends.

"Oh," says a busy house-wife, "visitors are so much trouble. I have not time to entertain them."

Now just there, my good sister, let me beg to differ from you. Visitors are no trouble at all if only they are of the right kind. Every woman is tempted to think that she has more to do than her neighbors. Avoiding that error I shall not say I lead a busier life than yours, but only that I believe my time is quite as fully occupied, and I find my summer guests a help and not a hindrance. Of course one must choose wisely; these happy days come back to them like cold water to a thirsty soul? It is a pleasant thought, that when our earthly work is done, and we have passed away, we may still live in the grateful recollection of those whose childhood we have helped to gladden.

Perhaps I am particularly fortunate in my friends. Every young visitor may not be like the dear girl who finds the stocking-basket in my absence, and sitting under a tree amuses herself by darning all the socks for the household, like another, who takes the iron from my hand and says, "I can do this for you, and I know you can find something else to do;" but there are more such people in the world than we may think, until we begin to look for them. Possibly—though of this I am a little doubtful—they may even be found in other circles.

PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN.

Issued on the 1st and 15th of each month.

Favorable to Advertisers

By consolidating the large subscription lists of the Pacific Workman with the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN our advertisers gain an unusually great advantage. We doubt if any one weekly newspaper has ever been circulated to as many different readers on this coast, as have been served heretofore by the Workman and WATCHMAN together. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns cities of the coast.

We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

OFFICIAL RECOMMENDATION.

Resolutions adopted by Grand Lodge of Cal., Feb. 3, 1881
WHEREAS, the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, the pioneer A. O. U. W. advocate on this coast, without official aid, has long rendered able and valuable services for the good of our glorious organization, we earnestly recommend that our Lodges and the brethren individually patronize the WATCHMAN as liberally as circumstances will justify

Memorial Day.

Before the next issue of the WATCHMAN Memorial Day will have come and gone. We cannot let an occasion, fragrant with such tender and beautiful fraternal sentiment, pass without a word. Soon after the close of the late war, two or three Southern women went out one day to place a handful of flowers upon the graves of their valiant sons, and in a moment of generous impulse, cast a few blossoms upon the lowly resting place of an unknown Union soldier. The telegraph told the graceful deed all over the land, and almost simultaneously the national heart caught the spirit of those Southern women. Catching, as it would seem, an inspiration from the skies, which let fall their rain and sunlight alike upon all fields, and from that infinite Love which is no respecter of persons; the heated passion and resentment which seemed inclined to rankle for a while, and remember only their own dead, began to cool and pass away, and now throughout the length and breadth of the land the sweet hand of charity and forgiveness, makes no distinction, in its floral tribute, between friend and foe. And why should it? Death glorifies the brave and the true-hearted. It purifies and transfigures. It transforms the mortal into the immortal. The angels are born of death. And so we honor the dead even when we may think they died in a bad cause. The wild grass and woodland flowers which creep over the graves of the brave boys who wore the blue, and the brave boys who wore the gray, matting them under one common sod, is a beautiful emblem of the healed wounds and hurts of our people. It is well, then, to make the 30th day of May our National All-Souls-Day, when the North and the South, the white rose of the House of York, and the red rose of the House of Lancaster, shall meet at the battle graves of the Republic, and under the same flag, stirred by the same airs, mutually remember our brave dead, and incite each other into a generous and patriotic rivalry for the future welfare of our common country.

It is to the honor of Auguste Comte, that in framing his religion of Humanity, he placed in the Calendar of Saints, the mechanics and artisans, the hewers of wood and drawers of water, the delvers and drudges who composed the vast army of toil, and appointed a day of remembrance, when their names should be rescued from the purgatory of neglect and forgetfulness. And why not? The man who made a good boot, or neat-fitting coat, or even raised a patch of potatoes did more good for humanity than half the hermits whose names have been canonized as saints. And in like manner, when we go forth on our National Memorial Day to remember our brave dead, it should be with the feeling that the sod which covers a private soldier's dust, is as hallowed as the monument that stands upon the ashes of his General, and place as piously upon it our little gift of flowers. The nameless dead! What a mighty host! Who heard their country's call and left plow, shop and desk, whispered words of eternal love to wife or lover, received the parting blessings of father and mother, and, then, hurried to the front, were in the weary marches, shivered around camp-fires, were torn by shot and shell, pined and died in distant prison camps, or slowly wasted away under burning fevers in the hospitals, and whose graves are unknown. Forget them not; for their blood and valor helped to swell the broad and peaceful river of our national glory and honor.

A Beautiful Custom.

There is a Roman Catholic legend, that a pilgrim on his return from Jerusalem, when within the neighborhood of Rome saw flames issuing out of the ground, and heard the lamentations of souls in purgatory beseeching him to implore the monks of Clugny to put up prayers and intercessions in their behalf. Whereupon Odito, Abbot of Clugny, instituted the practice of once a year attending to this important duty. Such was the origin of All-Souls-Day. For centuries, the second day of November, was set apart to supplicate for the souls of the dead. As most of them were supposed to be doomed to pass through the cleansing fires of purgatory, in order to get rid of some taint of earthly ill, which still clung to them, it was thought by their living friends that something could be done to hasten their deliverance. Under the expanding and liberalizing influences of time, the purgatorial idea has been dropped, and All-Souls-Day, especially among Protestant churches, simply became a day to remember the dead. It was a long time the custom to go out into the cemeteries and sing and pray; not from any foolish fancy of making the condition of departed souls any better, but to brighten more vividly a sense of the good they had done, or so far revive the memory of their evil deeds, that in a broader light of charity all may learn how to excuse their follies, which may largely have been owing to their environments, and help rescue their name from the shadow of reproach. It is said the early Christians often held the sacrament of the Lord's supper, the most solemn of all the ceremonies of the church, in the graveyards, believing the souls of the faithful dead assembled with them, and in some mysterious way participated in the holy rite. One of the customs of Quaker City Lodge, of Philadelphia, A. O. U. W., is that of once a year holding a memorial service in honor and remembrance of its members who have died during the preceding twelve months. Akin to this memorial service is the Masonic "Lodge of Sorrow," with which many of our readers are familiar. For many years the Masons have been accustomed to hold these sad and beautiful convocations, and they have been fraught with great good. The custom that sprang up at the close of the war spontaneously all over the country, of remembering our brave, heroic dead, by sprinkling flowers on their graves, has been adopted by the Grand Army of the Republic, and the 30th day of May, set apart for the beautiful observance. We would gladly see all our Lodges adopt this, or some form of memorial service, for those who were united with us in fraternal ties but have fallen by the way. It would serve, not only to recall their virtues and good qualities, but would bring us all more closely together in a tender sentiment and memory, and teach us more keenly to perceive and appreciate each others worth, and more kindly and charitably to bear with the infirmities of the living.

Deputy Grand Master.

Our new Deputy Grand Master, Charles E. Wilson, was born in the town of Bradford, State of Maine, in 1839, and is a lineal descendant of Roger Wilson, one of the joint stock company who fitted out the Mayflower, which brought the Pilgrim Fathers and Mothers to Plymouth rock. He comes of a hardy race; his father now 83 years old, hale and hearty, and his mother dying at the age of 73. He has two brothers and four sisters residing in the State of Maine, and one brother, Superior Judge J. R. Wilson, in San Francisco. When a boy he worked on his father's farm nine months in the year, and attended the "district school" during winter. At the age of seventeen he practically began the struggle of life on "his own hook," working part of the year in a saw-mill, or on a farm to earn money enough to clothe himself and pay for schooling at an academy. Served his country nearly three years in the Union army. At the close of the war he read law for two years in the office of his cousin, L. A. Wilson, of Bangor, Maine, and was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of that State, in October 1867, and soon after sailed from New York for San Francisco. On arriving in this State, he went to Stockton, and spent a year, serving part of the time as deputy county clerk, under H. T. Dorrance. Came to San Francisco in July of 1868, and immediately entered upon the successful practice of his profession. Bro. Wilson is one of the prominent members of the San Francisco bar. Is a Trustee of the Workmen's Guarantee Fund, and is now serving as Judge Advocate on the staff of the Department Commander of the Department of California, G. A. R. His appointment as Deputy Grand Master, is a fitting recognition of his eminent abilities, and meritorious services in the Order.

A COMPLIMENTARY ADDRESS.—The Mendocino Dispatch says that J. T. Rogers, Esq., of Ukiah, Grand Master Workman of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, has recently received a highly complimentary address from his brethren of Westport Lodge, No. 207, and in addition to the address there was a letter asking an official visit from the Grand Master at the time of the installation of officers for the ensuing term, in the early part of July. We have no doubt the request will be complied with, if his official duties will permit, and we predict a gala time for the good people of Westport on that occasion.

THE experience of all well regulated life companies has established the fact that the death rate is about 10 in every 1,000. In the Ancient Order of United Workmen in the State of New York, the Grand Medical Examiner reports that of 5,000 members admitted during the years of 1881 and 1882, only 16 died. This is a death rate of only two and three-fifths in each 1,000 for a year. Comment is unnecessary.

THE members of Excelsior Lodge, No. 126, have purchased a lot on Mission street, between Nineteenth and Twentieth, and propose to erect a hall. This is a step in the right direction. Many of our Lodges would find it great economy in the long run to own their halls, as the rent of the lower story would be a steady and reliable income.

Grand Lecturer.

As already stated, Grand Master J. S. Rogers has appointed Hon. Henry Vrooman, of Oakland, as Grand Lecturer. No better appointment could be made. The brethren of the Order may form some idea of his pluck and energy when they learn that, about nine years ago, he was working in a smithy, forging horseshoes and hobnails; and at the same time wrestling with Blackstone and Kent. Soon after admission to the bar of the Supreme Court of this State, he came to the head of his profession, and filled with distinguished ability the position of City Attorney of Oakland and Prosecuting Attorney of Alameda county. As a member of the State Senate, it was generally conceded that he had no superior as a legislator. Bro. Vrooman may be regarded as a pioneer of the Order in this State. He joined Pacific Lodge, No. 7, in 1878, and served a term as Master Workman, winning golden opinions as a presiding officer. As a chairman of the Committee on Grievances and Appeals the past two years, he has written all the decisions, all of which, with but one exception, were adopted by the Grand Lodge. Bro. Vrooman is about 38 years old, in excellent health, is a forcible speaker, logical and concise, an earnest worker fully imbued with the spirit of the Order, and cannot fail to give satisfaction. He accepts the appointment with the intention of soon commencing work, and all Lodges needing his assistance will find him ready to respond.

Too Much Beer.

In the jurisdiction of Ohio, the membership of the A. O. U. W. is composed of about one-half Germans, and one-half of other nationalities. The death list for the last year contains the names of more than six Germans to one of all other nationalities. This is simply astounding, and we should regard it as exceptional, did not the record of former years prove it to be otherwise. Now can anybody account for this excessive mortality on the part of our German brothers, except on the theory of too much beer. Germans are a quiet and prudent people, and good citizens as a rule, not given to any excess that we know of unless it be excess of beer, which they consume in enormous quantities. Beer sparingly used may be an innocent and even a healthy beverage for aught we know to the contrary, but it is not more innocent nor healthful than pure water, and the consumption of a gallon of water a day as a beverage, would not be beneficial we imagine. The votary of beer often drinks a greater quantity than a gallon per day. Now beer is an active diuretic. In excess it engenders diseases of the kidneys, liver, heart and brain. It inflames the adipose tissue inasmuch as to produce erysipelas as the result of the most trifling accident. We regard it as more dangerous to life than ardent spirits; at least the records show it to be more dangerous to the A. O. U. W. Such being the case we warn our Lodges to be exceedingly careful about admitting habitual beer drinkers. Not that it may be so objectional personally, or morally as some others, but as insurance risks they are altogether too hazardous. This is plain and perhaps unpalatable talk, but we hold the safety of the Order above all personal considerations, and the apparant danger constrains the utterance of what we feel to be a terrible truth.

THROUGH the kindness of J. W. Kinsley, of Ogden, we received a synopsis of the proceedings of the Grand Lodge for the jurisdiction of Nevada, Utah and Montana, in time for this issue of the WATCHMAN. Bro. Kinsley's election as Grand Master will be a source of gratification to his numerous friends in California. He is an earnest worker, a good organizer, and we predict a year of prosperity for that jurisdiction.

THERE are about 110,000 miles of railroads in the United States, representing a fixed capital investment of more than $5,500,000,000.

Grand Recorder's Department.

Headquarters of Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Rooms 40 and 41, St. Ann's Building, corner of Eddy and Powell, San Francisco. H. G. PRATT, G. R.

Remittances for the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN can be forwarded to the Grand Recorder. Always enclose statement separate from the Grand Recorder's, of the amounts, sent for different purposes. Don't forget this.

A COPY of the Journal of Proceedings of the Grand Lodge at its last session, has been sent out to each of the officers and representatives, and two copies to each Lodge, the former for private use, the latter to be placed on file in the Lodge. If, by any mischance, any of these documents do not reach the proper destination, notice of that fact sent to this office will enable us to supply the deficiency.

ALL amendments to our Grand Lodge Laws and Subordinate Lodge Constitution go into force on receipt of the official journal of proceedings. These amendments have all been arranged together in the appendix for ready reference. Recorders will please read them to their Lodges.

EACH Lodge will please bear in mind that all Medical Examiners must file in the office of the Grand Recorder a certified copy of his license to practice. Those who have not done so will please forward the same at their earliest convenience.

AS soon as a Grand Medical Examiner shall be appointed, all our Lodges will be notified of the fact, and instructions given how to proceed under the new regulation.

The Herald's Hobby.

The Michigan Herald has a hobby. It is the only paper published in the interests of the A. O. U. W. that seems to believe in a system of graded assessments, and especially of a grade made on the basis of the so-called American Tables of Expectancy of Life. We have tried to convince it of the folly of its ways, but we despair. Our efforts seem to be love's labor lost. A month or two ago the Herald, for the first time, came down from the shadowy realms of theory, and from the experience of the Jurisdiction of Michigan gave us a few statistics which we reproduce below, and triumphantly asks if we can evolve therefrom a theory in favor of level assessments:

JURISDICTION OF MICHIGAN.

Year.	Membership.	Average Age.
		Years Months.
1877.....	1,101.....	36.....1
1878.....	3,002.....	36.....8
1879.....	4,265.....	37.....0
1880.....	5,072.....	38.....3
1881.....	6,131.....	38.....2
1882.....	6,937.....	38.....9
Year.	Certificates Annulled.	Average Age.
1878.....	48.....	35.....
1879.....	131.....	34.....
1880.....	172.....	35.....
1881.....	400.....	36.....
1882.....	390.....	34.....
Year.	Deaths.	Average Age.
1878.....	7.....	36.....
1879.....	19.....	38.....
1880.....	25.....	41.....
1881.....	38.....	40.....
1882.....	46.....	41.....

Now, we are free to admit that these figures do not show the uniform assessment plan to be just to the individual members. No more is any graded plan of which we have any knowledge. Men in general, taking the community just as we find it, may die on the average in accordance with the expectancy tables, but the moment we begin to select a lot with reference to any particular fact which changes the natural condition of the mass, that moment the rule will no longer apply. The Herald can be satisfied of the truth of this, if it will but take the trouble to ascertain how many have joined the Order in Michigan of the various eligible ages respectively, and how many out of each class have died in the Order up to the present time. And if he will apply the expectancy tables to see how, according to rule they should have died, and then compare the facts with the rule, he will find very little to sustain the rule. It will be like the rules in the French Grammar—the exceptions will be found greater in number than the contrary.

We have over and over again said that the uniform system of assessments was unjust. So is the graded system—no matter how graded. The difference is only in the measure of injustice, and which system has the best or worst of it we can never know till we compile statistics in the manner above indicated.

Were the A. O. U. W. a company insuring men's lives for gain there would be an object to ascertain with the utmost exactitude the hazard assumed by the company in taking any particular risk. But then justice to the company would require a readjustment of the business every time the insured paid his stated premium. The true hazard of a policy-holder who pays his premiums annually is his probability of dying in the year to come. If there is more danger of dying during a man's twenty-second year than during his twenty-first, then the company should exact a higher premium, and so on year by year to the end. This would not be just to the individual policy-holders, but it would be just to the company, and the only plan that would be so. As such companies aim only to serve their own best interests, in other words do business simply and solely on the basis of selfishness, it is correct business for them to do their work in this manner.

But the A. O. U. W. is a Fraternity. It is not organized to make money for any body. It's prime object is to protect the interests of its members individually by co-operation. If equity be sought in any of its business transactions it should be in relation to the individual members, and that would do no injustice to the whole. No scheme that will do this has ever yet been devised, and we doubt if there ever can be. The graded system can no more do it than the uniform or "level" system. So what's the sense of making a change from the latter to the former—from a simple and satisfactory manner of doing business, to one complex and unsatisfactory? We have the best assessment system ever yet devised. Let us keep it, and not deliberately take a great and foolish stride backward.

Watching and Waiting.

Next to New York, California is the largest jurisdiction of the Order. She feels proud of her history, and proud of her membership, embracing as it does many of the most eminent men of the State. She is loyal to the Order to the last man, and tolerates no insubordination. She believes in the Order, loves it, and appreciates its favors as high honors. For some years we have indulged the hope of seeing a session of the Supreme Lodge, held in the city of San Francisco. We have also earnestly desired the election of Supreme Foreman Fish, to the office of Supreme Master Workman. Should we be gratified in either or both of these particulars, by the Supreme Lodge at its next session, the compliment will be appreciated with that heartiness peculiar to Californians, and yet if the finances of the Supreme Lodge will not admit of holding the session of the Supreme Lodge for 1884, in this city, we of course will be content to wait, but in the case of Supreme Master we know now of no reason why Bro. Fish may not be the next incumbent of the office, and as we know of no one of superior claims we naturally conclude this will be so. But if the result be otherwise we shall be sorry, but not disheartened or disgusted.

WE met Bro. Louis J. Bloomington, in the hall of Yerba Buena Lodge, on the 11th inst. He is a member of Santa Rosa Lodge, No. 28, and is preparing to change his business as a Merchant Tailor, to Hanford, Tulare county. We trust he will receive a working welcome at the hands of his brethren in the southern portion of the State.

HAVE you discharged all your obligations to the Order? If not, it is time to be up and doing. "Work while it is to-day, for the night cometh when no man can work."

Carrying Members.

We believe in Fraternity for mankind in general, and we believe in Fraternity for a Fraternal organization in particular. An organization run ostensibly on a fraternal basis, but really on a basis of selfishness like ordinary business institutions, is a delusion and a snare, and will as surely fail as they exist. But even Fraternity can be overdone. Most of our Lodges learn this to their cost both in money and confidence misplaced. Nearly every Lodge of our Order, in the days of their youth, inaugurate the practice of paying assessments from their general fund for delinquent brothers in order to preserve their standing, but almost invariably find in the end that their well-meant benefactions were illy bestowed. Where the practice of paying for members prevails, such members become careless, and sometimes even seem to think it the duty of the Lodge to keep them in standing, and feel hurt if it is not done. There is a mercy that is cruel, and a benevolence that is little short of vice. The good we would do should always be guided in its application by sound discretion. For instance, it is sometimes a fraternal duty to keep a brother of the Order in good standing. But these cases are exceptional, and usually the duty is so apparent as to be plain to all. As a rule, however, it is far better that each member should feel that his standing in the Order rests with himself, and that failure on his part to perform the obligations he has agreed to perform will work a forfeiture of his claims on the Order.

Those Lodges that work in accordance with the ideas above set forth, succeed best by far in the long run. In their early history, perhaps, they suffer much from loss of membership but it is a loss that is a great gain in the end, for after the sloughing off of unprofitable material they come down to those who are steadfast and reliable, and then an upward progress begins, and continues year by year. These things are said not on the basis of theory, but of actual experience covering a period of many years. The wise will take heed.

OFFICERS should take pains to commit to memory those portions of the ritual they are called upon to recite in initiations. Nothing conveys to the initiate a stronger impression of slovenliness and indifference than stumbling over the solemn words by negligent officials. The force and impressiveness, and from some lips even the meaning of the lessons are lost, and the new member finds himself repelled by the very thing that ought to command his attention and arouse his deepest feeling. The careless rendering of this beautiful work cannot be too severely reprehended. Lodges should be careful to put good readers in charge of the important parts of the initiatory ceremony, and see to it that they learn their lessons.

THINK of it. The price of one cigar or glass of lager per day will amount to a larger sum per annum than a membership in one of the fraternal Orders which insures the prompt payment of from $1,000 to $3,000 to your family when you die, besides other forms of help and encouragement while living. Now if one cannot afford the membership and the little self indulgence, which should he relinquish? Can any one respect himself or expect the respect of his fellow man, or hope to live in the grateful remembrance of his wife and children when he will allow a useless and expensive indulgence to stand in the way of securing them an ample maintenance, when he is called to the silent land?

Bro. J. J. Vanderlip of Harmony, who resigned the position of M. W. to attend to personal duties in Alaska, some two years ago, has returned and will make our city his future home.

New Appointments.

Grand Master, J. S. Rodgers, has exhibited good judgment in the appointment of Henry Vrooman, of Pacific Lodge, No. 7, Oakland, as Grand Lecturer; and Charles E. Wilson, of Fidelity, No. 136, San Francisco, as Deputy Grand Master. Both of these gentlemen are able and capable members of the Order, and will do credit to the positions assigned to them. Elsewhere we give a sort of silhouette of these brethren, and should the sketch seem as thin and pale as a "day-light moon," we console ourselves with the hope we may one day catch them in our camera for a more complete picture.

PERSONAL.—We received a call this week from Mr. F. Shelton, of Linden, San Joaquin county, who is P. M. W., of Linden, No. 167, A. O. U. W. Brother Shelton does not report his Lodge as growing, but it is doing well and the prospects are better for the future. In the matter of Lodge attendance, they have nothing to complain of though the membership is small. Regarding his section of country he says the prospects are not flattering for good crops, the rains having come too late. Still they think there, that they live in as good a section as any in the State. Brother Shelton is on his way home, from the session of the Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F.

It has come to our knowledge that several of our brother Workmen are paying the dues and assessments of individual members who are really unable. That is, they are kindly and charitably carrying for them an insurance of $2,000 for the benefit of their families. Surely this is casting bread upon the waters.

FROM C. H. Haile, Grand Receiver, whom we met at the Grand Recorder's office, we learn that Alameda, No. 5, one of the old pioneers, is getting along nicely, taking in good members, and is fairly prosperous. Their last celebration, which consisted of a calico ball, was a financial success and a very enjoyable affair.

Coming Grand Sessions.

DIRECT.—The nineteenth annual session of the Grand Lodge convenes in the city of Petaluma on the first Tuesday in June, 1883.

REG. MEN.—Next Great Council will meet August 2, 1883, in some grove to be selected by the Advisory Committee.

THE Triennial Conclave of Knights Templar will meet in San Francisco, August 21, 1883.

PATRONS OF HUMANITY.—Next Grand meeting, Tuesday, Oct. 8th, at 10 A. M., in San Jose.

The Grand Lodge of F. & A. M. will convene in San Francisco, October 9, 1883.

The Supreme Commandery of the Knights of the Golden Rule will meet in regular session in Virginia at Philadelphia, if not in the meantime changed.

A. O. U. W. Financier's Cash Book and Itemized S. A. Report Book.

A Combination of Receiver's Receipts to Financiers, Financier's S. A. Reports to Lodges and Reports of Auditing Committee

(Compiled, Copyrighted and for sale by C. P. Hitch, Publisher.)

The above two books constitute a complete set for the use of Financiers of the A. O. U. W., and are so necessary for the proper time and labor-saving methodical transaction of Lodge business that every Financier should use them. Lodges, one and all, who have adopted the use of these books are unanimously of the opinion that these most valuable books should be used by every Lodge, in order to make A. O. U. W. bookkeeping uniform throughout the Order. The following Lodges in California are now using these books, exclusively:

Lodge Nos. 1, 3, 16, 29, 31, 36, 38, 41, 52, 57, 64, 66, 78, 87, 89, 93, 96, 108, 112, 118, 124, 134, 135, 142, 144, 158, 172, 175, 182, 183, 193, 194, 198, 202, 204, 205, 206, 207, 211, 214, and 219.

Sample sheets of the books have been sent to every Lodge some time since, and Lodges not having the books should, in their own interest at once procure them. A complete set will be sent to every Lodge for the very low price of $6. Expressage prepaid by ordering of C. P. Hitch, Grand Recorder, Paris, Illinois.

I most heartily recommend the adoption of the above books, and trust that every Lodge in this Jurisdiction will avail themselves of this new and most simple system of keeping their accounts. The "CASH BOOK" will last a Lodge of 100 members six to eight years, and the "S. A. REPORT BOOK" will last Lodges meeting weekly, 10 years, and those meeting semi-monthly, 20 years.

H. G. PRATT,
Grand Recorder of California.

Variations of Digestion.

Of course it is impossible to reduce digestion to a positive science in its relations to different persons, the time varying according to diverse circumstances. After a fast of several hours, when the appetite is keen and the powers are in their best conditions, active and fresh, it is reasonable to infer that a meal will be digested in very much less time than when these powers are debilitated by excessive labor, fatigue and depression. Like the body, as a whole, the stomach may be active, energetic, and prompt in its labors. For the same reasons, the digestion of one accustomed to vigorous labor in the air and sun, with an unusual amount of the waste of the tissues as the result of such labor, will be far superior to that of one of sedentary habits, and the indolent, with little waste and with far less demand for the repairs of a wasted body. While both do not demand the same food in kind and amount, it is evident that the time of digestion will vary. It is proper to add that neither violent exercise nor absolute indolence are favorable to digestion, but moderate exercise. It is also true that digestion is impaired and retarded by violent mental labor, by grief, anxiety, anger, all violent emotions, such as divert the blood from the stomach to the brain, robbing digestion of its vital forces. Even sadness and discouragements impair the digestive processes, while cheerfulness, hope, and buoyancy of spirits produce the opposite results. "Laugh and grow fat."

Of course, digestion in the young and vigorous, the growing child, demanding food for daily use for repairs, in addition to that needed for growth, must not only be active and prompt, but such will demand more food relatively than the adult. The same is true of one emaciated by disease, since there is a greater demand for the repairs of the wasted tissues; and yet there is a limit.

It is possible to exceed the amount demanded in such cases, by which excess the stomach may be so far taxed as not to be able to digest enough to meet the real wants of the body, or it may do this labor so imperfectly as measurably to defeat the design of eating, that of giving health and strength. Even the "growing boy" may eat so much as to weaken the digestive powers to that extent that only a small part of the food taken will be of any value. The food fairly and thoroughly digested only can be of much service, while that undigested, remaining in the stomach to ferment and decay, not only is of no service, but must contaminate the body, inducing disease. It is quite certain that most of the lassitude, the feeling of fatigue in the morning, is attributable to the absence of rest and sleep occasioned by a late meal, taken at bedtime, it may be, or to a too full meal at the usual time, by which the organs of digestion are so taxed, overworked, as to produce this general feeling of fatigue. These organs may as certainly suffer from labor, toil, as the body as a whole, resulting in a general fatigue, an unrefreshed state of the whole body.—Dr. J. H. Hanaford.

THE HUDSON RIVER TUNNEL. Work upon the New York side of this tunnel, which was suspended about six months since, has now been resumed. The water was pumped from the excavation, and it was found that the brick walls of the tunnel were not injured in the least. One of the engineers engaged in the work says: "We are making very satisfactory progress. Since the work was suspended the river bed at the outer end of the tunnel has become more solid. After we get about thirty feet farther we shall strike a loamy soil similar to that through which the tunnel on the other side of the river has been dug, and will be able to push the work much faster. We are now making progress at the rate of about two or three feet a day." The tunnels on the New Jersey side of the river have been kept free of water as far out as the air-lock in each tunnel. Work was also suspended at about the same time on the Jersey side, where it has not yet been resumed, but will soon be after Mr. Chas. G. Franchlyn, the President of the company, returns from Europe.

WHITE BRONZE. — Experiments are being made, according to the Polytechnische Notizblatt, in Paris with a new alloy having a white color yet containing no nickel. It is said to be very strong and malleable. It is made of copper and ferro-manganese, the proportions being varied according to the purpose to which the alloy is to be employed. An alloy of forty parts of copper and sixty parts of ferro-manganese, with a suitable quantity of some appropriate flux, produces a metal of such tenacity that it surpasses the best steel armor plates. The melted mixture is cast in blocks and is perfectly malleable. To obtain a white metal that can be rolled out in sheets, the above alloy is melted again, and twenty or twenty-five per cent of zinc or white metal added, which imparts to it the desired quality. A plate of the first named alloy two inches thick was found by experiment to offer more resistance to a cannon ball than a steel armor plate of the same thickness. This new kind of "white bronze" is not to be confounded with the alloy used in this country under the same name for grave-stones and monuments, and which consists principally of zinc.

Thoughts for the Hour.

(Written by JOHN TAYLOR.)

Every day is bringing its duties, its trials, its joys and its sorrows. What a grand condition we attain when we can poise above all the minor afflictions which cross our path, fully trusting a kind and beneficent Providence, who tenderly provides for the very smallest insect that feeds upon his bounty. Man, the apex of his creation, would do well to aspire to as much perfection in life as the fruit is capable of attaining, and who can limit the power of man within these bounds? Day by day reveals new powers of development in science and mechanics, but it cannot be denied that, while some mount up to intellectual heights of attainment, the large majority follow leadership rather than individual aspiring genius to benefit the human race. What an advance has been made within our own memory. But with all this advance in human endeavor, the sensitive mind is daily shocked with tragedies from real life all around us, which are the work of the demon Intemperance.

Oh, thou destroyer of man's glory here, and a poor avenue for entering the confines of the eternal world! The contrast between earth's advancement and the existing evils of life, too apparent around us, is enough to arouse the philanthropist to renewed efforts to stem the mighty torrent sweeping to perdition. One grand obstacle for united effort is in the many select and distinct classes of men which form society. Those sailing on smooth seas care not, and mingle not with those riding the angry wave. Creeds and sects often contract fraternal intercourse outside of their own set. It is the same all over the world, and a large class is left to cope with neglect and poverty, and sometimes persecution. Then comes the saloon enchantment, the warm embrace, so long as the money lasts; and can you blame them altogether, when society flaunts its pride and wealth in their faces, and to their seclusion? Who is responsible for the many crimes committed under such debasing influences? Man must have sympathy; and if he cannot find it in one way, he will in another.

If proper places for recreation and improvement be not provided, then society and men of means are responsible for the ignorance and debauchery which is a disgrace to our boasted civilization. The question arises: Do civilization and general enlightenment keep pace with science and mechanical improvement? Are the standard of morals and the distribution of riches in accordance with the spirit of the age. If so, why so many untimely deaths from violence and other methods which daily appall the reader of the daily papers? We may speculate and preach, write and mourn in spirit over the world's woes, but to-morrow the same tale is told, the same aching hearts to be ministered unto, and the same reckless round of dissipation by the profligate. The seasons come and go, years pass away with an amazing swift ness, nature fulfills her part of life's contract and gives us an overflowing cup; the strong to support the weak, the rich to provide for the poor and afflicted. Nature also implants sympathy in the heart to comfort the mourner and to do all the good possible. How we have used our rich inheritance is answered by the many wails of sorrow now sent up from bleeding hearts. May the good do still more good, and all be made happy in the redemption of the human race.

Successful Patent Solicitors.

As Dewey & Co. have been in the patent soliciting business on this coast now for so many years, the firm's name is a well-known one. Another reason for its popularity is that a great proportion of the Pacific coast patents issued by the Government have been procured through their agency. They are, therefore, well and thoroughly posted on the needs of the progressive industrial classes of this coast. They are the best posted firm on what has been done in all branches of industry, and are able to judge of what is now and patentable. In this they have a great advantage, which is of practical dollar and cent value to their clients. That is this understood and appreciated is evidenced by the number of patents issued through their SCIENTIFIC PRESS Patent Agency (S. F.) from week to week and year to year.

The Advancement of the Pacific Coast.

The Pacific Coast States and Territories are now advancing in population, in industries and in the development of natural resources with gratifying speed, and yet without sensational movements. The old era closed some years ago; the new era is well begun. There were days when men came to the Pacific coast for fortunes; now they are coming for homes. It is the land which gives the best homes that enjoys permanent prosperity, and it is upon this ground that we look upon the progress which is now being made so quietly, and yet so rapidly, as an enduring and promising progress.

The Pacific Coast States are all advancing. If we seek signs of growth hence eastward, even to the summits of the Rocky mountains, we find many of them. We see the great grazing districts of the central Territories being peopled with flocks and herds, and wealth coming to their owners. We see Nevada developing her agricultural interests with much vigor and enterprise, and lands once thought to be desert are clad in bloom and verdure. We see Arizona yielding her stores of mineral wealth, and here and there new farming districts sending forth very profitable products. We see California advancing in every way, making in a year a growth which a decade in older times did not show, because now development is proceeding under different auspices and for different ends. We see the grand districts of the northwest, Oregon and Washington, pushing forward with a speed and vigor surpassing anything in their history, impelled by a constant tide of home seekers, who will develop the wonderful wealth which lies in the forests, the mines and the soils of the new northlands.

There is much interest manifested in all the sections of the Pacific coast in the indications of general advancement in the whole region. There are commendable efforts being put forth by the different sections in their own interest, and a feeling of rivalry, to a certain degree, between them. For the most part it is a generous rivalry, and while each State labors for her own advancement, she rejoices in the successes of her sisters. There is no occasion for any other than the kindest feeling; in fact, there should be the fullest reciprocity of sympathy and interest. We are thrown together in one of the natural divisions of the continent. We have similar characteristics of enterprise and vigorous industrial action. Our people are bound together by family ties. There is scarcely a household but has a representative in another commonwealth. We have a joint heritage in the gentle climate of the Pacific coast, and though each section has its individual characteristics, the whole area is in fact a summer land.

The Pacific coast States and Territories have much to learn from each other. The progress of each furnishes suggestions to the others for some new adaptations or appliances of productive energy. We cannot well know too much of each other's resources and undertakings. It is this fact which has led us this week to give our readers much information concerning our sister commonwealths upon the north. They are now attaining a development and progress of which we may all be proud, and of which it will no doubt please our readers to hear.

SCREW IN TUNNEL.—The Lightning, one of the earliest torpedo boats supplied by Messrs. Thornycroft to the British service, has been lately subjected to a series of progressive speed trials at Portsmouth, under the superintendence of Chief Engineer Castle, of the Steam Reserve. The steering power of the craft, which is otherwise satisfactory, proved defective in consequence of the wide circle which she required to turn in. In order to surmount the difficulty the propeller has recently been encased in a tunnel; but while it was thought that the device might improve her handiness in going round, it was feared that might detract from her speed. Trials were accordingly ordered to be made upon the measured mile in Stokes bay, for the purpose of comparison with the speed which she realized with the original propeller. Four runs were made at full speed, fourteen knots, twelve knots, and ten knots. When tested to the utmost, a mean speed of sixteen and one half knots was obtained, or about half a knot less than under the old conditions. The horse power developed, however, was also less, and as this is supposed to be due partly to the inferior character of the coal used, and partly to the fuel being forced over the bridge and so choking some of the boiler tubes, it is probable that further runs will be ordered. The steering in circling and going ahead was better than before, but in steering with the engine going astern the results were less satisfactory than with an open screw.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has not been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we will split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this, the oldest of the beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

The Lemmon Herbarium.

This Herbarium has been removed from the Blake House to a permanent place at 1205 Franklin St., near Fourteenth St., Oakland, one square east of the Post Office, where plants of the Pacific Coast, including Arizona, may be determined on application, and instruction given in botany during the winter. Sets or single specimens of the rare and new ferns of the Pacific Coast for sale.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the 8th and 23d of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following: FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS, ORDER OF EASTERN STAR, KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS, ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN, INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS, INDEPENDENT ORDER CHOSEN FRIENDS, ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS, GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC, NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST, AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR, PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA, UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS, IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN, KNIGHTS OF HONOR.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and carefully selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

Proud of Our Record.

EDITOR OF WATCHMAN:—There is perhaps no city in the Union that can boast so large a number of fraternal and benevolent societies, or as great numerical strength, according to its population, as San Francisco; and I am of opinion that no other State claiming the protection of the American flag can show as good a record in this respect, as California; and when it is taken into consideration that our State is but an infant compared with the date of admission, growth, and population of a majority of the States, the fact is truly refreshing, and the record one to feel proud of.

Our young State is noted for its many superior advantages, among which may be mentioned its mild, healthful climate, great variety and excellent quality and large quantity of products, also the energy and spirit of its citizens in organizing and maintaining numerous substantial fraternal and benevolent societies for the good and welfare of its people. In this connection I am led to speak in praise of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, an organization which, though young in years, but whose principles have been upheld and practiced by the good and true since time began, bids fair to surpass all others in the work of Protection to the widow and fatherless, when those who are now in the front rank of benevolence have been called from earth. To secure membership in this Order is a very easy matter, provided the applicant is a white male of sound health and good moral character, between the ages of twenty-one and fifty years. The price of admission ranges from $12 to $15 according to the price fixed by the by-laws of the Lodge one wishes to join, and about $22 per year, or six cents per day will be sufficient to pay all dues and assessments that may be necessary, according to past experience, to entitle the member to a certificate securing to whomsoever he may designate, the sum of $2,000 at his death.

Who Can Afford to Neglect?

What husband or father would begrudge his family this pittance to fortify them against want, should he be called to the world beyond? Is there a husband in the land who, if he gave this matter a moment's thought, would not make haste to enroll his name for the protection of a confiding wife? There is not a loving father in California, who, did he know that his little ones would suffer from want were he taken from them, would not avail himself of this opportunity to provide means to enable them to fight the battle of life. It is not claimed that to neglect this important duty is criminal, but to fail to provide for those who are dependent upon us when so many opportunities are offered is, to say the least, an exhibition of the grossest selfishness. It is hoped the time may come when every person within the boundaries of our State who is eligible to membership, may be enrolled as a helper in the good work of providing for those near and dear to him. O.

RELATIVE COSTS OF STREET LIGHTING BY ELECTRICITY AND GAS IN NEW YORK. New contracts for lighting the streets of the great city of New York have just been awarded, to begin May 1st. The price to be paid for gas lighting for the closely inhabited part of the city, in which by far the larger portion of the lamps are located, is $17.50 per year per light. In the outskirts and sparsely inhabited regions, from $19.50 to $32.00 per gas light is to be paid. The use of electric lights will be continued in portions of Broadway, Fifth Ave., including certain parks and squares, in all, a length of about six miles, at seventy cents per night per light. Arc lights are used of the Brush Company, also of the United States Company's styles. Each electric light displaces six gas lights. The contract price for each electric light amounts to $225 per year per light, which is rather more than double the cost of gas in the chief parts of the city. It is conceded, however, that the quantity of light furnished by an electric light is much greater and better than that yielded by the six displaced and dingy gas lamps. The streets that are illuminated by the electric lamp present an attractive and brilliant appearance. Reckoned by quantity of light supplied, the arc lamps are far cheaper than gas. Not so, however, with the incandescent system—the Edison system, for example, which is not at present used for street lighting in New York. Each small Edison light, not quite equal in force to an ordinary gas light, costs rather more than gas.

BRO. A. I. SANBORN, stair builder and turner at the Mechanics' mill, corner Mission and Fremont, has a leading position in his line, and is prepared to do all kinds of plain and fancy turning, circular, band and scroll sawing. He does a large business in filling orders for the country in stair material.

Gold Mining in Venezuela.

There is very little known of the mines of Venezuela outside of that country, although some portions of the region are very rich. On the northeast side of the Orinoco river are good quartz and placer mines. But the region is not healthy, and there is more fever and ague than gold. At the Caratal mines there are some English and some American companies working, but the latter are most numerous. Philadelphia people have several claims working gold quartz. This is in the State of Guayana.

In other parts of Venezuela the diggings were worked out by the Spaniards 100 years ago; still there are places which can be worked now, by the hydraulic system. Most of the placer work there is done by ground sluicing. Don Gonzales Guinan, of Valencia, State of Caribogo, has the best mine they have opened. Some parts of his mine were worked out. On some parts of the claim there are big trees growing in the old excavations made by the former miners, but the ravines and gulches were the main sources of the wealth to these old miners. The small gulches, or caravadas, are all thoroughly worked out.

Labor costs about eighty cents per day. There is plenty of water to run a hydraulic the year round, and a fine ditch has been made to bring it to the claim. The place belonging to Don Gonzales Guinan is called Mount Vernon. It is fifteen miles from Valencia. Mr. Guinan owns a league of land. They have by this time appliances for working the gravel beds by hydraulic process.

The old Spaniards, by following the rivers and searching the ravines discovered quantities of gold in the rivers Tesorero, Santa Cruz and Guaratarro, which abounded in large nuggets; the remains of their workings can be seen at the present day. The Caratal gold field is about 160 miles east southeast of Ciudad Bolivar, in Angostura, State of Guayana. It lies 100 miles south of the river Orinoco, some seventy-five miles up from the principal mouth.

When the dry season commences the rivers and streams sink rapidly; many dry up entirely; others still have a few water holes left. Then banks of sand and gravel are left high and dry, or partially so. On digging through these a gold-bearing bed is often met with, which furnishes nuggets and small grains of gold on washing.

THE HYGIENE OF SHOES.—That the shoes we wear are seldom made of the proper shape has been often pointed out by scientific writers; but the habit and fashion are not easily changed. The poor suffer more from this cause than the well-to-do; for cheap shoes are generally worse in pattern than more costly ones, and, being clumsier and more flexible, cause greater distortion to the feet. Deformities of the feet and toes are especially frequent among the poor. This matter was the subject of an able and interesting paper, read by Col. Ziegler, Chief Surgeon of the Swiss army, at the Geneva Hygienic Congress. He stated that every year 800 recruits are rejected for malformation of the feet, resulting from badly-fitting shoes. The foot is in reality a bow, so elastic that at every step it contracts and expands, lengthens and shortens, and a line drawn through the center of the great toe intersects the heel. Shoemakers do not give room enough for the lateral extension of the great toe, confining it until it is forced against the other toes, giving rise to inflammation, corns, ulcerations, and sometimes true articular inflammations. Another evil is flat-footedness, whereby the arch of the foot is converted into a straight line, and prolonged walking rendered impossible. Another cause of this defect is the carrying of heavy weights at an early age, but in most cases perfect shoes would restore the foot to its normal condition. A test of a perfect pair of shoes is that, when placed together, they should touch only at the toes and heels; the soles should follow the sinuosities of the feet, and to give room for their expansion, should exceed them in length by fifteen or twenty millimeters.—Popular Science News.

WE are frequently asked this question: "Which is the best route overland?" To this question we invariably refer to Bro. J. Meredith Davies, General Agent of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway. Passengers for England and the Continent of Europe should, on arriving at San Francisco, ask or send for J. Meredith Davies, Palace Hotel, and he will assist in the exchange of their prepaid orders or purchase tickets across the American Continent.—Com.

The Mechanics' Fair.

It was supposed by some that the usual annual fair of the Mechanics' Institute would be omitted this year, owing to the use of the building by the Triennial Conclave. This is not so, however, as the fair will be held as usual. The only change is a postponement of the exhibition to a later date than has usually been the case. It will open September 11th, and close on October 13th. A meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Mechanics' Institute was held on Tuesday evening, when an organization was effected of the Board of Managers of the Eighteenth Industrial Exhibition. It was decided to give premiums, a list of which will be issued as soon as possible, and sent with circulars to Pacific coast manufacturers, all former exhibitors, and to those who will be likely to have products to show.

As we are growing in manufactures, it is to be hoped that the fair will excel all previous ones in this connection. There is no reason why a very creditable exhibition cannot be made, if those for whose interest the fair is arranged, will cooperate with the managers by coming forward promptly with their exhibits. The Board of managers for this fair is as follows: P. B. Cornwall, President; A. W. Starbird, vice President; J. A. Bauer, Treasurer; B. Jackson, C. Waterhouse, D. A. MacDonald, J. Pendergast, James Spiers, David Kerr, C. F. Bassett, J. R. Wilcox, Geo. H. Hopps, E. Fretwell, Geo. Spaulding. Although the officers are not yet appointed, it is probable that J. H. Culver will be Secretary, and J. H. Gilmore, Superintendent.

The Postal Changes.

Rates of Letter Postage Under the New Law—The Proposed Postal Notes.

On and after October 1, 1883, letter postage will be two cents for each half ounce, or fractional part thereof, between all points in the United States. The rate will then be the same as drop letters and all others. No changes have been made in rates on other classes of matter.

On and after July 1, 1883, you can obtain at any money order office, postal notes in sums of $5 and under by paying a fee of three cents. These notes will be made payable to bearer without corresponding advices. They will be payable at any money order office within three months of the date of issue. After the lapse of that time the holder can obtain the par value only by applying to the Postoffice Department at Washington.

On and after July 1, 1883, you can obtain a postal order for as large a sum as $100. The present limit is $50. The fees on and after that date for orders will be as follows:

Not exceeding $10.....	2 cents.
From $10 to $15.....	10 cents.
From 15 to 20.....	15 cents.
From 20 to 30.....	20 cents.
From 30 to 40.....	25 cents.
From 40 to 50.....	30 cents.
From 50 to 60.....	35 cents.
From 60 to 70.....	40 cents.
From 70 to 80.....	45 cents.
From 80 to 100.....	50 cents.

The postal notes will, no doubt, be found more convenient in one respect than the fractional paper currency was, since they can be obtained for any number of cents under $5. There will also be less liability to loss, by theft, than there was when fractional notes were used for transmission through the mails, especially if the department uses judgment in prescribing the size and form of the notes, and in selecting the paper on which they are to be printed. On the other hand they will be less convenient, in that they can only be obtained at money order offices at a considerable sacrifice of time, especially in large cities. It will be observed that after the first of October the cost of sending any sum under $5 postal note will be 5 cents—2 cents postage and 3 cents fee.

VIBRATORY MOVEMENT OF BELLS.—M. Mathieu, a French experimenter, has recently studied the vibrations of bells, considering the case of an ordinary bell in which the thickness in any meridian increases from summit to base. The essential difference between the vibratory movement of a bell and that of a plane plate is that, while in the latter the longitudinal or tangential movement and the transverse movement are given by independent equations, and the normal and tangential motions in the former are given by three equations which are not independent. The pitch of the notes of a bell does not change if the thickness varies in the same relation throughout every part, since the terms depending on the square of the thickness may be neglected, at least for the graver partials. It is impossible to construct a bell so that it shall vibrate only normally, and with a hammer the tangential vibrations are of the same order as the normal vibrations. A purely tangential motion can be realized only with a spherical bell of constant thickness.

If you want to have your house painted, or if you desire any sign painting, whitening, kalsomining, glazing or paper hanging, call on the veteran in that business, Bro. George A. Basler, at No. 19 Seventh street.

List of U. S. Patents for Pacific Coast Inventors.

276,185. STEAM BELL RINGER—E. Lawson, S. F. Cal.
276,402. HAIR SPINNING MACHINE—John Spaulding, S. F.
276,403. SEDIMENT COLLECTOR FOR STEAM BOILERS—John Spaulding, S. F.
276,404. CARPET BEATING MACHINE—John Spaulding, S. F.
276,393. WHEEL SCRAPER—L. A. Sweat, Santa Clara, Cal.
276,320. HORSE POWER—W. H. Worth, Petaluma, Cal.

FOR WEEK ENDING MAY 1, 1883.

- 276,077. POST DRIVER—H. E. Fairman, S. F.
276,060. MEASURING DEVICE FOR SHOT POUCHES, ETC.—A. T. Hazard, Los Angeles, Cal.
276,593. COMBINED STOCK AND CASE FOR FIRE ARMS—John Jett, S. F.
276,823. MACHINE FOR SOLDERING TIN CANS—J. J. Johnson, S. F.
276,701. POSTAL SCALE—J. F. Miller, Oakland, Cal.
276,710. DRY ORE SEPARATOR—P. W. Reardon, San Jose, Cal.
276,711. COMPOSITION FOR LUBRICATING AXLES—H. W. Reddan, S. F.
276,886. WINDOW SASH—A. Rudolph, S. F.
276,887. WINDOW SASH—A. Rudolph, S. F.
276,740. WATCHMAN'S TIME DETECTOR—H. J. Wenzell, S. F.

NOTE.—Copies of U. S. and Foreign Patents furnished by Dewey & Co., in the shortest time possible (by telegraph or otherwise) at the lowest rates. All patent business for Pacific coast inventors transacted with perfect security and in the shortest possible time.

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through Dewey & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

WINDOW SASH.—Alexander Rudolph, S. F. No. 276,886. Dated May 1, 1883. This improvement in window sashes consists of a sash pivoted at each side to a guide piece, these guides fitting into grooves in the frame, so as to run up and down, and the pivots allowing the sash to be turned, and in combination with these a series of hooks or clasps, by which the sash and guide-pieces are drawn closely together to exclude air, and are supported by the heel of the clasp when unlocked. It also consists of a peculiar beveled projecting plate upon one side, and a corresponding socket upon the other, where the pivot pins unite the sashes to the guide pieces, which serve to force the sashes away from the guide-pieces when they are turned, and thus concentrate all friction to a point about the pivot pins.

POSTAL SCALES.—J. Frank Miller, Oakland. No. 276,601. Dated May 1, 1883. This invention relates to an index or self-registering balance scale, which is specially intended for postal or other similar purposes; and it consists of a series of graduated weights suitably supported so as to be lifted consecutively and in a manner to counteract oscillation by means of a lever arm, which has the weight supporting pan upon its outer end, so that when it is raised it will lift the weights successively from their support as it moves. A curved, graduated scale is fixed so that an index pointer upon the end of the lever will indicate the weight, or its equivalent postage, the moment the letter or other object is placed upon the pan; or the pointer may be fixed and the graduated arc made movable.

POST DRIVER.—Harry E. Fairman, S. F. No. 276,677. Dated May 1, 1883. The invention consists in planting the ends of the weight guides or leads firmly on the ground, by rocking the axle with which the machine is connected, in a means for adjusting the perpendicularity of the weight guide, and in a novel device for holding the post steady, and in a novel raising and tripping mechanism for operating the weight. The object of the invention is to furnish a machine for driving posts for fences, etc., which may be readily taken from place to place and be firmly stationed to complete the work of driving the post.

Academy of Sciences.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the California Academy of Sciences was held on Monday evening, President Davidson in the chair. The following resident members were elected: William McM. Woodworth, Edward L. G. Steele, Walter M. Wolfe, Rev. E. L. Green, August Liliencraz, M. D., Judge Samuel J. Clarke, J. A. Richardson, and there was proposed for membership Chancellor Hartson. Among donations to the museum: L. Belding, of Stockton presented fifteen land and freshwater shells and ten rare sub-tropical varieties of birds from lower California, of which two are new. W. G. W. Harford presented a large green turtle finely mounted and six species of fish. Capt. F. T. Gilmore, seventeen specimens minerals from Oregon, including copper, iron ore (39 1/2 per cent.) manganese, hematite, chromic iron and coal. H. H. Bigelow, a large specimen of silicified wood. George Davidson, two rocks from Cerro Robles, New Mexico. Jacob Z. Davis, a botanical album of Colorado wild flowers. Prof. John G. Lemmon, a valuable collection of seventy-one of the most interesting plants of Arizona, including seven large, showy new species. Seth Cook donated twenty-five volumes, including reports of the United States fish commission, etc. L. Belding also presented four photographs of Lower California natives, including the tribe of Yaqui Indians. Professor Davidson transmitted from the transit of Venus commission, thirteen photographs of the transit of Venus, December 5th and 6th, 1882, taken at Cerro Roblero station, New Mexico. The Superintendent of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey sent a photographer to the National Observatory and had these prints made for this Academy.

A report was read from the committee appointed to prepare resolutions concerning the deposition of Robert E. C. Stearns, of Berkeley, Ph. D., who is about to leave California to be attached to the Conchological Department of the Smithsonian Institute at Washington. The report was as follows:

WHEREAS, It has come to the knowledge of this Academy that R. E. C. Stearns, Ph. D., who for many years has been associated with this body as Trustee, as well as one of its most active workers in science, is now about to leave our State, and as it seems to us that our brother should by no means quit us without some token of our appreciation of his great service, not only to us as a body, we therefore ask to have placed upon the records of this Academy our appreciation of the worth, ability and enthusiasm of our fellow member, and our deep regret that he not only leaves our body but is compelled to quit the Western Coast. Dr. Stearns has been identified with the earlier struggles of the Academy. He has brought to its councils an abiding faith in its success; he has enriched its proceedings with the thoroughness and honesty of his work, and he has exhibited the greatest breadth of view in his deductions and scientific investigations. We shall lose him, but not wholly, for his heart will be with us, and his pen and pencil will yet add their value to our work. We wish him God-speed in his new field of labor, where he is already so well known and appreciated. The Smithsonian can have no better man and no more able and conscientious a worker.

The above report was ordered spread on the minutes.

A. Wendell Jackson Jr., of the University of California, read a paper on the "Structure and Genesis of the Bassick Ore Deposit of Custer county, Colorado."

CAUSE OF DARKENING IN BRONZE WORK.—The Society of Architects, of Berlin, have been investigating the subject of the change of some kinds of bronze to a black hue. It appears that one of the most notable statues in that city had become covered with a darkish layer, while an old cannon before the arsenal had retained its fine green color, the two having been exposed to the same atmospheric action. Upon being analyzed, the bronze of the cannon was found to consist of nine parts copper and one part tin; the bronze of the statue, however, exhibited a good percentage of zinc, and to zinc the change of color is regarded as due. In order to ascertain the facts in the case definitely, several copper alloys were subjected to the action of a copper solution. The result was that the alloys of tin and copper alone took the green color, while the alloys containing zinc became more or less black, according to the quantity of zinc they contained.

THE Lancet says: "It is high time that attention was directed to the subject of narcotics generally, and the use of chloral and bromide of potassium in particular. Incalculable injury is being done, and public opinion is being grievously misled by the tolerance given to the use of 'sleeping drafts,' falsely so-called. In regard to this matter and that of the reckless use of hypodermic injections of morphia, the profession should seek to form a deliberate judgment, and gravely deliver itself. At the present moment we are under a heavy responsibility, which it is idle to deny and vain to disown."

A RIVAL FOR KRUPP.—Judging from recent accounts, there is now growing up on the banks of the river Tyne, in England, an establishment which, it is stated, promises to bear comparison with Krupp's enormous works at Essen, Germany, in addition to a shipbuilding yard capable of turning out vessels of war of the largest size.

Business Notes.

A PIANO TUNER'S EXPERIENCE.—There is no profession requiring more skill and none in which more frauds are practiced. Pianos should be tuned at least three times a year, when the practice is once in three years. Usually on some festive occasion Prof. Blank wishes the piano tuned to concert pitch, when the rattle-trap will not stand it. In this case, when assured by a conscientious piano tuner that the bridge and strings will not stand it, the mountebank is ever ready to assure the simple people that he can do it; when in fact the piano is left in a worse condition, if not in a measure ruined. In any and all cities, either large or small, there are very few skillful, conscientious and reliable piano tuners. Bro. G. Rudolph, No. 107 Stockton St., has had an experience of twenty-five years in his profession, and is known to the professors of music as one of the best in the city of San Francisco.

MISS MOLLIE LEWIS, a daughter of E. Lewis, P. M. W., of Golden Gate, has, by patient study under leading artists of this city, earned a high reputation in oil painting and decorative art. Miss Lewis has just finished a pair of oil paintings entitled "Paying Toll," an exact copy of a pair that were made and sold to one of our solid men at a satisfactory price. At the studio of Mrs. Holt, Phelan's Building, she is putting the finishing on an oil painting, 24x35 inches, representing a life scene on the Continent, that is a high work of art. Miss Lewis desiring to continue her studies under the best masters, offers some choice pictures in oil, of scenery, panel flowers and bric-a-brac or, will execute ornamental work and decorative art to order.

CAMP MEETING GROVE BOUGHT.—We learn from Mr. A. Coplin, of Oakland, that the Pacific Holiness Association has lately purchased of J. V. Webster, on the so-called Highlands, joining the Fruit Vale street railway route, about one and a half miles north of Brooklyn railroad station, a fine grove of eight and a half acres, for $7,500. The annual camp meeting of the association will be held on the grounds, beginning August 1st. A two days' "basket" meeting will be held on the grounds on the 3d and 4th of July. Revs. Newton and Arnold, with others, will take part in the services. This is a choice location for such purposes.

COTTON HOSE.—The universal use of hose for irrigating purposes, hydraulic mining, factories, hotels, steamships, fire engines, etc., etc., in California, has induced the Eureka Fire Hose Co. to put the celebrated brands of seamless cotton hose and rubber-lined hose in stock, of the following brands: "Garden Hose," "Red Cross," "Paragon," "Eureka," and Bro. W. T. Y. Schenck, of 36 California St., is the Pacific coast agent. For fire engines this hose is used in most of the large cities, it being stronger, safer, and more durable. Climatic influences do not affect it, and it can be put away indefinitely and gain strength.

AN INVENTIVE WORKMAN.—Bro. G. Lissen, P. M. W., of Stockton Lodge, No. 23, has received letters patent, through the Patent Agency of Dewey & Co., for an improved sulky plow. It is constructed on entirely different principles from the ordinary sulky plow, and the favor with which it has been received by residents of Stockton and vicinity is very flattering to our worthy brother. This sulky plow with four rolling cutters will successfully cultivate tule lands where the vegetation is from four to six feet high, and difficulty in working tule lands will be measurably obviated by this new invention.

THOSE contemplating excursions by rail, will find that a trip by the South Pacific Coast (narrow gauge) railroad, is one of the most enjoyable and picturesque journeys in the world. This route embraces the following unsurpassed features: Big Trees, Santa Clara valley, Monterey bay, Santa Cruz, and is shorter by 40 miles than any other route to Santa Cruz. Office 222, Montgomery St. and foot of Market St. Sunday excursions $3 the round trip, for lay-over ticket good to return in five days, $5. Campers and tourists are informed that this section of the Pacific coast is the "Camper's Paradise."

THE art of building large organs successfully for churches and cathedrals has only been developed in a few persons in any country. We, as Californians, have a pride in Bro. John Bergstrom, who has constructed so large a number here that he may be justly styled "the organ builder of the coast." He is now constructing two for Portland, Oregon, of similar style to those he built in this city, one of which is the Three Manual, in Metropolitan Temple, on Fifth St. His address is Twenty-ninth and Mission Sts.

THE extensive Agricultural Warehouse and Manufactory of our enterprising Bro., Byron Jackson, Nos. 625 and 631 Sixth St., is well worth a visit. The Jackson Vineyard Harrow, made to rotate either way, has become a State institution that is generally used in all vineyards. The large number of valuable inventions and labor saving machines owned and manufactured by Bro. Jackson has made his name a household word as an inventor of machinery for harvesting our large grain crops.

PARADISE MILLS.—Flour manufactured at Modesto, of which Brother J. H. Congdon, 34 California street, is the sole agent, has attained a very high reputation for family use. The demand has increased to such an extent that regular shipments are made to this house of twenty to forty tons a week.

WOMEN'S TEMPERANCE COFFEE ROOMS.—These commodious rooms at the corner of Market and Third streets, under the Nucleus, are now open to receive guests. It is the policy of the proprietor to furnish the best the market affords or culinary skill can make, and furnish them at the lowest cost. A peculiar feature of this institution is, you can get comforts of life in any quantity you wish.

HON. BONHAM GALLAND, P. M. W., of Gold Hill, No. 2, Nevada, has made our city temporarily his residence. His present business is to introduce the Cabinet Bath, for which he has lately received letters patent. From the favor in which it is received, we believe he has struck a bonanza, and will receive the grateful thanks of thousands for this valuable invention and sanitarium.

WELLINGTON'S IMPROVED EGG FOOD.—This compound has attained a celebrity as one of the chief factors among those engaged in raising poultry. It is cheap, keeps poultry in a healthy condition, and, as an egg producer, it stands unrivaled. Bro. B. Wellington is also an importer and dealer in seeds, and agent for the Perfect Hatcher Co. Office and salesroom, 425 Washington street.

BRO. JAS. IRVING, of Mendocino, has been appointed agent of the Keystone Washer and Wringer, for which he proposes to canvass and introduce this valuable and labor-saving machine. His address is at the Montgomery Hotel, Second street.

THE popular hatters, Bros. Stack & Lacombe, 639 Market, under Palace hotel, have a large stock, latest fashions and finest goods, which they sell at low prices. Give them a call and be convinced.

BRO. M. KELLEY, corner of Mission and Spear streets, deals largely in second-hand tools and machinery of all kinds, including fire-proof safes, and he makes a specialty of manufacturing the finest quality of blacksmith tools.

BRO. ROBT. MATTHEY is proprietor of the Palace bakery, 1523 Mission, and the bread, pies, cakes and goods made by him cannot be excelled in the city. Try them and see.

TRY Weston's home-made bread and his pies, cakes and fancy biscuits, that are made fresh every day, if you wish the choicest luxury that can be found in the city.

A SO-CALLED "ELECTRIC FLANNEL" has been invented in France by Dr. Claudat, who affirms that it is efficacious against rheumatism. This flannel contains, per kilogram of wool, 115 grams of oxides of tin, copper, zinc, and iron. A series of threads of the tissue saturated with these metallic products are woven alternately with the ordinary threads. The flannel so prepared forms a dry pile. M. Drincourt, professor of physics at the Rheims Lyceum, and M. Portevin, of the polytechnic school, have proved, independently, by very precise experiments, that Dr. Claudat's flannel liberates electricity, either by simple contact, or better, in contact with the products of transpiration when the tissue is applied to the body.

WARM water, of all remedies, is the one of most general application. Cotton dipped in warm water makes the best and cleanest poultice that can be used. It is the most healing application for cuts, bruises, wounds, sores, felons and other inflammations. A very convenient way in case of felon or other painful abscess, is to hold the hand for hours in water as warm as can be comfortably borne.—Journal of Health.

THE possibilities of electricity in medicine, according to a popular German physician and medical writer, seems to be almost without limit. The writer referred to, Dr. Suprunenko, reports quite a number of cases which have hitherto never been treated with electricity, but which in his recent practice have yielded to a moderately strong induction current.

PHOTOGRAPHY now plays an important part in book illustration, and many books are published which might be called collections of photographs with descriptive letter-press. One recently published by William Patterson, of Edinburg, under the title of "The Castles and Mansions of the Three Lothians," contains 103 photographs, each about 7x5.

Dewey &amp; Co., American and Foreign Patent Agents.

PATENTS obtained promptly; Caveats filed expeditiously; Patent Reissues taken out Assignments made and recorded in legal form; Copies of Patents and Assignments procured; Examinations of Patents made here and at Washington; Examinations made of Assignments recorded in Washington; Examinations ordered and reported by Telegraph; Rejected cases taken up and Patents obtained; Interferences Prosecuted; Opinions rendered regarding the validity of Patents and Assignments; Every legitimate branch of Patent Agency Business promptly and thoroughly conducted.

Our intimate knowledge of the various inventions of this coast, and long practice in patent business, enable us to abundantly satisfy our patrons; and our success and business are constantly increasing.

The shrewdest and most experienced Inventors are found among our most steadfast friends and patrons, who fully appreciate our advantages in bringing valuable inventions to the notice of the public through the columns of our widely circulated, first-class journals—thereby facilitating their introduction, sale and popularity.

Foreign Patents.

In addition to American Patents, we secure, with the assistance of co-operative agents, claims in all foreign countries which grant Patents, including Great Britain, France, Belgium, Prussia, Austria, Baden, Peru, Russia, Spain, British India, Saxony, British Columbia, Canada, Norway, Sweden, Mexico, Victoria, Brazil, Bavaria, Holland, Denmark, Italy, Portugal, Cuba, Roman States, Wurtemberg, New Zealand, New South Wales, Queensland, Tasmania, Brazil, New Granada, Chile, Argentine Republic, AND EVERY COUNTRY IN THE WORLD where Patents are obtainable.

No models are required in European countries, but the drawings and specifications should be prepared with thoroughness, by able persons who are familiar with the requirements and changes of foreign patent laws—agents who are reliable and permanently established.

Our schedule price for obtaining foreign patents, in all cases, will always be as low, and in some instances lower, than those of any other responsible agency.

We can and do get foreign patents for inventors in the Pacific States from two to six months (according to the location of the country) SOONER than any other agents.

The principal portion of the patent business of this coast has been done, and is still being done, through our agency. We are familiar with, and have full records, of all former cases, and can more correctly judge of the value and patentability of inventions discovered here than any other agents.

Situated so remote from the seat of government, delays are even more dangerous to the inventors of the Pacific Coast than to applicants in the Eastern States. Valuable patents may be lost by extra time consumed in transmitting specifications from Eastern agencies back to this coast for the signature of the inventor.

Confidential.

We take great pains to preserve secrecy in all confidential matters, and applicants for patents can rest assured that their communications and business transactions will be held strictly confidential by us. Circulars free

Home Counsel.

Our long experience in obtaining patents for Inventors on this Coast has familiarized us with the character of most of the inventions already patented; hence we are frequently able to save our patrons the cost of a fruitless application by pointing to them the same thing already covered by a patent. We are always free to advise applicants of any knowledge we have of previous applicants which will interfere with their obtaining a patent.

We invite the acquaintance of all parties connected with inventions and patent right business, believing that the mutual conference of legitimate business and professional men is mutual gain. Parties in doubt in regard to their rights as assignees of patents or purchasers of patented articles, can often receive advice of importance to them from a short call at our office.

Remittances of money, made by individual inventors to the Government, sometimes miscarry, and it has repeatedly happened that applicants have not only lost their money, but their inventions also, from this cause and consequent delay. We hold ourselves responsible for all fees entrusted to our agency.

Engravings.

We have superior artists in our employ, and all facilities for producing fine and satisfactory illustrations of inventions and machinery, for newspaper, book, circular and other printed illustrations, and are always ready to assist patrons in bringing their valuable discoveries into practical and profitable use.

The Great Red Spot on Jupiter.

Mr. G. D. Hiseox communicates an article to the Scientific American, in which, after alluding to the fact that the intensity of this spot seems to be vanishing after a duration of about two and a half years, he offers some speculation as to the philosophy of its occurrence, as follows:

The two periods of rotation of the spot are observed to vary about five and a half minutes; giving the rotation by the cloud spots as 9 h.
50 m. to 9 h. 50 m. 9 s., while the rotation by the great red spot is found to be 9 h. 55 m. 34 s.

The times given for rotation by observations upon different cloud spots also vary enough to give us, together with the varying contour of the cloud belt, strong evidence that what we see of the planet Jupiter is not the body of the planet itself, but rather a vast sea of cloud, possibly thousands of miles in depth, kept aloft
by the intense heat of the body of the planet.

From the well known laws of circulation of gases, vapors, and cloud masses, as illustrated by the circulation of the atmosphere, together with the progress and direction of the great storms, cyclones, and tornadoes upon the earth, and as are beginning to be elucidated in the cyclone action of the sun spots, according to Faye's theory, which best meets the conditions deduced from spectroscopic observations; we cannot do otherwise than come to the conclusion that the solid body of Jupiter has never been seen—that our observations are only of the surface of vast envelope of cloud, that by its rapid rotation is constantly creating and keeping up an intercirculation, such as our trade winds and equatorial doldrums, upon a vast scale.

In this connection we have only to carry our minds back to the beginning of the Azotic age of our world, and to imagine the surface just crusting over and still red hot in zones, with our entire oceans hanging as a vast cloud above, and precipitating its dense vapors as rain upon the hot and hissing surface. It was then that the activity of natural forces were at their height. It was then that the upheaval of the intensely heated masses from below met the cloud bursts from above, and produced the same class of phenomena that has lately been observed, upon a vastly larger scale, upon the planet Jupiter.

If, in view of the density which has heretofore been given for Jupiter, we can reasonably accept an atmospheric or cloud depth of eight or ten thousand miles, the apparent great diameter of the red spot may be assumed as only the irradiation to, and illumination of the deep cloud stratum by an igneous mass, much smaller than the apparent size of the red spot, as we see it from the earth.

The size of the great spot, 26,000 by 8,000 miles, may be, for a planet 88,000 miles in diameter, only the illumination of a reasonable upheaval of the highly heated mass of the interior corresponding with the remains of such masses upon our earth.

The apparent retrograde motion I think is illusionary, for I see no tenable reasoning to sustain the theory that has been advanced that it is a floating island, or crust floating upon a liquid surface. Nor does there appear any good reason for regarding it as of a periodical character, or bearing any relation to other periodical physical phenomena, as suggested by the Dearborn observer. But, on the other hand, an assertion in the report of the Dearborn observations, "that the apparent center of the red spot does not coincide with the true center, except when on the central meridian," goes far to explain the theory that the red spot, as seen by the telescope, is an area of the outer cloud stratum illuminated by an igneous mass upon the body of the planet. And also that its diurnal rotation should be fixed by the observed rotation of the red spot, instead of, as heretofore, by the rotation of the cloud spots.

HOUSE MOVED BY A TREE.—A large elm tree at Norwich, Conn., has moved a house by the force of its growth. The tree is more than seventy years old, and the trunk reaches a height of thirty feet before a limb branches out.
During the March winds the limbs spreading over the house swept off part of the chimney, and it was removed. The tree, which stands at the northeast corner of the house, has grown so large that it raised and moved the house one foot from its original position.

POST OFFICE FRAUDS.—The U. S. Official Postal Guide publishes a list of over 500 names of persons designated as frauds, and who conduct fraudulent lotteries and enter into other schemes to defraud the public, and to whom payment of money orders and the delivery of registered letters has been prohibited by the Postmaster-General. Of this large number, there is not one shown to reside in California, or any of the Pacific coast States or Territories.
